Plymouth, Indiana, Sept. 6, 1905.

The Indiana Conference is to be held this week at South Bend, and the indications are that there will be a good attendance.

Cholera has appeared in Prussia, and grave fears exist lest it spread to other countries. The fever in the south is still raging. Earthquakes in various parts are reported. Riots and persecution of Christians and Jews are daily occurrences in Russia and Turkey. France and Morocco are still having trouble. Apparently there is disturbance in the general world, even if the Russians and Japanese have halted for a time.

It is peace. On Aug. 29, the Russian and Japanese representatives at Portsmouth, decided that the War should end. Japan yielded to the demands of humanity, and waived the exaction of indemnity, rather than prolong the war for the sake of money. Russia will pay for the care of her prisoners, and as there are some 65,000 of these the bill will be high. The island of Sakhalin is to be divided. China is to remain intact. Russia gives up all the railroads and other rights in Manchuria and Corea. Japan will hold Port Arthur and the country adjacent. Everything that Japan demanded before the War started she has gained, and some other things. How long peace is for, how far it will stop Russia from pushing into the forbidden land, how much Japan can do to influence the Chinese, and make them resist the Czar's encroachments, are yet questions that will have to be settled by time. Let us watch, and not be deceived or lulled to sleep.

Watch Thou in All Things.

In these troublesome times this admonition comes to us with a great deal of force. The four preceding verses of this chapter contain the following charge to Timothy from Paul. 2 Tim. iv. 1-4. I charge thee therefore in the presence of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ, who will judge the living and the dead at his appearing and kingdom preach the Word; be instant in season, rebuke, confute, exhort with all long-suffering, when teaching. For there will be a time when they will not endure wholesome teaching, but having itching ears they will according to their own lusts, heap up to themselves teachers, and from the truth indeed they will turn away their ears, and be turned aside to fables, (Macknight). Is not the above prophetic of these days? The teacher must teach to suit the ears of the congregation or hearers. No regard is paid to what the Scriptures teach. Some way is found to interpret the Word to suit the case. But few are looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. They teach a doctrine that does away with their appearing. Going to heaven at death suits them much better so they require their teachers to so teach. If we place ourselves in an attitude of watching and so remain, we must deny ungodliness and worldly lusts and live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world (age). When our life who is Christ shall appear we shall appear with him. Our blessed Lord did not pray that the Father would take his followers out of the world, but that he would keep them in it. What a responsibility is placed upon us, and what a reward is promised if we but succeed. He that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations. Rev. ii 26. To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne. Rev. iii. 21. Our sitting on Christ's throne and ruling the nations depends upon our faithfulness. The apostle beseeches his brethren to be not conformed to this world; but, says he, be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God. This can only be done by our lifting our hearts to God in prayer and meditating day and night on his precious promises. When we have once started in the race there is but one thing to do, viz. Press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Phil. iii. 14.

I tremble for those who take upon themselves the name of Christ, for fear that they turn away from the truth. It means everything to them. If they fail in this all is lost. If we have been planted together in the likeness of his (Christ's) death (in baptism), we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection, knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin. Often having done this we are admonished to walk in newness of life. We have assumed a new life and must walk in it. It is a great honor to be taken out of the Gentiles as a people for his (Christ's) name. We are to be a people, zealous of good works. The apostle Peter says "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar (purchased) people that ye should show forth the praises (virtues) of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light. 1 Pet. ii. 9.

My dear brethren and sisters, do we realize what it is to be a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a purchased people? If we do we must show forth in our life the virtues of him who purchased us by his precious blood. We are placed in this present evil world with every thing against us, and must be an overcomer if we would receive the crown promised. We must create the environments for the new life. We cannot succeed and remain under the environments of the law of sin and death, where we have been living since our birth of the flesh. The law of the spirit of life hath made me free from the law of sin and death. Here are two distinct laws producing two distinct results. In the law of the spirit of life there is no condemnation. They who are after the flesh (living under the law of sin and death) do mind the things of the flesh, but they who are after the spirit (the law of the spirit of life) mind the things of the spirit. Our mind has been transformed and must become fixed by our diligence in adding to our faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, and charity. Now if these things be in you and abound they make you that ye shall be neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ. 2 Pet. i. 5, 6. These things will only come by searching the Scripture and giving heed to the apostle, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth." 2 Tim. ii. 15. Again, if a man strive for the mastery yet he is not crowned, except he strive lawfully. 2 Tim. ii. 5. The striving for the crown must be in obedience to the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus.

My dear brethren and sisters, this has been written with the thought that we might be helpful to those who have lately taken upon them the precious name of Christ. If you need instruction the writers for The Restitution will gladly aid. By this we might start a correspondence Bible study. Your brother in the hope that all who have named the Name may prove faithful.

D. C. Robison.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I greet you all in the name of our dear Master who has brought us from darkness to the marvelous light of his glorious gospel, and heirs to that inheritance that fadeth not away to be revealed at his appearing and kingdom. Blessed thought, to think of meeting all of God's people down through the ages in one immortal band, to be helpers with our King to execute judgment and justication in the earth throughout one thousand years and eternal life for ever more. We can realize that there is nothing in this life that we can do that will have a shadow of showing beside this grand offer. It was my privilege to attend the Conference of the State of Ohio at Cleveland, and as dear Bro. P. Neill said to me about one month before the Conference, "Bro. Venerable, don't miss it, if you do you will miss the best thing in your life, and if you get home with ten cents in your pocket you will be all right." Well, I thought Bro. Neill was putting it pretty strong. But before the meeting was half through I would be perfectly satisfied if I had to borrow a little money to get home rather than to have missed such a treat among our brothers and sisters. It was glorious to be there. I left Bellefontain where I have lived twenty-two years, and met the Church at Cleveland and all strange faces but a few, and was received with that Christian love and fellowship as though one long away from home and returns to his own family. Brothers and sisters, why is this? Just because we have all tasted the good Word of the Lord, and are forming characters that will be acceptable in that glorious kingdom soon to be established under the whole heavens. I do not want to forget our leaders in heralding the truth of the holy gospel in such force that it would convince any one if they had a mind to obey God; and the results were most satisfactory in bringing out two souls. May they run the race with patience and finally come off victorious is my humble prayer. Brothers and sisters, this advice I will take myself, Don't spend words on any point of Scripture that is not essential. Your brother in the faith.

John C. Venable.

Report of Illinois Conference.

Our Annual Conference for the State of Illinois, as well as our Bible school which is in session the two weeks preceding Conference are both held in our "Stone Church" which has in addition a commodious dining hall and dormitories for the free use of guests. All meals are free, a voluntary contribution being taken each year, which more than covers this and all other Conference expenses, any surplus being turned into the Evangelistic Fund.

The Bible school, under the direction of Bro. S. J. Lindsay, was this year, as in past seasons a decided success. It has become a work of such value that only God can give a final and correct estimate of its far reaching results in training these young in the faith as well as those longer in the way. It was well attended this year and the interest was all that could be desired. Many new faces were present, but one face—that of our matron of other years, our dear sister Glotfelty—was with us only in a haunting sense of loss, and the consciousness that her cheery presence and sweet spirit could be with us no more in our school. But her helpful influence still lingers and we look forward to the morning.

At the close of the Bible School the Annual Conference held its opening service on Wednesday evening Aug. 16. The ministerial brethren who were present were, Samuel Wilson of New Jersey, A. J. Eychaner and O. J. Allard of Iowa, and from our own State, L. E. Conner, J. W. Wilson and State Evangelist S. J. Lindsay.

On Wednesday evening Bro. L. E. Conner spoke upon the subject, "The Body of Christ; on Friday at 7:30 P. M. of "Godly Exercise," and on Sunday at 8:00 P. M. his topic was "The blessings of our Future Home."

Bro. Samuel Wilson gave the following discourses: Thursday evening, "The Lamb of God;" Saturday P. M., he spoke on the topic, "The More Excellent Way," and Sunday morning his subject was "The Children of God."

Bro. O. J. Allard addressed the Conference at only one service, as his stay was necessarily brief in order that he might be present where due at the Iowa meeting. His subject on Thursday P. M. was "Holiness." On Saturday evening Bro. A. J. Eychaner's address was upon "The Life Promise," and at the closing service Sunday evening his subject was "The Approaching Restitution."

In addition to these excellent addresses, there were the usual interesting devotional hours; the "Question Box" discussions, the regular services conducted by the Bereans each evening and also their special service on Sunday at 2:00 P. M. led by Sister Lillie Filson.

On Saturday at 10:00 A. M. the annual business session was opened by Pres. James Wilson. Among the important items of business at this meeting may be mentioned the Evangelist's report, showing most excellent work done by him in his field, also reports from all the various points in our State showed the interest to be alive in all these places, and all planning for more in the coming year. A change in the Board of Management was made necessary by the refusal of Bro. J. M. Glotfelty to serve longer as a member of the Board or as Treasurer, owing to pressing cares, and to breaking health due to his sad bereavement in the death of his wife, our dear Sister Dell Glotfelty. His wishes were respected, and Bro. L. E. Conner was elected in his place. The officers as elected were Jas. Wilson, Pres.; S. J. Lindsay, Vice Pres.; L. E. Conner Treasurer, and Emma L. Smith, Secretary.

Board of Management: J. H. Williams, L. E. Conner, E. P. Gesin, S. D. Fahrney, and M. T. Aslaksen.

When the meeting was opened for pledging of funds for the support of our State Evangelist, Bro. L. E. Conner, as chairman of the finance committee brought in his report, and made a most stirring and urgent appeal for more liberal giving on the part of all, to which the people responded to the amount of $976.00, a large amount of which was in cash. It may be stated also, that many were not present who can be relied upon for much more as the year passes, as a sort of reserve force, and some stated their willingness to give still more should it be found necessary—and these were among the number who had already responded very generously.

In addition to this fund a cash collection of $142.24 was received for the Conference expenses, and also after the communion service on Sunday a collection for the poor was taken, amounting to $6 14.

Our people are just beginning to realize as never before their responsibility as stewards of the material with which God has blessed them: and that the gospel cannot be preached unless love and enthusiasm go hand in hand with hard cash.

Bro. Conner is certainly beginning his year well as our Treasurer and Financial Secretary, and has received the hearty commendation of all, for his efforts in financial matters, causing us to be encouraged and to hope for larger things in the development of our work in Illinois.

At the first meeting of the Board of Management, our Bro. S. J. Lindsay, was re-elected as our State Evangelist, to devote all his time to the work at a salary of $900 00 per year by contract. His labors in the past show such efficiency while unable to give all his time to the work that we are expecting much to be accomplished from his unhindered efforts.

The Conference closed on Sunday evening Aug. 20th and was voted a success by all who were so fortunate as to be present. Let our faith and our labors increase till we meet again in 1906, if God wills it so.

Patient Waiting.

In every man's affairs there comes a time of waiting; the problem cannot be solved, it must be worked out; the difficulties cannot be banished by energetic action, they must slowly fade as the mists roll away from the sky of one who has been anxiously watching for the sun through long and weary days of clouds and rain. There are times when our affairs are taken out of our own hands as we are compelled to stand aside and wait patiently for the slow movement of evolution and progress. We have sown seed, but we must not force it to immediate harvest; we must let Nature set her shoulder to our work and do it for us. Growth is the most natural process in the world; the only really normal and healthy process; and yet it is hardest to wait for. When our projects move slowly, we chafe and fume in discontent; when our affairs get entangled, instead of quietly waiting for the unravelling of the snarl, we continually thrust our hands into the tangle and make it tenfold worse. This is a world in which the best things are grown, not made; and he who wants the best and most enduring things must be willing to pay the price of patience for them. Wait patiently, and rejoice that you have things worth waiting for.—Christian Union.

"Look Well to Your Faith."

He that has faith in Christ, has all; he that wants it, has nothing. Well might our Lord say, "This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent." It secures the heart for God through Jesus Christ; and that secures the whole man, all his words and actions; forming the whole conduct for life upon a perfect, a most infallible pattern. This, then, is the direction to which every Christian must turn his mind. Look well to your faith.

Beware of starving your faith by neglecting to lay in proper provision. —Faith comes by hearing the Word of God. What the Word holds forth and conveys through faith into the heart, viz: the grace of God in Christ, is the only support of the soul. "Wherefore, as new-born babes, desire the sincere milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby." "And let the Word of Christ dwell in you richly, in all knowledge and spiritual understanding." It is the Spirit of Christ indeed which alone can kindle and maintain this divine flame; but it is the Christian's business to lay the fuel ready.

Beware of poisoning your faith. And this may be done either by perverse principles or practices. Both commonly go together, and mutually contribute support to each other. The milk of the Word must be sincere, i. e., without mixture, in order to give nourishment; for every foreign mixture gives it a poisonous quality.

Beware of spoiling your faith by suffering it to be idle. Exercise is as necessary in the spiritual life as in the natural. By faith the Christian lives, and, of course, he lives only so far as faith is kept in constant exercise. Just so much activity and exercise as there is, so much is there of faith; and whenever it ceases to act, the Christian ceases to live. The seed of life may be in him: but life consists in the exercise of life. At the same time we must beware of attempting to live, that is to exercise faith, or any other grace, but in strength derived from the Spirit of life.

Good Brother Jim.

The car remained at a standstill for so long a time that every one wondered if something were wrong. It was soon seen, however, that a sturdy little urchin was tenderly helping a lame child aboard, and, as the car moved on, his cheery "good-by" called a smile to the cripple's wan face.

The latter seated himself so he could look out the window, and every few minutes he waved his hand at some one on the street. The other people on the car became curious, and, looking out, saw a little fellow running along the sidewalk, keeping pace with them.

"Who is that?" asked a lady of the lame boy.

"Why, that's Jim!" was the proud response.

"Yes, dear, but who is 'Jim'?"

"Why Jim's my brother, of course!"

By this time everyone was listening and smiling in sympathy.

"Oh! I see," said the lady; "that's the boy who helped you on the car. But why does he not ride with you?"

"Why," he said, "we had only a nickel, and Jim said I must ride." "You see," he added after a pause, "I can't walk well, but Jim, he can run fine!"

"See, what is this?"

With his eyes wild with delight, the child caught up a five-cent piece that had miraculously appeared on his torn little cap, that lay on the seat between the lady and himself. Then, with frantic gestures, he hailed "Jim," who boarded the car at the next corner.

It would be hard to say who was happiest on that car during the remainder of that trip, but, surely, the boys thought they were.

Preach Christ Crucified.

A young man just starting upon his work in the ministry was one day talking to an aged minister in London, who had spent a lifetime in the service. The young man said:—

"You have had a great deal of experience; you know many things that I ought to learn. Can't you give me advice to carry with me in my new duties?"

"Yes, I can," was the response. "I will give you a piece of advice. You know that in every town in England, no matter how small, in every village or hamlet, though it be hidden in the folds of the mountains or wrapped round by the far-off sea, in every clump of farm-houses, you can find a road which, if you follow it, will take you to London. Just so every text you shall choose to preach from in the Bible will have a road that leads to Jesus. Be sure you find that road and follow it: be careful not to miss it once. This is my advice to you."—J. Cowper Gray.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

What if Your Lot is Hard.

That submission to one's lot means that one should sit helplessly before sorrow and disappointment while weeks and months pass by, is a terrible misapprehension. Life should be growth. These trials come to us that we may conquer them, wrest power from them. To yield faint-heartedly is surely ignoble, for there is no life so barren, or hard, or sorrowful, that it does not hold some door to wider living, if we will but seek it.

Is it loneliness that closes about us and shuts joy from our days? Have we tried honestly and patiently to touch other lonely lives? Is it because we have no time for study that life seems so hard and barren? A friend of working girls advised them to learn a poem as they went to and fro from their work instead of simply reading street-car advertisements. A verse, a line of poetry, a single noble thought every day—who of us could not make time for this, if we would? And how rich a harvest one short year would give us! It is hard; but there are things within our reach that no gold could purchase for us—friendship the power of an upright life, the joy of earth and sky. Have we, with all we have within reach, been an our poverty?

The Priceless Treasure.

The priceless treasure which Christ has given to all the needy and suffering is peace—peace that shall flow like a river; peace that shall multiply like the waves of the sea; peace that shall increase without end. Whosoever possesses this treasure in the heart, possesses what no earthly power can command, no earthly riches can buy, no earthly calamity can depreciate or destroy. He can be content in great want, he can be calm in the midst of agitation, he can be fearless in danger, he can rejoice in affliction, he can triumph over death. Take to your heart the gift of peace with God, and you will be rich in possessions which the world can neither give nor take awake. Fire may burn your house, commercial disaster may destroy your property, competition may shut you out of all occupation, the world may have nothing for you but hard work and poor pay, still, with God's peace in your heart, you are rich in all that best satisfies the soul. You have a friend that will never fail you in time of need.

Fools go where angels fear to tread.

He that loves God will love his brother also.

It is human to err but divine to forgive.

Don't forsake God till you find a better master.

Boast not thyself of tomorrow, for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth.

Be careful in choosing officers in the church and not choose a Judas to carry the bag.

Indulging in dangerous pleasures is like licking honey from a knife and getting cut with the edge.

It is better to know a few things that are good than to know a good many things that are bad.

He that won't forgive his brother from the heart, destroys the bridge over which he must pass to that better Land.

The first great cause of superstition is ignorance, for it has its strongest hold upon those whose intellectual opportunities have been the least.—B. E. Dickhaut.

How different is peace from happiness. Happiness is the result of harmony between our wants as creatures and the world without; peace is the harmony between us as the spiritual beings and the Father of spirits. The one is changeable as the objects or circumstances on which it, for the moment, relies; the other is as unchangeable as the God on whom it eternally rests. We may thus possess at once real happiness and real peace, yet either may exist without the other. Nay, mere happiness may be destroyed by God in order that the higher blessing of peace may be possessed; but never will he take away peace to give happiness. Happiness without peace is temporal, peace along with happiness is eternal.

Poetry.

I Wouldn't Be Cross.

I wouldn't be cross, dear, it's never worth while;
Disarm the vexation by wearing a smile;
Let hap a disaster, a trouble, a loss,
Just meet the thing boldly, and never be cross.

I wouldn't be cross, dear, with the people at home;
They love you so fondly; whatever may come,
You may count on the kinfolk around you to stand,
Oh loyally true in a brotherly band!
So since the fine gold far exceedeth the dross,
I wouldn't be cross, dear, I wouldn't be cross.

I wouldn't be cross with a stranger, oh, no!
To the pilgrims we meet on the life path we owe
This kindness, to give them good cheer as they pass,
To clear out the flint stones and plant the soft grass.
Now, dear, with a stranger, in trial or loss,
I perchance might hesitant, I wouldn't be cross.

No bitterness sweetens, no sharpness may heal
The wound which the soul is too proud to reveal.
No envy hath peace; by a fret and a fur
The beautiful work of our hands we may mar.
Let happen what may, dear, of trouble and loss,
I wouldn't be cross, dear, I wouldn't be cross.

Signs of the Times.

In the 24th chapter of Matthew at the 3rd verse the apostles ask Jesus, "What shall be the sign of thy coming and the end of the world?" I shall give a few of the signs of his coming from both New and Old Testaments. From the 3rd to the 15th verse is in answer to the question of his coming, and of the end of the world; from the 14th verse to the 21st refers to the question, When shall these things be, and refer to the destruction of Jerusalem and of the temple. From the 21st verse on, the remainder of the chapter is taken up in answering the question concerning the sign of his coming and of the end of the world. He tells them of a great tribulation to come upon God's people, such as "there never had been before," no nor ever shall be. History records the fact that this great tribulation of God's people commenced in the year 538 A. D. when the Pope of Rome became the Corrector of Heretics.

Daniel in speaking of this power in the 7th chapter, commencing at the 24th verse tells us, "He shall wear out the saints of the Most High, etc., and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times, and the dividing of time." In prophetic reckoning of time a day stands for a year; then a time, times and the dividing of time, or year of 360 days each, would make 1260 days or as many years of man's time. But Daniel and the Savior both speak of the persecution being ended before the end of the days. Dan. vii. 26 and Matt. xxiv. 22.

In the autumn of 1770 the power to persecute and destroy heretics was withdrawn from the papacy and the horrible butchery was ended in which more than sixty millions of God's people lost their lives for their faith. In 1798 the time of the full ending of the days, the Pope was taken prisoner and died without regaining his liberty. Matt. xxiv. 29 says, "Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken, and then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. The tribulation ended in the autumn of 1770.

In 1780 on May 19th of that year was the darkening of the sun and moon. On the 13th of Nov. 1833 was the next sign of the Lord's coming fulfilled in the falling of the stars, and those who saw this wonder said it appeared just as described by John in the 6th of Rev. 13th verse. Those who saw the fulfilment of these prophecies said it was the sign of the Master's returnas given by the Savior himself.

"And the powers of the heavens shall be shaken." By turning to the prophet Haggai ii. 6-7 we find that not only are the heavens and the earth shaken but also all nations, and the desire of all nations shall come. Let us see how this shaking is accomplished. In Luke xxi. 25 26 we find after the signs in the sun, moon and stars, there is to be "On the earth distress of nations with perplexity, men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth," etc. And then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. See also Dan. vii. 13 and on. In Joel iii. 9 and the rest of the chapter we find the nations are to prepare war, to beat their plowshares into swords and their pruning hooks into spears, the weak say I am strong, etc. They will come up to the valley of Jahosophat where the Lord will judge them. This judgment is described in Zech. xiv. 12-15, read all this chapter. Also in Rev. xix. 11 and the balance of the chapter shows the destruction of the armies of the world.

In Isa. ii. is depicted the fallen condition of Israel, which, on account of their iniquities, had drunk of the cup of trambling and of fury from the Lord. The dregs of the cup of fury and of trembling will be taken from the hand of Israel and given to those who afflicted them. We find today that the Russians are the greatest persecutors of the Jews in the world, how natural then that the Lord's fury would be turned against that people; so we find in Ezek. xxxviii. and xxxix. chapters a description of the fearful punishment of Gog (Russia). The two chapters both pronounce judgments against Gog, but they bring in different details and events connected with that punishment.

In the 38th chapter 3rd verse we read, "I am against thee, O Gog, the chief Prince of Meshech and Tubal, and I will turn thee back," etc. Here it says Gog is to be turned back, but does not tell how serious her reverses. In the 39th chapter, 2nd verse we read, "And I will turn thee back and leave but the sixth part of thee. Russia's whole campaign in the far East has been but a series of defeats and retreats; destruction almost complete of her navy and many, many thousands of her soldiers, scarcely gaining even a temporary advantage over an enemy which they formerly despised and held in contempt. The Word of the Lord says there will be "but the sixth part of her left," and that she is to be drawn back into her own country. Therefore it would seem very probable that the peace deliberations being held at Portsmouth, N. H. under the supervision of President Roosevelt will be fruitless, and end in a continuation of the conflict, in which Russia will suffer fearful loses and but one-sixth of her forces escape to their own land. But the Prophet says Ezr. xxxviii. 4 the Lord will "put hooks into thy jaws, and I will bring thee forth, and all their army." They start out on another campaign of conquest. Where do they go and who goes with them?

The 5th verse says, "Persia, Ethiopia (Abyssinia) and Libya with them. 6th verse—Gomer (Germany) and all his bands, the house of Togamah of the north quarters and all his bands, and many people with thee. Reading on in this chapter we find they shall ascend and come like a storm, thou shalt be like a cloud to cover the land. They come up against the mountains of Israel or land of Palestine. Many of the Jews from different parts of the world will have returned to the land of their fathers bringing their wealth with them and are dwelling there without gates or bars, so an evil thought comes into the mind of Gog and he goes up there to take a spoil to take a prey.

The 13th verse says, Sheba and Dadan and the merchants of Tarshish (England) with all the young lions thereof shall say unto thee, "Art thou come to take a spoil," etc.

At the 18th verse we find the result, and that he comes into opposition with the Most High God, and ending in his destruction. The next time he will not attempt to conquer countries thousands of miles from his own border, but those nearer home.

The 25th chapter of Jer. commencing at the 15th verse shows the cup of fury is to be given to all the nations of the earth. "They will all drink of that cup, and be moved and be mad, for the sword which I will send among them. They will spew and fall to rise no more.

In the 2nd Psalm it is shown that the heathen will rage and the people imagine a vain thing. The kings of the earth set themselves against the Lord and against his anointed saying, Let us break their bands asunder and cast their cords from us. "He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh," etc. The sixth verse says, "Yet have I set my King upon my Holy Hill of Zion. The Savior when he returns is to be King over all the earth. See Zech. xiv. 9; Isa. xxiv. 21-23; Luke xix. 12-27; Rev. xix. 15; Dan. vii. 14 also Dan. vii. 27 and ii. 44; also Micah iv.; Psa. lxxii.; Isa. ii. 11, 33; xx. 28, 60th chapters descriptive of his coming and glorious reign with his resurrected saints over this sin cursed earth, when he will cause wars to cease unto the end of the earth. Psa. xlvi. 8-11. Even so come Lord Jesus and come quickly. Rev. xxii. 12 and 20.

Hieremias (or "Iremiah").

Chapter 2.

1. Wanting—

2. And do thou say, Thus saith the Lord, I have remembered the mercy of thy youth and the love of thy adult age, when thou didst follow out the saint of Israel saith the Lord;

3. The saint of Israael is the Lord's authoritative-head (or "Archos") of his generic products; (begotten not made). All those who devour him will commit disordant-error; calamities will come upon them, saith the Lord.

4. May ye have hearkened unto a Word of the Lord, thou house of Jakook and every father's family of the house of Israeel.

5. Thus saith the Lord; What discordant-error did your fathers find in me that they stood far away from me and went their way after the inutilities and became themselves inutile?

6. And did not say, Where is the Lord who let us up out of a land of Aigupton, who guided us along in the wilderness in an unexplored and trackless land, in a land without water and unfruitful, in a land which no man of mark had passed through and wherein no men at all had dwelt?

7. And who led you into the Karmel—region that you might eat the fruits and the good things thereof; and ye went in and polluted my land, and made my inheritance into an abomination.

8. The priests did not say, Where is the Lord? And those who were maintaining the law did not trust me, and the shepherds were irreverent to me, and the prophets were prophesying in Baal and had gone their way after that which was of no profit.

9. Therefore I shall no longer have judged in relation to you, and in relation to the sons of your sons I shall no longer have judged.

10. For this reason may ye have gone into the islands of the Chittites and may ye have sent away into Keedar and may ye have thought a great deal, and may ye have seen whether such things have occurred.

11. Will nations change their gods? And these are not gods; but my laity have exchanged their glory for that by which they will not have profited.

12. The heavens were astounded at this, and shuddered exceedingly saith the Lord;

13. Because two things and wicked things have my laity done; they have utterly forsaken me, a fountain of water of life, and they have dug for themselves broken cisterns which cannot hold water.

14. Is Israel a bond-servant or is he not a son born in the house? Why has he become an object of plunder?

15. Lions have roared over him and given their voice, lions that have made his land a desolation; and his cities have been dug down so that they are not being dwelt in.

16. And sons of Memphis and Taphas have become acquainted with thee and have made sport of thee: was not thy forsaking me the cause of these things?

17. Saith the Lord thy God.

18. And now what hast thou and the way of Aigupton in common that thou art drinking water of Geeoon? And what hast thou and the way of Assuriol in common that thou art drinking water of rivers?

19. Thy apostasy will chasten thee and thy evil-doing will convict thee; and do thou comprehend and know that thy forsaking of me is a bitter thing for thee, saith the Lord thy God; and that I am not satisfied with thee, saith the Lord thy God.

20. Because from an animate-age hast thou broken thy yoke and rent asunder thy bonds, and said, I will not serve thee as a bond-servant; but will go my way to every high hill, and down beneath every shady tree there will I have poured myself out in my fornication.

21. But I planted thee a fruitful and all truthful vine; how hast thou turned into bitterness, O thou alienated vine.

22. If thou shouldst cleanse thyself off with niter, and wash thyself with soap, defiled with thine iniquities in my sight wouldst thou still be with the Lord.

23. How wilt thou say I have not polluted myself and have not gone my way after Baal? See thy ways in the Polyandion (a heathen temple of Baal or monument to those sacrified to Baal well known in that day) and become aware of what thou hast done; too late did her voice (Zion's voice) raise the ololu (the cry of despair or mourning).

24. She had made her ways broad unto waters of desolation, in the inordinate desires of her soul was she borne away by the winds (or spirits; evil spirits I think meant) she gave herself up; who will return her? All who seek her will not grow weary; in her humiliation will they find her.

25. Mayest thou have turned thy foot away from a rough way, and thy throat from thirst; but she hath said, I am doing a manly thing, because she had loved aliens and gone her way after them.

26. Like the shame of a thief when he hath been taken, even so will the sons of Israel have been put to shame, they and their kings and their rulers and their priests and their prophets;

27. To the tree have they said thou art my father, thou, and to the stone thou didst beget me; and they have turned their backs to me and not their faces; and in the due time of their calamities will they say, Do thou arise and save us.

28. And where are thy gods whom thou didst make for thyself? They will arise and save in thy period of calamity will they not? Because according to the number of thy cities were thy gods, O Jouda, and according to the number of the ways through Hierousaleem were they sacrificing to Baal.

29. Why do ye talk to me at all? Ye have all done irreverently and ye have all transgressed against me, saith the Lord;

30. In vain have I smitten your offspring, ye have not accepted chastening; a sword hath devoured your prophets like a destroying lion, and ye have not feared.

31. May ye have hearkened unto a word of the Lord; thus saith the Lord; have I not become desolate for Israeel, a land grown up to weeds? Why did my laity say, We will not be ruled over by the Lord and we will no longer come unto thee?

32. Will a bride ignore her cosmos and a virgin her breast band? but my laity hath ignored me for days without number.

33. Why wilt thou still devise good in thy ways by seeking a way to love? No; it's not in this wise; for thou hast done wickedly in polluting thy ways;

34. And in thy hands they have found the blood of innocent souls; not in places dug for them have I found them, but at the foot of every oak-tree;

35. And thou hast said, I am guiltless, Yea, let his anger be turned away from me; Lo, I am judging in relation to thee, in that thou art saying, I have not sinned.

36. Because in repeating thy way a second time; thou hast despised me, exceedingly; and from Aiguptos wilt thou have been put to shame even as thou wast put to shame from Assour, because from there also wilt thou have gone out, and with thy hands upon thy head, because the Lord hath thrust away thy hope, and thou wilt have been prospered therein.

Comment.

The first text wanting in the best text might easily be supplied of course, and has been in the versions, probably an inadvertancy of a scribe in copying; but the changes and blurring of the Messianic record of the third and fourth verses show evidence of anything but inadvertancy or the carelessness of a scribe in copying. Read carefully and compare, keeping in mind that "the spirit of prophecy is the Spirit of the Christ." In the seventh verse what has become of "the Karmel-range" (or Carmel) in the versions? This was where "the schools of the prophets" were founded and maintained in the times here referred to. And what has become of the significant allusion to "the Polyandrion" in the 23d verse, a well known and historic monument of the apostasy of Samarritan Israeel down on the Mediterranean Sea-coast of Dan? And who recognizes in "the Isles of Kittim" of the 10th verse (R. V.) the abode of the descendants of Chet ("Heth" C. V.) from whom Habraam bought "the double-cave and field" called "Machpelah" in the C. V. and R. V.? In the 21st verse "the fruitful and all truthful vine" is called in the 32nd of Deuteron in "the Ode of Moouseos" the vine of Sodooma" because of the foreseen apostasy here referred to.

Compare the reading of the 34th verse with the reading in "the Revised Version" and "wonder with a great amazement," as I have, what it means any how and from what sort of a text it was translated.

Compare the 25th verse also with the same in the R. V. and ask some learned Hebraist like Dr. Harper to explain what the prophet meant to say. But time fails to point out all the absurdities of the versions.

The Immorality of the Theater.

Again and again the question is raised as to whether the Christian may visit the theater. The majority of decided Christians urgently advises against it. Their verdict, however, does not receive the proper attention, on the ground that this is a one-sided and narrow view; such persons, it is said, are pre-occupied against the stage and actors; they have an inadequate knowledge of actual conditions to reach a just conclusion. Over against this are the following expressions from persons who understand the matter. They are the verdict of such who have been upon the stage or as professional critics possess a thorough knowledge of the stage.

The actor C. F. Sothern says, "In our days even the best presentations are of such a nature that many of our best actors consider it necessary to witness their own performances before they permit their wives and daughters to visit them, because they know that in such places very little moral purity is to be found."

The renowned English tragedian Macready would not allow his own daughter to visit the theater.

A renowned French dramatic poet met a friend who would not permit his daughter to attend the theater. "You will not allow your daughter," said he, "to witness my productions? You are right. I tell you once for all, you should not take your daughter to the theatre. Not only is the presentation immoral, but also the place."

Olive Logan said she would caution every woman against entering the stage on account of the demoralizing influences which are daily becoming stronger.

Fanny Kremble declared that the calling of the actress is incompatible with the diguity of woman.

Charlotte Cushman always advised young girls who sought her counsel, against entering the stage.

The leading London theater critic Clement Scott was requested to give the public his approved verdict as to whether the stage is the proper place for the morally pure young lady to earn her livelihood. He said, "A woman may cast herself headlong into the whirlpool, and by a miracle save her life, or she may be drowned. If a young lady can control herself she may go anywhere; but I should be sorry indeed to see a modest girl exposed to temptations of the worst kind—a frivolous disregard of the purity of woman."

The critic of the Chicago Times writes, "Twenty five years ago such presentations as are furnished every evening in the most rudely sensual manner at the comic opera would have landed the entire company at the police station."

Mr. M. A. Palmer whose views were given several years ago in the North American Review, admits the decline of the stage and attributes this to the depraved public taste. He continues: "Now as ever human passions are presented in the theater. Ambition which leads to murder; jealousy which makes murderers; sensuality which leads to adultery; anger which leads to madness."

These expressions of prominent artists and critics should by all means create an impression upon those who place small worth upon the verdict of church circles. Attendance at the theater as it is, is fraught with great danger, especially to the youth, and parents and other responsible persons should employ wise counsel and direction.—The Christ-liche Botschafter. Translated from the German by

Life and Letters of the Apostle Paul as our Example.
No. 9.

One of the most remarkable feature of Paul's character was his great power of endurance or what we would call now a days his great staying qualities.

In 2 Cor. iv. 8, 9, Paul says, "We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed, we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down but not destroyed."

Brothers and Sisters, let us take a lesson from Paul this evening. If we are troubled on every side let us not be distressed; if we are perplexed let us not despair, if we are persecuted let us remember we are not forsaken.

Paul was persecuted more than any of the other disciples as we read 2 Cor. xi. In labors more abundant, in stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent, of the elf of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day have I been in the deep. In journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren, in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness.

But for all these Paul never seemed to give up, he was ever on the alert to do his duty. He gloried in persecutions, knowing in weakness he was made strong, strong in the Lord. It was Paul's lot to suffer. The Lord said to Ananias, "Go thy way; for he (Saul or Paul) is a chosen vessel unto me to bear my name before the Gentiles and kings, and the children of Israel: for I will show him how many things he must suffer for my name's sake. From the beginning Paul began to suffer great distress. He says he was not disobedient to the heavenly vision; but declared to them of Damascus first. Thus first in Damascus he began to preach Christ. From the first, too, began "the perils from his own countrymen;" which were to continue the balance of his life.

We read at the first attempt to make converts to Christ the Jews took counsel to kill him. He says in his 2nd Epistle to the Corinthians. In Damascus the governor under Aretas the king guarded the city of Damascus in order to take me; and through a window was I let down in a basket by the wall, and escaped his hands. While the soldiers were on guard at the gates, and the angry Jews were on the watch for him, Paul was taken to a house, the wall of which may have formed part of the fortification of the town. A window afforded a means of escape. A rope and basket had been provided, Paul stepped into the basket, was lowered to the ground, and left the city never to return. Thus ended his first attempt. He had made a failure. He had preached and had labored without result. But he did not give up. And like him, if we do not meet with success we must not give up.

From Damascus to Jerusalem is Paul's next step. Luke says he was with them going in and going out at Jerusalem, preaching boldly in the name of the Lord: and he spoke and disputed against the Grecian Jews; but they went about to kill him. And so he had to flee to Tarsus, the city of his boyhood. In these first years of his Christian experiences, he may have made many failures, he may have been conscious of many mistakes. But he was the kind of man who was not to be discouraged by failure, but who was able to overcome his mistakes and to profit by them.

He goes from place to place preaching the Word of the kingdom, and in nearly every city he has to flee because his life is threatened. After he and Barnabas had visited several cities, we find them at a place called Lystra. Paul healed a lame man at this place and the people wanted to worship them. Paul and Barnabas objected. Jews who had followed them into the city told the people that the two apostles were the servants of demons, deceivers of the people who ought to be gotten rid of as speedily as possible. Having persuaded the multitudes they stoned Paul, and dragged him out of the city, supposing that he was dead.

The disciples however were brave and loyal, and gathered round him as he lay senseless on the ground. He was not dead, as they stood around him, he rose up. He went back into the city and the disciples gave him shelter and hospitality for the night, and on the morrow he and Barnabas went forth to Derbe where they preached the gospel. Truly was Paul a great man. Nothing seemed to discourage him. Derbe was the limit of the first missionary journey. Back to Lystra they went, where Paul had been stoned, to Iconium where their lives had been threatened, to Antioch from whence they had been cast out. They felt that the disciples must be strengthened, so back they went the same way they had come, ready to give up their lives for the brethren if need be. Paul was indeed an example to us.

After this we find Paul in a discussion with brethren at Jerusalem in regard to circumcision, and then in a dispute with Barnabas in regard to Mark. It is wonderful how his strength bore the strain of the work and anxiety. To the Galatians he wrote, For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision, but a new creature. And as many as walk according to this rule, peace be on them, and mercy, and upon the Israel of God. From henceforth let no man trouble me, for I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus. The marks in his body testified to his sufferings for the Lord Jesus. These marks came from a fanatical, pious zeal through blind unbelief on the Jews. But we come to a time when Paul was beaten on account of love for gain, the gain of money. Paul was at Philippi, as he and the brethren went to the place of prayer they were annoyed and troubled by a woman, who is described as having a spirit of divination. Her masters had made use of her gift whatever it was, traded on it, and made great gain by her soothsaying. She had been greatly excited by what she had seen and heard of Paul and his company. She took up a position on the sabbath day, on the way to the place of prayer, and, following after Paul and his companions cried out, These men are servants of the Most High God, which proclaim unto you the way of salvation. Paul was profoundly moved and greatly disturbed, "Being sorely troubled, turned and said to the spirit, I charge thee in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her." And the woman found the power she had had departed from her. From that hour she was as other women. This soon spread abroad and caused great uproar among the people. Prompt action was taken by the masters of the women. They at once laid hold on Paul and Silas and dragged them into the market place before the rulers and the multitude eagerly helped them. Their accusers set themselves first to arouse the Roman aversion against the Jews, and then charged them with an attempt to corrupt Roman manners, and in other ways to trouble the city exceedingly.

The multitude in an intense state of excitement rose up against Paul and Silas, the magistrates were so intimidated, that they lost all appearance of judicial calm; rashly and violently they laid hands on them, and without attempt at trial, rent their garments off them, and commanded to beat them with rods. It was foolishly and cruelly done. To be beaten with rods by a Roman lictor was a cruel and painful thing. They were beaten on the naked body till the blood came. Then they were sent to prison, and the jailer received a charge to keep them safely. They were thrust into the inner prison, a dark, unventilated place, and probably as such places often were, foul and loathsome. Their feet were made fast in the stocks. Thus they were left to pass the night. Their bodies beaten black and blue, their wounds open and sore, kept by the stocks in a constrained attitude, which would have prevented them from obtaining rest, even if they had been in perfect health and strength. Thus in a few brief hours Paul and Silas are hurried away from their friends, beaten and tortured, shut up in prison, and left alone to pass the hours in pain and darkness. We do not think it was more painful to them within the prison than it was for Timothy, and Luke, and Lydia, and the other friends outside the prison-house. For the hearts of the latter were wrung with anguish, and with the bitter agony of being compelled to witness the torture and suffering of their loved and venerated leader without being able to help him. We may be sure that with sad hearts they kept their sleepless vigil through the night, and often did their cry ascend to God on behalf of his servants. As for Paul and Silas they spent the night in a triumphant way. They were able to disregard the pain and anguish caused by wounds. They rose in triumph over them. They passed the night not in moans and groans, but in devotion. Singing praises to him. About midnight Paul and Silas were praying and singing hymns to God. They were witnessing for God even in a loathsome and foul jail and at the hour of midnight. Surely such sounds were never heard in a prison-house at the midnight hour before. But a prison rarely held such prisoners as they were. Suddenly a great earthquake was felt; the foundations of the prison-house were shaken, the doors were flung open, and the fetters which bound the prisoners hand and foot, were loosed. We know how the jailer supposing that the prisoners had escaped drew his sword and was about to kill himself. But Paul cried with a loud voice, "Do thyself no hurt, for we are all here." We learn that the jailer wished to know what he should do in order to be saved, and the answer was, "Believe on the Lord Jesus and thou shalt be saved, thou and thy house." We are told that they spake the word of the Lord unto him and all that were in his house, and he and his house were baptized.

For want of time I cannot go into detail in regard to Paul's visits to Thessalonica, Corinth, Ephesus and his visits to Jerusalem. How at Thessalonica the Word preached caused a riot. How at Ephesus. Paul fought with beasts, how at Jerusalem he was mobbed, how at Rome he was imprisoned and finally beheaded, and much more. Notwithstanding all this Paul could say, "I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therein to be content."

Brothers and sisters, it is not our lot to suffer as Paul did, but these records of his sufferings were written for our benefit, so let us profit by them.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us about, give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can hold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Use warning and send safely.

Remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. Read PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 13, 1905. NUMBER 34.

The Restitution.

The Restitution sdy zeates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

The Day is at Hand.

Poor fainting spirit, still hold on thy way—
The dawn is near!
True, thou art weary; but yon brightening ray
Becomes more clear.
Bear up a little longer—wait for rest—
Yield not to slumber, though with toil oppressed.

The night of life is mournful—but look on—
The dawn is near!
Soon will earth's shadowy scenes and forms be gone—
Yield not to fear!
Then contrite's summit will reflect its gained,
And the bright workbof joy and peace attained.

"Joyful through hope" thy motto fulfilling be,
The dawn is near!
What glories will that dawn unfold to thee!
Be of good cheer!
Gird up thy loins; bind sandals on thy feet;
The way is dark and long, the end is sweet.

Life and Letters of the Apostle Paul as our Example. No. 10.

EPISTLE TO THESSALONIANS.

On Paul's second missionary journey, his chief intention seems to have been to evangelize the Roman province of Asia, where he afterwards spent three fruitful years. This region with its capitol city, Ephesus, was for the apostle's mission probably the most important district between Jerusalem and Rome. But at that time the apostles were not permitted to preach the gospel in Asia, as we read in Acts, "The Spirit suffered them not." While at Troas a vision by night appeared to Paul. "There was a man of Macedonia beseeching him to come over to Macedonia and help them." God saw that the minds of the Macedonians were ready to receive the gospel, so after this he directed Paul and Silas on their important mission, and in their determination to preach the gladtidings they had to endure severe trials and dangers. Of all Macedonia the apostles desired to go to Thessalonica, it was the capital and a flourishing trading port and there was a synagogue. Now Paul did not expect to gain many converts from the synagogue, but there was generally gathered around it a circle of enlightened Gentiles called proselytes and synagogue hearers, distinguished frequently by the presence of refined and educated Greek women. These people, tired of heathen superstition, sought a religion more tangible. Among them Paul found his best audiences, and often gathered there the nucleus of his Gentile churches. As the Scripture enjoins (to the Jew first and then to the Greek) so Paul preached. Three sabbaths he contended earnestly with the Jews, but after that they thrust him out, he then preached to the Gentiles and soon formed a church, consisting of some believing Jews and many converted Gentiles. Before long the jealousy of the unbelieving Jews caused the good work of the apostles to cease, for they, together with the baser class of people in the city, raised a tumult, so that Paul and Silas had to be conveyed away by night unto Berea for their safety.

From thence Paul went to Athens where he left Silas and Timothy. Twice since his unwilling departure from Thessalonica, Paul had attempted to visit the infant church there but had been hindered, and although it had been but a short time, his anxiety for their welfare became unendurable so he determined to send Timotheus, his sole companion then, to establish them in the faith, comfort the afflicted, that they might not be moved by the trial of their faith. Timotheus returned to Corinth with a report that greatly relieved and gladdened the heart of the much tried Paul. 1. The Thessalonians were standing fast in the Lord. 2. The expectations he had formed of them were in no way disappointed. 3. Their faith had stood without flinching in the fiery test of persecution. 4. Their love toward their heavenly Father and their brethren was devoted and sincere. 5. They were mindful of the apostles' doctrine, maintaining a consistent walk and by their faithfulness and zeal had commended the gospel with powerful effect throughout Macedonia and Achaia. But Timothy also reported little irregularities that had crept into the church which needed correction, so St. Paul writes his epistles to the Thessalonians in the 52 years after our Lord's death both to commend and exhort. Brethren, you know our rejoicing when we hear of those of like precious faith, who though isolated, are continuing stedfastly in the way of truth, and we can understand how Paul's heart thrilled with heavenly joy to know that this little flock of believers that he and Silas had brought into the glorious light of the gospel were stedfast in the faith and abounding in love. Hence his affectionate appeal for the favor of God to rest upon them always. Paul thought the safest and best way of commending the Thessalonians was to thank God, who only is the source of all goodness in men, and in every epistle, except Galatians, his first words are of thanks and praise to God for the fruits of his grace found in the brethren. This is according to his own maxim, "In everything give thanks." Chap. v. 18. The apostle Paul knew enough of human nature to realize that these new born babes in Christ needed strengthening and encouraging, so after his affectionate greeting and remembrance of them in prayer, he relates to them the manner of conversion, as it had appeared to them. God had seen that these people were worthy of having the gospel preached to them, and though Paul and Silas had been terribly persecuted before coming to them, insomuch as to discourage them from further preaching the truth, but the Father gave them power to speak to the Thessalonians so that they readily received the gospel in power as well as in word. It did not take these new converts long to see what manner of men the apostles were, and they not only received and believed the Word of the kingdom but immediately became followers of the apostles, regardless of the persecution they knew would be connected with it. You see they were not ashamed of the gospel, for they knew it was the power of God unto salvation. No matter how unpopular it was, they must have let their light shine, for the actual evidence had come to Paul. Although far away from him, the news came to him, that their earnestness and zeal had caused all people to hear of their faith. God-ward and even to the believers throughout Macedonia and Achaia they had become examples.

Right here is a lesson for us. Are we letting those who come into the Master's vineyard after us, show more love and appreciation for the gospel than we? We should be examples to them, but here we need to to taught again, when we should have been teachers. Paul was not this kind, he said with assurance, "Be ye followers of me, even as I am of Christ." Let us try to have the spirit of the Thessalonian and sound abroad the gospel, and what it is doing for us. When Jesus was upon the earth, whomsoever he met, knew after they conversed with him, his mission upon the earth; knew that he had a hope which made him endure the trials for the joy that was set before him. Moses said, he would rather suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season, why? that he might be a partaker with Jesus. O, that we would realize as Paul and the Thessalonian brethren did, the deliverance, Jesus has procured for those that love him through the gospel and appreciate the glorious hope we entertain, so that we may strive the more earnestly to lay aside every weight and the sin which does so easily beset us, and run with patience the race set before us, not only looking unto Jesus, who is the author and finisher of our faith, but looking and longing for his coming. It is my prayer that we may all be ready to meet him with joy.

SR. HATTIE E. PATE.

Suffering with Christ.

If we suffer we shall also reign with him; if we deny him he also will deny us." 2 Tim. ii. 12. The statement, if we suffer with Christ we shall also reign with him, forces an acceptance of the negative side, that if we do not suffer with Christ we will not reign with him, and this is confirmed by the latter half of the text. It is very important then to know 1st just of what "suffering with Christ" consists.

We have the testimony of the Scriptures showing that those of apostolic times suffered imprisonment, stripes above measure, beaten with rods, under sentence of death, some beheaded, others stoned. In perils of robbers, of the heathen, of the wilderness, of cities, in perils among false brethren, in weariness, painfulness, watchings, hunger, thirst, fastings, cold, nakedness. See 2 Cor. xi; Acts v. 12-14; Phil. i.; 1 Tim. iv. Peter ii.

The above is physical suffering and is not required of us in this day and generation. Our suffering is a mental operation, but none the less painful. Although optional with each one its operation is absolutely necessary to insure a reign with Christ. How can we suffer with Christ?

1 Tim. iv. 10 says, For therefore we both labor and suffer reproach because we trust in the living God. Suffer reproach for the name of Christ. Have we ever suffered the mockery and reproach of the world as we endeavored to live up to our belief and tell others of the glorious gospel? This is a way in which we can suffer. Are there any who are afraid of this suffering and therefore do not open their mouths when they see an opportunity to speak?

1 Peter iii. 9, Peter says not rendering evil for evil or railing for railing, but contrariwise blessing; but and if ye suffer for righteousness sake happy are ye. This is perhaps harder to perform than any other command. You no doubt know people who dislike you and openly show it; and you have a dislike for them. Did you ever try to conquer that feeling on your part and extend a friendly hand? Jesus says "love your enemies"—and when you greeted that party perhaps on a public street and they turned their backs upon you there is no doubt but what you suffered.

Were you ever openly insulted, cursed at, berated, or the butt of coarse jokes? And did you reply in like manner and endeavor to return as good as you received? We trust that upon these occasions you suffered with and for Christ.

Paul says, 1 Cor. iv. 10, Being reviled we bless, being persecuted, we suffer it. Peter says, (1 Peter ii.) Because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example that ye should follow in his steps who when he was reviled reviled not again, when he suffered he threatened not. Pretty hard, isn't it brethren, when some one makes a laughing stock of us to take it quietly and say nothing. But this is how we can suffer with Christ.

Suppose we are addicted to some of the lusts of the flesh, we have merely buried the old man alive, we did not kill him, and he has risen again, and caused us to be envious or easily provoked to wrath or strife or hatred, or we can harbor unclean thoughts, or we smoke or chew or drink or dance, and we realize we do wrong in doing these and we stop, would we call this suffering? If we stopped doing any one of these or the many other things the natural man finds to do, would we be suffering? Brethren, this is self-denial and self-denial always brings suffering. Suppose our companions noted this change and asked the reason of this denial, and we explained, and we heard their jeers and laughter and ridicule and taunts, and brethren, were any of you ever in this position? and did you suffer? Ah, did you, and were you almost tempted to indulge again and stop their scorn? If you were, let us hope you conquered the temptation. And if you did, you suffered with and for Christ?

Have we ever resolved within ourselves and promised our friends, our brethren, our God, we would never again indulge in this or that bad habit and in an evil hour forgot our resolution and broke our promise? Perhaps we recovered ourselves in an instant and were a model of goodness ever after, but did we suffer as we saw the look of pity in the eye of our brother, the look of distrust and scorn in the face of our friend, and more than this did we feel our own conscience accusing us, reproaching us, wringing from us a bitter repentance? If we did brethren, we suffered, yes, we suffered. And were we ever wrongfully accused, accused of committing some wrong act of which we are not guilty? Our first impulse was to protest empatically and make trouble for the one that started the report, was it not? Peter says, (1 Peter ii. 20.) For what glory is it if ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently, but if ye do well and suffer for it ye take it patiently, this is acceptable to God.

Were we ever seated before the fire of an evening or a Sunday afternoon when the weather has been inclement, and we know some brother or sister is sick or in distress, did we remember and obey the injunction in James to visit those in affliction? or did we on a meeting night ever feel indisposed and out of sorts and decide to stay at home when we knew our presence was needed at that meeting? It requires a sacrifice to do our duty on these occasions but we must make that sacrifice if we wish to suffer with Christ. Did we sometimes think, brethren, that our way should be given preference? We have had a favorite song perhaps that we wanted sung but it was crowded out, or arrangements were made for a special meeting and because we did not approve of the way it was to be conducted we stayed away, or if we came we complained about it? Paul says, (Rom. xii. 10) we should be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love, in honor preferring one another.

Did we ever do our duty as we thought, the best we could and then were told we had not done the right thing at all? Our "feelings" were no doubt pretty badly hurt, after we had as we thought, did our level best; but remember those "feelings" are the feelings of the old man who is supposed to be dead and buried. We are now new creatures in Christ Jesus. 2 Cor. v. 17. We are now transformed by the "renewing" of our minds. Rom. xii. 2. Were we ever invited by friends, relatives, neighbors or fellow-employe to attend the ball game or to spend the day or evening at some park, and did we remember we were ambassadors for Christ, called to suffer reproach for his name, and did we decline such invitation, stating that we were endeavoring to live "soberly, righteously and godly" in this present world, and that we could not lend the support of our presence to the theater, bowling alley, dance hall, etc., in operation at these parks, or were we afraid of the suffering this would cause, were we afraid to be a peculiar people, and so acquiesced to and participated the amusements of those who were aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world. Eph. ii.

Paul's question in 2 Cor. vi. 16 is here very appropriate, "What fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness, and what communion hath light with darkness?" None whatever! If light has no communion with darkness, darkness is descriptive of those who are aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, (it surely is) if we participate in their amusements, enjoy their association and accept their friendship, our light is extinguished, we become darkness, for darkness and light hath no communion. If we add to faith the fortitude and courage to "preach the Word," instantly taking advantage of every occasion, both opportune and inopportune, the question of worldly friendship soon solves itself, for the world will have none of us. John xv. 18.

This all entails suffering on our part, but it is only through such suffering, self-denial and sacrifice that we shall reign with him who is to be King of kings, if we would reign with him we must suffer with him, yes, we must suffer with him.

If we look forward to the time when the overcomers shall have access to the tree of life, shall have power over the nations, shall have his name written in the book of life, shall be a pillar in the temple of God, shall sit down with Jesus on his throne, then the words of Paul become appropriate, (Rom. viii. 18), For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us.

Oh, may we carry our cross day by day with clean hands and a pure heart, that we may wear a crown bye and bye. Amen.

GEO. NEILL.

After Obedience What?

Those who have submitted to the form (mold) of doctrine are directed to arise and walk in newness of life or after the new life which is in Christ Jesus. If you have not believed in vain you have in immersion put on the Christ. You are then admonished, to walk ye in him. After Christ's baptism by John in Jordan he was led up by the Spirit into the wilderness and tempted. He then became a mark for the tempter. So are we all. Until this time the world has been friendly to us. You are now one of God's chosen ones and are felt as was Jesus to overcome the tempter. In reading the history of his temptation found in Matt. iv. you will see that each trial was met by the use of Scripture. He had astonished the doctors of the law at the age of ten years. So now he is well fortified for this very important event in his life. I would advise all who have lately come into the fold to build on the foundation of the prophets and apostles, of which the Christ is the true corner stone. Build upon the rock, viz: "Thou art the Christ the Son of the living God." None other will stand the test. The foundation has been lain and we must do the building. Paul says in Rom. viii. There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. We have put on Christ by baptism and therefore we are in him and must walk after the Spirit. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God. Would it not be well to ask how the Spirit beareth witness with our Spirit? Testimony can only be borne through a witness. Language is the medium through which the witness may testify. The plan of salvation comes to us through the record that God has made of his Son beginning with viz, The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head, coming down through the ages as the seed of Abraham, Son of David, Son of Mary and Son of God. The Spirit of God has borne this testimony and when we have received the Spirit in our begettal (see 1 Peter i. 23), we are in a condition that the Spirit of Christ can bear witness with our spirit. In the above text you should read "born," regenerated or begotten, which is its true meaning. The old man has been put to death by the burial in water. The new man has been begotten "not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible (seed) by the Word of God which liveth and abideth forever." We are now babes in Christ and should desire the sincere milk of the Word. This is the period of growth. We must grow in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ. Remembering that it was through ignorance that we were alienated from that life which is in God. In Eph. the apostle tells us that we were Gentiles in the flesh and at that time we were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world. Now, therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners (aliens) but fellowcitizens with the saints and of the household of God. To be a fellowcitizen with the saints and the household of God means a great deal, and means that we must be diligent, and as Peter says, add to our faith the Christian graces numerated in 2 Pet. i. 5, 6, 7. If these (graces) be in you and abound they make you that you are neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. To add these things means a continual warfare. You must study, as Paul admonished Timothy, to be approved of God, and to be able to rightly divide the Word of God. You are in the world but you must not be a part of it. John says, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lusts of the flesh, and the lusts of the eye, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. The world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." 1 John ii. 15, 16, 17. You must not think that the Father will put the knowledge into your mind any more than that he will furnish you food to eat if you do not labor. He said to the first Adam, In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground. God has given us the earth that we may be diligent and plant and cultivate in order that we may reap and garner up against the day of want. If we become slothful we must suffer. Will God require less of those who have named his name and become his sons and daughters? I think not. The kings of this earth educate the princes that they may be able to rule in their time. If we are to rule as one of God's children should not we become proficient in the things concerning the kingdom that is to bring universal peace on this earth? Let us not be idle but diligent, remembering that we are of the household of God and fellowcitizens with the saints. If we make our calling and election sure by diligence in searching the Word and obeying the precepts therein found we will be assured of a position in the kingdom of God that will be ours for the ages to come. Is not this worth more than a position in any human government? They have thus far proved a failure. There can be no permanent peace until Christ and his saints bring it about. This article is specially addressed to those who have become fellowcitizens with the saints. Your Brother in the "Blessed Hope."

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPT. 13, 1905.

IN our next issue we will give a number of papers read at the Cleveland Conference.

THE yellow fever in the South is still spreading, and more deaths are reported every day.

AT PER taking part in all the principal battles on the sea in the recent War, Admiral Togo's flag ship, the Mikasa, was destroyed by fire getting to the magazines, which exploded, sinking the ship and killing 600 men.

IT is not yet certain that Norway and Sweden will not get into a fight over the separation made some months ago. There is a general preparation for war being made, and some nations would lend to the supposition that both sides rather court conflict.

A LETTER from Bro. P. Neill states that on last Friday, while Sister Mary Greenbrier, of Cleveland, was visiting, she fell down stairs, and was killed. Sister Greenbrier was the blind woman who sang so beautifully at the recent Ohio Conference, as mentioned in the report. A fuller notice will doubtless be sent later.

A DISPATCH from Godzyadam, Manchuria, dated Sept. 9, says: "The peace terms became known here today. The majority consider them inoffensive to Russian honor and dignity. It is not so clear at what station the railroad is to be turned over to the Japanese, at Kwangchengtse or Chantufu. This question is important.

If the turnover occurs at Kwangchengtse, then Russia cedes to Japan a hundred miles of yet unoccupied line, and likewise the only coal mines south of Harbin.

From Chantufu start all the trade routes to the rich Kirin province, and should the road become the property of the Japanese to Kwangchengtse, the complete possession of Chantufu would place Kirin province entirely under Japanese influence. This would be undesirable for Russia. Should the transfer be made at Chantufu or farther south, Kirin province, which has supported the Russian army for six months, would remain Russian, which would be particularly advantageous, because the southern portion of the railroad has no natural outlet.

This and many other questions, such as the Russians' right to maintain consular officials and commercial agents at Liaoyang, Mukden, Port Arthur, and Port Dalny, should, it is claimed here, be settled before the armies withdraw from their strategic positions.

A high officer declared today that it would be impolitic to permit the Japanese to settle in Kwangchengtse, for in case of another war they could reach Harbin in fifty hours, occupy Kirin, and cut Russia off from the Amur regions.

It was announced from Portsmouth, N. H. Aug. 30, that the formal recognition of Japan's possession of the Chinese Eastern railroad below Kwangchengtse involves the payment by Russia to China of a sum estimated $75,000,000. This is the Chinese interest in the road, and for it China must be remunerated. The question of the ultimate possession of the road is a matter to be settled between Japan and China. Japan can keep the road or surrender it to China, demanding in return the money paid by Russia to China. If she elects the latter course Japan will, therefore, obtain as an indirect "spoil of war" from Russia the $75,000,000.

News Items.

Moscow, Sept. 13.—The Gazette declares that the whole of Russia is on the brink of a catastrophe similar to that at Baku. It urges a military dictatorship of the empire similar to the one established in Poland in 1868. It says nothing else will save the country.

Helingsfors, Finland, Sept. 13.—Troops with fixed bayonets today dispersed a meeting of 800 delegates from all towns in Finland called for the purpose of discussing the political situation. The police had previously ordered the delegates to disperse, but the order was ignored.

Tiflis, Sept. 13.—The mayor and members of the town council have resigned as a protest against the killing and wounding of social democrats by Cossacks at the town hall Monday night.

According to a report received from Elizabethpol a temporary peace has been declared between the Musselmans and Armenians as the result of intervention by the clergy. In many districts the ammunition of the troops has been exhausted, while the Tartars still have an ample supply.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 17.—It is reported from Kursk tonight that gangs of roughs are attacking the Jews.

Representatives of the principal oil industries in the Caucasus, including those of the Nobel company, called today on Finance Minister Kokovsoff and asked that the troops be kept at the works, that the police service be improved, that the unruly elements be removed, and that a long term loan without interest be granted. The minister in reply said that he sympathized in principle with the requests made.

Private dispatches from Baku say that the strikers are placing explosives and stones on the street railway lines for the purpose of stopping traffic and the troops have been called out to guard the lines.

Lidzinpudze, Manchuria, Sept. 13.—Whatever may be the feelings of the Russian or Japanese soldiers regarding the conclusion of peace, one man welcomes it with beaming smiles. This is the Chinese, on whose land the war was fought for nearly eighteen months. Today the roads around here are filled with happy, smiling Chinese, men and women, old and young, who, in clumsy carts, loaded with their household goods, are proceeding in long lines back to their old homes.

The Chinese greet the Russian soldiers with the one word, "Peace," which is repeated over and over again.

Many of their homes have been devastated, but notwithstanding this they express their joy at getting back to peaceful and industrial occupations. Furthermore the game of neutrality to each side which the Chinese have been obliged to play for so many months has been a hard game and peace has brought relief from this strain. It is no exaggeration now to say that the Chinese are the happiest people in Manchuria. It is reported here that the Japanese have disbanded the Chinese bandit organizations with which they operated during the war.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 12.—A state of holy war has been proclaimed in the districts of Zangezur and Jebrail, where Tartars are massacring the Armenians without distinction of sex or age. The country is swarming with bands of Tartars under the leadership of their chiefs. Many thousands of Tartar horsemen have crossed the Perso-Russian frontier and joined the insurgents in destroying Armenian villages. At the village of Minkend 300 Armenians were slaughtered.

Dispatches say that mutilated children were thrown to the dogs and that the few survivors were forced to embrace Islamism in order to save their lives.

Naphtha firms are cut off from the delivery of oil fuel to the shipping companies which are now confronted with the necessity of suspending their service and discharging their employes, which will leave thousands with no means of subsistence. The salt-works at Bashunchak have closed owing to the scarcity of fuel, and this will paralyze the fishing industry.

Belgrade, Sept. 13.—A plot has been discovered here, and at Sofia, to foment a general outbreak in the Balkans with a view of compelling the interference of the powers in the hope that Macedonian autonomy would be proclaimed.

The plot included an intention to assassinate King Peter of Servia and Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria. Those engaged in the plot at Sofia have been imprisoned.

It is added that the recent attempt to assassinate the sultan of Turkey in the courtyard of the mosque at Constantinople is supposed to have been the work of the same organization.

San Francisco, Sept. 12.—Among the passengers who arrived today on the liner Sierra, was J. F. Brim, a Mormon missionary from Samoa, who a few days before joining the Sierra a Tutulla visited the scene of the great volcanic eruption on the island of Savaii. The eruption was still active when he came away. The lava, still flowing, had covered a distance of four miles. The eruption occurred in a mountain zone the district of Matautu. About 8 o'clock on the morning of August 21 the natives and missionaries for ten miles around were awakened by a terrific booming. Investigation showed three volcanoes on the Matauta slope in full action. An old volcano, twenty miles away, has also awakened from a long slumber and is once more in full eruption. The town of Safotu is menaced by the flow.

Ohio Conference Report.

The Third Annual Conference of the Church of God has been held, the visitors have gone. "The happiest time of my life" and such expressions were heard at the close of the Conference. God has been glorified, the brothers and sisters built up spiritually and their faith strengthened.

The Conference was opened by Brother B. H. Lang of Cleveland, Ohio, giving a short history of the church in Cleveland, and in the State of Ohio, also a history and purposes of the Conference; and introducing Brother P. Neill, the President.

Brother P. Neill took charge of the Conference and after a short welcoming address was followed by Brother W. L. Tomlinson who welcomed the visitors on behalf of the Cleveland Church. He also gave an outline of the Truth as it is in Jesus and stated what it is necessary to believe in order to be saved.

Brother J. F. Wagoner of Rochester, Ind., responded in his usual, well-pleasing manner. After a selection by a quartette the first meeting of the Conference was brought to a close.

On Friday morning the Sisters had their meeting. It was presided over by the President, Mrs. B. H. Lang. The papers read were excellent, they showed much thought and study. The Sisters do a grand work, and as a society they accomplish a great deal and are able to take part in every good work in connection with the church.

Friday, at 2:00 P. M. there was a Social Meeting led by Brother W. M. Farley, of Sistersville, W. Va. Bro. Farley is one of the isolated members, but is an earnest defender of the faith.

The Conference had the privilege of listening to an interesting address by Brother D. C. Robison of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, on the Seven Pillars of Truth, and also an address by Sister Nancy Barber. She has developed into an interesting speaker, and we expect to hear much from her in the future. She has been appointed an Evangelist by the Committee of the Ohio State Conference.

In the evening we listened to an address by Brother A. H. Zilmer, the subject being "Conditions of Entrance into God's Kingdom." Brother Zilmer showed that he had given the subject much study, his quotations being memorized. He presented it in his usual forceful manner.

On Saturday morning the Conference had the pleasure of listening to a joint address, by Brother and Sister P. Neill, Evangelists. Brother Neill spoke in his usual earnest manner on "Of his own Will begat he us."

Sister Neill made quite an impression with her subject, "Misreading the Scriptures" and showed very conclusively how the Scriptures are mis-read by the majority of the people.

At 1 P. M. Brother W. H. Wilson of Chicago gave an address on "How to Detect a Bogus Gospel," and as he referred quite often to the Seven Pillars of Truth it fitted in very nicely with Brother D. C. Robison's address. Brother Wilson used a chart to good advantage.

At 7:00 P. M. Brother A. H. Zilmer gave an address to men to which the women were not excluded. The address was very instructive and appreciated by all, especially by the young men present.

Brother J. F. Wagoner then followed, his subject being "The Divine Plan to Govern the Earth in Righteousness." The foundation for his remarks being taken from the 72nd Psalm.

On Sunday morning the Sunday School was conducted by the Superintendent, Sister Tomlinson. Her way of instructing the scholars into the first principles of the gospel was very good. Brother D. C. Robinson's remarks to the children were enjoyed very much.

Brother Joblin then followed with a Sermon on "The New Creation." The pith of his sermon is found in the following verse, "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature, old things are passed away, behold all things are become new."

The Communion Service then followed. Brother C. Moore presided, and as we partook of the emblems which do show forth the Lord's death until he comes our hearts went up to God in thankfulness and praise for his goodness to us, and that he had permitted us to gather around the Table of the Lord once more in a Conference body.

In the afternoon the Young People's Society held their meeting. It was presided over by the President, Sister Hattie Pate. The papers read showed that the young people are Bible students, and are educating themselves so that they can engage in every good work in the household of the faith. At the close of the meeting Brother Zilmer spoke to the audience in regard to having a Summer School for Bible study. Nothing definite was decided upon, so we expect to hear further from Brother Zilmer on this matter.

In the evening there was great occasion for rejoicing. At 6:00 we witnessed the good confession of Wm. Hearcock, of Canton, Ohio, and Jacob Barber, of Salem, Ohio, both put on the all-saving name of Jesus by baptism, and arose to walk in newness of life. They have set their faces toward the kingdom of God, and we pray the reward of the victor will be theirs.

At 7 o'clock there was a Social Meeting led by the writer, and at 7:30 an address by Brother Zilmer, before one of the largest audiences ever gathered into the church. "Signs Showing that the Kingdom of God is Near," was the subject, and Brother Zilmer proved conclusively from the Bible that the Kingdom of God is near, even at the door.

After a few remarks by the President and a song "God be With you 'till We Meet Again," by the Male Quartette, the audience joining in the chorus, the most sucessful Ohio State Conference was brought to an end. All felt that it was good to be present and if the Lord delays his coming we hope to meet again at another such Conference.

During the meetings of the Conference there were solos, duets, quartettes and choruses by the young people which were very much enjoyed. The solo by our Sister Greenbrier, a blind, colored lady was very much appreciated.

Meals were served in a tent in the rear of the church so that the brothers and sisters could enjoy each others company, at the meals and during the intervals between the meetings, the social talks were very much enjoyed and many of them will not soon be forgotten. We believe as a result of these talks many were strengthened in our most holy faith. Those present from outside the state were A. H. Zilmer, and A. R. Underwood and wife of Plymouth, Ind., J. F. Wagoner of Rochester, Ind., and Samuel Snodgrass, Indiana. W. H. Wilson, Chicago, Ill. W. M. Farley and wife, Sistersville, W. Va. Sister J. F. Miller, Adrian, Mich. Thos. A. Glover, Toronto, Canada, and Sister Neff, Shurburne, N. Y. With the Salem delegation came the Misses Sylvia and Ora Cole, daughters of the deceased Sister Cole of Salem, Ohio. They have not yet become members of the "One Body" but they are searching for truth and we hope ere long will become obedient. Mr. P. L. Marron, of Salem, Ohio, was also a visitor.

Letters of regret at not being able to attend the Conference were received from the following: Wm. Banes, Goodland, Ind. O. R. L. Crozier, Grand Rapids, Mich., M. T. Aslaksen and Sister Jessie Wilson, Chicago, Ill., and Brother and Sister John Lehman, Troy, Ohio.

REPORT OF BUSINESS MEETING OF OHIO STATE CONFERENCE, HELD IN CLEVELAND, AUG. 17 TO 20, 1905.

The meeting was called to order by the President, P. Neill. The minutes taken at the last Conference were read and approved as read.

The report of the Treasurer was read, which was as follows:—Total receipts, $754.25. Total disbursements $659.10. Balance on hand $95.15. Of this amount Brother Neill reported he had collected $128.50. The report was accepted.

The Auditing Committee appointed last year reported they had found an error of $2.00 which had been corrected.

Brother Neill reported in regard to Evangelist work in Ohio, that the churches had been visited and he stated that he had come to the conclusion that no church can be alive that does not know the need of an Evangelist and Conference. In the past at least 10 churches had gone out of existence in Ohio, for lack of some one to look after them. Brother W. H. Wilson reported the same condition in Wisconsin. A few conversions were reported at Salem, Ohio, and seed sown which may yet bear fruit. Sister Barber reported seed sown in Oklahoma. Brother Farley reported seed sown at Sistersville, W. Va., by Brother Neill, and Brother and Sister Farley built up spiritually. Brother Curtis reported seed sown at Brush Creek, Ohio. Bros. Juergenson and Earle reported that Brother Neill had held meetings at Barberton, Ohio, and were thankful for his visits. Brother Thorpe reported a series of meetings at Everett, Ohio, and good seed sown, he desired Brother Neill to return. Brother Robison reported he is preaching the gospel when opportunity offers. Brother J. C. Venable stated he believed Bro. Neill should canvass the state.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

P. Neill, President, Salem, Ohio.

William Pate, Vice President, Cleveland, Ohio.

J. C. Thompson, Secretary and Treasurer, Cleveland, Ohio.

Charles Sanford, Assistant Secretary, Cleveland, Ohio.

Geo. Neill, Cleveland, Ohio, and Sister McCune, Salem, Ohio, Corresponding Secretaries.

The Conference Committee, Sister B. H. Lang, Walter Tomlinson and Stanly Sanford, Cleveland, Ohio; A. R. Curtis, Fidelity, Ohio; and Mary Knowles, Salem, Ohio.

The Finance Committee, Sisters Tomlinson, Goss and Pate, Cleveland, Ohio; Sister Pearson, Fidelity, Ohio; Sister Lehman, Troy, Ohio; Brother Robison, Mt. Vernon, Ohio; Brother Holman, Springfield, Ohio; Samuel Olson, Delta, Ohio; and Sister Nancy Barber, Salem, Ohio.

Brother and Sister Neill were released Evangelists for the coming year.

An Auditing Committee consisting of S. Groves and H. Pott, was appointed. About $600.00 was donated and subscribed to carry on the work for the coming year.

At the close of the meeting Brother Pate read a paper in regard to Josephiteism and it was voted by the Conference not to break bread or associate in any way with those calling themselves Josephites.

The next Conference will be held at Brush Creek, Ohio, Aug. 18–21, 1906.

"When the righteous are in authority the people rejoice." Prov. xxix. 2. Prov. xi. 30. The desire of the righteous is only good, this is why there is gladness when the righteous are in authority. 1 John ii. 1. My little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not. And if any man sin we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus the Righteous. When Jesus the righteous ruler is in authority, then indeed the people will rejoice. When Jesus comes to put down sin he will be strongly opposed, for the kings of the earth will not want to give up their power. But when Christ has conquered and has a righteous government established, then will the people rejoice. And Christ will do this, for Isaiah says, "Behold the Lord God will come with strong hand and his arm shall rule for him. Behold his reward is with him, and his work before him." Prov. xi. 31. And behold the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth. And all that live righteously now, shall share in this kingdom and be recompensed in the earth. The saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom and possess the kingdom for ever, even forever and ever. And I will rejoice in Jerusalem and joy in my people; and the voice of weeping shall no more be heard in her, nor the voice of crying. And they shall build houses and inhabit them, and they shall plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them. They shall not build and another inhabit. They shall not plant, and another eat, for as the days of a tree, are the days of my people, and mine elect shall long enjoy the work of their hands. Sing unto the Lord a new song, and his praise from the ends of the earth. Let the wilderness and the cities thereof lift up their voice, the villages that Kedar doth inhabit. Let the inhabitants of the rocks sing, let them shout from the top of the mountains. Let them give glory unto the Lord, and declare his praise in the islands. How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation, that sayeth unto Zion thy God reigneth. Behold a King shall reign in righteousness and princes shall rule in judgment. "When the righteous are in authority the people rejoice." We find a description of this glorious state of things on almost every page of the Bible, how everything will be joy and gladness when Jesus the righteous is ruling with his saints. Let every one pray from the heart, Thy kingdom come, that thy will may be done, in earth as in heaven. Even so, come Lord Jesus. Amen.

GALATIANS VI. 9.

And let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not. Paul in writing to the church at Galatia is trying to encourage the brethren to stand fast in the work, and to keep the faith. He says, Be not weary in well doing, and he tells them how to do well, to do good unto all men, especially to them who are of the household of faith, and bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ. Be not weary in well doing, but be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord. Be not weary in the Lord's work. But do the will of God from the heart, sow seed that will bring forth an abundant harvest, for we shall reap that which we sow. He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing sheaves with him. To him that soweth righteousness shall be a sure reward. Be not weary for ye shall reap, if ye faint not. We shall reap; what will we reap? He that soweth to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting. The Seed is the Word of God, and having heard it may we keep it and bring forth fruit patiently, for the fields are white already to harvest. Let us not be weary, for the labor of the righteous endeth to life. The call is for workers to gather sheaves, if we cannot work in the field we can help by word and deed. We can strengthen the workers. Lest they become weary and faint by the way. May God help us to sow the Seed of truth and to faint not, for he that reapeth receiveth wages and gathereth fruit unto life eternal.

Editor Restitution:

Not seeing any thing in the RESTITUTION with reference to Elder L. C. Chase, I thought I would write and let you know that he is a very sick man, not expected to live but a short time. His trouble is heart disease. If you please, put a notice in the paper of his condition, that the brethren in this State and other places may know of it. His faith is strong as ever, he expects to come up in the morning of the resurrection, clothed with immortality, eternal life. His cry is, Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly.

ELIZA WEST.

[The above letter explains the condition of our dear Brother Chase, and we are sure the entire brotherhood sympathize with him, and pray that strength will come to him from the Father, to bear him along the remainder of this life, and that the Lord will soon come to end the suffering of his people.—ED.]

Excursion Rates to Fort Wayne via Pennsylvania Lines.

September 19th to 23rd, inclusive, excursion tickets to Ft. Wayne, account Annual Fair, will be sold via Pennsylvania Lines from Lima, Plymouth, and intermediate stations.—Sep 23

New Equipment is being delivered by the builders to the Chicago & North-Western Ry., daily, for the Overland Limited, their fast three-day train to the Coast. One of the features of these new cars is the new sleeping car equipment, of latest design, maximum size, electric lighted Pullmans. These are fitted with ten sections, a drawing room and two private compartments in each car, and are intended for the Chicago-San Francisco service. Similar sleeping cars, equipped with 12 sections, one drawing room and one compartment, will be operated on the Chicago-Portland line.

These sleeping cars, together with dining cars and composite-buffet-smoking, library and observation car, constitute the equipment of the train.

In addition to the service that has heretofore been maintained to San Francisco and Portland, the opening of the New Salt Lake Line gives a direct Los Angeles connection to the Overland Limited over a new and desirable route.

Poetry.

The Supreme Test.

There are friends who come in when black sorrow's your guest,
To weep with you over your dead;
Friends who seem, in the midst of your heartache's unrest,
To know just what ought to be said.
But the Prince of them all, when grim Trouble stalks by,
And your heart can do nothing but bleed,
Is the fellow who comes when there's no one else nigh
And whispers: "How much do you need?"

I wish I could tenderly bless all the friends I have known
Who came in the depths of my woe,
Who stood by my side when I felt so alone,
And I told them sympathy know:
But if ever one man each handclasp and tear,
And eager shall I wish them godspeed:
But a crown for the one who, when none else was near,
Said simply "How much do you need?"

CHAPTER 3.

1. If a husband send away his wife and she go away from him, and become the wife of another husband, may he return unto him any more? Will not that wife have been polluted? And thou hast gone off in fornication with many shepherds and hast returned unto me saith the Lord.

2. Lift up thine eyes in a truly straight way and see where thou hast not been defiled by the highways he: thou sat like a desolate koronomi, (a carrion bird like our crow) and thou hast polluted the land with thy horsemenous and with thy evil doings.

3. And thou hast had many shepherds to make thee stumble: thy face hath become a harlot's face and thou hast conducted thyself shamelessly with all men.

4. Odst thou not call me a house as it were and a father and a chief-leader of thy virginity?

5. Will one abide forever or be watched to be kept unto victory? Lo, thou hast said and done these things and hast for me disabled.

6. And The Lord said unto me in the days of Jousias, the king. Hast thou seen what the dwelling of Israel hath done unto me? They have gone their way unto every high mountain and beneath every shady tree and committed fornication there.

7. And I said, after she had committed all these fornications, return unto me; and she did not return? And faithless Jouda saw her faithlessness.

8. And they saw that the dwelling of Israel had been taken for all the adulteries she had committed and that I had sent her away and had given into her hand a bill of divorcement, and faithless Jouda did not fear and went her way and she also committed fornication:

9 And her fornication became naught, and she committed adultery with the tree and the stone;

10. And in addition to all these things faithless Jouda hath not turned unto me with all her heart but into a lie.

11. And the Lord said unto me, Israel hath justified his soul from faithless Jouda.

12. Go thy way and read these words to the north, and thou shalt say, Return unto me thou dwelling of Israel, saith the Lord, and I will not set my face against you; because I am merciful, saith the Lord, and I will not be furious with you forever.

13. Only become aware of thy iniquity, that thou hast been irreverent to the Lord thy God, and hast hearkened to my voice, saith the Lord.

14. Return, ye apostate sons, because I am going to assert my lordship over you and I am going to take you, one from a city and two from a family, and I am going to lead you into Sion, (Zion).

15. And I will give unto you shepherds after my heart, and they will shepherd you with exact knowledge.

16. And it will be multiplied and increased on the land, saith the Lord, in those days they will not say any more, Ark of the covenant of the Sacred One of Israel: it will not come upon their heart; it will not have been named nor received, nor shall it have been done any more.

17. In those days and in that period they will call Hierousaleem the Lord's throne, and all the nations will have been gathered together unto it, and they shall not go their way any more after the inordinate desires of their wicked heart.

18. In those days the house of Jouda will come unto the house of Israel, and they will come into the same place from a land of the north, and from all the countries unto the land which I gave their fathers to inherit;

19. And I (the prophet) said, May it have come to pass, O Lord—because I shall arrange for offspring, and I shall give to thee a chosen inheritance of God, an All-Controler of nations; and I have said ye will call me Father and ye will not turn away from me.

20. However as a wife sitteth aside the husband who is with her, even so hath the house of Israel set me aside, saith the Lord.

21. A voice of lamentation and supplication from the lips of sons of Israel hath been heard because they have done wrong in their ways, because they have ignored their sacred God.

22. May ye have returned, ye sons, and I will heal your contritions; lo, we will be thy bond-servants, because thou art the Lord our God.

23. Surely the hills were for a lie and the host (nibility) of the mountains; only through the Lord our God is the salvation of Israel.

24. And the shame hath lavishly wasted the results of our father's weary toil from our youth up, their sheep and the results of their weary toil, and their sons and their daughters.

25. We lay down to sleep in our shame and our dishonor covered us, because in the sight of our God we had sinned, we and our fathers from our youth unto this day, and did not hearken unto the voice of the Lord our God.

COMMENT.

No "they say" in the 1st verse, "Shall he return unto her" should be "May she return unto him any more" also "wife" instead of "land," "many shepherds" instead of "many lovers."

In the 2nd verse "unto the bare heights" should be "in a truly straight way;" "lien with" should be "defiled." "As an Arabian" should be "like a desolate koronomi" (or carrion bird of that name). There is nothing about "the showers being withholden and there has been no latter-rain" nor is there any anything about "a whore's forehead" nor "thou refusest to be ashamed." Read and compare what is said though.

The 4th verse is a reference to the past and begins "Didst thou not call me," etc. an entirely different thought from the same verse in the R. V. from which I am quoting.

The 5th verse is still worse and hardly approximates the thought of the original. Read and compare. In the 6th verse, there is no word for "backsliding." The word so translated is "the dwelling" or "dwelling-place." "They" also instead of "she" and "shady" instead of "green."

7th verse "Return unto me" not "she will return unto me" "faithless Jouda" instead of "treacherous Jouda" and "her faithlessness" instead of "it."

8th verse "They saw" instead of "I saw" and "committed fornication" instead of "played the harlot."

I have given the foregoing particulars of translation merely as specimens of what can be done not only with the balance of this chapter, but with every chapter of this book; and I am doing it more especially for the scholars of my readers who may happen casually to glance at this translation of the old prophet "Jeremiah" as they still call him, though he will never answer to this name when the resurrectional roll-call of "the elect" is heard any more than will the apostle "Jacoob" answer to "James." There are some glorious promises in this chapter still unrealized for Jouda and Israel, but "the signs of the times" indicate that the realization may not be very far away. "The times of the Gentiles" seem to be very nearly "fulfilled."

CHAS. GARDNER.

Cry Aloud.

"Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and show my people their transgressions." Isa. lviii. 1. The modern Laodicean church, like Israel of old, are transgressing the law of the Lord. And it becomes the duty of every true prophet of the Lord, to cry aloud, and spare not, but to lift up their voice like a trumpet, and shew the people their sins. The writer of these lines, has felt for years, that there ought to be more done to warn the church of its danger. But the leading teachers of the church, those who are getting a living out of it, neglect to point out to the church their sins, except it be in a general way, "Come let us reason together saith the Lord, though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow." Isa. i. 18. There are two basic principles that govern all our actions in life. One is self-love, and it is the foundation of the competitive system of doing business, now in general use in the world. The other is the new commandment, that Christ gave to the church, "That ye love one another as I have loved you." John xiii. 34. And all Christians when they are baptized into Christ, agree to become dead to the selfish interests of the world, and from that time on for the remainder of their lives, to keep the commandments of our Lord Jesus Christ. But perhaps it is from a lack of understanding that but few fully crucify their natural selfish love, but they continue to nourish it by doing business on the old selfish principle of competing with others, even their own brothers in the church.

To some this may be a new idea, but all must admit that this competitive system of doing business is based on love of self. The word itself, compete, to strive, a rival, take care of your own interests, and let the other fellow take care of his own, indicates a purely selfish love.

But the new commandment that Christ gave to the church is an unselfish, beneficent love. And these two principles will not unite, they will not blend together. For as Christ says, "Ye cannot serve two masters, ...ye cannot serve God and mammon." Matt. vi. 24. But many are trying to do it. But if we cannot be governed by two opposing principles at the same time, then we must choose either the one or the other to guide us in our daily lives. And the more we nourish and encourage anything, the stronger it grows, and man has so nourished and cultivated this selfish love in the competitive system, that it has become strong, and no doubt but the majority of people believes that it is right, and is the only principle that we can do business on. But we see that Christ gave to the church a new and higher principle that should govern his people in all their intercourse one with another. And this principle of true brotherly love was accepted by the early church, and they sold their possessions, and had all things common, and distributed to every one as they had need. Acts ii. 44, 45. But the Jews persecuted the church, and they were driven out of Jerusalem, and were scattered abroad, and their communion of interests were broken up. And as is always the case, the stronger influence prevailed, and the weaker one, the church, has been overpowered. And the corrupt influence that has since then come into the church, has made a compromise with Satan, and are encouraging the church to live in peace and harmony with the world, and do business on the competitive system the same as the world is doing. But Christ said, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye have love one to another." Jno. xiii. 35. Are there any people now known as the Lord's disciples by the way they manifest their love one to another? If not, why is it? Is it not because there are none now living in harmony with Christ's new commandment, and loving one another as Christ loved his people? This may be pretty strong meat for some of my readers, but whatever your faith or sacrifices may be, if you have not this love, it will profit you nothing. See 1 Cor. xiii. But the day of reckoning is very near, and if we have been living in sin, we have little enough time to do works meet for repentance. And we know that the church is doing business, on the same competitive system of selfishness that the world does business on. The church tries to live in the same style of luxury that the world lives in, they court the approbative love of the world, and in their outward appearance it is difficult to distinguish the church from the world. Now if this is the sad condition of the church today, what will become of it? "The Lord is long suffering to usward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." 2 Peter iii. 9. But the Lord works in a mysterious way his wonders to perform. And we now see a political contention going on in the world, over these two basic principles, and the Lord sometimes uses wicked men to carry out his purpose, and the men of the world are now being educated preparatory for the change in the system of government that is surely coming on the earth. And when there are enough people that accept this new principle of government, to make them a formidable power, then we shall come to a crisis. And the advocates of these two opposing principles will each contend with a determined spirit, and then the Lord will use the fierceness of the wrath of men to punish the wicked for their sins. "And the lofty looks of men shall be humbled, and the haughtiness of men shall be bowed down; and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day." Isa. ii. 11. "And the Lord will plead with all flesh, and give them that are wicked to the sword, saith the Lord." Jer. xxv. 31. All of God's prophets have told us of a great time of trouble that is coming on the earth. But where is the church going to be? All who have joined themselves to the Lord have entered into a race to run for glory, honor, immortality and eternal life. But some are not running well, they have "not laid aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and running with patience the race set before us." Heb. xii. 1. But they are letting the "cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lust of other things entering in, choke the Word." Mark iv. 19. Alas, this is the sad condition of many in the modern Laodicean church today.

But the Lord knows their hearts. He knows who are building on the foundation, which is Jesus the Christ. But some are building with gold, silver and precious stones, and their work will stand the test of the fire that shall try them. But others are building with wood, hay and stubble (the earthly treasures that perish) and the day that cometh shall try every man's work of what sort it is. "If any man's work shall be burned he shall be saved; yet so as by fire." 1 Cor. iii. 15. The only consistent explanation that we can give of this text is that those of the church who are letting the cares of this world choke the Word, while they are building with wood, hay and stubble, that they must pass through the Lord's refining fire in the day of his fierce judgments coming upon the ungodly world, until their wood hay and stubble, their earthly treasure they have laid up are burned, and they themselves so refined and purified, so that the Lord can use them to fill some place in the kingdom of God. But, dear brother, do you want to go through the Lord's fierce judgments soon coming on the earth? And loose the high prize of glory, honor, immortality, eternal life? Or are you like the young man that asked the Lord what good thing he should do that he might inherit eternal life. Matt. six. 16. Like him do you think the price is too high? The sacrifice to great? And like him will you go away sorrowful? Or do you think the Lord will give you eternal life for a less sacrifice?

Before you make a hasty decision, stop and think. Do you really want eternal life? If so had not you better decide now to keep the Lord's new commandment? and love your brother as Christ has loved you, "But whoso hath this world's goods, and seeth his brother hath need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him." 1 John iii. 17.

J. B. CRATON.

A Little "Preach."

1 COR. XV. 1-8.

Can the gospel be believed in vain? "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness." Did intellectual belief alone ever save a man? Devils believe and tremble. God wants the heart—the affections. God wants the will in subjection to his will. He wants a love that through Christ springs up into eternal life; springs up to him as a lark into the skies; a love that, through Christ, can like his love give its service to a lost world.

Verses 3, 4 8. To have seen Jesus alive from the dead—what joy! what good news! Is there not danger of becoming so enamored of that part of the gospel which portrays the sitting down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God, sitting on thrones to judge the twelve tribes of Israel, that we forget that which Paul put first of all, how that Christ died for our sins, etc.? Where would we poor mortals be, those sins lying an unsurmountable barrier between us and eternal glory, had he not risen again? Who could oversing that part of the wonderful psalm of immortality, "O death, where is thy sting; O grave, where is thy victory!"

Do not misunderstand me to hold what may be called our kingJoin truths of no value. They are of inestimable value; but do not, say our brother may not be one of God's precious children because he has only learned what Paul says he preached as gospel first of all, that according to the Scriptures Christ died for our sins, was buried and rose again. Do not let us hold ourselves aloof from those that love the Lord, perhaps better than we do, because they have not learned all about the gospel preached to Abraham. One may believe—is it not so? a great deal more than he can well understand. He may believe in Christ's kingly office, if he does not know when, where or how it will be filled.

Obituary.

It is a sad to record the death of one of the faithful in Christ Jesus, Our sister Mrs. Christina Neisley of Pleasant Hill, Miami Co., O., a member of the Brush Creek Church, died Aug. 1, 1905, age 69. About thirty years ago, on confession of her faith in the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, she was baptized by Bro. J. F. Waggoner in Brush Creek. She lived a consistent Christian from first to last, and having turned from the traditions of men, to serve the living and true God, she was waiting for his Son from heaven. This hope—the one hope of the gospel was her favorite theme. At THE RESTITUTION came, she had the children read it to her. Her continual and earnest prayer was for the salvation of her children, of whom four survive her, two sons and two daughters, grown. One of the latter is our Sister Emma Neisley. Our sister was born at Pleasant Hill about one mile from where she died, and where is buried beside her husband. The family have the sympathy of the whole church.

Announcement.

The Quarterly Conference of the churches of God in Michigan will be held with the Church of God at Brady, Kalamazoo Co., on Friday evening, Sept. 29th, 30th and Oct. 1, 1905.

Bro. and Sister Harper and others of Brady—desire to have as many as possible come and attend the Conference. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and if there are any from other States who could attend. The brethren would be glad to welcome them. Friends coming from the north, reach Vicksburg via the G. R. and I. R. R. which leaves Grand Rapids at 12:00 noon and 1.50 P. M. all trains will be met Friday at Vicksburg. Those coming from Hastings will take the G. R. and I. at Kalamazoo. Bro. A. B. Zilmer of Plymouth, Indiana, has promised to be with us, also Elder B. W. and M. A. Woodward of Dutton, Michigan.

Though few in number at this place, we hope and feel assured that we will have the hearty co-operation of all interested and look forward to an interesting and profitable meeting. Let none remain away through fear of being a burden to those that entertain the conference, as arrangements will be made to accommodate all that come. Come and enjoy the spiritual blessings, and return to your home strengthened and built up.

L. D. BECKER, Pres.
EMMA JACKMAN, Sec'y

P. S. Those wishing to attend this Conference should leave Grand Rapids at 7:10 A. M. or 1:50 P. M. The noon train only goes to Kalamazoo. All should come on the 7:00 A. M. to accommodate those who come for them as it is six miles out to place of meeting.

Clean Preachers.

Recently I was a passenger on the Vandalia railroad. In front of me sat the conductor, a fine looking gentleman, seemingly in his forties, but who informed me that he was sixty years of age. Behind us sat a preacher whose conversation attracted the attention of the passengers. His appearance called forth a criticism on preachers from the conductor. Hoping that that friendly criticism will prove helpful to the ministry in general, I will give it to our readers: -

"Sir, I have been conductor over this run for over twenty years, during which time I have made humanity a study, and especially preachers; not that I do not admire that class, for I do; my father was a minister, and educated me to fill that responsible position, but I have always felt my unfitness, hence chose the profession of teaching until I entered the railroad service. I have had business with all classes, from the highest to the lowest, and think I know a passenger as soon as I fix my eyes on him. Now, sir, I say it is a shame for ecclesiastical bodies to ordain and commission men to preach who would better represent the gambling fraternity, or the bum element. I think, sir, that a man who preaches the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ should be a clean man, both in body and spirit. I make no pretentions to being a Christian, and possibly never will; but I have a wife and daughter whom I love better than I love my own life. One day I said to them, 'I may not die a Christian, but one thing I will promise you, and that is that I will die a clean man.'

"I have held myself aloof from many men in my line of business simply because they do not care how they live, and I intend to keep that promise to my family to live and die a clean man. And, sir, I think no man should be allowed to stand in the sacred desk who does not emulate the virtues of him whom he professes to represent unto the people. There is a minister (no a man travelling on a permit) who has gone over my division every few days for many years, and when he leaves his seat, the floor is unfit for any decent person to occupy that seat again until the floor is scrubbed. One day he came in and seated himself behind a lady and began squirting his tobacco juice on the floor, and continued until it ran under the lady's feet in front of him. I passed by, and seeing it paused and fixed my eyes upon the flowing amber, until he remarked, 'Well, what have you to say?' I answered, 'Well, sir, I cannot understand why God should have made a two-legged hog, when a four-legged one is worth so much more.' I waited not for a reply, and only hoped that he would report me to headquarters for a breach of courtesy.

"Again, I was passing from one car to another one day when a preacher (no, a man with a permit) passed me and asked me to go into the smoker with him. I politely declined. 'What?' said he, 'are you not allowed to smoke while on duty?' 'No, sir, nor when off duty either. It is against the rules of the company to smoke while on duty, and it is against the law of my conscience, in view of the promise to my family, to smoke while off duty. I am not a clean man because I have to be, but because it is best for me and my family.' I said to him, 'When I see a minister with his feet higher than his head, his hat pushed back, and cigar in his mouth while the smoke curls about his head, he impresses me more like a gambler and tough than a representative of Jesus Christ.' I cannot understand how a man can preach to people to be clean and pure when he is himself unclean and impure. To do so is hypocrisy. I don't care to talk to any man from whose foul tobacco-and-whiskey breath I have to turn my head; neither do I care to talk to a man, nor have one talk to me, whose shirt front is smeared with tobacco juice. But here we are at Logansport. Excuse me, sir, but I think a minister above all men should be a clean man. Good-by."—H. C. Patterson, in St. Louis Christian Evangelist.

Memorization of the Scripture

This is a custom banished almost entirely from Christian homes and the Sunday-school. It is a habit now scarcely ever found in our youth. Growing in stature, culture and a knowledge of the common school branches, memorized and retained in the form of set sentences and clauses, children are persistently taught to ignore the same mental exercise as to God's truths.

There are notorious religious workers and leaders that go so far as to brand this custom as one of the "mechanical" means and processes used in the interests of the dry, dead doctrinal faith of the past. How blind to the history of the enlightening, the renewing, and the sanctifying influences of the memorization of Bible truths! The Bible memorizers of the past are the godliest of the godly. Its truths, in the language of the spirit, indelibly impressed upon their minds, made, when the occasion offered, the motive for an increased spiritual life and the knowledge and strength by which it was gained. Is it possible for it to be demonstrated that God's truths, fixed permanently in the mind in God's language, will require more time and information and mental growth for their extended and full understanding, than God's truths would be memorized and remembered in human expressions, and arranged according to human choice or wisdom?

He is superlatively presumptuous who claims that there is no time in the Sunday-school to hear repeated memorized Bible passages. No time there to fix in the mind or to test a knowledge of God's Word in that language which never errs—the Word, not man's wisdom but God's; not man's incorrect, vague, or incomplete speech, but God's perfect and perspicuous language! No time there to fix God's truths in the child's mind in that language whose distinctness and specificness throughout all after life will help to keep his faith free from error, his hope pure and unclouded, and his life Scriptural and Christian! One sentence of gospel truth so well memorized that the law of association will bring it to the end of the tongue, is worth more to the soul than all the heard and remembered generalities that so often characterize Sunday-school instruction.

Bible truths not learned in youth are ordinarily not learned in after life in their Scriptural forms. Memory is one of the glories of youthhood. Culture can capacitate it to exercise a wondrous power and to lay in the mind that store house of knowledge upon which the mind may draw in all after life. Shall Christian parents and teachers fail—and criminally fail—to have the child exercise and cultivate this God-given faculty in its eternal interests? Ten thousand times rather, should it be filled with God's Word, though but very little understood, than with mere human knowledge however largely comprehended.

It is a sad sight to see an aged Christian dumb as to God's blessed Word. His mind gropes in its vain attempts to recall the various Scriptural expressions it has heard, and failing, he loses that superior refreshing and joy that come from singing the songs of God's Word, praying its petitions and repeating and rendering its terms of faith, penitence, joy, and godliness. But rich in the possession of these, how his soul, in his dying hours, mounts up through their aid as on eagle's wings!

Memorized Bible passages are those mental pictures which culture, information, and a knowledge of self will help to reveal in their varied loveliness and charm. There in the gallery of the mind they hang, irremovable and ineffaceable—that conjunction of circumstances coming which will unfold them in all their beauty and power.

The brief and clear Scriptural sentence first comprehended or appreciated is an ever present monitor. Say it is the well-known sentence, "The wages of sin is death;" and the definition, that sin here gets or the youth has gotten elsewhere, will help to explain all those numerous Bible passages that treat of sin. There next unfolded, that of God's law, then of Christ's righteousness, and at last of faith. And these definitions will always stand by him. They will never fail him. But oftentimes without them he would be confused in his Scriptural views and this confusion would be apt to lead him into error.

Let us all as Christian parents and teachers resolve that we will—God helping us—have the children under our instruction Bible memorizers.—Advance.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us about, give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve copies of their articles.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. Read. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 20, 1905. NUMBER 35.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Papers Read by the Young People at the Cleveland, Ohio, Conference.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I am very pleased to greet you all at this meeting of the Young People of the Church of God, and as President of the Society I take pleasure in reviewing to you some of the work done by us this past year. As many of you know, we were first organized Society for the last five years. Our aim has been to promote the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace among the young people and to spread the truth. The membership has varied from eight to twenty-one, during that time, the average membership being fourteen this last year. Several brothers and sisters from Salem, O., Toronto, Canada and Seattle, Wash., have joined their efforts with ours and by the united effort much good has been accomplished. During the past six months, four newly-born babes in Christ gave us the pleasure of receiving them as members, making a total membership of twenty-one, and we still hope that all the young people of the church will see the necessity of putting their hand to the plough in this way. We feel sure we have derived much benefit from our meetings and the association of each other, and as in unity there is strength, so, in banding ourselves together for the work of the Lord, we know our labor is not in vain in the Lord. Let us not forget that we are called to be co-workers with God.

The Corresponding Secretary reports having written forty-eight letters of exhortation and sympathy and of receiving twenty-three letters and some lessons, all of which have encouraged and edified us. The total receipts, including dues, 15 cts per month of out of town members and donations received were $39 00. The total expenditures $26 73, having been given for the cause of truth. This leaves a balance of $12 27, in the treasury. Our meetings have convened the 2nd Thursday of each month, the specified time is one hour and a half. Twenty minutes of this time is given for the transaction of business, after which, a religious subject is dwelt upon. The lessons have been very practicable this year, having taken up the Life and Epistles of the Apostle Paul. Each member has an evening and delivers an address on their subject from fifteen to thirty minutes, after which many helpful remarks are given. We have all enjoyed and been instructed by these excellent lessons prepared by the leader, and we hope to enjoy many more this coming year. Today there has been prepared short sketches on the lives of noted biblical characters which I feel sure will interest and be instructive to you all. And now before I close I want to ask the older ones in Christ to remember the young people of this society when before the throne of grace. The spirit is indeed willing but the flesh is weak, there are many weights and sins that so easily beset us and allure us, and we need all your encouragement to battle on in order to meet with you all at the coming of our King. Let us determine today to do whatsoever our hand findeth to do with our might, for the glory of God. Amen.

HATTIE E. PATE, Pres.

ADAM AND EVE.

In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth. After dry land had been raised from the surrounding water. After the earth brought forth her increase; after all the beasts, fish and fowl had been formed, God saw that it was good. Gen. i. 25. But God's work was not yet complete for in the 26th verse he says, "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness, and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, over the fowls of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." So from the dust of the earth God created man in his own image and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, not immortal life, and man became a living soul, not an immortal soul.

Then the Lord took the man and put him in the garden of Eden to dress it and keep it; and the Lord commanded the man saying, "Of every tree thou mayest freely eat, but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die.

While Adam was in the garden of Eden, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air were brought to him to be named, and whatsoever he called them that was the name thereof.

Upon the failure of a companion suitable for Adam among the creatures thus brought to him to be named, the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon him and took one of his ribs from him, which he fashioned into a woman, who was given to be with Adam.

At this time they are both described as being naked without the consciousness of shame. The first man is a true man with the powers of a man and the innocences of a child. He is moreover spoken of by Paul as being, "The figure of him that was to come." Rom. v. 14. We have them both in the garden of Eden, with the promise that as long as they are obedient they shall live; but the serpent beguiled Eve saying, "Thou shalt not surely die," and she ate of the fruit and gave to her husband to eat, "And the eyes of them both were opened."

Then came the Lord and they confessed their disobedience. Having disobeyed God they were now subject to death. "And the Lord God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life; and I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel."

And unto Adam he said, "Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree of which I commanded thee saying, Thou shalt not eat of it; cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return. And the Lord God said, Behold the man is become one as of us, to know good and evil; and now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat and live forever; therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the garden of Eden to till the ground from whence he was taken. And God's Word was fulfilled for Adam lived 930 years, and then died.

But the goodness of God is also manifested in the promise above read for God gave him a chance to live after death when the woman's seed shall bruise the serpent's head and put down all rule and authority, and reign from the rivers to the ends of the earth. The conditions of life after death were then as now faith in the promise and obedience to the commands.

We have no record of Adam's repentance, but the record says, Eve believed the Lord in all things.

EDNA M. COWELL.

ISAAC.

What do we know of Isaac? Have we anything like a complete portrature of him in our minds? Let us see if we can collate the scattered records of Isaac so as to have an adequate impression of the patriarch.

Isaac had a magnificent introduction into the world. Whose birth was anticipated as was his? Except our Lord's, Isaac's advent into history was the most memorable in history. His birth was heralded by three angels.

Isaac, the child of long delayed promise and special miracle, was born when his mother was 90 years old and his father 100—an age however we must measure by the remembrance that his father lived till he was 175 and that his mother died when he (Isaac) was 37. His birth was the crowning event in the history of his parents, for it was the founding of a great spiritual dynasty which was to inherit all future ages—a dynasty springing by God's special favor from themselves. Twenty-four years had passed since the divine call to Abraham and Sarah had made them leave their native country beyond the Euphrates and ever since had been waiting for the heir promised. The promise here related to is found in Gen. xvii. 15, 16. It has reference to his birth.

Isaac, we learn, was born in B. C. 1896 at a small place Beersheba, which is located in the southwestern part of Canaan, about 50 miles south of Jerusalem, then called Tebris-Salem. His parents were Abraham and Sarah. He lived to a ripe old age of 180 years. We may trace the growth of Isaac's character in great measure from the exceptional beginning referred to in the above, but time will not permit other than to touch upon the principal events.

Let us look at Isaac from "a study of a Gentle life" standpoint. 1. We find that Isaac showed a noble reverence for his parents. "As Isaac was" may well be our motto in this. A nobler example of filial devotion it would be hard to find. He was an ideal son. He was beyond question a worthy son. There are not wanting lovely indications of Isaac's reverence for his parents and of his deep affection for them. "Isaac," we read, "was comforted after his mother's death." What love that pathetic sentence reveals! His mother's death overwhelmed him with sorrow. Deep was his need of comfort. How his reverence for his father appears in the following sentence, "And he called their names after the names by which his father called them." In re-opening the closed wells Isaac honors his father by naming them as his father had named them.

2. Isaac had a gentle and affectionate disposition. There is no more lovable man in the Old Testament. Dr. Parker calls Isaac's "a sweet nature" and the epithet is appropriately chosen. His tenderness was his strength. Love was his tower of defence. His sympathies guarded him like a garrison. Few have borne rebuffs and trials so well. Could anything be more admirable than his spirit and temper at the wells? We read that when the herdman of Gerar strove with Isaac's herdman—"They digged another well." And when they strove again, "he removed from thence and digged another well." It was the gentleness of a child of God. It was a patience that would shame hundreds of the so-called Christians. Few could sustain rebuffs in so kindly a fashion. How meekly he appears to have borne the rebuke, the righteous rebuke of Abimelech. To receive a just rebuke with gentle silence is indeed "meekness of wisdom." Isaac's lovely disposition came to his relief when troubles assailed him. Esau's wife—those Hittite women were "a grief of mind to Isaac" but he endured his mortification uncomplainingly. He did not murmur. He registered no protest. He received his rebuffs and rebukes with gentle silence. All though his rebuffs and sorrows and disappointments Isaac lives the royal life of the gentle. Shall we not all seek the strength of gentleness? Do we not well to emulate the affectionateness of Isaac? Such lives are in accordance with the divine ruling.

3. Isaac was a man of faith. It is a welcome word to write and to read that Isaac was a man of faith. Doubtless it has been implied in much we have already seen of his life and character. But let us examine it more minutely. "By faith Isaac".....is the record of the Epistle to the Hebrews. "By faith Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau concerning the things to come." We read of "the God of his father Isaac" and "the fear of Isaac," as the God to whom Jacob prayed. Isaac's life despite his failures witnessed his religion, for Abimelech who had the occasion to rebuke him said, "We certainly saw that God was with thee." Herein he is again an example to us all. The mainspring of his life was faith in God. He did not have the conception of God which it is our privilege to possess. God was but a "fear" to Isaac. To us he is the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. Fellow Bereans, and brothers and sisters, can men say of us as Abimelech did of Isaac, "We saw certainly that God was with thee." If Isaac's faith be ours then we shall live the life holy acceptable unto God and the glorious appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. We shall hear his welcome voice, "Well done, thy good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

One more point and then I am through, but before I call your attention to it I cannot pass by the gospel promise made to Isaac, who by the way, was the second of God's favored to receive the promise, Abraham being the first. I'll simply quote the promise and then pass directly to the point above referred to. Gen. xxvi. 2, 3, 4, 5. "And the Lord appeared unto him, and said, Go not down into Egypt; dwell in the land which I shall tell thee of. Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee; for unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father. And I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. Because that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws."

4. In concluding I refer to the most important event in the life of Isaac. It exhibited an early sublimity of character. "By faith Abraham when he was tried, offered up Isaac." But I wonder if we realize what was the age of Isaac when he was bound on the altar. Undoubtedly most of the people imagine that Isaac was a child at that tragic hour. But he was not. He was a young man, twenty-five years old when the call to Moriah fell upon his startled ears. Think of it, twenty-five years old, just making a start in life when the great trial of his life came upon him, so appallingly startling to a young man, that he should lie down on the altar that he helped to build and let himself be offered as a human sacrifice. Did he murmur? Did he protest? Did he struggle to be free? Never! He had the make of a martyr. His submissiveness is wonderful. In spirit and purpose Isaac was a martyr. Yes, without grudging he allowed himself to be bound upon the grim altar. Without a protest he beheld the sacrificial knife flash above his eyes. Do you know of any such instance of submissiveness to the will of God at such an age, or at any age. It is not easy for a young man to contemplate death, especially to contemplate his own imminent death, and more especially a death of awful martyrdom. Youth dreads death. The thought is hateful. Yet Isaac allowed himself to be led to the scene of sacrifice and was willing to bid adieu to all the fair and love scenes of time. Again I say, do you know of any parallel to Isaac's heroic and sublime submissiveness?

Fellow Bereans, brothers and sisters, I trust that we all have achieved something of that sublimity of character. Our self sacrifice is continually called to other manifestations; but have we the willing mind? Have we always had the willing mind? Paul says, "I beseech you, therefore, brethren by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. May God grant that our lives be ever thus Amen.

HARRY POTT.

JACOB.

In studying the Scriptures, it seems to me, that there was no Old Testament saint of them all who, first and last, saw more of the favor of God than Jacob. And yet, with all that; the great sins of Jacob's youth, and the great sinfulness of Jacob's heart, both found him out every day he lived, down to the day of his death.

We learn that he was born about 1853 B. C. in Southern Palestine. His parents were Isaac and Rebekah. The stillness and seclusion of the desert pastures of southern Palestine, in which his earlier life was spent, were fitted to develop the noble side of Jacob's nature, but for the presence of untoward influences in the narrow circle of his home.

There was another child in the family—his twin brother Esau—but their disposition and tastes were wholly opposed and must have made loving companionship well nigh impossible from the first. As they grew older, unwise partiality in the parents, widened the natural distance between the youths.

Esau, ostentatiously slighted the higher aspects of his position as the elder born; had no interest in the family priesthood, and still less in the vague hopes inspired by the heavenly promise. He was the heir, but he was certain to let all that was most precious in the inheritance be lost. He thought it would be safe in the hands of Jacob. Jacob valued supremely the advantages his brother despised; and saw in the blessings of elder birth, the religious rather than the worldly benefits, as is evident in the sequel. Jacob takes advantage of Esau, when tired and faint, to get from him his birthright for a meal, which natural duty should have offered freely of its own accord. He over-reached both his father and brother, to gain the blessing. See Gen. xxv. 31-34.

But, if he sinned he was sorely punished. He was forced to flee to Laban at Haran. Yet even in the moment of his flight, the strange mixture of the good in the evil of his nature showed itself. As he lay the first night on the stony uplands of central Palestine, he had a dream, and, behold a ladder set upon the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven; and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it. And behold the Lord stood above it, and said: "I am the Lord God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac; the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it and to thy seed; And thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread abroad to the west and to the east and to the north and to the south, and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Gen. xxviii. 12-14.

Twenty-one years passed away in the service of Laban. The whole long period is a struggle of selfish cunning and greed on the part of Laban, met by firm resolution, exhaustless patience and a fatility of crafty resource on that of Jacob.

Returning at last to Canaan, the shadow of his past sins still lay upon his conscience. He feared that Esau would avenge his wrongs on him when they met. But such was not the case. He was a very different man since he crossed the Jordan, but the entrance on the land of promise again overpowered him with emotion.

We learn then, that God appeared again unto Jacob, when he came out of Pa-dan-a-ram, and blessed him saying, Thy name is Jacob: thy name shall not be called any more Jacob, but Israel shall be thy name, and he called his name Israel. Gen. xxxv. 9 and 10. From then on, the light rose in his soul, never to go down again.

That Jacob's early life shows some sordid, unworthy aspects, is undeniable, but his later life shows the fine gold purified in the refiner's fire. Patient endurance, splendid tenacity, unwavering faith in the unseen, the deliberate preference of a greater future to any inferior present, honest industry, fidelity to his convictions of truth and duty, and lofty homage to the God of his fathers, have made his character an immortal lesson.

He died about the age of 164. His sons carried him into the land of Canaan, and buried him in the cave of Machpelah, which Abraham bought with the field for a possession of a burying place of Ephram, the Hittite, before Mamre.

SISTER HARRY POTT.

LOT.

We first read of Lot in the 11th chapter of Genesis. He was the son of Haran, a brother of Abraham, and was born in Ur of the Chaldees, now called Orpha, a city in upper Mesopotamia, and famous for its early Christian history. As far as can be learned from the Scriptures he was born in 1996 B. C. and lived until 1898 B. C., making him about 98 years old when he died.

We hear nothing more of him until he goes with Abraham into Haran and dwells there until Abraham is called by God to journey through the promised land and Lot accompanies him. But in time the cattle of both Abraham and Lot became so numerous that they were obliged to separate, Lot dwelling in Sodom and Abraham in Canaan.

In 1913 Lot was captured by four kings and held a prisoner. Abraham was informed of this by one man who escaped and so he came directly and rescued Lot, and brought him back to Sodom. But the people of Sodom were so wicked that God sent two angels to Lot to tell him to leave the city and flee to the mountain as he was going to destroy it. We learn from this instance that Lot was a God-fearing and righteous man. So he took his wife and two daughters and departed. We all know how they were commanded by God not to look back and how Lot's wife disobeyed and was immediately turned into a pillar of salt. The natural impulse of Lot would be to look back and see what had become of his wife, but he remembered the command of God and kept his eyes forward. There is a lesson of obedience in this for us, brothers and sisters and also to keep our eyes on that prize which is before us. Having once put our hand to the plough, let us not look back, for Jesus says of such that they are not fit for the kingdom of God. May we all be found watching in my prayer.

MOSES.

Jacob and his family came down into Egypt and dwelt with his son Joseph. And Joseph died, and all his brethren, and all that generation. And the children of Israel (Jacob) were fruitful, and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceedingly mighty; and the land was filled with them. Now there arose up a new king over Egypt, which knew not Joseph. Because the children of Israel became so numerous Pharaoh charged all his people saying, every son that is born ye shall cast into the river, and every daughter ye shall save alive.

And there went a man of the house of Levi, and took to wife a daughter of Levi and the woman conceived and bare a son, and when she saw him that he was a goodly child, she hid him three months. And when she could not longer hide him, she took for him an ark of bulrushes and daubed it with slime and with pitch, and put the child therein, and she laid it in the flags by the river's brink.

And the daughter of Pharaoh came down to wash herself at the river, and her maidens walked along by the river's side; and when she saw the ark among the flags, she sent her maid to fetch it, and when she had opened it she saw the child, and, behold, the babe wept, and she had compassion on him, and said, this is one of the Hebrew's children. And the child grew, and she called his name Moses; and she said because I drew him out of the water.

This is the record of the birth of Moses found in Exodus. So we learn that Moses was born in Egypt about the year B. C. 1571. His father's name was Amram and his mother's PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPT. 20, 1905.

WE have the Conference reports from Iowa and Indiana in hand, and will give them in next issue.

"NEVER fail to bring the sublimest motive to the smallest duty, and the most infinite comfort to the smallest troubles."

"THERE is no lot in life so stern and cold and hard but it has somewhere a warm corner where human affection can blossom."

IT has been said that misunderstanding goes on like a fallen stitch in a stocking, which in the beginning might have been taken up by a needle.

THOSE who subscribed to "Personality of Jesus," are hereby informed that the work is now ready for delivery. Address M. Joblin, at 626 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

"DOCTRINES are of use only as they are practiced. Men may go to perdition with their heads full of truth. To hold the truth and right for it is one thing. To be sanctified through it is another."

"THEY who are the fullest of faith and richest in good works, make the least noise. When their hearts and lives, like the face of Moses, shine brightly with grace and holiness, they do not know it. They consider their greatest light but a faint reflection from the Father of lights, and have no reason to boast at all of borrowed goods."

"GOD is not an impatient gardener. He knows that the sun must shine on his trees, and the wind blow on them, and the rain and dew fall on them for many a year. He doesn't expect fruit from saplings; all they have to do is to grow up and up towards the light. Behold the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain."

MANY visiting friends at the Ohio Conference will be grieved to hear that the blind Sister, Greenbrier they became acquainted with, fell down the cellar stairs on Sept. 8, and broke her neck, dying instantly. There is one thing to rejoice about even in this shocking incident, and that is that her consistent walk and conversation prove to all who knew her, that she fell asleep in Jesus, and awaits the call of the Life-Giver, and will meet him with joy. May the Prince of Life soon appear and end these scenes of sorrow, and clothe us with immortality from heaven, we pray.

Dear brothers and sisters:

For 30 years we have ever found God faithful and true to his Word. I have no fault to find except with myself. I have found the laws of God in the Spiritual realm as inexorable as those in the natural. Not one can be violated with impunity. The penalty will as certainly have to be paid in the one case as in the other. If we put our finger into the fire it will surely be burned. If we jump into the water we must expect to be drowned. And if we go in the way of evil doers, we will certainly be tainted; and if we do not make a quick retreat we will be drowned in the perdition of ungodly men. We have found that people starve to death spiritually as certainly as they do temporally. We have to some extent to understand Paul when he says, "When I am weak, then I am strong." That which causes us to trust in ourselves is a source of weakness. That which drives us to the Lord points out the path of strength. We have found, too, that the plea that prevails at the throne of grace is not innocence, but penitence, not strength, but weakness, not riches, but poverty, not fulness, but hunger, misery, rags, and wretchedness. It is by these clasping hands that we take hold upon God. It is when we lie prone and helpless that his glorious arm reaches down to take hold of us.

I am determined to trust him still, determined to fight the good fight of faith to the end, and by the grace of God lay hold upon eternal life. My faith was never stronger, nor my hope firmer; and I intend to occupy till the Master comes, if it be his will. May we all be fit to be gathered home I pray. Amen.

name Jochebed, both of the tribe of Levi.

Moses seems to have lived forty years as an Egyptian and then he went out to become acquainted with his brethren, the Hebrews, but he was rejected, one saying, "Who made thee a prince and a judge over us?"

Pharaoh also became displeased with him so he fled and dwelt in the land of Midian, and married one of the daughters of Jethro, the priest of Midian and Moses kept his father-in-law's flock. It was while leading the flock that God called him to lead the Israelites out of the land of Egypt.

Moses was used, above all the men on the earth, and when the Lord commanded him to go to the fathers of the Israelites, said, O my Lord I am not eloquent, neither heretofore, nor since thou hast spoken unto thy servant, but I am slow of speech and of a slow tongue. But God told him Aaron, his brother, would be his spokesman, and that he had chosen him to lead the Israelites to the promised land. Although meek and slow of speech, anything but a natural leader in the sight of men, Moses became a great leader and finished the work God gave him to do. This is an important lesson to each one of us. God can use us if we will permit him. To obey is what he asks us to do and he will do the rest.

After forty years of journeying in the wilderness, God took Moses up to mountain Moab, to the top of Pisgah, and showed him the promised land. And Moses, the servant of the Lord, died in the land of Moab in the year B. C. 1451. He was 120 years old when he died, his eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated.

A gospel promise to Moses is found in Deut xxxiv. 1. After showing him the promised land, the Lord said unto him, this is the land which I sware unto Abraham, unto Isaac and unto Jacob, saying, I will give it unto thy seed. We learn in Gal. iii. 16, that the seed promised is Christ. May it be the happy lot of each one of us to be with Moses in the promised land.

RUTH THE GLEANER.

During a period of famine in Canaan two Ephrathites, Elimelech and his wife Naomi who lived in the city of Bethlehem went forth with their two sons, Mahlon and Chilion, to seek a home in the land of Moab. Here Elimelech died, and after about ten years his sons, who had married two of the daughters of Moab, named Orpah and Ruth, died also.

Hearing that the famine was over in Canaan Naomi now prepared to return to her native town of Bethlehem. She spoke to her daughters in-law, telling them of her intentions with the result that Orpah bade her farewell and went away to her home, but Ruth who could not be dissuaded accompanied her.

Reaching Bethlehem Ruth goes to glean in the fields of Boaz, a wealthy kinsman of Elimelech. Struck by her simple fidelity, he permits her to share in the provision made for his servants. By the advice of her mother-in-law Ruth claims kinship with him, and he is not slow to acknowledge it. But there is a nearer kinsman, who is first asked to discharge a kinsman's duties. When he declined, Boaz readily performed them, and marries Ruth, by whom he becomes the father of Obed, who was the grandfather of king David, of whom our Lord was a direct descendant.

The story of Ruth, the Moabitess, great grandmother of David, illustrates several important points. (1) It brings out the pious character of the good Boaz, and the friendly relations between him and his reapers; (2) it illustrates the Jewish land system, and the method of transferring property from one person to another; (3) it lauds down the brave love and unshaken truthfulness of her who, though not of the chosen race, was privileged to become the ancestor of David and so of "great David's greater Son" (Ruth iv. 18 22; Matt. i. 5-16); and (4) by the adoption of the Moabitess Ruth into the Church of God and her acceptance as a mother in Israel, it anticipates the words of Christ that "many should come from the east and west; and should sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven." Matt. viii. 11.

Of the life of Ruth (which means friendship) after the birth of her son Obed, the father of Jesse, who was the father of David, we have no record, and of her length of life and service to God, or when and where she died and was buried has not been made known to us.

STERLING P. GROVES.

DAVID.

David, the son of Jesse, the Bethlehemite, was born within a few miles of the city of the great King, Jerusalem about 1080 B. C. His early life was spent in performing the humble duty of caring for his father's flocks. But chosen by God as a man after his own heart, he was anointed by Samuel at the age of 17, to be king over God's chosen people, but not until seven years later did he take the throne. After an eventful reign of forty years, he died in Zion, the city of David, in the year 1015 B. C. at the age of sixty-four.

David occupies a very important position in God's plan of salvation, having been promised that he through should be established forever and that his Son should reign on it. In 2 Sam. vii. 12-16 David is assured of this by God through Nathan the prophet. "And when thy days be fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build a house for my name, and I will establish the throne of his kingdom forever. I will be his father, and he shall be my son. If he commit iniquity, I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men: but my mercy shall not depart away from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I put away before thee. And thine house and thy kingdom shall be established forever before thee, thy throne shall be established forever."

Perhaps the most striking characteristic of the life of David is its romantic variety of circumstances. What a career that was which began amidst the pastoral solitudes of Bethlehem and ended in the chamber where the dying ears heard the blare of the trumpets that announced the accession of Bathsheba's son.

From the quiet and lowly duties of a shepherd boy to court minstrel, companion and friend of the king, idol of the people, champion of the armies of God, then changing, hunted like a partridge in the mountains, a fugitive and half a free-booter, taking service at foreign courts and lurking on the frontiers with a band of outlaws; he learned the weariness of an exile's diet. How hard his fare, how hopeless his heart. Again the scene quickly changes and he is on the throne for long years, victorious, prosperous, beloved. We may truly say none of the great men of the Scriptures passed through a course of so many changes none of them touched human life at so many points. He was a measure, a type of his coming Son, Jesus. In all points tempted like as we are.

Certain it was that he had his faults and they were grave enough, but let us remember that no one has judged them more rigorously than he himself. He exhibited all the passions of human nature from the lowest and coarsest to the highest and most noble. But when all is admitted there remains a wonderfully rich, lovable character. Sagacious, full of resource, prudent in counsel, swift as lightning in act, frank and generous, bold and gentle, cheery in defeat, calm in peril, patient in privations, modest and self-restrained in victory, chivalrous to his foes, ever watchful, ever hopeful, a born leader and king of men, and the basis of all was a profound, joyous trust in his shepherd God and ardor of personal love to him. That trust opened his mouth to show forth God's praise. He himself has told us what was his habitual temper and how it was sustained. "I have set the Lord always before me; because he is at my right hand, I shall not be moved. Therefore my heart is glad, and my glory rejoiceth." Psa. xvi. 8-9.

Even his name was significant meaning beloved, and beloved he was both by his people and God.

To illustrate to you his complete faith and trust in God I will use his own words in the 23rd Psalm. It is, I think, without exception one of the most beautiful passages in the Bible. The date of this Psalm is doubtful. Some historians claim it was written in youth before he became king. Others declare it was written shortly after the death of Absalom. I prefer the latter as we see then the perfect trust in God of one who has gone through the battle of life and whose experience give color to his utterances. "The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want: he maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters; he restoreth my soul; he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me; thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever."

See the intensity of devotion, the passion of divine love that shines all through this psalm. It breathes the very spirit of [illegible] perfect trust and [illegible] who [illegible] eyes looking [illegible] nature or future [illegible] but now [illegible] to [illegible] who [illegible] Lord [illegible] Lord [illegible] Lord

...pect as to have served ...ugh the name "gospel Prophet." ...ve no record of Isaiah's death ...burial, but a tradition which was ...accepted in early times, represented that he suffered martyrdom by being ...sawn asunder in the early days of the reign of king Manasseh. A life-long service to God surrounded by bad kings did not influence him, for he was continually striving and praying for the Lord to help him in times of trouble.

JEREMIAH.

Jeremiah was the son of Helkiah who was one of the priests that were in Anathoth, a town in the tribe of Benjamin, a short distance north of Jerusalem. He (Jeremiah) was very likely born in Anathoth, but lived and prophesied nearly all his life in Jerusalem. Was called by God to prophesy at a very early age. He made his first appearance about 626 B. C. in the thirteenth year of the reign of king Josiah about seventy years after Noah. After the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar he lived in Mispah.

He was carried [illegible] will to Egypt and was [illegible] death on account of [illegible] reminding the people [illegible] were. He was [illegible] a messenger [illegible] destruction. He was [illegible] cruel persecutions all [illegible] He prophesied [illegible] about forty years. He was about [illegible] or seventy years of age when he died. He was born in 600 B. C. His name means appointed of Jehovah. He foresaw the ruin of his country and lamented it bitterly. His prediction was correct. He saw the backsliding and idolatry into sin on the part of Israel. He persisted in his warnings and exhortations, looking forward in hope to the renewal of God's covenant with his people, and the restoration that he promised for his chosen people Israel.

In Jeremiah iii. 17, 18, it says of that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord, and all nations shall be gathered unto it to the Lord to Jerusalem, neither shall they walk any more after the imaginations of their evil hearts.

In those days the house of Judah shall walk with the house of Israel and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers.

DANIEL.

Daniel was a celebrated prophet in the Chaldean and Persian period. He was taken captive to Babylon B. C. 607, when he was about sixteen years of age. I can find nothing written of his parents or birth, only that he was taken a captive from Judah during the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah. Nebuchadnezzar besieged Jerusalem and carried away all the princes and all the treasures of the Lord's house to Babylon. Then the king commanded that children of Israel princes and children of royal birth should be brought into the king's court, and be taught the learning and tongue of the Chaldeans. We would suppose from this that Daniel was of royal birth as that was the command of the king princes and children of royal birth be brought. And the king appointed a daily provision of the king's meat, and of the wine which he drank to be given them. Now among these were of the children of Judah Daniel. But Daniel being brought up under the Jewish law would not defile himself with the king's meat or the wine. He kept the Jewish law of clean and unclean meats, and would not break this law. History says Daniel died at Susa, at the age of ninety-four years and was buried there, and in the twelfth century a monument was erected to his memory.

Daniel's life was spent in constant and continued service to God, at an early age he showed strength of mind and character, for he was but a youth when he refused the provision of the king. God gave Daniel knowledge and understanding and power to interpret visions and by this power Daniel made known to kings and rulers the one true and living God, and of the kingdom which God would establish on the earth. After the miraculous escape of Daniel from the den of lions King Darius made the decree for all men in his dominion to worship the God of Daniel, for he is the living and true God, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed. This shows that Daniel by his faith had taught the king that God in whom he trusted, was the God of all the earth. This is the gospel promises to Daniel that the God of heaven would set up a kingdom that should never be destroyed, but it would break in pieces all other kingdoms and stand forever. A kingdom which God would give to his Son and the saints of the Most High to possess. Dan. vii. And there was given him dominion and glory and a kingdom, that all people and nations and languages should serve him, and his dominion an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom one that shall never pass away. Christ and his saints shall rule in this kingdom forever. This same gospel of the kingdom Jesus preached in Galilee, and which was revealed to the apostle in all its glory and grandeur, with the redeemed of all nations and tongues, the redeemed who sing the new song unto God, for thou hast redeemed us unto our God and made us kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth in the kingdom for which we are taught to pray, that God's will may be done on earth as it is done by angels in heaven.

Daniel's utter disregard for the decree of the king is the one principal event in his life for our example, for to disobey the king's decree meant death. But Daniel loved God and obeyed this commandment. Thou shalt have no other gods before me. Nor bow down, nor worship nor serve them; and with his window open toward Jerusalem he kneeled down and prayed and gave thanks before God. May we ever keep in mind this noble example and daily pray for the peace of Jerusalem, and wait for the King of peace.

ELLA KNOWLES.

MATTHEW.

The earliest record we have of Matthew, the disciple of Jesus, and one of the twelve apostles, is at Capernaum, a city on the shores of the Lake of Genesaret, where Jesus said unto him, Follow me and he arose and followed him.

The name Matthew means "Gift of Jehovah." Before his conversion he was named Levi, and had been a "publican" that is, a collector of tolls and customs imposed on persons and goods crossing the Lake Gennesaret at Capernaum. He was thus occupied when Jesus called him to become one of his followers. Matthew, or Levi, was the son of Alphaeus, and a Hebrew. He was born about the same time as Christ and lived to be about sixty years of age, and spent about the last thirty years of his life in the service of God as an apostle and evangelist.

Little is recorded of him except his calling, and the feast which he gave in his house at the beginning of his discipleship. The way in which this is related seems to indicate that he was (comparatively at least) a wealthy man. He was also present in the upper room at Jerusalem after the ascension, when Matthias was selected to be the successor of Judas.

Matthew (like Paul and many others of Jesus' disciples) left all he had to follow the Master. In the gospel which bears his name, he does not set forth the fact that he gave a great feast in his own house, as do the other gospels, which shows that he, like Paul, was not given to boasting or glorying in himself, and his works, but in the works which God wrought through him.

It is not known for certain where he met his death, but it is generally believed that he suffered martyrdom in a city of Ethiopia about A. D. 60. It is also believed that he was buried in that place, and some time later taken to Salerno, and placed in the church built by Robert Guscart, where his body now lies.

Both the Greek and the Catholic churches observed the day of his death, but there was some difference of opinion between the two churches regarding the exact date, which shows that the exact date of his martyrdom is not known positively.

FRED BLYTH.

LUKE.

The Evangelist is by the unanimous voice of tradition identified with the beloved physician and fellow laborer of Paul mentioned in Col. iv. 14. He was by birth a Greek, a native of Antioch in Syria, and probably a Jewish proselyte. Before he became a convert under the preaching of Paul to the faith of Christ, he appears to have joined Paul on the second journey of the Apostle to Troas about A. D. 52, and to have been frequently afterward in his company. His personal history before and after his companionship with Paul is unknown, his own narrative contains the least possible mention of himself, yet we cannot doubt that he was eminently useful to the early church by his learning, judgment, fidelity and even his medical skill, besides leaving to the church the invaluable legacy of his writing. Tradition says he died a martyr between A. D. 75 and 100, and that his body was buried in Constantinople. Here is a quotation from Luke himself, vi. 35, 36, 37, "But love ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again; and your reward shall be great, and ye shall be the children of the Highest: for he is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil. Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful. Judge not, and ye shall not be judged; condemn not and ye shall not be condemned; forgive, and ye shall be forgiven."

ANNIE BURGESS.

JOHN, THE REVELATOR.

John, the apostle and evangelist, was born in the early part of the first century, at Bethsaida in Galilee. His parents were Zebedee and Salome. He and his brother James were called Boanerges or Sons of Thunder by Jesus who manifested a particular friendship for him, as did also Jesus' friend Lazarus. They [illegible] the three disciples Jesus loved.

His occupation with [illegible] of Christ's ministry was [illegible] Christ calling them apart, "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." Matt. iv. 19.

How often the people [illegible] to the [illegible] Most [illegible] the [illegible] Galilee and [illegible] it was about [illegible] Christ [illegible] of Jesus and [illegible] was written [illegible] Matthew [illegible] to Christ [illegible] to [illegible] individuals, the general [illegible] Lady [illegible] her children," who were members and believers in the promises of God and contained a warning to avoid embracing strange doctrines, but to continue in the doctrine of God and Christ, "walking in truth as we have received commandment." The third epistle is plainly an introduction of friends to Gaius, a Christian brother, at Corinth, and the book of Revelation is a wonderful prophecy of future events.

John was present at the transfiguration of Christ, also a witness of his agony in the olive garden. He attended our Savior to the cross and Jesus observing him standing near his mother said, "Woman, behold thy Son," and to the disciple, "Behold thy mother," and from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home. St. John xx. 26 27.

John was subject to much persecution and was carried to Rome in A. D. 95 and plunged into boiling oil without being hurt, he was afterwards exiled to the Isle of Patmos where he received "the revelation of Jesus Christ which God gave unto him to show unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass." Rev. i. 1.

John preached in the cities of Jerusalem, Samaria and Ephesus, in which city he died at an advanced age and was buried near Ephesus. It is believed that he was the only one of our Lord's disciples who died a natural death; but he with the other disciples, died in the hope of a resurrection from the dead when Jesus comes to earth the second time.

May we be found among the faithful at his coming. Your Sister in Christ.

PETER.

One of the many interesting characters to study in God's book is that of Peter's. We learn that his boyhood home was in Bethsaida where he was born, but the exact time of his birth cannot be fixed, but we cannot be far wrong in making his nativity ten years preceding the birth of Jesus. Peter was the son of a fisherman, whose name was Jonas, and his mother was called Johanna. He had at all events one brother whose name was Andrew. Peter's and Andrew's occupation naturally was the same as their father's, fishermen. In Matt. iv. 18 20, we read, "And Jesus walking by the Sea of Galilee saw two brethren, Simon called Peter and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea, for they were fishers. And he said unto them, follow me, and I will make you fishers of men. And they straightway left their nets and followed him." After this Peter became one of Jesus' fellowers and it was his desire to give up all and follow him, but though sadly failing on several earlier occasions to endure hardness as a good [illegible] yet he was raised amid scenes and was by a lengthened process of [illegible] and discipline to be fitted for the stern moral conflicts of his later career and finally to be made conqueror through Christ whom he loved. Peter was one of the foremost apostles, by whom three thousand were converted on the Day of Pentecost as we read in Acts ii. and by whom the first Gentile family was admitted by baptism into Christianity. Acts x. 47-48. He is said to have preached to the Jews scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia in Asia and Bithynia, that is the [illegible] adjacent to the Black Sea, [illegible] blessed his first epistle [illegible] Babylon, probably about A. D. [illegible] general design was to comfort them under afflictions.

[illegible] Peter had once entered into the service of God, he gave his whole [illegible] and became a good example for [illegible] children to pattern after, for [illegible] had great faith in God and he [illegible] implicit faith in him. The exact [illegible] of Peter's death does not seem [illegible] definite but it has been received [illegible] he suffered martyrdom [illegible] and was buried in Rome.

L. ANN NICHOLS.

[illegible] PAUL.

[illegible] Paul, as he is called in the Bible, [illegible] of his great [illegible] Christ. History tells [illegible] was the first Christian [illegible] of the first [illegible] early church at [illegible] against the mar- [illegible] Christ. He encouraged [illegible] Jews who [illegible] to be engaged with [illegible] Christianity, but he [illegible] with anger. He [illegible] caused to death. [illegible] were present [illegible] of Stephen casting and [illegible] He did with the greatest [illegible] He was stoned to death [illegible] of the city near the probable [illegible] of the conversion. Devout men [illegible] to his burial, and [illegible] great lamentation over him. His last words were very much like those of the Savior, "Lay not this [illegible] against them." This showed that in all of his suffering he had no hatred toward his enemies. He only looked forward to the time when the promises of eternal life would be his; he lived so near to God that he was permitted to have a glimpse of the glory of God. Looking up ecstatically into heaven he said, "And behold I see the heavens open, and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God." The apostles all had the one faith, and one hope in the promised Savior. He knew that though he was stoned to death he would live again. Stephen knew that Christ died and had risen from the dead, that through him all might have life. For he is the resurrection and the life. He that believeth on me though he were dead yet shall he live. Stephen would be a good example for us all. Forgetting the things of the present and looking forward to the glories of the future.

PHILLIP.

In the 1st chapter of John we find the record of the call of Philip to become an apostle. It is said that two who were disciples of John the Baptist heard him say in reference to Jesus, "Behold the Lamb of God," and the two disciples followed Jesus. One of these two was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother. He first findeth his brother and saith unto him, "We have found the Messias"—that is the Christ. The day following this event Jesus started to go into Galilee and findeth Phillip, and saith unto him, "Follow me." Now Phillip was a native of Bethsaida, the same city as Andrew and Peter were from, which was situated on the beautiful shores of the Sea of Galilee. A great many of the wonderful works of Jesus were done in and around this city and much of his public teaching, as we find by the apostles' records. But, nevertheless the city was condemned for its unbelief and a great woe pronounced upon it by Jesus, as recorded in Matthew xi. 21.

In the 12th chapter of John we find that when Jesus rode into Jerusalem he was hailed with glad hosannas and cries of, "Blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord." He was sought for by men from this city of Bethsaida who were Greeks, and they came to Phillip with the request that they might be permitted to see Jesus. They were doubtless acquaintances or friends of Phillip and he takes the request to Andrew and they together, as we find in the 22nd verse of the 12th chapter, came to Jesus with that request. Perhaps these friends thought of Jesus' kingdom only as an immediate prospective change in the political situation in Judea and Galilee—and seeing the throng hailing him as King, and witnessing the great enthusiasm manifested in welcoming him, I say, perhaps they desired through Phillip some office in his power or other favor when once he was seated upon a kingly throne.

At all events, we know not what was the result of their request, but whatever their motive, whether good or evil, selfish or pure—the fact is pointed out by Jesus that he is to be glorified through death and that the favor he had to bestow was that of eternal life, and not pertaining to the kingdoms of this "world" or age. "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." This refers to himself and the death he was so soon to suffer as the Lamb of God—provided by God as a sacrifice for sin. In Acts viii. we find that Phillip went down to Samaria and preached Christ unto them, and that they gave heed unto the things which he spake, and when they believed Phillip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ they were baptized, both men and women. So we see that to "preach Christ" was to preach the glad tidings of "the kingdom of God" of which Jesus was Anointed to be King.

ALBERTA M. GOSS.

PAUL.

Paul, the great apostle to the Gentiles, was born in Tarsus, the capital of Cilicia, of parents who were Jews concerning the law of the Pharisees, but by virtue of their residence were accorded the privileges of Roman citizenship. He was sent when young to Jerusalem to be educated in the law, where he studied at the feet of Gamaliel, the eminent Jewish doctor, and while there he learned the trade of tent-making. He became very zealous for the law and distinguished himself by his enmity against those whom he thought had apostatized from the faith of their fathers. And it was while he was engaged in this work that the Lord appeared unto him on the way to Damascus. He was shown the error of his way, and what was the first thing he said, "Lord, what will thou have me to do?" No mistaking his motive here, his first thought had been to seek the Lord, and as he afterward said, he thought he was serving him when he was persecuting the followers of Jesus, but when he was shown his error he was ready to make amends for it. Thus it came about that instead of going to Damascus to find the followers of Jesus and bring them captive to Jerusalem he exhorted them to steadfastness and reasoned in the temple.

It was not long however before the Jews were attracted by his work and sought to kill him, and laid in wait for him at the gate of the city, but Paul being warned of their action was lowered over the wall in a basket by the disciples. He went from here to Jerusalem where he assayed to join himself unto the brethren, but they not having heard of his conversion but knowing of his past career and of his bitter hatred for those of their brethren, were afraid of him and refused to fellowship him until Barnabas brought him in unto them and told them of his conversion and his work among the brethren at Damascus. They then received him gladly and sent him forth as a disciple to preach the glad tidings of the kingdom. And how ably he acquitted himself is known to every student of the Bible. I think Paul without doubt the best example of a soldier of the cross we have. His is a wonderful character, his chief concern seemed to be to do the will of God and to help in the uplifting and strengthening of God's people everywhere. His arguments in favor God's plan of salvation a foundation truths, and especially that of the resurrection. He seemed to be gifted with superior knowledge, for proof of this read any of his epistles, every one of them contains any number of gems of truth. And how aptly they seem to fit the case of those to whom they are sent. Addressed as they are to those to whom he was instrumental in teaching the truth Paul seems to assume the responsibility of their continuing in the things they had learned, and by warnings and exhortations seeks to accomplish his purposes. In all of his travels he encountered the opposition of the Jews, and many times his life was in danger, but he did not fear them. Hear what he has to say about them, Acts xx. 24, "But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus to testify to the gospel of the grace of God." Is not that a striking example of faith in God? He knew that when the time came he would have to give up his life for the faith, but his faith was strong enough to prevail upon him to leave the result with God. And when his ministry was about to end with what confidence does he say to Timothy, "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." This is surely the confidence that is born of conscientious effort, the satisfaction of knowing you have done your best, and the best is none too good for God. Paul finally died a martyr to the faith, but by virtue of his being a Roman citizen, he was granted the privilege of being beheaded. Thus closed the greatest example, save one, of the divine life that we have.

About the most exciting existence we have read of in a long time is described in the October Cosmopolitan. Prof. R. V. Matteucci lives on the crater's edge of Vesuvius for the purposes of scientific observation, and he describes his daily life in a popular manner. Readers will not envy this scientist his job, especially when they see the pictures of the rocks that are liable to drop any moment upon him, but they will be immensely interested in his many alarming predicaments and narrow escapes. This is only one of the many fine features of this very attractive issue.

Announcement.

The Quarterly Conference of the churches of God in Michigan will be held with the Church of God at Brady, Kalamazoo Co., on Friday evening, Sept. 29th, 30th and Oct. 1, 1905.

Bro. and Sister Harper and others of Brady—desire to have as many as possible come and attend the Conference. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and if there are any from other States who could attend. The brethren would be glad to welcome them. Friends coming from the north, reach Vicksburg via the G. R. and I. R. R. which leaves Grand Rapids at 12:00 noon and 1-50 P. M. all trains will be met Friday at Vicksburg. Those coming from Hastings will take the G. R. and I. at Kalamazoo. Bro. A. H. Zilmer of Plymouth, Indiana, has promised to be with us, also Elder B. W. and M. A. Woodward of Dutton, Michigan.

Though few in number at this place, we hope and feel assured that we will have the hearty co-operation of all interested and look forward to an interesting and profitable meeting. Let none remain away through fear of being a burden to those that entertain the conference, as arrangements will be made to accommodate all that come. Come and enjoy the spiritual blessings, and return to your home strengthened and built up.

I. D. Decker, Pres.
Emma Jackman, Sec'y

P. S. Those wishing to attend this Conference should leave Grand Rapids at 7:10 A. M. or 1:50 P. M. The noon train only goes to Kalamazoo. All should come on the 7:00 A. M. to accommodate those who come for them as it is six miles out to place of meeting. M. A. W.

The Third Annual Conference of Southern Illinois will be held at the Church of God at Moriah, Clark Co., Illinois, October 7-15.

No definite programme has yet been arranged. It will probably be decided upon from day to day.

Bro. A. H. Zilmer and Bro. S. T. Hook have been engaged to be with us. Other speakers will be procured. Let everybody come who can. You will be welcomed and entertained freely. You will be met either at Casey or Hazel Dell by writing Lewis Weaver or Z. E. Brant the date of your arrival.

Leave all cares at home and come praying expecting a good spiritual meeting and a good time socially.

Mrs. Chas. W. Weaver, Sec.

The Conference at Rollin, Kansas, will be held on October 13, and last over Sunday. Accommodations will be furnished all who come. Those so desiring may bring some bedding, and some of the buildings can be used for lodging. A number of speakers will be present. Come and make the plan of a fraternal unity in Christ a success. Now, if ever, seems to be the time to do something for the colony. So come. Show your love for Christ and his body by a heroic, sacrificing effort of love, to live together in harmony and helpfulness.

Popular Sermons by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerely will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who leave no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, O.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

Twelve Words, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

The Gospel of the Kingdom, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be address ed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money so [illegible] letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail [illegible] almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Poetry.

The Master.

Waiting for Him in the darkness,
Watching for Him in the light,
Listening to catch His orders
In the very midst of the fight.
Seeing His slightest signal
Across the heads of the throng;
Hearing His faintest whisper
Above the din and song.

Reaching to touch His shadow
In the fervor and heat of the day;
Looking to be approving
As the hours wear away.
Shining to give Him glory;
Working to praise His name;
Bearing with Him the suffering,
Bearing for Him the shame.

Art thou afraid to trust Him
Seeming so far away?
Wherefore then not keep close to
Christ as he says we may?
Why then not walk beside Him?
Holding His blessed hand,
Patiently walking onward
All through the weary land?

Which Way Blows the Wind?

It is sometimes said, that the drifting straw indicates the direction of the wind. We may regard the Jews as the drifting straw, indicating the trend of events among the nations.

I have an item cut from the Chicago American, headed as follows:

"SIX MILLION JEWS TO LEAVE RUSSIA."

New Exodus will have the country about Palestine as its destination.

The announcement was made yesterday that a movement for the depopulation of the Jews from Russia would soon be in operation, and it is stated that expenses for the taking away of the six million Jews from that country would be borne by the Jews throughout the civilized world.

The announcement was made at the session of the Jewish Chautauqua. Dr. Kauffman Kohler, President of the Union Hebrew College of Cincinnati, stated that in a short time 6,000,000 Russian Jews would be transported to Palestine, and that arrangements were under way to bring 100,000 of the race from that empire to this country.

A great fund of millions has been subscribed for this purpose, and the object is, since the persecution of the Jews continue, to remove every one from Russia's jurisdiction.

Another item in an editorial from a daily paper, dated Aug. 1, 1905, handed as follows:

"ZIONISTS WANT ONLY PALESTINE.

The action of the Zionist congress in rejecting Great Britain's offer of a tract of land in Urgonda, Africa, for colonization purposes, was not unexpected. Few Zionists believed a temporary location there would bring nearer the final return to Palestine. A Jewish state anywhere but in the latter country, would be a doubtful fulfillment of prophecy and would not satisfy the pious and patriotic longings and hopes, which have stirred in Jewish breasts during so many generations.

To the Zionist Palestine is the promised land of his fathers. Uganda, or some other new country might grow larger crops, it might prove to have greater mineral and industrial resources, but the associations which cluster about Palestine, and make the Zionist desire it as the hart desireth the water brooks, would be wholly foreign to a new country. It would not satisfy him.

Should the Jews succeed in inducing the Turks to give up Palestine to them, it is probable, that the hope of the Zionists would be realized, and that a second exodus of the Hebrews to the promised land would take place."

WHAT DOES ALL THIS MEAN?

What does all this international agitation about Israel going back to Palestine signify? It will not down, every little while the newspapers talk about Israel's second exodus. Jewish patriotism is awakened, a longing for the fatherland burns brightly in the Jewish heart.

If you want to know why the nations are agitated on this question, read Jer. xxxi. 10: "Hear the Word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him as a shepherd doth his flock."

The proclamation has been sounded and hence the nations are moved, and Israel is awakened, God is about to remember his holy covenant.

"Lord save thine Israel—
Restore thine Israel
To their own land.
Let Jacob's seed return;
While scattered now they mourn,
Oh! give them soon their own
Beloved land."

What does this mean to the Christian? It is to them the midnight cry: "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh." Say, listen, do you hear it? If you do, awake, and to use a homely phrase, "Get a move on you!" It is to move now or never! How many are willing to make sacrifices to still further extend the proclamation, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh?" I am ready to co-operate with you. Do you want to sound the proclamation in your neighborhood? If so, write to me immediately and arrange for meetings.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.
W. H. WILSON.

The committee on resolutions beg to present the following:

Whereas, our heavenly Father has so abundantly blessed us during the past year, and has again permitted us to assemble on our beautiful camp grounds and greet each other in Christian fellowship, and has inspired us with a firm determination to exert greater energy in the blessed work of proclaiming the gospel of Christ in the future than we have in the past. We hereby acknowledge our thanksgiving to him for the manifold blessings we have enjoyed. And it is

Resolved, That our sincere thanks are hereby expressed to our Conference board, Evangelists, visiting ministers, young people, and to all others who have assisted or in any way contributed to the work of the past year or the success of the present Conference.

Whereas, we have laid to rest in the hope of the resurrection several members of the body of Christ, therefore be it

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved relatives and friends our deep sympathy in their sorrow, and commend them to the love of Jesus, and the hope of the resurrection of the dead. Committee, Eldred Marsh, Ada Moran, Sadie Clark.

Home Friendships.

If we cultivate home friendships with the same assiduity that we give to those outside, they will yield us even richer and fairer returns. There is no friendship so pure and beautiful in its nature, so rich and full in its power of blessing, or so singularly rare in its occurrence, as that between parents and their grown up sons and daughters. Where the parental and filial instincts are supplemented by that higher and more spiritual affection that binds together minds in intellectual communion and souls in heart-felt sympathy, few deeper or more delightful friendships can be imagined. The guardian and dependent gradually lose themselves in the dear companion and true friend of later life; and youth becomes wiser, and age brighter, and both, nobler and happier in this loving and abiding union.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I greet you all in the name of a dear loving Father who speaks to us words of comfort and cheer through his Word, that we may rejoice in the hope of the glory of God in prospect of that gladness which awaits the redeemed of the Lord. When the ransomed of the Lord shall return to Zion with songs of everlasting joy up on their heads. When they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away.

As we are of the isolated ones we get very lonely and long for the fellowship of the dear ones of the faith of the gospel. It was our happy privilege to meet with the brothers and sisters at the Cleveland Conference, and we were well paid for all the effort we made to go. Such a hearty welcome and loving smiles that greeted us. The love of God seemed to be beaming from every countenance. As I said to a friend, "It was like a meeting of a family that had long been separated. Where father, mother, brother and sister meet together, and is a foretaste of the great re-union in the Sweet By and By." Dear ones, we can't afford to miss it. Let us earnestly try to enter the gates of the New Jerusalem.

I have selected a piece of poetry which I send for print.

THE MORNING BREAKETH.

Awake, O ye who slumber!
Arouse, be on your guard,
List now to him who speaketh,
Be on your watch and ward.
Prayers from millions ascending
He answers swift and clear
'Mid strife and turmoil sending
His strength and loving cheer.

Know ye not, he is calling
Workers more and more,
Consecrated for the harvest
About our very door?
Souls alungered, drifting
'Mid darkness, strife and sin,
True hearts he now is sifting
To let the sunlight in.

Behold, the morning breaketh!
Crimson the east has grown,
The Lord is swiftly coming
To claim once more his own.
Let us put on our armor,
Work for him while we may;
Glean jewels for his kingdom
And the eternal day.

Your Sister in Christ,
SARAH ARMITAGE.

Impressions.

There are some people who place great confidence in impressions and who are sometimes most grievously misled by them; and it is quite important for persons to know just how much value to be attached to an impression. There is a story told of Dr. McCosh, president of Princeton College, who, while teaching a class in mental philosophy exclaimed:

"Ah! I have an impression! Now, young gentleman, can you tell me what an impression is?" No answer.

"What! no one knows? No one can tell me what an impression is?" exclaimed the doctor, looking up and down the class.

"I know," said young Mr. Arthur. "An impression is a dent in a soft place."

There are many impressions which will answer to this description. They are simply dents in a soft place, and persons who are susceptible to such impressions should have a care that they are not misled and misguided by them. There are other impressions, so full of power and solemnity that they plainly come to men from higher sources, giving light, wisdom, guidance and help which they should not neglect. Some impressions should be carefully distinguished from those which are only dents in a soft place.

There is a sort of economy in the ways of Providence that one shall excel where another is defective, in order to make men useful to each other and mix them in society.

"Remember that you will never gain but always lose, by being afraid to do the thing that seems to you right, by following the crowd without cultivating your own individuality."

Selections.

Jehovah The Living God.

The most sublime and influential of all truths is before us, the foundation of all substance, of all morality, and of all religion. The stars which have no visible pillars are held by the hand of God, the everlasting rocks and great mountain ranges have no strength of their own, but all stand fast in God. It is in him that we live, and move, and have our being. If his sustaining power were taken away, not only would nature perish, but man, the lord thereof, would meet destruction in the same ruin. The heathen philosophers, though they had gleams of the Supreme One, all stuck fast in matter, believing in its eternity—independent of the gods. A Christian child is wiser than an ancient sage, for he receives by faith that "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth," originating the matter and impressing the form by his formative and plastic hand. The Jews, by special supernatural training, knew this when it was hidden from such thinkers as Plato, and from all the nations so radiant in mental power and wide resources. One Jew said to the people—"Lift up your eyes on high, and behold who hath created these things, that bringeth out their host by number; he calleth them all by names by the greatness of his might, for that he is strong in power; not one faileth." Isa. xl. 26. When once the idea of God reaches the human mind, all things within and without bear combined testimony and evidence. The great philosopher, Kant, in a memorable passage said, that two things impressed him profoundly—the starry heavens without, and the moral law within. All thoughtful men can confirm the truth and force of the remark. As the glorious mechanism of nature involves plan and design, calling for an intelligent person—a stupendous mind—so the conscience looks back to a righteous person whose nature is the deep foundation of all the moral law. We say the nature, because the will of God which is accepted by believers as the rule of action, is only forcible and powerful because it is the exposition and declaration of his essential nature. The nature of a being perfect in holiness, is the deep and sure foundation of all moral distinctions. All life and law, all matter and motion and forces, all beauty and order proceed from him who liteth up his hand to the heavens, saying—I live for ever. Moses knew that he might be driven from the gates of Egypt as a shameless imposter, unless he carried some reasonable account concerning the Being who sent him, as he was to ask for the freedom of the men who were doing all the rough work of the monarchy. "Who shall I say sent me?" "Say that 'I am' sent thee;" he is, and in the absolute sense, he only is. Spirits and men like shadows may come and go, but he is from eternity to eternity; the underived, self-existent, and everlasting One. This brings us to the celebrated passage of Paul in his charge to Timothy, which cannot be quoted in a fragmentary manner without spoiling it. "I give thee charge in the sight of God, who quickeneth all things, and before Pontius Pilate witnessed a good confession; that thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ; which in his times he shall show, who is the blessed and holy Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords. Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto, whom no man hath seen nor can see; to whom be honor and power everlasting. Amen." 1 Tim. vi. 13-16. Immortality, then, is one of the attributes of God, he alone hath it, absolute and underived. All other beings are finite and dependent, and if ever they share in his immortality, it must be by his sovereign and gracious gift. Whether he gives it in their constitution, or makes it depend upon moral and spiritual elevation, we can only learn from the record of his will. One thing is certain—that which has a beginning may have an end—that which begins to be may cease to be—unless God wills otherwise. There is not a more foolish argument in existence, than the common one in theological schools—immaterial, ergo immortal. We deny the ergo, for whatever God made, God can destroy, whether it be matter or spirit. We are not to fear him or them who can only kill the body, but we are to fear him who can destroy both body and soul in hell. The passage flashes like a two-edged sword, cutting down naked materialism on one side, and immortal soulism on the other. The will of God on this, on all cognate matters, must be gathered from his record with reverence. He that hath a dream let him tell his dream, but what is the chaff to the wheat. "Is not my Word like fire and a hammer to break the rock in pieces?" No harm in the human to have a dream, or to tell it: but it is chaff after all. The Word of the Lord is the revealing fire, discovering and consuming, and the hammer which descends with tremendous force upon buildings of evil and refuges of lies.—G. Greenwell.

Mother's Hand.

"What memory of your boyhood days has exerted the strongest influence for good in your life?"

I asked this question of a man past forty, whose record has been so clean and wholesome that I was curious to know what secret, if any, lay beneath the calm serenity of his common, every-day experience.

"The memory of mother's hand upon my knee," was the quick reply. "When, a restless little boy in church, I hitched about upon the high, uncomfortable seat, mother used to lay her hand gently upon my knee, and whisper: 'Only a little longer, dear. Keep quiet a little longer, for mother's sake.'

"Somehow the pressure of her soft hand always soothed me; and often I would go to sleep, and on awakening find it still there. The years that have slipped by since then have been fraught with trials and temptations, and the path of duty has been hard and difficult; yet there never has been a time when the memory of that soft touch upon my knee, in the old home church, has not been like a clasp of steel to keep my feet from wandering into by-paths of sin."

There were tears in the man's eyes, and his lips quivered as he continued: "And now that she is no longer living, the memory of that touch is still more potent. I feel that, for mother's sake, I must still keep my daily actions blameless."

The White Stone.

"To him that overcometh will I give a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it." Rev. ii. 17. Reference is here made to a stone divided into two parts, as a sign of hospitality, upon each of which one of the parties wrote his name and interchanged it with the other. This gave a mutual claim to contracting parties and to descendants for reception and kind treatment when traveling. It was carefully and privately kept so that no one might gain the privilege besides the person for whom intended. Or, according to Matthew Henry, this "White stone" means absolution from the guilt of sin, alluding to the ancient custom of giving a white stone to those acquited on trial, and a black stone to those condemned. "The New Name" is the name of adoption. Adopted persons took the name of the family into which they were adopted. None can read the evidence of a man's adoption but himself.

"One of the first lessons in life is to learn to be absolute master of one's own mind, to clear it of its enemies, and to keep it clear. You have the ability to choose your mind's company; you can call up at will any guest you please. Why not choose the noblest and best?"

The Restitution

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world is gone." As a means to this end, the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

At Budapest, Hungary, there is trouble over differences with Austria, and fierce rioting has resulted, many being killed and injured.

Write your name in kindness, love and mercy on the hearts of those who come in contact with you, and you will never be forgotten."

The way the recents Anglo Japanese treaty is received is shown by the following dispatches. The other nations seem to think England has gained more by the Russian-Japanese war than if she had fought and gain a victory herself.

The Tageblatt condemns the treaty as a menace to the interests of all European countries, just as the Anglo-French treaty regarding Morocco was condemned last year. It says a coalition of the powers whose Asiatic interests are threatened will now necessarily be called into existence to counteract the effects of the Anglo-Japanese treaty. It adds that Great Britain has abandoned her splendid isolation, only to drive the whole world into the camp of her enemies. England and Japan have the upper hand for the moment, but those laugh best who laugh last.

The Post accuses Great Britain of adopting an anti-European policy. It declares that Lord Lansdowne's assurances are mere words, intended to conceal the truth. It hopes that Russia will distrust all British protestations of friendship.

The Deutsche Tageszeitung describes the treaty as an offensive instrument containing germs of a breach of the peace. It advises Germany to redouble her vigilance in foreign affairs and to keep her powder dry.

The Lokal Anzeiger, taking the same view, says a better answer would be the conclusion of a Russo-German treaty of alliance, into which France might be brought, if willing, advantageously to all three powers. That paper suggests that such an alliance is actually the purpose of M. de Witte's visit to Rominten, and declares that the German government favors the idea.

Vienna, Sept. 27.—That England has come victorious out of a war she did not wage is the commonly expressed opinion of the Anglo-Japanese treaty. The newspapers here regard it as a diplomatic triumph, laying the foundation for Anglo-Japanese mastery in Asia. Some fears are expressed lest it provoke a Russo-German alliance, the cost of which Austria might have to pay in the Balkans.

Paris, Sept. 27.—While the virtual consensus of opinion expressed in the French press is that the Anglo-Japanese treaty does not afford just cause for resentment anywhere, there is a general expectation that Russia will resent and mistrust it and will accordingly draw continually closer to Germany. M. Millevoye, writing in La Patrie, says he admires Great Britain's skill in securing so enormous an advantage from Japan's victories.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 27.—Politicians, military men, and officials whose creed is Russian expansion in Asia are chagrined and indignant over the Anglo-Japanese treaty. They declare it preposterous that England and Japan should arrogate to themselves the prerogative of making themselves the arbiters of the fate of the whole of Asia. The liberals, however, are pleased with the treaty, believing it will check, at least temporarily, the bureaucratic territorial aims in the far east and compel attention to home problems. The newspapers have not as yet commented upon the treaty.

It is an indisputable fact that German diplomacy is exceedingly active. The consensus of opinion here is that the kaiser is urging the czar to form a continental alliance to offset the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

Conference Report.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Indiana met with the church at South Bend, and was opened promptly Thursday evening at 7:30. The address of welcome was given by R. C. Railsback, one of the Elders of the church. He said in part that we wanted the Conference to help the church. He also spoke of the royal entertainment promised in the announcement. The preachers were expected to do that part of the entertaining. Bro. Zilmer responded in a few well chosen words, admonishing all to "Let the Word of Christ dwell in you richly."

The address following the opening exercises was given by Sister Woodward on the subject, "What it means to be the children of God."

On Friday morning at 10:30 we listened to an address by Bro. Woodward on "Does it matter what we believe?" Mark xvi. 15-16. Bro. Woodward gave proof that it does matter what we believe, if we want to gain a home in God's kingdom.

The business session convened at 1.30. Roll call of churches showed the following represented: Argos, Bracken, Burr Oak, Plymouth, Rensselaer, Roll, South Bend, Hillisburg. Minutes of last meeting were read and approved. Secretary and Treasurer reported that $102.29 Evangelist fund had been received, and $153.00 had been paid out, leaving a balance on hand of $309.29. The reports of the several churches were given by their representatives. While these reports were not as good as we would like to have heard, yet they clearly showed a fulfilment of the Scriptures and said to us that we are surely living in the last days.

Bro. W. H. Wilson reported that he had visited a number of places in the Southern States, also visited Wisconsin and Ohio. Baptized over thirty during the year.

Literature committee reported that it has $36.25 on hand at disposal of the Conference.

The Historical committee reported that considerable material had been received. This will be published in The Restitution.

At 3:00 the Sisters' meeting was led by Sister Underwood. The lesson read was a part of the Sermon on the Mount as translated from the original Greek. The papers read were from sisters who could not be present and they were much enjoyed.

In the evening the social meeting was led by Bro. William Railsback, following which was an address by Bro. Zilmer on "What the Church of God stands for."

At 10:30 Saturday an address was given by Bro. Halstead, followed by Bro. Woodward, the subject being, "Thy will be done."

At the business session Saturday afternoon Bro. Zilmer promised to raise $800.00 for Evangelist fund if the Conference would find the Evangelist. The Evangelist committee was instructed to look for an Evangelist.

It was resolved that we will have a Bible school in the Indiana Conference. The President of the Conference is the head of the committee of five to make all arrangements for said school, a report to be made at the November Conference.

The present committee on Literature were retained and instructed to publish the proceedings of this meeting and pay for it out of the Literature funds.

The committee on program for the November Conference as appointed by the chair is Ada Butler, E. K. Barnhill, W. D. Thompson.

Letters of commendation were granted to the following: A. H. Zilmer, D. T. Halstead, J. F. Wagoner, S. T. Hook, H. F. Cordill, J. J. Wince, D. E. Vanvactor, W. H. Wilson, J. S. Muncrief, N. M. Roby, R. C. Railsback, J. H. Willey.

The following officers were elected: President, A. H. Zilmer; 1st Vice President, J. L. Wince; 2nd Vice President, J. A. Burnham; Secretary, Lydia Railsback; Treasurer, T. O. Taber. The Evangelist committee was continued the same as last year, consisting of Samuel Osborne, A. R. Underwood and T. O. Taber.

The business meeting was followed by a short address by Bro. W. H. Wilson on "The things which God has promised." At 7:00 the social meeting was led by Bro. J. H. Willey after which Bro. J. F. Wagoner gave an address on "The credibility of the Scriptures."

At 9:30 on Sunday the social meeting was led by Sister Mary Cordrey. The lesson was the parable of the talents. The Sunday morning sermon was delivered by Bro. Woodward, subject, "The gospel of the kingdom." Matt. vi. 33, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." At 1:30 Sister Woodward spoke on "Ye are not of this world." Following Sister Woodward's address was the communion service in charge of Bro. Wince.

The evening social meeting was led by Sister Woodward, after which Bro. Zilmer gave an address on "The signs that indicate the approach of the kingdom of God."

The meeting was well attended by visiting members and many said, "We had a good meeting." As an immediate result of the meeting a cottage prayer meeting was established. We trust that other good was also done, and that seed was sown that will find lodgment in good soil that will spring up and bear much fruit.

Lydia Railsback, Sec'y.

Papers Read at Sister's Meeting, Indiana Conference. Subject, "Sermon on The Mount."

At His Coming.

The meek through faith in Jesus
Shall inherit on this earth,
The kingdom and the glory which Belong to Christ by birth.

Oh! what a precious promise
Signed by God's own hand,
If we but trust, and follow
His divine command.

Yes, to the meek and lowly
God's message comes today,
And offers peace and pardon
To those who will obey.

Blessed are the pure in heart,
For they shall see their God.
A righteous throng he set apart,
To which his Son belong.

And when he comes in splendor,
The great and mighty King,
With all his host of angels,
Hosannas to him sing.

Then let us strive together,
Sisters and Brothers all,
To watch and pray always,
Lest any of us fall.

Well done, thou faithful servant,
May each one of us hear
On the resurrection morning,
In the Lord's voice, sweet and clear.

Annie Bend Carlton.

Before considering any thought given in the Sermon on the Mount let us look for a few moments at the location in which the scene was laid.

On the northwest shore of the Sea of Galilee, and between the two cities, Chorazin and Bethsaida, lies the crescent-shaped plain of Gennessaret, the Garden of Princes.

This plain teems with rich, tropical vegetation, and is lined to the water's brink with oleanders. It is about one mile across its greatest width, three miles from horn to horn and sweeps into an amphitheatre of hills.

It was one of these hills that the Man of Sorrows, on seeing the multitude, ascended that he might be alone with his disciples. Just how many of the twelve disciples are present to listen to this Sermon, I am unable to determine. We find the call of Matthew recorded as occuring after this event, and the call of nine other apostles before this, so, whether there were nine, ten or eleven persons to listen to this wonderful Sermon as utter'd by the Master on the Mount of the Beatitudes so many years ago, it has been repeated to the world again and again through the ages, and today we have it unchanged by time in all its beauty and simplicity.

The Teacher here has lived a sinless life of thirty-one years on the earth. Two more will finish his ministry. What wonder then that his sermons are so powerful and lasting.

Let us look at the nine Beatitudes that have helped to make this so important a sermon. First we have "the poor in spirit," then "they that mourn," "the meek," "they which hunger and thirst after righteousness," "the merciful," "the pure in heart," "the peacemaker," "the persecuted for righteousness' sake" and again, "they which are reviled and persecuted falsely" for the sake of the Master. Are these not all attributes of the meek and lowly Jesus? He was pure in heart, poor in s, ac, sorrowful, merciful, peaceful, and certainly persecuted for righteousness' sake. In a word then we must conform our lives to the life of Christ, if we would receive these blessings. Not long ago I heard an unbeliever say of a minister, whose life had not been a success, "What right has he to pretend to teach people how to live? He does not show by his life that he has any superior knowledge worthy of being followed." But it is not so with the life of Christ. How very fruitful are his replies when tempted of Satan, and how consistent in every instance is his life with his teaching.

The world is looking at what we do rather than what we say. Then let us study our Model thoroughly and give heed to our thoughts and habits of life that we may be better representatives of Christ, and that we may be privileged to enjoy the blessings of his kingdom at his coming.

Your Sister in Christ.

Mrs. E. A. Laxton.

Matt. vi. 21.

Treasures laid up on earth will not endure, thieves break through and steal, moth and rust corrupt, fire and storm sweep away our possessions. And where our treasure is there our heart will be also. Treasure laid up on earth will engross the mind, to the exclusion of heavenly things. The love of money was the ruling passion in the Jewish age. Worldliness usurped the place of God and religion in the soul. So it is now. Avaricious greed for wealth exerts such a fascinating, bewitching influence over the life that it results in perverting the nobility and corrupting the humanity of men until they are drowned in perdition. The service of Satan is full of care, perplexity and wearing labors, and the treasure men toil to accumulate on earth is only for a season.

Jesus said, Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal, for where our treasure is there will our heart be also. It is for our interest to secure heavenly riches. This alone of all we possess is really ours. The treasure laid up in heaven is imperishable. No fire or flood can destroy it; no thief despoil it, no moth nor rust corrupt, for it is in the keeping of God.

This treasure which Christ esteems as precious above all estimate is the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints. The disciples of Christ are called his jewels, his precious and peculiar treasure. He says they shall be as stones of a crown. Christ looks upon his people in their purity and perfection as the reward of all his sufferings, his humiliation and his love, and the supplement of his glory. Christ the great center from whom radiates all glory. And we are permitted to unite with him in the great work of redemption, and to be sharers with him in the riches which his death and suffering have won.

The Apostle Paul wrote to the Thessalonian Christians, What is our hope or joy or crown of rejoicing? This is the treasure for which Christ bids us labor. Character is the great harvest of life. He who gives money or time for spreading the gospel enlists his own interest and prayers for the work and for the souls to be reached through it. And at the final day when the wealth of earth shall perish, he who has laid up treasure in heaven will behold that which his life has gained. If we have given heed to the words of Christ, then as we gather around the great white throne we shall see souls who have been saved through our agency, and shall know that one has saved others, and these still others. A large company brought into the haven of rest as the result of our labors, there to lay their crowns at Jesus' feet, and praise him through ceaseless ages of eternity.

Mrs. Selia Anderson.

Matt. vii. 25.

"Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock."

"And the rain descended and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house, and it fell not, for it was founded upon a rock."

Christ in his sermon on the Mount, dipped down into the future, knowing that humanity was frail, and to those who would be able to stand; he likened them unto the above, where all the elements of a storm availed not: for they were founded upon a rock, and able to stand. "Not every one who sayeth unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven," but he that doeth the will of my Father, shall have an inheritance.

The people who heard that wonderful sermon were astonished at his doctrine, for "He taught them, as one having authority and not as a scribe." So now in this day and age of the world; throughout all the centuries has this grand and beautiful sermon been handed down to us, and the people are astonished at the doctrine. It is the same today as then, the sermon has not changed; the people cannot understand. "Many will say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonderful works." "And then I will profess unto them, I never knew you, depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

It is those who are able to stand, and whose house is founded upon a rock, that shall hear, Come ye blessed of my Father."

Are we able to stand, can we stem the tide, ride the waves of adversity, and sail through life's tempestuous sea, to be likened unto the wise, or shall we go down by the sea, and build our house upon the sand, and when the tide comes in, and a great wave sweeps over our house. Lo! it topples and falls, and we are likened unto the foolish man; our foundation was not sure, it was built on sinking sand.

It is easy to sail along in the common Christian world. You are not asked, what do you believe, by nine persons out of ten. When you tell them you belong to any one of the different orthodox churches the people in general seem to know what they teach; but try standing alone; say you believe that Christ shall set up his kingdom on this earth, that the dead are just asleep till the morning of the resurrection, and they are astonished. Do you really believe the dead are not conscious? "Horrors," then the questions, oh! they come. Some say, How beautiful, if I only could believe it, but then, what is the difference what we believe; we are all aiming for the same place, and you need a home, so come be one of us. Can we stand? Is it what we believe, or what our Bible teaches? Surely, surely, it is a test. Oh! I grow sick and faint, we are so few in number, and so unpopular. How often that is said, and how true, yet we grow less, and lose our identity by seeking another home. Are we able to stand, shall our little band go down, all because we are cast out into the world, and not founded on a rock.

This is not to criticise, but an earnest, loving appeal to stand. Christ is just as much authority today as when on the Mount talking to the people, and his doctrine is just as strange to the world. Yet through his tender, loving mercy, he would that all should come unto him. How he will gather them as a hen gathers her brood under her wings, but they will not, for straight is the gate, and narrow the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it. May you and I, dear ones, so live, that we shall be likened unto the wise man. May our foundation be sure and steadfast; and above all, may we be able to have an entrance through that gate that leadeth unto life.

Mrs. Etta Fry.

Matt. v. 8.

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." How much this blessed thought means to the true man or woman, especially the Christian; since it must not include only those who are merely externally moral, but whose motives and thoughts are pure. Jesus tells us to consider the lilies of the field, how they grow. How beautiful they are. How pure; yet nature's own gift. Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. As God cares for grass in the field, he will clothe and provide for us if we use the means he has provided for us. "Therefore take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or what shall we drink? or wherewith shall we be clothed? Your heavenly Father knoweth that we have need of all these things. But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." Matt. vi. 33. Jesus tells us to labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat that endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of Man shall give unto you. Jesus says, "I am the bread of life; he that cometh to me shall never hunger, and he that believeth on me shall never thirst." And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life, and I will raise him up at the last day." Let us then seek righteousness, and be filled with that holiness which makes us members of Christ's spiritual kingdom. May we be pure as the lily, and with unstained hearts we may be prepared to "see God."

Mrs. S. C. Manuwal.

Matt. vi. 5-10.

"And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrits are." Christ teaches us in John iv. 24, that they who worship God must worship him in spirit and truth. These are the ones the Father seeketh. In Job xx. 5 we find the joy of the hypocrite is but for a moment.

6. "But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet. The[se] are addressed to Christians. [We] to be a peculiar people, zealous good works, peculiar, in that we do not follow after the world, but are trying to obey Christ's teachings. Pray to thy Father which is in secret. Does it mean when we unburden our hearts, that we can tell him all, more than we can tell any human friend, and still we have the promise that he will remember our sins no more?

"But when we pray, use not vain repetitions." Do we realize that it is vain repetition to repeat it unless we do it intelligently? Eccl. v. 2, "Be not rash with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be hasty to utter any thing before God, for God is in heaven, and thou upon earth; therefore, let thy words be few."

How many of us fully understand the Lord's prayer? Many understand that our Father is in heaven, and that his name is to be kept holy, but what about the coming of his kingdom? 10. We pray thy kingdom come, are we heeding the Word? Are we watching and praying for his coming? His kingdom of which there shall be no end. Luke i. 32, 33.

Thy will be done in earth. Have we made a complete surrender? Submitting entirely our will to his, or are we making crosses for ourselves by crossing his will with ours? Holding back a part of our service from him, clinging to some sinful habit, or rebelling because our plans are thwarted. And losing sight of the truth that all things work together for good for them that love the Lord. There are many paths that lead us away from him and his love.

11. Give us this day our daily bread. Are we grateful to him, giving thanks for all he bestows upon us, or do we accept this blessing as our right? forgetting what we read in Psalms xxiv. 1, The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein.

12. And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors. How important it is for us to forgive, that we might be forgiven. Think of the happiness that is forfeited by those who fail to heed these words, "Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord."

13. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. In the 13th and 14th verses of the first chapter of James we learn that God cannot be tempted with evil, neither does he tempt any man. But every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed. When Christ prayed for his apostles he asked not that they should be taken out from the world, but that they should be kept from the evil. For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever. His kingdom is an everlasting kingdom. Dan. iv. 3. And he ruleth over all. Psalm ciii. 19. He is all powerful, all power comes from him. We read that he gave his Son power on the earth to forgive sins, to heal diseases till all were amazed. And in Luke xxi. 27, we find "And then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud with power and great glory." All this proceeds from the Father.

In verses 14 and 15 Christ emphasized the need of forgiving others. In Isa. i. 18, we read, "Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord; though your sins be as scarlet they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." If the Lord who is perfect can forgive to this extent, why should we imperfect as we are, and so prone to sin, refuse to forgive others? And when we read the bare truth in verse 15, "But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses," we must submit to his way.

Annie E. Sleight.

Matt. vi. 24.

"No man can serve two masters." Literally no man can be the slave of two masters; he cannot be the bond-servant of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the bond-servant of riches. If he belong wholly and entirely to God, how can he be a slave to mammon, to be kept under a tireless lash, that ever goads him on in the pursuit and laying up of wealth?

It is the slavery of purchase that is evidently alluded to. We are bought on the one hand by the precious blood of Christ; on the other, by wealth, resources, and power, in the tempting hand of Satan.

The lesson manifestly does not begin with Matt. vi. 24, but goes back to the temptation of Jesus in the wilderness and is a connected whole from the beginning of the fourth to the end of the seventh chapter. Satan tried to buy Jesus by leading him to exer-

…s power, as the Son …turning of Stones into …"Obey me, command that …stones be made bread. You can …t, you need not wait for God to …fully your hunger." But the test was one of obedience, of service, of worship. God was saying in this temptation, "Whom will you have for your master? Who shall direct and control your life?"

The answer of Jesus shows how clearly he understood the case, that it is not merely by food that we live, but by "every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Obedience to God is the means of life. It secures to us the never-failing promise of daily supplies for all our needs. We must depend upon God for food and not upon ourselves. We can sow, but only God can bring about the harvest. The test of the loyalty of Jesus to his Father, was made by Satan at Jerusalem. "Cast thyself down," he says, "You need not fear to obey my command, though this central perch, or Herod's royal portico impends over the valley of Jehoshephat 500 cubits below.' For 'it is written, he shall give his angels charge concerning thee, and in their hands shall they bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.'"

How adroitly he worsted the temptation by appealing to the Scriptures! "God had promised the protecting care of angels to his Son. If this awful leap was made in safety, his Messiahship would be proven, he would be received as their long-expected, conquering King by the multitudes below." But the answer was, "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God," or "Thou shalt not put him to the proof," "shalt not test or try him" to see whether he will be faithful to his promises or not. To obey Satan would have been to disobey God. He requires faith, that is without doubt, and such faith needs no trial of fidelity. Satan tempts us of today in like manner. A man or woman unites with the church, a storm comes and crops are swept away, "the fruit of the vine is blasted," "the flock is cut off from the fold." Then he or she says, "I have tried to be good, I have given to the Lord's cause, and yet, I cannot be prospered, so what is the use?" Ah! this choice of Masters must be fully and unreservedly made! The crops are the Lord's, the vines are the Lord's, the flocks are the Lord's, and whatever he takes, he takes by right and we who are also the Lord's may be sure that enough will be left from the rain and the hail to supply all our needs.

"The wealth, the resources, the power" of the ethnarchical kingdoms of Palestine were next laid at the feet of Jesus, on condition that he fall down and worship Satan. To have the kingdoms of Palestine is to have the dominion of the world. This is well understood by all nations and all nations have contended, and are still contending for its possession. "Take me for your master, give your vassalage to me, yield obedience in all things to me, and I will give you all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them" was the tempting proffer of the evil one. He was met by the indignant reply, "Get thee hence Satan; for it is written, The Lord thy God shalt thou worship and him only shalt thou serve." Satan left and the angels came. What a lesson for doubting Christians!

"No man can serve two masters, for either he will hate the one and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despiseth the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon." To make one's self a slave in the pursuit of wealth, for the sake of wealth and what it will bring of position and power and praise of men, is in reality to serve Satan; it is to obey him, and live in "the lusts of the flesh," to live to eat, and not eat to live, nor live by "every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God," being guided not in all the affairs of life by that Word. "Therefore," says Jesus, "because you cannot serve two masters—cannot be under the supreme influence of two principles so antagonistic as the love of God and love of the world," "do not be distracted about the wants of the body, what you shall eat, or what you shall drink, or what you shall put on." "Is not the life more than meat and the body than raiment?" Is it the manner of life that Jesus is alluding to here? Does he not mean that it is vastly more important how we live as to thought and action, than are the matters of food and wearing apparel? Or, as the definite article is appended to "life" does he not mean by "the life," that future life, which all his true disciples are striving to attain?

It is right to be industrious, right to exercise prudence and forethought in temporal things, right to sow and gather in the harvest, but there is to be no fretfulness, no murmuring, "no distrust of God's providential care." We see the spring succeed the winter, and the returning birds fed from God's bountiful hand. They come back in faith and are fed; we are better than the birds and dearer to God; will he not feed us? We cannot by being over anxious add a single step to the length of life's journey. If we have chosen God for our Master, he will take care that we are comfortably clothed. He clothes the wild lilies of Palestine in robes of surpassing beauty. The glorious dress of Solomon could not compare with them in their sparkling loveliness. We are to consider them, "to learn thoroughly, to note with accuracy as a learner," the lesson that these lilies teach. They grow without toil. They do not spin, and yet, under God's care, they are sure of their clothes, perishable as they are. Will he not much more clothe us, this dear Master, God? Our heavenly Father knows that we have need of these. Our duty as the bond-slaves of such a kind Master, is to seek first the kingdom of God and its righteousness, secure in the promise that if we do this all things will be added. Make the kingdom and the righteousness thereof "the supreme object of choice and pursuit," strive to hasten the coming of the kingdom. The morrow will have its evils, and will take thought for itself. Its cares and anxieties must not burden the passing hours of today.

In looking for and striving to hasten the coming of the day God, the cares of earth will be but as trivial incidents in life's journey. They will not absorb and consume our time and strength, we will be as care-free and as trustful as the birds, resting upon Jesus, the friend of the weary laden. Come unto him ye weary laden ones, and find rest to your souls. He calls you to repent, and proffers you forgiveness and life. Read the Sermon on the Mount from beginning to end, note its connection with the temptation, and the preaching of Jesus. Study the beatitudes, the principles inculcated, the commands laid down, the model prayer, the use to be made of treasures, the confidence we are to have in God, and that only they who do God's will, will enter the kingdom. If you hear and do the sayings of Jesus your house will not fall in the stormy day of judgment, if you hear his sayings and do them not, terrible will be the ruin! Be wise and make your choice today.

S. Roxana Wince.

These words composed by Sister Wince, have been set to music, and were sung the first time at this meeting:

COMING REIGN OF THE MESSIAH.

O, we dream of a day that is nearing,
A day of sweet promise and trust,
When the captive and long-trodden city
Of Zion shall wake from the dust;
And clothed in her beautiful garments,
Shall shake off her burden of pain,
And the north and the south without money
Shall loose her captives again.

When the hoped for Messiah of ages
Shall bring the bright mansions adown,
And shall take as a gift from his Father,
Of earth's mighty kingdoms the crown;
When the fierce, cruel rulers of nations
To him in submission shall bow,
And the death-dealing steel of the warrior
Be changed for the sickle and plow.

When the saints in their raiment of glory
Shall sit with the Christ on his throne,
And shall make to all nations and kindreds
The blessings of Abraham known;
When the band of the harpers shall praise him
With song that no other can learn,
And the Palm-bearing one's give their service
Wherever his footsteps may turn.

O we dream of a day that is nearing
A day of sweet promise and trust
When earth in her vestments of beauty
Shall be the bright home of the just:
When, forgetting the day of our trouble,
The tears shall be wiped from our face
And the mocking, the scorn and the spoiling,
Have ne'er in our Canaan a place!

Dear brothers and sisters of the Church of God in Christ Jesus:

It is with sincere regret that I cannot meet with you at this Conference. I do not suppose that I have ever met any of you, with the exception of Sister Woodward. I had the pleasure of meeting her several years ago at Coat's Grove.

It seems to me the three most essential traits for a Christian to have is love, trust and obedience. How many of us trust the Lord with all our hearts? If we did we would never worry or fret about anything. For he has promised if we do trust him to direct our paths and that he will not forsake us. What a comfort to know that we have such a Savior to flee to in all of our troubles, one that we know is able and willing to do all that is best for us, one that always remembers that we are poor, weak mortals too, that if we ever gain the kingdom it will be because we trusted in his strength. If we could all have that loving, childlike trust and faith in our heavenly Father that our children have in us. How quickly a little child will run to its mother when it is frightened. It has perfect trust that she will take care of it, and let nothing harm it. Yet how little is our love in comparison to God's for us. There are some wonderful promises in the Bible for those that trust in God. May we all learn to have perfect trust.

Sarah Labbo.

Dear brothers and sisters in Christ:

Our adorable Redeemer has told us what to do that we need not err. In Matt. v. 37, he said, "Let your communication be yea, yea, nay, nay, for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil." He does not wish evil speaking. Also in Col. iv. 6, we read, "Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man." "Well," says one, "how are we to get grace?" "Let the Word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord." Also have salt in yourselves and have peace one with another. So that you may let no corrupt communication procede out of your mouth, but that which is good, that it may be edifying to the hearers. One may ask, Through what does grace come? In John i. 17, "For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ." Oh, may we all have more of this grace that we may be found faithful when Jesus comes. May God bless you all is my prayer.

Cynthia Thompson.

As a contribution to the Sister's Session of the Conference assembled at South Bend, I have selected this most impressive allegory, entitled the "Missing Ones," to be read at that time. My prayer is that being abundantly blessed we may be a blessing to others.

Yours looking for the soon coming Savior.

Mrs. Essie Taylor.

THE MISSING ONES.

One Summer evening, for a part of our family worship, I read the 4th chapter of 1 Thess. Before retiring to rest I seated myself on my easy chair, and mused on the last few verses of the chapter, which were as follows:

"For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

And as I mused, I fell into a deep sleep, and had a most wonderful dream. My mind seemed to be clear and distinct, and my intellectual faculties stronger and brighter than in my wakeful condition.

I thought I had awakened in the morning, and was somewhat surprised to find that my wife was not beside me as usual. Supposing, however, that her absence was but temporary, I waited, expecting her speedy return to our chamber; but after the lapse of what I considered a reasonable time, as she did not make her appearance, I arose and dressed.

My wife's apparel was where she had placed it on retiring, and felt confident she was somewhere about the house. So I went to my daughter Julia's room, thinking she might know the whereabouts of her mother; but after knocking several times without response I entered, and found that she also was missing.

"Strange, passing strange," said I to myself; "where can they both be?"

Then I went to the room of our son Frank, and found him up and already dressed, which was something quite unusual for him at an hour so early. He said he had passed a very restless night, and thought he might better get up. I told him of the absence of his mother and sister from their rooms, and requested him to look around and see if he could find them. In the meantime I hurriedly completed my toilet, and soon Frank returned and said the missing ones were nowhere to be found, and that every door leading outwards was securely locked, as on the preceding evening. We were at our wit's end, and what to make of this strange occurrence we did not know.

On again visiting Julia's room we found on a stand her well-marked open Bible. One prominent verse attracted my attention; it read:

"Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh."

This passage, my wife always declared, referred to the coming of Christ for his saints, the redeemed Church, while I insisted that it meant only the preparation for death. But I am digressing. Frank and I concluded that, without waiting for breakfast, we should each take a different route, and visit some of our most intimate friends in quest of our dear ones.

I first called on my wife's sister, Mrs. ——, who, with her husband, were good, respectable people, members of a church, though worldly-minded. After I had rung the bell several times, and waited somewhat impatiently, she appeared, and apologized for her dilatoriness by saying that she was in a "peck of trouble," and had to prepare breakfast herself, for her colored servant girl, whom she had always considered to be a real good Christian, had played her a mean trick.

"She has gone off somewhere, without even putting the kettle on the range, or saying a word to any of us. But what puzzles us to know is how she got out of the house, for the doors are all locked and the keys inside, just as we left them last evening on our return from Mrs. B's progressive euchre party."

"Indeed," said I, "It is exceeding strange," and then I explained to her the object of my morning visit.

When she heard of the mysterious absence of my wife and Julia she became so very nervous that I was glad to change the subject by saying that, as I had not breakfasted, I would join them in their morning repast. When her husband heard my story he treated it with a good deal of levity, and declared that my wife was only playing me a practical joke, to induce me to rise earlier in the morning. He was sure the missing ones had secreted themselves some where about the house, and when I returned I would find them all right.

As we seated ourselves at the table, Mrs. E. said we would have to take coffee without milk, as her milkman, who had heretofore been very reliable, had failed to make his appearance.

Presently the door-bell rang, and Frank entered in a state of great nervous excitement; saying he had been all over inquiring for his mother, and that in almost every house he found trouble similar to our own. Almost every one was anxiously searching for missing ones. He also stated that the streets were thronged with excited people, hurrying to and fro, many of them weeping bitterly.

Breakfast was scarcely over before inquiries were made at the door as to missing neighbors, and among those who called was Mr. H., who greatly astonished us by stating that his two youngest children, ten and twelve years of age, had gone off with their grandmother, who had been bed-ridden for over six years. At this announcement Mr. E. showed evident signs of alarm, and related a conversation he had held yesterday with a friend, whose ideas he had looked upon as quite heretical.

His friend insisted that a vast majority of church members were but nominal Christians, "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God," and that the love of the masses for religious things had reached a very low ebb.

"My friend also assured me," said Mr. E., "that the Scriptures clearly taught that when the elect number of Christ's Church would be complete, Christ would come as unexpectedly as a thief in the night, and call his saints, both dead and alive, to meet him in the air. The transformation would be effected in the twinkling of an eye; and although the call would be made with a shout and the sound of a trumpet, yet none would hear it but those for whom it was intended. Then would be realized the import of Christ's words: 'In that night there shall be two in one bed; the one shall be taken and the other left. Two shall be grinding at the mill, the one shall be taken and the other left.' I fear that time has now come, and sad to say, we are among the left ones!"

Now as the morning was far advanced it was suggested that we go down to our business places. Frank had already gone to his office, and I, with a heavy heart, wended my way along the avenue among an unusual throng of men and women, whose faces betokened intense sorrow.

In the business parts of the city I observed that many stores were closed, and that those that were open did not appear to be doing any business. Every saloon that I passed was open, as usual, with groups of men outside, apparently engaged in serious discussion. As I passed by the City Hall, there was no perceptible diminution of the usual crowd of political "hangers-on" around the building.

When I reached my own store, I found that my bookkeeper, and the faithful old porter who had served me so many years, had not yet put in an appearance. My two other clerks were on hand, doing nothing; nor did I feel like asking them to do anything. I then went to the Chamber of Commerce, and found the largest gathering of merchants that I had seen there in many months. Instead of the lively, noisy bustle of buying and selling, and clerks and messenger boys running to and fro, there was a solemn gloom pervading the whole assembly. By unanimous consent, and in consequence of the great calamity that had overtaken the community, it was voted that "three days' grace be allowed on all contracts falling due this day."

I will not attempt to set forth any of the reasons and speculations that were advanced as to the cause of our present troubles, but all agreed that the visitation was a supernatural one, and that in some way we who were left on earth were blamable for it.

In the afternoon, by common consent, business of all kinds was suspended, except in the vicinity of the saloons, where a great deal of disorder prevailed. Here and there were groups of people in earnest conversation. At one of them was a man who seemed to be well-versed in Scripture, and as I approached he was saying: "This is the day spoken of by Christ, but none of us believed it, and now we are beginning to realize how foolish we were."

In the evening nearly every church in the city was open, with overflowing congregations. Everybody was anxious to know the cause and meaning of the "great visitation," and to learn how lost hopes might be regained. Many of the pastors had gone with the missing ones, but some were present in their churches. All order of service was dispensed with, and noisy confusion prevailed. Criminations and recrimination were bandied to and fro between pastors and the people, the latter asserting that if the pastors had done their duty, and taught their flocks the plain truths of the Bible, instead of lulling them to sleep with philosophical and moral essays, they would not now be in their present sad condition. In my own church the pastor was present, with scores of persons whom I had but rarely seen at meetings.

Most of the active workers and constant worshippers were absent. Audible groans and deep drawn sighs were occasionally heard from various parts of the room. Some were bemoaning the loss of children, others of husbands, of wives, of fathers and mothers.

The pastor was speaking when I entered the room, and was entreating the audience to endeavor to allay their feelings. He said:

"None of you realize the keen disappointment I experience at this result of my labors. I am accused of having preached too much about the affairs of this life, and too little about the heavenly state, and the things to come; and of having kept you in ignorance of the imminency of the awful visitation which has manifested itself among us this day. In reply to these accusations I can only say that I have taught you the same theology that was taught to me in college, viz: to treat the Bible as a book largely of spiritual symbols and allegories.

"But I now confess that I was sadly mistaken, for after what has occurred, I cannot help believing that God's Word means just what it says. I am glad, however, now to be able to say for your comfort that, since this morning, I have made a prayerful examination of the Scriptures as to our present condition, and find that we are yet in the place of hope."

Here a chorus of voices ejaculated, "Thank God for that!"

The pastor proceeded: "Although we have lost the glorious privilege of the raptured saints, salvation is yet ours, if we humbly and truly accept it. We may pass through greater trials and tribulations than the world has ever yet experienced, yet we reach the kingdom, but he that endureth to the end shall be saved."

Here the electric light suddenly went out, and there arose such fearful screams that I sprang to my feet in terror—and—awoke!

My wife, who was in an adjoining room, hearing my sudden uprising, hastened in to see what was the matter. Oh, how glad I was to see her, and to realize that my terrible experience in my easy chair was only a dream! But the more I thought of it afterwards, the more solemn seemed the Scripture truths which it contained, and the more was I impressed with the importance of having our lamps trimmed and burning, ready to go out and meet the Bridegroom.

Report of Labor.

The special meeting called for East Port—by last Annual Conference—is a thing of the past, and we believe we can honestly report a profitable gathering. This meeting was called for the benefit of isolated brethren; and we were very sorry so few desired to come, for only Bro. and Sister Blakely of Marlboro, and Sister Frank Richardson of Jamestown, and B. W. and M. A. Woodward of Dutton, were present from abroad. Bro. and Sister Chamberlain had worked very hard to prepare for this meeting, and had arranged to entertain at least 20 persons. They were greatly disappointed, but I think all were agreed that the work was beneficial, inasmuch as it strengthened those who have so nobly fought the battle single-handed so long, and aroused an interest in several to investigate the Word of God more closely, to see "whether these things be so." The interest and attendance increased with each meeting. The gospel has never before been preached in East Port, except the few sermons we gave there last fall, and many are very much prejudiced yet, but are becoming more reconciled to the ideas presented, and Bro. Chamberlain's family including his son-in-law, Bro. Fred Stebens and wife are greatly rejoiced to see some beginning to investigate the Scripture. There should be more meetings held at this point, as the new fields bring forth richer harvests. It seems to us the old churches should be able to a'most live without the preacher when so many are starving for one crumb of gospel. Think of it brethren, there are communities not two miles from any of our churches where the gospel is so new to them that they do not know what you mean when you talk of Jesus coming to this earth to establish his kingdom. Let the laborers go where they can do the most good, brethren, and send them not reluctantly, but with a hearty God bless you and your prayers—added to all this the Lord's mite to get tracts, singing books, send PERIODICALS to the beginners, etc. O how much need for more consecrated workers. Pray God to send more laborers into his vineyard. Some day it will be too late for us to do what the world needs to have done, and some one will be to blame if souls are lost. Will it be you or me?

M. A. Woodward.

There is one thing that enemies of Christ cannot do. They can reject, scoff, rail, and blaspheme, but they cannot let him alone. The press is burdened with attacks upon him. Unbelievers who cannot agree on anything else, do agree in this to continue their warfare upon him. Why do they not let him alone? They can not. He is forcing himself into the thoughts and discussions of men everywhere, and it is impossible to silently ignore him and his claims. "What shall I do then with Jesus?" said Pilate. Do with him? Why not "let him go" and pay no more attention to him? Because they cannot. He stands before every soul in silent majesty, claiming the homage and obedience of the heart. He stirs the world today as never before, and around his person the battle rages continually. He is in the world's thought, in its literature and philosophy, in its science and art, the one living, vital power. To banish him is out of the question. He is in the midst of friends and foes, and there he will remain.

A ship on the broad, boisterous and open ocean needeth no pilot, but it dare not venture alone on the placid bosom of a little river, lest it be wrecked by some hidden rock. Thus it is with life. 'Tis not in our open, exposed deeds that we so much need the still voice of the silent monitor, as in the small, secret, every day acts of our life.

Announcement.

The Quarterly Conference of the churches of God in Michigan will be held with the Church of God at Brady, Kalamazoo Co., on Friday evening, Sept. 29th, 30th and Oct. 1, 1905.

Bro. and Sister Harper and others of Brady—desire to have as many as possible come and attend the Conference. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and if there are any from other States who could attend. The brethren would be glad to welcome them. Friends coming from the north, reach Vicksburg via the G. R. and I. R. R. which leaves Grand Rapids at 12:00 noon and 1:50 P. M. all trains will be met Friday at Vicksburg. Those coming from Hastings will take the G. R. and I. at Kalamazoo. Bro. A. B. Zilmer of Plymouth, Indiana, has promised to be with us, also Elder B. W. and M. A. Woodward of Dutton, Michigan.

Though few in number at this place, we hope and feel assured that we will have the hearty co-operation of all interested and look forward to an interesting and profitable meeting. Let none remain away through fear of being a burden to those that entertain the conference, as arrangements will be made to accommodate all that come. Come and enjoy the spiritual blessings, and return to your home strengthened and built up.

L. D. Becker, Pres.
Emma Jackman, Sec'y

P. S. Those wishing to attend this Conference should leave Grand Rapids at 7:10 A. M. or 1:50 P. M. The noon train only goes to Kalamazoo. All should come on the 7:00 A. M. to accommodate those who come for them as it is six miles out to place of meeting. M. A. W.

The Third Annual Conference of Southern Illinois will be held at the Church of God at Moriah, Clark Co., Illinois, October 7-15.

No definite programme has yet been arranged. It will probably be decided upon from day to day.

Bro. A. H. Zilmer and Bro. S. T. Hook have been engaged to be with us. Other speakers will be procured. Let everybody come who can. You will be welcomed and entertained freely. You will be met either at Casey or Hazel Dell by writing Lewis Weaver or Z. E. Brant the date of your arrival.

Leave all cares at home and come praying expecting a good spiritual meeting and a good time socially.

Mrs. Chas. W. Weaver, Sec.

The Conference at Rollin, Kansas, will be held on October 18, and last over Sunday. Accommodations will be furnished all who come. Those so desiring may bring some bedding, and some of the buildings can be used for lodging. A number of speakers will be present. Come and make the plan of a fraternal unity in Christ a success. Now, if ever, seems to be the time to do something for the colony. So come. Show your love for Christ and his body by a heroic, sacrificing effort of love, to live together in harmony and helpfulness.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles mail stuff can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and save trouble.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCTOBER 4, 1905. NUMBER 37.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

It Doth Not Yet Appear What We Shall Be?

The gems of earth are still within
Her silent unwrought mines;
There hide they, all unknown, unseen;
No sparkle upward shines.

The stars of heaven, how few and wan
Are all we see below,
Compared with what to the unaided eye
Beyond all vision now.

Who knows the untold brilliance there,
The wealth, the beauty hid
Like sparkle on a lustrous eye
Beneath the eyelid lid.

So with the heaven or better state
Of which these are but signs;
So with the stores of wisdom hid
In everlasting mines.

For what we shall in that day be
It doth not yet appear;
But when we see him as he is
We shall his likeness wear.

A Sketch of the Life of Jesus.

For a few minutes I am going to talk to you about Jesus and try to give you a short sketch of his life, character and mission. It will necessarily be very incomplete, as the time allotted will not permit of a lengthy history, or the details and incidents which go to make up the fulness of this most wonderful character, a character which history and all ages have failed to reproduce.

And so I will start by telling you who Jesus was. You remember (in fact you have just been hearing about it) that way back in the Garden of Eden a promise was made to the woman Eve, after that she had sinned and the sentence of death was about to be passed upon her, and was to the effect that she should have a seed who would bruise the serpent's head. This promised was renewed to Abraham, and to David. In 2 Sam. v. 12, 13 and 14 we read of God making a covenant with David through his prophet Nathan. These verses are as follows:—

"And when thy days be fulfilled and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels and I will establish his kingdom."

"He shall build a house for my name and I will establish the throne of his kingdom for-ever."

"I will be his Father and he shall be my Son, if he commit iniquity I will chasten him with the rod of men and with the stripes of the children of men."

By this we see that God was to establish this seed of David and that He, God, was to be his Father. I will not give you fuller testimony on this line, except to connect with this what we find in Matthew iii. 16, 17, "And Jesus when he was baptized went up straightway out of the water, and lo, the heavens were opened unto him and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove and lighting upon him. And lo a voice from heaven saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."

And also what we find in Luke i. 30-33: "And the angel said unto her, Fear not Mary; for thou hast found favor with God. And behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." And so we see that Jesus was the Son of God, the long promised seed, the Savior of mankind, the future ruler of the world.

With his birth and early life you are all familiar. The unfavorable conditions and circumstances which surrounded his birth seem to have no bad effects upon his after life, in fact perhaps here was the first lesson in humbleness, a lesson with which he was so familiar and was so able to teach us.

The effect upon the Jews was different; they could not or would not accept as king one whose beginning was so humble. They looked for a King, or Savior who would come in splendor and pomp and power. They ridicule the very idea of this lowly born man being their Messiah.

Of his life from his birth till he reached the age of twelve years we know next to nothing. As Joseph, the husband of Jesus' mother was a carpenter, it is probable that Jesus knew somewhat of this trade, and when old enough often stayed with Joseph while he was at work.

When he was twelve years old we read that he journeyed to Jerusalem with Mary and Joseph to the feast of the passover. After his parents had gone a day's journey on their homeward way, they missed Jesus, and upon returning to Jerusalem found him in the Temple, speaking to the doctors and asking questions in a way that quite astonished his hearers. From this time on we learn nothing in regard to him until his baptism in the Jordan by John the Baptist, at about the age of thirty years. At this time he received the Holy Spirit, (as we learn in the verse already quoted) and began his public ministry. This ministry lasted about three years and a half, and was brought to an end by his crucifixion and death.

It did not take long for his fame to spread, in fact he choose a way to announce his mission which could not fail to attract attention. He went right to the center of opposition by teaching, in the synagogues. Then too, he healed the sick, performed miracles, and preached and taught wherever he went, proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom until, as we read, great crowds followed him from Galilee, Decapolis, Jerusalem, Judea and beyond the Jordan. His first great sermon was that beautiful one delivered on the mount to this great multitude. As we read over this sermon today, beautiful in its teachings, strong and powerful, truly the work of a master mind, how it raises us above the thoughts, the impulses, and the influences of men, and surrounds us by the force of this one man. Little wonder they were astonished at his doctrine.

The first miracle which he performed (that of turning water into wine) took place at Cana of Galilee at a marriage feast which he and his disciples attended, and was, perhaps more for the strengthening of the disciples' faith than for any other purpose.

From here he journeyed to Jerusalem to attend the passover of the Jews. Of the events which transpired there and during the year which followed till the next passover, I cannot now speak, though they were full of interest and much is to be learned from a study of his visit to the temple from Nicodemus, his meeting with the woman at the well, his visit to Galilee, the miracles he performed at Cana and Capernaum and his journey throughout Galilee, with his disciples.

Again we find him at Jerusalem at the time of the passover. At the pool of Bethesda he cures a man of disease which stirred up the Jews against him, as it was the Sabbath; and they persecuted him and sought to slay him. In John v. 17 to 47th verse he answers them in a most wonderful sermon, which no doubt was lost upon most of his hearers. It showed what a unity existed between he and his Father and outlined much of his mission. I will read a few of these verses 17, 18, 27, 28 and 29.

Verse 17, "But Jesus answered them, My Father worketh hitherto, and I work."

Verse 18, "Therefore the Jews sought the more to kill him, because he not only had broken the Sabbath, but said also that God was his Father, making himself equal with God."

Verse 26, "For as the Father hath life in himself; so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself."

Verse 27, "And hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of Man."

Verse 28, "Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice."

Verse 29, "And shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation."

In the second year of his ministry more events seemed to have been crowded than in the first. He traveled throughout Galilee preaching, healing the sick, feeding the hungry and doing all manner of good work, getting into trouble with the Jews and getting out again by the aid of his Father."

His journeyings during the third year of his ministry were many and his travels extended. His trouble with the Jews kept on increasing as his fame and popularity spread. At times he was molested and ill-treated, and threats and conspiracies were made against his life, so that he was in the greatest of danger, but as these increased he seemed to redouble his efforts; he knew what the work laid out for him was, he knew that the time was short in which to accomplish such a task: he knew that the mob would not be held off much longer; and so he worked, and while he worked prepared himself and his disciples for the events which were to bring about his death, that all might be fulfilled that had been spoken concerning him.

Let us pass over the stirring events which took place just prior to his last journey toward Jerusalem and take up the narrative where we find him on the way to the Holy City. The rulers expecting his arrival are laying in wait for him. Six days before the passover he arrived at Bethany and the first day of the week journeyed to Jerusalem, returning again at night. This he also does on the second and third days. On the fourth day the chief priest conspired to secretly put him, and finally made a contract with Judas to betray him into their hands. Jesus remains in Bethany on this day and on the morrow sends two disciples to make ready the feast of the passover. And when the hour was come he followed with his disciples that they might partake together of this last supper. Just imagine the scene. Jesus and his co-workers assembled for the last time, think of his feelings, about to be separated from those loved ones, about to be captured like a thief, about to be put to shame, to be tortured, to be mocked, finally put to death by those who were his enemies. To be betrayed, denied and forsaken by those that were his friends, "And he said unto them, with desire have I desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer. For I say unto you, I will not any more eat thereof, until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God." Truly a memorial supper.

And they sung an hymn and went out upon the Mount of Olives. And Jesus prayed, "Father if thou be willing remove this cup from me, nevertheless not my will but thine be done." After this came the multitude and those that sought his life, and they took him and bound him and carried him to the high priest's house.

"And as soon as it was day, the elders of the people, and the chief priest, and the scribes came together, and led him into their council. Saying, Art thou the Christ? tell us, and he said unto them, If I tell you, ye will not believe: And if I ask you, ye will not answer me, nor let me go. Hereafter shall the Son of Man sit on the right hand of the power of God. Then said they all, Art thou then the Son of God, and he said unto them, Ye say that I am. And they said, What need we any further witness? for we ourselves have heard of his own mouth." Luke xxii. 66-71.

"And they led him to Pilate at the judgment hall that he might pass judgment upon him. But Pilate could find no evil in him, likewise Herod could find no fault in him, but when the mob continued to cry, 'Crucify him!' Pilate delivered him to them. And they crucified him, and parted his garments, casting lots; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet. They parted my garments among them, and upon my vesture did they cast lots." Matthew xxvii. 35.

Then went Joseph of Arimathea and begged the body and took it and buried it in his own tomb. But what had been the promise, that he should die, and his career end there? No, he was to rise again and triumph over death.

And so we read in Luke xxiv. 1-8. "Now upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came unto the sepulchre, bringing the spices which they had prepared, and certain others with them. And they found the stone rolled away from the sepulchre. And they entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus. And it came to pass, as they were much perplexed thereabout, behold, two men stood by them in shining garments: And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, they said unto them, Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen; remember how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee, Saying, The Son of Man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again. And they remembered his words."

As two of his disciples walked to Emmaus talking of the wonderful event, the risen Master appeared unto them, but they know him not until he sat at meat with them, and their eyes were opened. But he disappeared immediately, and the two filled with joy hastened to the eleven and told them that Jesus the Christ was risen indeed. Then Jesus appeared unto them all and showing the prints of the nails in his hands convinced them that he was indeed their risen Savior. "And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book: But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that, believing, ye might have life through his name." John xx. 30, 31.

From this on he appeared unto them at various times until we read in Acts of his last meeting with them, when he was telling them that it was not for them to know the time of the restoration of the kingdom of Israel. "And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked stead fastly toward heaven, as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Act i. 9, 10, 11.

But just a word to close; what a hope was this to leave with them, a hope of seeing him AGAIN, and this brothers and sisters is our hope. We hope to see him as he is. We are looking for his return, we are waiting for the establishment of that kingdom promised so long ago. Then will be fulfilled all that was spoken; then shall we see him as he is, and be made like him, these vile bodies of our humiliation fashioned like unto his own glorious body. It is a hope of immortality, of peace and joy, a hope above a price. What is that message that he whispers back to us? "Behold I come quickly and my reward is with me to give to every man according as his works shall be." Let us say with one voice, "Come Lord Jesus and come quickly."

BUELL W. NUTT.

[This should have appeared with the other papers read by the young people at the Cleveland, O., Conference, but was delayed, so is given now.—ED.]

What plant would thrive if the sun shone forever? and what should we be if the sun of prosperity always shone upon our pathway? Along life's dusty thoroughfare I see the world, but not as I saw it once; sickness and sorrow have given me another pair of eyes.

"We shall be still when God reveals to us things which we cannot utter."

Hieremias (or "Iremiah").

CHAPTER 4.

1. If Israel returneth unto me he will return (unto his own land meant): and if he taketh away his abominations out of his mouth and becometh truly reverent before my face;

2. And shall swear as the Lord liveth with truth in a judicial way and with righteousness, nations will also bespeak blessings in him, and in him will they praise God in Hierousaleem;

3. Because thus saith the Lord unto the leading men of Jouda and the dwellers of Hierousaleem, Renew for yourselves your fallow-lands, and do sow over acanthai;

4. Circumcise yourselves for your God and circumcise your hard heartedness, ye leading men of Jouda and ye dwellers of Hierousaleem lest my anger go out like fire and it shall have flamed out, and there be no one to quench it before the face of the wickedness of your devices.

5. Publish it in Jouda and let it be heard in Hierousaleem; say ye, Blow a signal to the land with a trumpet; raise a great cry; say, Be ye gathered together and let us go into the walled cities;

6. Let us take up and flee into Sion; make haste, do not stand, because calamities am I leading from the north and a great crushing blow;

7. A lion hath gone up from his lair, destroying hath he taken away nations, and he hath gone out of his place to put the land in desolation, and the cities will have been torn down so that they are not inhabited.

8. On account of these things gird on sackcloth and beat your breasts and ololu because the anger of the Lord hath not been turned away from you.

9. And it will be in that day, saith the Lord, that the heart of the king will be lost and the heart of the rulers, and the priests will be astounded and the prophets will wonder.

10. And I (Hieremias) said, O Lord, thou sole Lord, thou hast deceived this laity, surely, in saying, There will be peace, and lo, the sword hath touched even their soul, hast thou not? (The prophecy resumed.)

11. In that period they will say to this laity and to Hierousaleem, a spirit of deception is in the wickedness, a way for the daughter of my laity is not unto cleansing nor unto sanctification.

12. A spirit of full payment will come unto me; and now I am talking my judicial-verdicts unto them.

13. Lo, as a cloud will he come up and like a cyclone his chariots; lighter than eagles his horses; (The prophet exclaims) Woe unto us because we are wretched! (The Lord resumes his prophecy).

14. Wash thy heart from evil-doing, O Hierousaleem, that thou mayest be saved; until when are there going to be reasonings in thee for painful results for thee?

15. For a voice of one with intelligence from Dan will come, and pain will have been heard from Mount Ephraim.

16. May ye have remembered it ye nations; Lo, they are coming; may ye have announced it in Hierousaleem; whirlwinds are coming from out a land afar off, and they have given their voice against the cities of Jouda.

17. Like those who are watching to guard a field have they become against it round about, because thou hast not cared for me, saith the Lord.

18. Thy ways and thy devices have done these things to thee; this is thy evil-doing because it is bitter, because it hath touched ever thy heart. (The prophet personifies and speaks for the land of Jouda).

19. My belly, my belly pains me, and my soul quivers with the perceptive feelings of my heart; my heart is wrung; I will not keep silence, because my soul hath heard a sound of a trumpet, a clamor of war;

20. And it calleth for a crushing blow of wretchedness, because all the land hath become wretched; suddenly hath the tabernacle become wretched; my tent-skins have been rent asunder. (The prophet speaks now for himself but in vision).

21. How long shall I see them fleeing while I hear a sound of trumpets?

22. Because the leaders of my laity have not known me; heedless sons are they and without understanding; wise are they to do evil, but to do good they do not know well how.

23. I looked upon the land and lo, it was naught; to the canopy and there were no lights there.

24. I saw the mountains and they were trembling, and all the hills shaking;

25. I looked, and lo, there was no man, and all the flying things of the heavens were awe-struck;

26. I saw, and lo, the Carmel range was desolate, and the cities burned with fire from the face of the Lord, and from the face of the wrath of his anger had they vanished away. (The vision ends and the prophecy is resumed.)

27. Thus saith the Lord, All the land will be desolate; but I shall not make a full consummation.

28. On account of these things let the land sorrow and the canopy be darkened from above; I have said, and I shall not change my mind, I have started and I shall not turn back from it.

29. (The vision resumed). From the voice of horseman and stretched bow all the land hath withdrawn; they have entered into the caves and in the groves have they hid themselves, and upon the rocks have they gone up; every city hath come forsaken; no man dwelleth in them. (Prophecy resumed.)

30. And thou, what wilt thou do if thou clothe thyself with scarlet, and adorn thyself with a golden cosmos, if thou paint thine eyes with pigment? In vain is thy beautiful adornment; thy lovers have thrust thee away; they seek thy soul.

31. Because I have heard a sound of thy sighing, a voice as it were of one suffering birth-pangs, as it were of one bringing forth a first-born; the voice of the daughter of Sioon will have become faint and she will relax her hands. Woe is mine, because my soul faileth for those who have been taken away.

COMMENT.

In the 1st and 2nd verses the condition of Israel's return to their own land and the consequent blessings not only to themselves, but to the nations, is that they return to the Lord first? This is befogged and not at all clear in the C. V. or R. V. From the 2nd to the 11th the rendering is better but not very clear: but the 11th is utterly wide of the mark and approximate toward a translation. Read and compare. For it partly answers the prophet's interruption and inquiry. To the 16th the rendering is better, but the exhortation of the 16th is to the nations. They are told to remember this prophecy and publish it in Hierousaleem. Are we doing it or have we done it? To the 19th the thought is fairly brought out. The personification of the land and the laity from the 19th to the 28rd not made clear in the C. V. or R. V. and the transition with the 23rd to a state of vision in which to the 27th verse the prophet simply tells what he sees. Then with the 27th as far as the 29th the resumption of the prophecy, and then the vision again to the close of the chapter—all this not made clear as it should be to the casual reader.

Kind words have done more to elevate men than science or art, and to preserve them from sin, than prisons or gibbets. They are the language of heaven's own children, who, having received mercy, have learned to be merciful.

Bethune: When the mind, like a pure, calm lake, reflects back the light which is shed from heaven, the image of God is upon it commensurate with its capacity, for the tiniest drop of dew images forth the true, though not the full radiance of the sun.

At the Cleveland, O., Conference during the time that the friends were gathered at the meeting, some pictures were taken. One is of the whole company arranged together, one is of a number of the men who were present, another is of a group of the young people. Some have asked for copies, and we are glad to say that they can be had by sending 20 cents for each picture that you want, and 5 cents extra for the postage and packing, to Buell W. Nutt, 36 Jessie St., Cleveland, O.

The patrons of this paper who have paid their subscriptions for the year 1905 are not affected by this article. It is to those who have not paid that we wish to speak. To send you all separate statements of your account will require a vast deal of time and labor, and expense of postage. At present, even if we could have the time and means to do so, a crippled right hand which prevents any work with it being done, will make it doubly hard to do this. Now it is certain that the person who has paid for this year knows of the fact, and it is reasonably certain that if you have not paid for this year that you are aware of the fact. It looks to us as if all the expense of making and sending statements can be saved for us if you who do know about your arrears could send the remittance without. It is plain as to the amount necessary to send—$1.50, and if you will kindly make note of this and attend to it at once you will very much oblige this office. Please do this, brothers and sisters, and we thank you in advance for the favors.

It is difficult to determine whether the world is any quieter since the end of the Russian and Japanese war than before. While it was going on, and no one knew the limit, the other nations were slow to enter into any ways that led to trouble. Now the English and Japanese have made a compact which virtually unites them in keeping the far east to their ways, and declaring that any one daring to interfere will be classed as an enemy. Further that who ever fights one of these nations must fight both. This does not please Russia nor Germany, and they are about uniting, but wish to draw France in with them. This does not suit England, as this combination would be a menace to her interests, so she is endeavoring to make an understanding with Russia, and thus check the German Emperor's ambitions. It is reported that to accomplish this end England will consent to a change in her attitude regarding Russia's relations with Turkey concerning the Dardanelles and Bosphorus. Then there is serious trouble in Austria and Hungary, and the success of the Norwegians in separating from Sweden, has emboldened the Hungarians to think they can do the same. The United States is having trouble to get some of the South American countries to realize that they must treat the European countries right. Then a German ship company that is controlled by that government has purchased an island in the Dutch West Indies, and this country sees possibilities of this being a scheme on the part of Germany to get a footing near the Panama Canal. So taking it all in all there is still some unrest in the world.

Funeral of Sister Greenbrier.

September 12, 1905.

Brethren, Sisters and Friends, the shadow of death has again fallen across our path, and we have come to weep with those who weep, and to perform the last sad offices for one dearly beloved for her devotional spirit, enquiring mind, kindness of heart, gentleness of disposition, and patience in tribulation—traits worthy of our emulation. It was my privilege to assist her to take upon her the sin-covering name of Jesus by baptism about thirty-five years ago. And I am persuaded that her confidence in the glorious gospel of the grace of God was never firmer than during the last year of her life, and the blessed hope of seeing Jesus, and being made like him was never more precious. For many years she was at a great disadvantage in the want of sight, and had to depend entirely upon others for knowledge of God's eternal purpose in creation and redemption; but of late she acquired the ability to read with her hands, and could draw water directly from the wells of salvation. It was delightful to hear her speak of the precious gems she had found. During the State Conference recently held at the Church of the Blessed Hope she lodged in the house with us, to enable her to attend all the meeting., which she enjoyed greatly. She would hardly be in company with any sisters or brothers for a few minutes without enquiring about some passage of Scripture she could not clearly comprehend or had been a great comfort to her,—and while in conversation with a sister who had lost the use of her hand, respecting the glory to be revealed in us if we proved faithful to the end, she glowingly said, "You will get your hand and I shall get my sight."

But the dear Sister now lies silent in death. She has passed beyond our influence, our control or sympathy. She has gone the way of all flesh. This affliction came upon us so suddenly that we could hardly realize that we could have no more intercourse with her till mortality is swallowed up of life—alas, it is true, and I want to draw a lesson for the living out of the Book of God. On solemn occasions like this, the mind naturally reverts to subjects bearing on our eternal we fare. And if she, who now lies silent in death could have had the privilege of arranging this service I know right well what she would have asked me to. She would have asked me to tell you of the faith and hope that rejoiced her heart, and sustained her in her affliction. She believed that the Book of God is the only source of information in regard to our nature and our destiny, that Gen. ii. 7 makes, —yea; absolutely makes the first reference ever made by God to man. It says, "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground." There was no man before that. His history begins there. But, formed perfectly as he was—brain to think, eyes to see, ears to hear, hands to handle, feet to walk, tongue to speak, etc., none of these organs performed any functions until they were set in motion by the breath of lives. He was organized capable of faith in God, and love to God, and obedience to God. This is what the Creator required of him, and his life depended upon it. He utterly failed to stand this test, and was sentenced to death—and sure enough he died. As like begets like all who have his nature die too. 4000 years later the same law was in force, for Paul in Rom. vi. 23 says "the wages of sin is death"—not eternal life in misery. Again the same apostle says, by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin,—and so death passed upon all men." Nothing can prevent the execution of that law—all must die, and when dead they are alive nowhere, alive in no sense whatever, because God tells us Eccl. ix. 5, "the dead know not anything." And Psa. cxlvi. 4 says man's breath goeth forth, he returns to his earth, and that very day his thoughts perish. But although all must die,—it is not necessary for you or me to remain dead. The good God has provided a Savior—a Redeemer; he offers to redeem certain ones from death,—and if you want to know who he offers to redeem from death you can know from his own words in John vi. 40. He says, "And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life, and I will raise him up the last day." And in John v. 28, 29 he says they shall hear his voice and come forth out of the grave to life." And at the grave of Lazarus he made the grandest announcement ever made to mortals:—"I am the Resurrection and the Life." We are told that Jesus is the first one born from the dead, the firstfruits of them that sleep—those who believe are to be the full harvest,—and I want to add that no life after death would have been possible if Christ had not risen. Paul in 1 Cor. xv. says those who had fallen asleep in the faith of Christ would have perished if Christ had not been raised, and also says elsewhere, that he was raised again for our justification. His death, was of no avail without his resurrection, just as sure as Paul spake for God. But this brings me to another item of the dear Sister's faith:—

When raised from the dead gloriously immortal like Jesus,—they will need a glorious place to live in forever. Where will it be? Can we know? We can, if the Scriptures tell us where. And if they do not tell us we cannot know. Guessing is of no account whatever, neither is speculation, or reason. What do the Scriptures say? Hear Jesus, Matt. v. 5. "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth;" not heaven above the skies. Listen to the Spirit in Daniel vii. 1, "the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heavens shall be given to the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom and all dominions shall serve and obey him." To make sure how long the saints shall possess this kingdom, the 18th verse says the saints take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever and ever, even for ever. Is that long enough? Could they be for ever, even for ever in two different places? This is the kingdom Jesus preached the coming of—this is the kingdom he taught us to pray for, in what is called the Lord's Prayer. And besides that, this is the kingdom Jesus says in John iii. 5, no one can enter unless he be born of water and of the Spirit—and finally this is the kingdom referred to in Matt. xxv. 31, where he says: "When the Son of Man shall come (come here to earth) in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of glory—right here on earth; and will say to the saints whom Daniel says shall take the kingdom—yes, he says he will say to them then, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world; that is, it was all prepared for them in his eternal purpose and not bestowed until he comes again. And remember Jesus said it was the gospel or good news of this kingdom that was to be preached in all the world, and he that believes it, and is baptized shall be saved—to be saved is to be raised from the dead and live gloriously in that kingdom for ever.

This is the gospel the dear deceased one believed and lived for; and which she was anxious—O, so anxious for you to share. If there be any within the sound of my voice who would like to secure this, the only salvation offered in all the Book of God, and be sure to meet her in that goodly land —for it will be full of God's glory—Paradise will be restored and the curse removed, the following are the conditions: believe this gospel of the kingdom and of life from the dead to inherit it; repent of your sins, i. e., turn away from sin, be baptized into Christ for the remission of all past sin, and then live godly till Jesus comes, and all will be well. Brothers and sisters, the abounding iniquity of these times is one of the signs that the coming of the Lord draweth high. Heed the Lord's injunction, "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh."

Our dear Sister sleeps, but she sleeps in Jesus; and will soon awaken. Time will not be wearisome to her. O no; the sun does not rise and set for her, nor does the clock tick for her. Paul in 1 Thes. iv. 13 contains something suited to her case. It says, "I would not have you ignorant, brethren concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not even as others which have no hope; for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him (Jesus)." We do not have to coin phrases concerning the conditions of those who have in life laid hold of the hope set before them in the gospel. They sleep as Jesus did; it says so, and will rise as he did. The coming of him on whom she fixed her hope is not far away. When the day comes the tabernacle of God will be with men, and he will wipe away all tears from off all faces, and there shall be no more pain, no more sorrow, no more parting, no more death, for the former things shall have passed away. Brothers and sisters, let us continue the apocalyptic welcome, "Come Lord Jesus, quickly come."

Dear Sister, sleep on a little while. We are not afraid to trust you in the embrace of death for you in sured your life with him who has the keys of the grave and of death. Amen.

To the beloved in the Lord:

There is joy in the Church of God in Salem, O. This happiness came suddenly upon us yesterday afternoon, Sept. 20, when Miss Ora M. Cole came from Pittsburg and asked if she could be baptized now, as her time was limited. She has been an intelligent student of the Bible for some time, and now realizing that the gospel of Christ is the power of God to salvation to every one that believes. Being assured in her own mind that she fully believed the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, and that she must work out her own salvation, and that the time to begin is today, she resolved to obey from the heart the form of doctrine which was delivered from God through Moses and the prophets and apostles with Jesus Christ himself as the great Teacher. We made ready at once, and after a series of questions by the writer, to which were given answers that proved that the candidate for baptism into Jesus Christ understood that she must be born of water and the Spirit in order to enter the kingdom of God, all being ready she was planted in the likeness of his death. After a welcome by a few of the church present, and prayers of thanksgiving and supplication for the new born babe in Christ, she went on her way rejoicing, leaving us in the same happy condition. Our new sister is Ora M. Cole, daughter of our late lamented sister Mrs. M. Cole. She with her sister was present at the Conference at Cleveland. The many who met her there will rejoice with us and join in our prayers for her.

To the household of faith:

I have much pleasure and satisfaction in calling your attention to the action of the committee of the Ohio State Conference in appointing our Sister Nancy Barber an Evangelist, see Restitution of Sept. 13 and 27. Her general usefulness in the Church of God has long been known and recognized. About a year and a half ago she went to Oklahoma and found there that the laborers were few, being familiar with the glad tidings of the kingdom her heart was stirred. By persistent effort she overcame the diffidence that restrains some from speaking. She also had throat trouble to struggle with. The Lord blessed her efforts and the means used. She preached the simple truth in various places, going sometimes many miles to do it. Her home and State, Salem, Ohio, having claims upon her, and having a desire to visit her home she attended the Ohio State Conference at Cleveland in September. In her grand sermon there, presenting the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, in an earnest and forceful manner, convinced all present, that she knew and valued God's great offer of salvation through Christ Jesus, and that she had a burning desire to inform others. Her appointment as Evangelist was a deserved recognition of her value to the cause and the Church. She has the prayers of all who know her and love the truth.

Condition in Caucasia.

There has been desperate fighting at Balakhan, where the principal trouble of this vicinity is centering. Hundreds have been shot by the infantry and artillery, and one thousand have been killed or wounded during a desperate attack on the military camp and provision depots.

A large number of workmen barricaded themselves in the Balakhan hospital. The soldiers began the attack with rifle fire and then stormed the hospital and completed their work with the bayonet.

All the naptha works at Baku have been destroyed and all the factories and other works there are closed. The military authorities are hastening measures to cope with the desperate situation at Baku. Artillery has been dispatched from here by special trains.

The Tartar movement in northern Caucasia is said to be directed principally against the government.

The Baku representative of a prominent oil company has telegraphed to his St. Petersburg headquarters as follows:

"It is no longer a question of saving our property, but one of getting out alive."

A press dispatch from Baku, approved by the censor, says: "The rival factions are concentrating in their own quarters here. The situation is exceeding tense. Murders are frequent. Cannonading is heard from time to time. In the moslem quarter the patrols have been fired upon. Balakhan is on fire, and the Armenians are surrounded by armed villagers, apparently Tartars,' and the cannonading there is unceasing."

Other advices state that a hot fight is going on between Armenians and Tartars at Bibiabat and that great fires are still raging at Sabunto and Nomani, fed by immense tanks of naphtha, of which there are sixteen hundred in that region.

The threat of the Sultan to proclaim a "holy war" has long held the "Christian Powers" in fear. They know that millions on millions of the Moslem herds of Asia and Africa are ready at such a call to swamp Europe with a resistless flood. The troubles in Armenia may be the premonitory symptoms of the impending deluge. The first five stages of this terrible power are clearly in the past. The command may come at any time: "Loose the four angels that are bound in the great river Euphrates," when the "sixth vial will be poured out upon the great river Euphrates.....and the way of the kings of the East be purchased." Rev. xvi. 12. And when the little horn of Dan. viii. will magnify himself the Prince of the host." Dan. viii. 8-12, margin.

As ever yours in the hope.

Obituary.

Sunday, Sept 24th, the writer was called upon to conduct the funeral services for Brother William H. Renner of Waterloo, Iowa. Brother Renner was born in Illinois, May 30, 1835, and after a short illness died of cancer of the stomach, at his home in Waterloo, Sept. 22, 1905, aged 70 years, 3 months and 23 days. Besides a host of grieving friends and brethren, the deceased leaves a wife, Sister Sarah Renner, three daughters, Mrs. Maggie Moore, Mrs. Carrie Weigle, and Mrs. Fred Wilcox, and two sons, Oscar and Walter Renner. The children all live in the vicinity of Waterloo, except Sister Moore, who resides in Laporte. Four brothers and and a sister, all of whom live in Illinois, also survive him.

Brother Renner has been a conscientious and respected member of the Church of God for many years, and his presence will be truly missed at our coming conferences and his death regretted by the brethren throughout the state.

"Yes, friends, 'tis sad—the mystery of pain,
And separation from the ones we love
We cannot fathom—yet our loss is gain;
Of this the wisdom coming from above
May well assure our hearts, and help to heal
Till parting stands our Father's love revealed.

We know in part, and but in part, are known
To those around us, but our Lord knows all.
He bears our sorrows, makes our griefs, our his own.
And notes the very sparrows when they fall,
He knows our troubles ere our lips can tell.
Take courage friends, 'He doeth all things well.'"

G. Eldred Mason.

Sarah Smith was born in West Moreland Co., Penn., Oct. 15, 1844, and moved with her parents to the west in 1862, and was married to John S. Butcher, April 12, 1870.

She was baptized near South Haven, Kansas, in April, 1888, and lived a devoted Christian life until death claimed her for his victim. She was a great lover of the Bible and it seemed to be her supreme delight to talk of the glorious promises recorded in its sacred pages. While upon her bed of sickness she often expressed her hope of a better resurrection when there will be no more death, neither sickness nor pain.

Sister Butcher leaves a husband, a brother, two sisters and a number of nephews, nieces and friends to mourn her loss.

Words of comfort were spoken by the writer from Job xiv. 14. She died Sept. 16, 1905, being 60 years, 11 months and 1 day old. We clip the following from the Blackwell News.

H. M. Williams.

"At about 11 o'clock last Saturday night all that was mortal of Mrs. J. S. Butcher passed away to the keeping of the Great Creator. Mrs. Butcher had been suffering for the last thirty years with stomach trouble, but the last sickness that finally led to her demise commenced about eight weeks ago. Mrs Butcher was a devout Christian and the greatest pleasure and comfort in her life has been her many deeds of kindness in ministering to the wants of the needy, the sick or afflicted. The deceased was the wife of J. S Butcher, and came from Kansas with her husband at the opening of the Cherokee strip, twelve years ago, settling on a farm in this vicinity, but moving to residence, 419 east Bridge street, some seven years ago, where they have since resided. The surviving relatives are her husband, J. S. Butcher; two sisters, Mrs. Eliza Rahe, of Blackwell, and Mrs. Miller, of Lamont; a brother, Geo. Smith of Belle Plaine, Kansas; and a niece, Mrs. Carrie Chambers of Blackwell, to all of whom the sympathy of the community is extended in this sad hour of affliction. The funeral services were held at the residence this afternoon, Elder Williams of Ashton, Kansas, officiating, assisted by Rev. Isom Roberts of the local Christian church. Interment at the Odd Fellows cemetry."

When people are suffering God knows it. He does not forget us. Those who are ill-treated have a Friend whose eye is not shut. He will reward it.

At the Breaking of Bread.

And so much the more.

All—to this "all" there is no exception. All who are properly instructed in the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, begin right. By word and deed they confess their sins, and that they have turned from idols, and fables, to the love of the truth, and to wait for God's Son from heaven. All begin seriously, earnestly, and as they have been entreated, and exhorted to believe and obey the gospel, they realize the necessity of exhortation. All begin this way. All believe that there is room to grow in knowledge and the favor of God. All know that this growth is nourished by exhortation, and as we grow in knowledge we can exhort, one another, and so much the more because we see the day approaching. In Heb. x. 25. we have the exhortation of the Holy Spirit through Paul, to not forsake the assembling of ourselves together—as the manner of some—but exhorting, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching. Seeing the day approaching is given as an inducement to assemble together, to exhort, and so much the more. As we increase in knowledge and favor with God, and in love of the truth, and for the brethren we see more clearly the day approaching. The increase of knowledge, favor, truth, and love enables us to see more clearly the poverty of the present order of things, the abounding iniquity, the clearer vision increases our faith in the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, our relieved minds are stirred, we see the day approaching, we become more anxious for our own salvation, and the salvation of others, instead of forsaking the assembling of ourselves—together, we desire the assembling. We arrange the affairs of this life so that they will not interfere with the assembling, we are pressed in our minds to exhort and desire in our hearts to be exhorted. And so much more as we see the day approaching. In the first chapter of Hebrews we are told that the angels minister to those who shall be heirs of salvation. In chapter three the heirs are called "Holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, and that Jesus Christ is the Apostle and High Priest of our profession. Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip." Heb. ii. 1. And we ought to hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope. Heb. iii. 6. And to exhort one another daily. And to labor to enter in to that rest. To be followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promise. To hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering. To consider one another to incite unto love and good works. To assemble ourselves together, to exhort, and so much the more as we see the day approaching.

Just the Difference.

Some men move through life as a band of music down street, flinging out pleasure on every side through the air to every one, far and near, that can listen. Some men fill the air with their presence and sweetness, as orchards in October days fill the air with perfume of ripe fruit.

Some women cling to their own houses, like the honeysuckle over the door, yet, like it, sweeten all the region with the subtle fragrance of their goodness. There are trees of righteousness which are ever dropping precious fruit around them. There are lives that shine like star-beams, or charm the heart like songs sung upon a holy day.

How great a bounty and a blessing it is to hold the royal gifts of the soul so that they shall be music to some and fragrance to others, and life to all! It would be an unworthy thing to live for, to make the power which we have within us the breath of other men's joy; to scatter sunshine where only clouds and shadows reign; to fill atmosphere where earth's weary toilers must stand with a brightness which they cannot create for themselves, and which they long for, enjoy and appreciate.

Life is divided into three terms—that which was, which is, which will be. Let us learn from the past to profit by the present, and from the present to live for the future.

Good temper is like a sunny day; it sheds a brightness over everything; it is the sweetener of toil and the soother of disquitude.

For the noblest man that lives there still remains a conflict.—Hartleb.

Poetry.

In His Vineyard.

There is never a way so narrow or short,
But the Master's work is there;
There is something to do for his dear sake,
Or something to calmly bear.

There are trials to meet with Christian faith,
And duties with Christian grace;
And there's Christian sweetness for every one,
To be given in every place.

Their working days are never so hard
Who find in Christ a stay;
And days of darkness are days of light,
When Jesus leads the way.

And the waiting days of those who hope,
Are days of quietness;
And the praying days of those who trust,
Are days of perfect peace.

There are lowly nests down in the valley low,
And over the mountain side,
Which were never praised by a human voice,
Nor by human eyes descried.

Yet as sweet are the breath of the royal rose,
In the perfume they exhale;
And why they bloom and where they bloom,
The good Lord knoweth well.

Communicated.

There is No Peace.

The momentous events now transpiring in our midst, foreshadow in the near future occurrences which will shortly startle the world. This you will readily perceive by reading the following selection from Leslie's Magazine:

"Not since the tramp of the great Corsican's armies was resounding over Europe a century ago was there so much dynamite in the world's political atmosphere as there is stored there at this moment. The Spanish-American War of 1898 was followed by Aguinaldo's rebellion in 1899, and by the Boer War, in which England, in 1899–1902, subverted the two little South African republics, the Transvaal and the Orange Free State. This was hardly over when the greatest war since the Franco-German conflict of 1870–71, that between Japan and Russia, started, which is now being brought to a close.

As in Bonaparte's days, wars generate wars, and the world is likely to see some of them before Russia and Japan disband their armies, even if they want to disband them. The Balkans, which has been a powder magazine for over a generation, stands a chance to be the scene of explosions before 1905 ends. The fear of Russia's imagined invincibility being removed, both Turkey and its enemies—Macedonia, Bulgaria, Roumania, Greece, Servia, and Montenegro—may be in irruption at any moment, on account of their feuds of generations and centuries. Christian and Turk in southeastern Europe were equally afraid of the Cossack, but that terror is now abolished. Norway's secession has aroused a separatist feeling in Hungary, Poland, Finland, and Ireland. Denmark and Holland have the spectre of German absorption before their eyes in a particularly menacing shape at this moment. Belgium distrusts France.

Up in the north Atlantic, Sweden and Norway, weakened by the rupture of their relations, offer the ice-free ports which Russia seeks with an especial ardor now that she has lost her great open harbor on the Pacific, Port Arthur. England's ministry is already preparing for that Russian march southward on India which would compensate Nicholas for the check which Japan gave to his eastern march on Manchuria and Korea. At the same time, England is removing her fleets from the American continent and placing them at strategic points in the British Channel and the Mediterranean, to head off Germany's ambition, which has occupied the thoughts of British military and naval authorities recently. The Morocco controversy between France and Germany, in which England is on France's side, has possibilities of trouble which may involve every nation in Europe.

Japan, in guarding against possible Russian revenges, and also in its aspirations to establish a Monroe Doctrine for Asia, must strengthen its defense on land and water, must administer Korea, brace up China, unite all the yellow races, and, incidentally, be a menace to the United States in the Philippines. Men are crying peace! peace! when there is no peace; but, on the other hand, a strong probability that wars may break out in any quarter of the globe. Notwithstanding The Hague congresses, past and pending, and the international arbitration conventions in the United States and elsewhere, all over the world the gates of the temple of Janus are ready to fly wide open."

Paul in giving one of the momentous signs of the Lord's coming says: "But of the times and seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. (Why?) For yourselves know perfectly (that is surely) that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night." When will he come as a thief? Please note carefully Paul's answer to a plain question, "When they shall say peace and safety: then cometh sudden destruction upon them."

Now, the question is, Is that literally fulfilled today? In answer let me quote from Leslie's Magazine, one of the standard literary magazines of these last days; it says, "Men are crying peace! peace! when there is no peace!"

Surely, if men of the world see that time is now upon us, what ought the Christian student to see? Ought you not to see that

"We are living, we are dwelling,
In a grand and awful time,
In an age on ages telling,
When to be living is sublime?
Hark! the waking up of nations,
Gog and Magog to the fray:
Hark! what sounds the?
Tis creation groaning for its latter day!"

Seeing all this, listen, what do you hear?

"Hark! the onset! will ye fold your Faith-clad arms in lazy lock?
Up! Oh up! thou drowsy soldier:
Worlds are charging to the shock!"

Seeing this is now actually upon us, what is our duty? Why this:

"Up! 'tis Jehovah's rally!
God's own arm hath need of thine!"
Strike! let every nerve and sinew,
Tell on ages—tell for God."

"Oh, beloved, don't let the cause of Christ suffer for a few paltry dollars and cents. Hold up the arms of God's ministering service everywhere. For one, my services are at your disposal. I am now arranging for a full mid winter trip, to sound out the glad tidings to a perishing world. Do you want your neighbors to hear it? If so, say so, at once, I am in earnest about this matter of saving the perishing. Do not drive your evangelists from the field for lack of support. The cry is, "the laborers are few." Yes, it is true, but even those "few" are often idle, for lack of support.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.
W. H. Wilson.

The Bereans Column.

The Annual meeting of the Illinois Bereans was held at Oregon, Ill., on Saturday afternoon, Aug. 19, 1905. The meeting was opened by the president. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary and the minutes approved.

The treasurer's report for the year was as follows: balance in treasury Sept. 1, 1904, $33.55; receits to Sept. 1, 1905, $34.01; total $67.56; expenditures to Sept. 1, 1905, $31.90; balance in treasury, $35.66.

The literary committee gave their report. The president gave a report of the year's work. Personally she has written 134 letters during the year and has received over 100 letters. The tract committee reported. There has been 2000 tracts distributed this year.

Reports from local societies were received, Moriah, Keltner, Marshall, Dixon, Chicago, Adeline and Oregon meetings have been discontinued for various reasons. A home society at Carnegie, Okla., was reported.

Letters of greeting were read from Ruth Smith and Jessie Wilson and Kathryn Townsend, Lebanon, Ill. At the business session Mrs. Cora Rue and Mrs. R. H. Kitzmiller of Haldrane were received as members. Miss Daisy Seymour of Tampico, Ill., and Ella Long of Higgins, Texas, were received as members during the year.

The election of officers followed: President, Miss Anna Drew, of Dixon, 620 N. Galena Ave., elected by casting the white ballot. Vice President, Almeda Mitchell, of Lanark, Ill. Secretary, Leila E. Whitehead, 5428 Ontario St., Chicago. Treasurer, Fred Knodle, Oregon, Ill.

The committees were appointed by the president. Literary committee, Elizabeth Eaton, Savanna, Ill; Almeda Mitchell, Lanark, Ill.; Mary A. Gean, R. R. 2, Forreston, Ill.

Program committee, Leila E. White head, Emma Lindsay, Ruth Smith.

Tract committe Viola Eaton, Stockton, Ill.

The meeting then adjourned. The president wishes the members to please remember to send all dues and free will offerings to the treasurer, Mr. Knodle, Oregon, Ill., and not to her. The treasurer also has charge of the pins. All tracts and free will offerings for that work are in charge of Viola Eaton, Stockton, Ill.

Report of the Dixon Berean Society.

Since last Conference the Berean Society of Dixon have held twenty-three meetings, with an average attendance of nine. During the winter months they meet at the hall after the close of the Sunday school and at other times of the year they meet at one of their homes one evening during the week. They have finished the lessons in the first of the new Berean booklets and are now using the second.

Anna L. Adams, Pres.
Ada A. Drew, Sec.

Report of the Moriah Society.

The Berean Society of the Restitution church meet on Sunday after Sunday school. Mr. B. J. Woods is our leader. The Society has met 33 times since Oct. 1, 1904. The number of members is 15. The lesson for next Sunday is Chastisement. The addition of members is two, Mr. B. J. Woods and Miss Sylvia Simpson.

Maude Fraks, Pres.
Ella Frakes, Sec.

The Chicago Bereans meet twice a month, the first Sunday in the afternoon at the home of Mrs. Whitehead, and the third Sunday, in the morning before church. We use the lessons given in the leaflets. The first Sunday of the month we pay our dues and the third Sunday we take up a collection, thus increasing our income. During the year we have had $44 63 in our treasury. We have spent $8 51 for the needy, $20 00 for Christmas dinners to the poor, sent $8 63 to the State treasury and sent a delegate to Conference. We have written twenty letters to isolated members, but have done nothing with tracts. We have added three new members, making our membership thirteen, and we have an average attendance of eight. Mrs. Whitehead leads the afternoon meeting and one of the members leads the morning meeting. There has been a great growth, during the year, in the ability of the members shown by the conducting of this service. There is also a much greater willingness on the part of the members to do what is necessary for the success of the cause. May we all grow in spiritual things and come nearer to the throne of grace, praying that dissension and strife be kept from us that we may be better fitted for the kingdom.

Dear Bereans:

I regret very much that I cannot be with you at this Conference. Although I am not there in person, I am with you in thought. I love to meet with those of like precious faith, and hear the different speakers proclaiming the glad news of the kingdom of God. It fills our hearts with joy to talk over with one another of Christ's second coming and the resurrection, when our sleeping brothers and sisters will be wakened to life eternal. What a time of rejoicing it will be. I am trying to live day by day, so that I will be worthy of the Savior's call. Brothers and sisters, help the Bereans in their good works; give them a word of encouragement which will be much felt. Your Sister in Christ.

Jessie M. Wilson.

Dear Bereans:

We have called ourselves Bereans, but why? Also, why have we organized this society? These questions and the value of our young people's meeting came to me with such force while at the Michigan Conference, as I watched the old brothers and sister, so many of them all the way from 70 to 86 years old. Hearing them tell of the love they had for our faith and how they had had to work in their younger days to get the church to its present condition. And as I watched them, some of them so feeble it was quite an effort for them to be there. One could see they would not be with us long, and that would mean a good many vacant places for the young people to fill. The thought that struck me was, How many of us will be ready to fill one of our older sister's place and go on with church duties? That is what showed me the value of our young people's society, and why we should have such love for our society, and why it should be first of all, first of everything with us. Can any other church give us such a hope and such provinces as our own church gives? Can we afford to let our church go down for the want of workers? I am sure you will all say, no, we cannot afford to let our church go down, that no other church could give us the comfort our own does. Then let us have such love for our society we will do nothing that is not for the best of the society, which will be the best for us in the end. Let us be earnest in the young people's meetings, for in these meetings we get the training preparing us for our next work. May every young person have such love for "that One Faith" the Bible teaches us about, that they will all go in this training. And dear Bereans, let us have the true spirit of love in this work, leaving out all jealousy, the fear of losing some good which another may obtain. For we are in the work with the spirit of being offended if we have not an office, that some one else is getting more honor than we are. I'm afraid if we have that spirit in the work, our training will have a poor effect, and we will not be a very good substitute for some of the dear brothers and sisters. For those who feel they can't when asked to lead a meeting or any kind of Berean work, just think it is part of our training, and though we fail in what we are given to do, that each time we fail will help us to succeed that much more next time. Dear young people, let us consider what it means to love our faith. That to love our faith means to work for it, and before we can work we have to go through an apprenticeship, and let us be very earnest in the training of this apprenticeship.

Your Sister in Christ.

Ruth L. Smith.

Dear Bereans:

I am not permitted to meet with you personally, but am thankful that I can send you a few lines to be read. I write this to express my appreciation of the good the "Society" has done me. I have learned hundreds of lessons from its "column," it is so radiant with good will and helpfulness, that it cannot but do every one good. As an aid to high thinking I have nothing more helpful than the Bible. It is our duty to study the Word and thus be able to set it forth to others. We all have work to do be it ever so small, and those who make no use of their talent are not allowed to retain it. Let us find the work for which we are best adapted in the Lord's service and then devote ourselves to it with heart and soul. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest." I take great pleasure in distributing tracts, as tract distribution is an occupation that the humblest disciple can engage in. I have sent out nearly three hundred tracts, several Restitutions and two books, "The True Way of Life" and "Word of the Kingdom," by Bro. J. C. Woodruff. Sow the seed, and ask God in faith, to give the increase. My desire and prayer is that we may help each other to realize the blessedness of our hope, and that we may hold out faithful and receive a crown of life in the kingdom of God. God be with you.

Kathryn Townsend.

Conference Report.

The Quarterly Conference of the Church of God in Michigan is a thing of the past as far as its notice in the paper is concerned, but as to its spiritual benefits, while mind lasts its effects will be felt. It seems as though all reached a closer place in the mind of God, and sat down nearer the ever present helper than ever before.

Bro. Zilmer was invited to this gathering to do the most of the speaking, which he did. Bro. Woodward spoke Saturday P. M. and Sister Woodward Sunday P. M. Social meetings were conducted by Bro. Woodward, Sister Barnum, Sister Woodward and Bro. Wright. Friday evening Bro. Zilmer spoke from Rom. vi. 11. Read the text, friends, and try and think of what it means. Never did sin look so hateful to me in all its forms as when the speaker occasionally lifted the old dead carcass up and presented its decaying, putrifying sores, which we are too often given to cherishing after we have professedly buried the old man and supposedly taken the blessed new man Christ Jesus into our lives. God grant we may henceforth keep the old man buried so deep his stench will never reach us again. Saturday the subject was "The Altar Sacrifice," text Heb. xiii. 10. How plainly from God's Word did he show Christ as our Altar. Our hindrances on the road to this altar and the necessity of offering ourselves upon that altar a living sacrifice.

At 1 P. M. Saturday business meeting was called. It was very humiliating to find not one officer present. Bro. Hammond was appointed Pres. pro. tem., Sister Woodward, Sec. pro. tem., who also acted as Treasurer. Bro. and Sister Woodward reported steady and increasing calls for work. Sister Woodward gave some thoughts on the proposed Bible school which is under contemplation by the Indiana Conference. Bro. Zilmer gave us an outline of the work as proposed to be carried out. Brethren in Michigan, will we co-operate in this work? How necessary it is for the children of the King to show others the light. How can we better benefit our children or our neighbor's children than to teach them the road to bright Eden land. We should make arrangements a year a head to send our children to this school as much as to a Normal or any other place of education, for no child is thoroughly educated unless they understand the way to gain eternal life. May our thoughts be stirred in this matter that we may be ready to act when the plans are perfected and arrangements made to open this school next year. Watch The Restitution for proceedings from committee. Business meeting was adjourned and sisters took a half hour for their business meeting, after which Bro. Woodward spoke on the subject "Events of Today." Sister Borne led the "Promise" meeting at 7:30, and Bro. Zilmer followed with sermon, subject "God's Character." Sunday morning Bro. Woodward led the social meeting, nearly every one in the house testified. Bro. Zilmer spoke again on "Discipleship," text Acts xiv. 21, 22. No! God is not afar off, if as the speaker said, we will only hold the receiver close to our ears and hear him talk to us. At 2 P. M. Sister Woodward's subject was "The things which God hath promised." Despite the heavy rain in the evening the house was well filled, and the Conference closed with Bro. Zilmer speaking from subject, "For what does the Church of God stand?" A hymn was sung while the good bye hand shake was given. How well this meeting was appreciated was manifested by the oft repeated words from Sister Harper and others, "O we are so glad we have had this meeting, what a blessing it has been to us all." The brethren had not had a meeting here for three years, and were nearly starved for gospel bread, and when they got it the loaf was so large they could hardly carry it, but with tears of joy, and exclamations of praise, each carried a large slice away, praising God for the feast. We hope the brethren here will not go so long again without meetings. The minister can only do his part in helping others into the light, each one must work.

The brethren in Southern Michigan spared no pains nor expense to have this meeting a success, and they succeeded admirably. How rich seemed the blessings we enjoyed at this meeting, but the tears and shadows fell while we often thought and talked of our beloved and suffering Bro. Chase and wife, she suffering with him as every true wife does. How tenderly was he remembered in the prayers to the Father that he might have grace sufficient for his hours of suffering. What songs of triumphant joy will there be sung when we can all know there is an end of sin and death. Reach out for the hand of God dear ones all, he will carry us safely over.

M. A. Woodward, Sec. Pro. tem.

Report of L. E. A. S.

At the semi-annual meeting of the L. E. A. S Sister Woodward brought up the case of Sister Beardsley, who is an old time believer in the truths for which we stand, and has many times in years past, like Martha of old, ministered to the physical needs of our preaching brethren, but now misfortune has overtaken her and she is dependent on a distant relative. The society voted to help her through the winter, leaving to the discretion of Sister Woodward the amount to be used. Also voted to appropriate $5.00 to Conference expenses, but this was afterwards returned by the Conference. Adjourned.

E. Barnum, Sec.

Dear ones of the household of faith:

I am rejoicing in the faith of the gospel as I never rejoiced before, and the reason is because I know more about the faith, and more of the good news of the kingdom than I ever knew before. Paul tells Timothy, "I have kept the faith," you know the rest—so we see that the faith is something in particular; and oh! I want to be able to say the same at the close of this earthly life. He tells those at Philippi to "stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel," and we need to strive together for it as earnest as they.

At Cleveland this summer I found a body of pure saints and particular truth seekers that I received real help of them and my eyes were opened to things that, if I had read, heard, I never had given any attention to, or considered of eternal importance. And so, through the providence of God, my visit was profitable to me beyond what I had hoped or thought. When a child I was baptized and took Jesus as my guide and example, but I was so much engrossed with the thought of "works" that I neglected the other side—"faith"—which is equally important. Being so situated that I seldom heard any preaching that could help me in this matter—the only opportunity being at the Michigan Conferences of which I have attended only a few, and during all this time, attending other churches and working with them, you can readily see that it was not easy for me to make much progress. What truth I had received had become so mixed with error that I could not rightly divide the Word of truth. I was on the point of joining the church of Christ because I felt the need of the fellowship and encouragement that comes from being one of an organization. I liked to meet with people whose aims were for something more than the good things of this life.

It is unquestionably harder for those who are isolated to keep up their zeal than it is for those who are continually receiving help and encouragement from meeting with those of like precious faith; but I do want to urge families who are in the faith to exhort one another daily and not to neglect the study of God's Word. We must hold on to the faith or we cannot expect to receive the reward promised to the faithful. Paul warns us that some, having put away concerning faith have made shipwreck, and that is what will surely happen to those who neglect to take spiritual food. It is something we need constantly in order to be kept thoroughly alive unto God. Parents have a great responsibility here, for if they neglect to give such instruction as is necessary for their children's salvation they will either take up with the doctrines so popularly taught by orthodox churches, or else have no aspirations for serving Christ; and it is no wonder that the question is asked, "When the Son of Man cometh will he find faith on the earth?"

We don't need to do anything immoral to shut us out of the kingdom. Unbelief alone will do it and belief in Christ includes more than believing that Christ is the Son of God who died for us. I am so glad that I see it now, for I think it is a most terrible calamity to fail because of disregarding some of God's plan, and especially where one has made sacrifices and labored to live pleasing to God.

I came back from Cleveland secure in the knowledge that I had put on Christ, and I know that if I am Christ's then I am Abraham's seed and an heir according to promise. When I reached home another spiritual treat was in store for me, for Bro. and Sister Woodward came and held a week's service and some were interested enough to desire to know more of the blessed truth.

It is my prayer that all in Christ Jesus may grow in knowledge and grace and prove to be neither barren nor unfruitful in the Lord, but may meet him at his appearing, bringing many precious sheaves.

Your Sister in Christ.

Esther Richardson.

Love Like a River.

Over and over again have I stood on a long bridge arching the lovely Susquehanna and watched the waters in their strong onward sweep to the sea, and over and over again have the waters sounded the refrain,

"Men may come, and men may go,
But I go on forever, ever, I go on forever."

Flowing on forever, flowing on since the hills began, flowing on in starlight and in sunlight, to the sea. Sweetly have they sounded, yet with what heartbreak and pathos when I looked beyond and saw the marble gleaming above the lowly sodded homes of men who never again can walk beside their loved stream.

With the vision of Ezekiel before me, the river no longer sings a song of sadness, but a song of joy, a song of triumph. "Men may come, and men may go, but I, the River of Life, flow on forever." Blessed river, symbol of God's never-failing love, joyously now I gaze into thy depths. Friends may come and friends may go, fortune may come and fortune may go, fame may come and fame may go, but thou, oh river, flowing on in sunlight and starlight, will go on forever. Blessed river, blessed symbol of God's never changing love, "flow on forever, ever."

Seventy-five More.

I receive enquiries as to when Pine Woods Bible Class Book will be printed?

In answer, I will say, when I receive seventy-five more subscriptions, the book can be printed, and sent forth on its mission, to teach the glad tidings. If all who really want it had said so, it could now be out sowing seed. When God's professed servants make his cause a secondary matter, and put it off to a "convenient time," his cause suffers. Now all who really want the book please sit down and write me, as soon as you have read this, and then things will move at once. Don't wait until a more convenient time. God's business demands prompt attention.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

W. H. WILSON.

The Truly Honorable.

The truly honorable man takes pains to remain ignorant of things that concern him not. He turns aside from the confidential gossip, glances away from the open desk, shuns the place where a whisper is audible, with just as much care as he would use to avoid profiting by a mistake in the change. His curiosity does not crave the knowledge of such matters. It has the whole wide world for its area, and seeks its satisfaction in a more wholesome direction. After all, the information to which we have no right is the poorest and least valuable to us of any that we can obtain. Let us cultivate a worthy curiosity on subjects that shall enlarge our minds, deepen our feelings and strengthen our purposes, we shall shrink from the ignoble inquisitiveness that revels in dishonest gains.

When a Man is Alone.

It is a serious thing to be alone. It is then a man makes the discovery of himself. While he mingles with the crowd his thoughts are occupied with outward things. He is absorbed in conversation, pleasure, business. But when the crowd all leave us, when the darkness shuts out the busy world about us, then comes the hour of self-contemplation and self-discovery. Like Whittier, we enter into the dialogue, "My Soul and I." How little we may have been aware of ourselves at other times, we now must say:—

"Stand still, my soul, in silence, dark:
I would question thee,
Alone in the shadow, drear and stark,
With God and me!"

To some such a time of self-discovery is not unwelcome. They find their souls good company. If one has lived a true life, he finds when he is alone in the dark the fellowship of pleasant memories, noble thoughts, beautiful hopes.—R. M. Vaughan.

Announcement.

The Conference at Rollin, Kansas, will be held on October 13, and last over Sunday. Accommodations will be furnished all who come. Those so desiring may bring some bedding, and some of the buildings can be used for lodging. A number of speakers will be present. Come and make the plan of a fraternal unity in Christ a success. Now, if ever, seems to be the time to do something for the colony. So come. Show your love for Christ and his body by a heroic, sacrificing effort of love, to live together in harmony and helpfulness.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship," "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can send bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Poetry.

Nearer Home.

When the year has lived its summer,
And the birds have touched their strain
And full ripe for the keen sickle
Bends the honey-bearded grain,
All my feelings gather softly
Like sweet comforters, and say,
Summer time has gone, but autumn
Brings a dearer, fruitful day.

When I, wandering where the summer
Lingered coolly to the last,
See the fairest flowers withered
By the first chill autumn blast,
Naught of sadness fills my spirit
That my roses long have blown,
For each leaf that flutters earthward
Tells me I am nearer home.

And when almost frosts are coldly
And the barren fields look gray,
The last golden fruits all gathered,
The last reaper gone away,
Weary I, and sadly loitering,
Evening shadows softly come,
Touching my sore feet with healing,
As they whisper, "Nearer Home."

And my heart puts off all sadness,
Though the barn a fields are gray,
Though the golden fruits are gathered,
And the birds have flown away;
For I'm going where the flowers
Bloom in a perpetual spring,
Where the birds no more are trickle,
But remain to ever sing.

Where no frosts hath ever blighted
The bright verdure of the clime,
And the fairest fruits are ripened
Where the sun knows not decline;
And my wasted spirit singeth
In a soft and hopeful tone,
Till the stars shine down to light me
Ever onward to my home.

Sin the Cause.

When we take a general view of the history and present condition of mankind, we behold a vast amount of accummulated wretchedness and misery of every conceivable description. We mention the following among the evils: poverty, hunger, famine, pestilence, sorrow, sickness, pain, death, blindness, deafness, ignorance, cruelty, slavery, oppression, war with its untold, wholesale suffering, drunkenness, murder, robbery, unbelief in God, sacrilege, dishonesty and lawlessness.

Paul gives us a list of the works of the flesh in his letter to the Galatians v. 19-21 as follows: "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these, adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like."

Sin is the cause of all this and much more. Oh what a terrible crop for "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Gal. vi. 7, 8. Where did this terrible evil to the human race begin, and by whom? In the garden of Eden, by Adam and Eve. "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all men have sinned." Rom. v. 12. Note, now, the circumstances of this disobedience in Eden: "And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of the tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for meat." Gen. i. 29. "And the Lord God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and keep it. And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, Thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Gen. ii. 15 17. The phrase, "In the day," is often used as an indefinite duration; for example, see Hab. iii. 8, 9: "Harden not your hearts, as in the provocation, in the day of temptation in the wilderness; when your fathers tempted me, proved me, and saw my works forty years." See also Psa. cxv. 8; ex. 3, 5; Prov. vi. 34; xxiv. 10; Eccl. vii. 14; Isa. ix. 4; Rom. ii. 16. Now, there they are, Adam and Eve, in the beautiful garden, in the midst of delightful luxury, no fear of trouble of any kind, having the tree of life at their service, and only one prohibitive law, and they doubtless enjoyed frequent visits of the Lord God. Now comes the tempter, who talks with the woman about the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. "And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden: but of the fruit of tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die. And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die," etc. The woman then ate of the forbidden fruit, and gave also to her husband and he did eat, apparently with a reckless disregard of their Maker's command. Having become law-breakers, they must be tried and punished, resulting in death in accordance with the verdict and sentence, which sentence is recorded in Gen. iii. 16-19, "And all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years; and he died." Gen. v. 5.

Then if Adam died he must be dead, notwithstanding the serpent's contradiction of the Lord God. The serpent, the devil, is still trying to support his first lie, "Thou shalt not surely die," and the greater portion of the descendants of Adam are believing, and many are teaching the same lie, right in the light of God's teaching to the contrary, and the sin and misery of the whole world in consequence of Adam's rash act. Do you say, It matters but little what one believes? Indeed, it does matter. Do you think that God does not care if you call him a liar as the serpent did? He is a jealous God. His words are not to be trifled with with impunity. Jesus said, "Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled." Matt. v. 18.

1. We ought to believe and teach God's words, because they are his words, and are true words.

2. We ought to believe God's words because through them we obtain the true knowledge of God and the way to our salvation.

3. We ought to believe and teach God's words, and be very careful to keep error out of our belief and teaching, because they have been preserved and handed down to us at a fearful sacrifice and cost in blood, toil, suffering and money. Reflect for a few moments upon the history of God's people from their exodus from Egypt down to the time of Jesus Christ, and from Christ down to our times. There have untold millions who have suffered persecution, torture and death of the most cruel kind. Then how grateful we should be for so great a favor and blessing.

Having received these precious words of God at so great a cost, let us stand up as fearless as lions to defend and preserve the truth. In regard to the popular teaching of the immortality of the soul, and going to heaven at death, I offer briefly a few points as follows: I find no proof of man's present immortality except as a matter of hope, to be realized at "the resurrection of the just;" Luke xiv. 14; 1 Cor. xv. 51-53; John vi. 40. There is proof of God's immortality, as taught in 1 Tim. vi. 16; but nothing of the kind as a present condition of man. On the contrary man is spoken of in the Bible as "mortal." Job iv. 17; Rom. vi. 12; viii. 11; 1 Cor. xv. 17-49; xv. 16 18.

Eternal life or immortality is the gift of God, and is a matter of promise to the righteous only. See John vi. 49, "Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness and are dead." Then they are not alive in heaven. John iii. 16; v. 28, 29; vi. 40, 44; x. 27-29.

The foregoing plainly teach the truth relative to man's present state, and the possibilities of his future state. "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. vi. 21-23. The Bible nowhere calls the soul "immortal," "deathless" or "never-dying." The Prophet Ezekiel says: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." Ez. xviii. 4, 20. "Behold, the eye of the Lord is upon them that fear him, upon them that hope in his mercy; to deliver their soul from death and to keep them alive in famine." Psa. xxxiii. 18, 19.

"Let him know that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins." James v. 20. Jesus said: "I am he that liveth, and was dead." Rev. i. 18. It is a matter of much importance to us, as to whether or not "we believe that Jesus died and rose again." 1 Thes. iv. 13-18; 1 Cor. xv. 17, 18. Paul does not say, "This immortal soul," but "this mortal must put on immortality." 1 Cor. xv. 53.

Hieremias (or "Iremiah").

CHAPTER 6.

1. Run about in the streets of Hierousaleem and see and know and seek in her public-squares; if ye find, if there is one who is doing justice and seeking faith, I also will be favorable to them, saith the Lord.

2. As the Lord liveth, say they, therefore do they not swear with lies.

3. O Lord, thine eyes are unto faith; thou hast scourged them and they have not felt pain; thou hast brought them to a full end and they have not been willing to accept chastening; they have made their faces harder than a rock and they have not been willing to return.

4. And I said, They are probably poor; it is because they are not able, because they have not comprehended the Lord's way and God's judicial way of reasoning.

5. I will go my way unto the prosperous and talk to them, because they have fully known the Lord's way and God's judicial-way of reasoning; and lo, with one accord they broke their yoke and rent their bonds asunder.

6. Therefore hath a lion from out the forest smitten them, and a wolf hath destroyed them even to their houses; and a leopard hath awakened against their cities; all those who go their way out of them will have been made prey of, because they have multiplied their acts of irreverence, they have become strong in their apostrophies.

7. In what sort of a way may I have become favorable to thee for those things? Thy sons have forsaken me, and they have sworn by those that are gods; and I have full fed them, and they have committed adultery, and in houses of harlots have they put up.

8. Horses after mares have they become, each one after his neighbor's wife have they neighed.

9. Shall I not visit for these things saith the Lord? Or on such a nation shall not my soul requite?

10. Go against her outer-fortifications and dig them down; but do not make a full end of them; leave her under-props because they are not the Lord's.

11. Because the house of Israeel, saith the Lord, hath revolted against me, and the house of Jouda.

12. Hath lied to their Lord, and said these things are not so; calamities will not come upon us, and we shall not see sword or famine.

13. Our prophets were for wind and the Word of the Lord was not in them.

14. Therefore thus saith the All-controlling Lord, because ye have said this Word, lo, I have given my words to be a fire in thy mouth, and this laity to be wood and it will devour them.

15. Lo, I am leading against you a nation from afar, ye house of Israeel, saith the Lord, a nation the sound of whose tongue ye will not listen to.

16. All strong and they will devour your summer-harvest and your bread, and they will devour your sons and your daughters, and they will devour your sheep and your yearling-bullocks, and they will devour your vineyards and your fig-orchards and your olive-orchards; and they will thresh your walled-cities in which ye rely with a sword.

No 17th verse.

18. And it will be in those days, saith the Lord thy God, that I shall not make a full end of you.

19. And it will be when ye have said, On account of what hath the Lord our God done all these things, thou shalt also say unto them. It is even as ye have served alien god as bond servants in your land will ye serve as bond-servants in the land not your own.

20. Declare these things to the house of Jakoob and let them be heard in the house of Jouda.

21. May ye have hearkened to these things ye savorless and heartless laity; eyes have they and they do not look to see, ears have they and they do not listen to hear.

22. Will ye not have feared me, saith the Lord, or from before my face will ye not have shown true reverence? Me who hath set a boundary of sand for the sea, an age-lasting statute, it will not be stepped over?

23. But the heart of this laity hath become disobedient and unfaithful, and they have inclined away and gone away.

24. And they have not said with their heart, Let us fear the Lord our God, who giveth us the early and latter rain in due season in fulfilment of a summer-harvest statute, and who hath watched to guard it for us.

25. Your transgressions have inclined them away, and your sins have stood the good things away from you.

26. Because irreverent men have been found in the laity, and they have stood snares to corruptly destroy men of influence, and they have been taken with them.

27. Like a snare full set for birds, even so their houses are full of deceit; therefore they have magnified themselves and grown rich;

28. And have evaded judicial-procedure and have not judged the right of the orphan and the right of the widow they have not judged.

29. Shall I not visit for these things, and shall not my soul requite such a nation?

30. A craze and frightful things have occurred over the land.

31. The prophets have prophecied unjust things and the priests have clapped their hands, and my laity hath loved in this wise, and what will ye do in times after these times?

COMMENT.

The variations of reading in this chapter as given in the C. V. and R. V. are not so important nor numerous as in the two preceding chapters; but they are still many and some of them very singular, a singularity too that is difficult to explain in any other way than the scholarly Wahl explained it over fifty years ago as a deliberate wresting and changing of the original unletter-pointed Hebrew by Hebrews themselves under the specious plea of letter-pointing it; but with the malicious purpose of discrediting the Greek which the early Christian church had accepted and adopted and continued to use until the Latin Apostasy superceded it several hundred years later and from which all our English and European translations have been principally made, both Catholic and Protestant.

CHAS. GARDNER.

God is Orderly in His Works.

Dear Restitution:

In examining the mighty works of our Heavenly Father we find the most perfect order in all that he does. He first spent more than five thousand years of his valuable and precious time in preparing a home for man. After devoting all those long years in making the world and in putting the fish in the sea, the fowls to fly in the air, the lions and tigers to inhabit the jungles, the mountain sheep and the goat to scale the mountain, the elk and the deer to pasture in the valleys, and the ox and buffalo to rove over the plains, he stopped and before making man he looked over all that he had done and "saw that it was good," then turning to the angels he said, "We now have a perfect and complete home for man already for occupation, now let us make man in our image after our likeness, and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over all the earth," and therefore Adam and his helpmeet were created and given the most complete dominion of the whole earth and all that was in the earth.

This kingship and rulership was not only given as a mark of honor, bestowed by the Creator upon Adam, but the command to "be fruitful and multiply and replenish the earth and subdue it" was a command which was given to be obeyed. This kingship and rulership was not given to the man Adam, but it was given to the Adam who was composed of the "male and female." The record is this, "God said unto them, Be fruitful and multiply and replenish the earth, and subdue it." And so it will be with the second Adam. He will never enter upon his kingship until his bride or helpmeet is ready and until they shall be made one by the marriage.

There is a fiction in the law that the king never dies, the throne is never without an occupant. As the breath leaves the body of a ruling monarch the mantle of royalty falls upon the shoulders of the one who is to succeed him. So in divine matters, in the purposes of God the human race has never been without a head, as the mantle fell from the shoulders of Adam God's edict went forth that the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head. In a special and particular sense this refers to Christ, but in a general sense it refers to Christ and his bride. We know that it will require the combined efforts of both to bruise the serpent's head.

When God directs that a thing shall be done, from his stand-point it is already performed, although thousands of years may elapse before it is accomplished. Therefore, in contemplation of divine law Christ and the bride have been the head of the race from the time of the interview in the garden. God is acting as regent.

When the first Adam failed God did not change his plans, but resolved to create another Adam and Eve, and he gets about the work without delay. He does everything in its proper order, but he takes no account of time.

As the first Adam was created before Eve, so too, must the second Adam be created before the second Eve. In the purposes of God he was so created, notwithstanding the fact that at least one who shall be a member of the bride was laid away in the grave, there to sweetly sleep until the time of the nuptials shall arrive, thousands of years before the birth of the Messiah. When the great gathering time shall come Brother Abel will be found at the head of the class. None but a righteous father and a devout mother could produce such a son. It may be that Abel's father and mother may go into the kingdom ahead of him. The fact that Abel was a righteous man shows that our heavenly Father lost no time in commencing the creation of the second Eve.

As we come on down in the history of Adam's posterity we find they become very wicked, and the Lord said, "I will destroy man from the face of the earth. But Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord." Some say the human race ran a very narrow escape of becoming extinct. They say if Noah had not bestirred himself all would have been destroyed. In this they are mistaken. God knew how it would come out. Suppose all had been destroyed in the flood, how could God have kept his promise made to mother Eve? Where would the seed of the woman which is to bruise the serpents head have come from?

The material out of which the first Adam and Eve were made was green and untried and when they were tested they failed. The second Adam and the second Eve, before they are permitted to enter upon their regal and princely duties are thoroughly tried and tested. There will not be any more failures. The time of the end of this preparation age is fast approaching. Ere long there will be heard a shout which will encompass the world, saying, "And I heard as it were the voices of a great multitude, and the voices of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth. Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him; for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready."

Yes, Jesus is soon coming for his bride. Judged by fulfilled prophecy his second advent is now due. Let us be ever ready for his appearance.

R. S. DWIGGINS.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Workers Together.

"We then, as workers together with him, beseech you that ye receive not the grace of God in vain. (For he saith I have heard thee in a time accepted, and in a day of salvation have I succoured thee; behold, now is the day of salvation.) Giving no offence in anything, that the ministry be not blamed." 1 Cor. vi. 1-3.

"Working together," is the only effective way of producing results in the ministry of the Word. I find this true in my own personal experience, as I go abroad publishing the glad tidings to the perishing. When I strike a neighborhood where the brethren and sisters are in earnest in the cause, they will work for it, they will thoroughly advertise the meetings, see that the house is in order, and will make judicious use of money to make the work effective.

The Evangelist cannot do it all. I was told in one place, that they expected the preacher to kindle fires, sweep out, etc., and in addition to this, send him away empty. In such cases there is no "working together," "the grace of God (is preached) in vain."

To work together in unison is a delightful work, those who have experienced know how sweet it is.

"Sweet is the work, my God, my King,
To praise thy name give thanks and sing,
To show thy love by morning light,
And talk of all thy truth at night."

If we, from the depth of the heart, appreciate what has been done for us, we would be so anxious to make others as happy as we are. When we succeed in this, we feel happier still. And seeing that we are now passing through the closing scenes of the Gentile age, there is need of more earnestness, zeal and energy in the outlook of heart to heart work. Don't try it alone.

"The night is wearing fast away,
The star of light is dawning;
Sweet harbinger of that bright day,
The Fair Millennial morning.
Gloomy and dark the night has been,
And long the way and weary,
And sad the weeping saints are seen,
And faint and worn and weary."

There are localities where there are isolated brethren and sisters, scattered all over this country, who are so anxious to have the glad tidings published to their neighbors, but financially are unable to send for me to come, and I am unable to answer the Macedonian cry, "Come over and help us," for lack of finance. This is where the "working together" comes in. By "working together," every single isolated place could be visited, and the good news preached.

May the Lord open the hearts of some to respond to this "working together," and supply the needful. In this way you can be a "worker together" with the evangelist in the vineyard of the Lord, and share in the results when the King comes. Oh, what will it be worth to us to have the approval of the King when he comes in glory.

"Lonely pilgrim, sad and weary,
Who hath many ills endured,
What though troubles round thee gather,
There's a final rest secured;
For the children of the promise,
Those in faith who firmly stand;
Heirs with Christ, awhile they suffer,
Soon to reign in Israel's land."

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

The look of sympathy, the gentle word
Spoken so low that only angels heard,
The secret act of pure self-sacrifice,
Unseen by men, but marked by angel's eyes,
These are not lost.

The moment a Christian goes where he cannot take Christ with him he is in danger.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCT. 11, 1905.

WE are glad to give our readers the article by Brother George Moyer, and hope he will be able to follow it up with others.

THE questions of admitting the Jews to the universities in Russia, and of the privilege of being land owners, is receiving attention from government officials.

COSSACKS charged strikers in Moscow last week, killing men, women and children indiscriminately. At Tiflis a similar condition exists. Life seems to have no value with these fiends.

IN our last issue we asked all who knew they were in arrears to kindly renew without waiting for private statements. We trust this will be given prompt attention, as we need what is due.

How God Purifies his People.

This Scripture explains itself. It tells of the sudden coming of the Lord to his temple and of the purifying process instituted among the sons of Levi. He sits as a refiner and purifier of silver. Let me tell you of a little gathering at a private house in the old country, for the purpose of reading and conversing upon the Scriptures. These verses were read; and after some discussion respecting the method of refining the precious metals it was arranged for one of them to enquire of a silversmith, how it was done,—and, particularly, what was the business of the refiner himself during the process, and how the silver was freed from the dross. This was promptly explained,—and he was asked: Do you sit at your work, sir? "Oh, yes;" he replied, "I must keep my eye steadily fixed on the furnace, since, if the silver remain too long under the intense heat it is sure to be damaged. The beauty and propriety of the image employed were at once seen. "He shall sit as a refiner of silver." As the visitor was leaving the silversmith called to say that he had forgotten to mention one thing of importance, which was, that he only knew the exact instant when the purifying process was complete by their seeing his own countenance in it. These thoughts led to others. In Titus ii. 13, 14, we learn what our Lord is doing now. After speaking of the Blessed Hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ,—we learn that he gave himself for us, which wonderful gift we celebrate today—that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works. This, then, is what he is now doing. This is what Daniel had said nearly 800 years before—"Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried; but the wicked shall do wickedly." Dan. xii. 10. And we learn from Jas. i. 12 that there is no crown without the trial. The crown comes after the trial. The crown is only bestowed upon those who have been purified; and the same verse tells us that temptation is one thing to be endured—and a great part of what is to be endured, it may be inferred, because those who endure temptation are pronounced blessed. So that temptation covers nearly all the tests applied to us. And when we pass to the 14th verse we discover the great source of temptation. It is not He of the horns and hoofs so often blamed,—but every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own inordinate desires. Read in Mark vii. 20-23 the black list prepared as the product of the heart of man, and then decide that that is the grand seat of nearly all our trouble. Humiliating but true. True, Peter speaks of some fiery trials awaiting the elect as if from without,—but they are of a different character, and those sufferings then are in company with Christ,—fellow sufferers with Christ—with the glory to be revealed, and the exceeding joy assured them. These chastisements are those of a fond Father for his children for their good. Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. Oh what a help it would be to be able always to distinguish between the trials we bring upon ourselves, and those to which we are wisely subjected for purifying purposes. Doubtless it is in reference to these the promise comes that we shall not be tempted above what we are able. I think it would be a powerful, healthy restraining influence if we would watch the sources of our trials—whether from within or without.

But further,—both classes of trials, those from without, and those from within, try the faith. The whole composes the trial of faith—the test of our faith. And Peter to the scattered faithful ones says they greatly rejoice, although for a season manifold temptations may make them heavy; because the "trial of their faith being much more precious than gold that perishes, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ, whom having not seen ye love; in whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory." Yes; trials make the pure metals shine. And although it be written that no affliction for the present seemeth joyous, but grievous, it is also written that it afterward yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness to them that are exercised thereby. But let us examine the purifying agencies further. We learn from Acts xv. 9 that hearts were purified by faith. There is no mysterious process—no miraculous influence at work to purify hearts. It is by faith, it is true, but purity of heart cannot be imparted as a reward for faith; it springs out of a natural law; it is the the effect of a cause! Faith that operates by love; it is that which purifies the heart. But how does it purify? What is the process, I mean? Why, God's gracious covenants disclose so much of his love that we love him, as soon as we believe them; how could we help it? And the moment we love him, we want to keep his commandments,—want to please him; and to please him, we must be pure—only the pure in heart shall see God, and we want to see him; and our desire to see him makes us try to learn more of him from his Word, and to commune with him through our great High Priest,—and in the very nature of things we assimilate, or grow like to whatever we worship. If constantly in the company of those we love, we soon resemble them, and if our love be reciprocated they in some measure come to resemble us. This, very briefly, is the way by which I understand faith purifies our hearts, or minds. The mind of the flesh is displaced by the mind of the Spirit; because we love its manifestations.

Then we are told in 1 John iii. 3 that those who have the hope of seeing Jesus at his coming, and being made like him purifieth himself, even as he is pure. This is explained in the same way—the same natural way as faith is,—and passing on to 1 Peter i. 22 where obedience to the truth is said to purify souls, it operates in the same natural way. The truth commands purity, as essential to salvation; and therefore obedience to it, must purify. Oh, brothers and sisters, how is the work going on? It says if we have not the Spirit of Christ we are none of his. This does not mean that we shall not hate some things. He hates somethings, and expects us to hate the same, and commends those who hate them; what are we to hate? Persons? Oh no, they are deeds, and characters, and doctrines that are out of harmony with his will; not persons. See Rev. ii. 6, 15. When he who is purifying to himself a peculiar people watches the process, does he see himself in us, as does the refiner of silver see himself reflected by the metal? Oh, tried ones, that is what he is watching for. Oh, that we may not not flinch while in the furnace! May the trial of our faith be more precious than gold that it may be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ, which the daily announcements from the East assure us will not long be delayed. May we all make it the chief business of this life to adorn his doctrine, and truly represent him while absent, that we may be glad with exceeding joy to see the King in his beauty and hear his plaudit—well done. Amen.

I Believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God?

The people calling themselves Disciples or Christians require their converts to make the above confession. I wish to notice what it means to make such a confession and if they require their converts to believe the gospel as taught by Jesus and his apostles. Who used this language and what led to its use? In the 8th chapter of Acts we find Philip preaching to the eunuch who had been up to Jerusalem to worship. Philip preached Jesus to him. The Scripture being read at the time was a portion of the 53rd chapter of Isa. Are we compelled to believe that Philip preached alone from this Scripture, or did he use it as a starting point? He no doubt emphasized the one herein spoken of by referring to other testimony. Let us see what this same person preached on another occasion. In the fourth verse of this chapter we find this language, They that are scattered abroad went every where preaching the Word. Does not this mean the words that Christ commanded his apostles to preach, viz. Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned or condemned. To preach the Word is to preach the gospel. Acts viii. 5. Philip went down to the city of Samaria and preached unto them Christ. To preach the Word and to preach Christ is to preach the gospel which Paul says is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. Rom. i. 16.

Again in the 12th verse we find this language, When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God the name of Jesus Christ they were baptized both men and women. In this text we have the complete sentence as to what it is to preach Jesus, the Word and Christ. First the things concerning the kingdom of God. Second, the name of Jesus Christ. Here we affirm that Philip did not preach this in full to the eunuch? I think not. To believe this as preached in the 14th verse is the same as believing that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. To ask a person to give an affirmative answer to the title of this article is not making a good confession. They must know more, that they hear from those who preach a "three fact" gospel. They must know the things concerning the kingdom of God as well. These two thoughts are inseparably linked together and must be taught together. What is it to believe in the "things concerning the kingdom of God?" Listen to the angel's message to Mary, Luke i. 31-33, "Thou shalt bring forth a son and shall call his name Jesus. He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." To preach Jesus is to preach this message. This is the person that Philip preached to the eunuch. To preach him as the Son of God is to preach his right to David's throne and to the house of Jacob which means the kingdom of God. His name can only become great in connection with the kingdom of God which at this time had been overturned and is in that condition now. See Ezek. xxi. 27; Acts i. 6. It can only be restored when he (Christ) comes whose right it is and I will give it him. Acts iii. 21. During the time that Christ was with his apostles after the resurrection he spoke of the "things pertaining to the kingdom of God." Acts i. 3. If Christ preached these things to his apostles should we not preach the same? We are reminded that Paul spoke of the good confession that Christ made before Pilate. The charge that the Jews made against Jesus was that he claimed to be the Son of God, and the one whom they were expecting who would occupy David's throne. Just what the angel told Mary. Christ confessed this same truth. Pilate said unto him, Art thou a king then? To this end was I born and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth, every one that is of the truth heareth my voice. John xviii. 39. He was to receive a kingdom and rule over subjects. If not the language is misleading. In the 36th verse Christ tells Pilate that his kingdom was not of this arrangement. The word cosmos is here rendered world and does not mean earth but political arrangement but it was not from hence, that is this time. The apostles asked him in Acts i. 6, Wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel? The answer was not that the kingdom would not be restored at all, but it was not for him to know the times and the seasons that the Father had put in his own power. They had been directed to preach the gospel to every creature, and to preach that gospel was to preach Christ's claim to the throne of David. It is claimed that the gospel of the kingdom was preached up to Pentecost, after that the death, burial and resurrection was preached as the gospel. 1 Cor. xv. 1-4, is given as proof of this position. The following is McKnight's rendering of these verses. Now I make known to you, brethren, the gospel which I preached to you, which also ye received, and in which ye stand, by which also ye are saved, if ye remember in what manner I preached to you; unless indeed ye have believed rashly. For I delivered to you among the first things, what also I received first, that Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures. And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day, according to the Scriptures.

In the first verse the apostle states that he had preached the gospel to them which he now made known, which to them was salvation if they had not believed rashly. In the third and fourth verses he declares to them the death, burial and resurrection of Christ. He delivered to them among the first things what also he received first, that Christ died, was buried and rose again the third day. If these things had been omitted the gospel would not have been complete. Don't forget that the gospel was first preached in which was introduced the facts. This gospel embraced the restoration of the kingdom to Israel and Christ's right to sit on David's throne. Peter on Pentecost said, "Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his (David's) throne. The apostle preached this under the inspiration of the Spirit of God. Does this mean less that the angel's message to Mary, Luke i. 31-33. We think not. Then, why preach that Jesus was the Son of God, and not preach the full statement herein made, that the Lord God would give to that Son the throne of his father David. Acts xiii. 32-34, "We declare unto you glad tidings (the gospel), how that the promise which was made unto the fathers, God hath fulfilled the same unto us their children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is also written in the second Psalm, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. And as concerning that he raised him up from the dead, now no more to return to corruption, he said on this wise, I will give you (Christ) the sure mercies of David. The margin gives the "sure mercies" "the holy and just things", not the ordinary things that David had enjoyed. David reigned forty years in Jerusalem. His Son Christ will reign for ever and ever.

We have given but a small part of the proof texts on this very important subject, but trust that those interested will search the Scriptures to see if these things be true or not. We ask that every text given be carefully examined; also the arguments in proof of our position be noticed critically. To believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, as the eunuch confessed, you must accept the whole message in regard to his right to David's throne. The apostles were commanded to preach the gospel to every creature and they are required to believe the same and be baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus for the remission of sins. The order is believe, repent and be baptized, and then walk in the new life. If you thus walk an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God and he shall go no more out. Rev. iii. 12. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne." The Father hath promised some tangible things to those who overcome the world. He has made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth. Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth, nevertheless we, according to his promise look for a new heaven and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness. Rev. v. 10; Matt. v. 5; 2 Pet. iii. 13. Do not these texts speak of the same blessed hope, a position in his kingdom which will rule from sea to sea. His dominion shall embrace the whole earth. Psa. lxxii. Then will nations learn war no more. They shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks. Isa. ii. 4.

Beloved, now are we the sons of God (if we have believed the gospel) and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear; we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure. 1 John, iii. 3-4. Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope, through the Spirit of God is my prayer.

D. C. ROBISON.

The Treaty of Peace, and End of the War.

Nations like individuals do not always know what is before them. They are compelled to yield to circumstances that often rise up unexpectedly be they favorable or otherwise.

Human foresight at the best is extremely limited, and nearly always overlooks and miscalculates the various conditions that are liable to develop in the progress of a great war. Russia contrary to her anticipation, and humiliating to her autocratic pride is defeated on land and sea, and can no longer dictate terms to the Chinese.

The government of Russia doubtless regards the peace treaty as a tentative affair, only a truce until such time as it may feel prepared to assume the aggressive.

While Russia has lost both territory and prestige, Japan has gained both, and appears before the world as one of the foremost military and naval powers.

Western nations will hereafter count the cost before attempting any grab game of Chinese territory. Japan with the support of England in all probability will be the leading spirit in all political questions pertaining to the welfare of the far East.

Both belligerents are probably disappointed and more or less dissatisfied with the terms of peace, while at the same time both for various reasons are glad the bloody struggle has come to an end. Russia's internal troubles at home possibly made the Czar more anxious for peace than he otherwise would have been, while Japan was equally anxious to stop the expense the war entailed. The Mikado's government demanded a large money indemnity, but was in no way able to collect what her obstinate foe refused to give, and was therefore by the force of circumstances compelled to abandon the money indemnity to secure peace.

Those who study the prophecies are interested to know how and where in this great war is related to the purpose of Israel's God. Why was it necessary for Russia to be restrained and checkmated in the far East? There was certainly a purpose, a design, and I think we can discover the design of the Deity when we consider certain things revealed in the sure word of prophecy. Russia as the latter day Gog power in the prophetic field has a certain work to perform, within certain specified limits. The Czar's aggression in the far East is altogether outside the limit prophetically outlined.

The kings of, or from, the "Sun's rising" form no part of that great Confederacy of Nations that will at the appointed time acknowledge the leadership of the Russian autocrat. The countries absorbed and allied with Gog are all specifically named as follows:—Persia, Ethiopia, Libya, Gomar and all his bands, the house of Togarmar of the north quarters and all his bands. It will therefore be seen that China, Japan and Korea are outside of Gog's sphere of conquest and command. There is a prophecy specifically applicable to those kingdoms of the far East, but it does not come within Gogs provence to execute the fulfillment thereof.

The four great Empires of Daniel's prophecy as given in chapter iv. and vii. constitute the sum of the countries that become subject to the King of the North in the latter days. The Russian autocrat in his ambition to conquest the nations of the East was outside of his divinely allotted sphere of activity, working in a direction not intended, and therefore contrary to the will and purpose of God. Gog's mission is to combine the elements of Nebuchadnezzar's image and cause it to stand upon its feet at the crisis in human affairs, when the "little stone cut out without hands shall smite the image on its feet and grind it to powder, as it is written" then shall the gold, silver, brass, iron and clay be destroyed together.

We are justified now in looking from this time forward to see the latter day Gog power develop the condition of things divinely outlined as his work. He will continue to cherish the ambition of conquesting the nations of the east including India with China. He will not however, go forth to battle for the empire of the east until he is duly prepared, and it is this work of making the necessary preparation that will be intensely interesting to all waiting ones who are watching the signs of the times.

We can cautiously venture to forecast some of the details, that go to fill up the outlines of the prophetic picture, but cannot speak with certainty. After the internal discontent of the Czar's subjects at home is settled and the people become pacified with some minor concession of greater freedom, it is quite probable that an effort will be made to bring about a coalition of all the continental powers, particularly Germany, Austria and France to counteract the commercial and political influence of England and Japan in the east, in the meantime gradually absorbing Armenia and Persia, seeking an outlet to southern waters at the Persian gulf. If this shall prove to be the course of events, the blending of the Greco-Latin elements of the Roman world will follow, but what changes will occur to aid and establish the autocrats sovereignty over southern and western Europe, and northern Africa as well it is impossible to say. Providentially the map of Europe will undergo a change, but whether it will in the main be done peaceably, or by military force, we can only wait to see. It is possible that some of the continental powers like Germany and Austria and France will be partially broken or weakened by war and civil strife among their own people, and thus by virtue of their weakness, yield submissively to the Gogian dictator. It is absolutely certain that the four kingdoms that led Israel into captivity and desolated their land, and wore out the saints, will become subject either through self interest or by force to Russia, for thus it is written, and we know that the written decree of Jehovah will surely come to pass.

The Gog power as the head of gold leads in his train as the dictator Persia, Greece and Rome; hence the Greek and Latin nations of modern Europe come under the sovereignty of the Czar. With such a confederacy of nations, and the vast military forces thereof under the leadership of the Russian autocrat he will be prepared to enter upon his ambitious career of conquesting the eastern world.

In the meantime, however, there are other events transpiring, in no way recognized as antagonistic to Gog's ambition but nevertheless cause his overthrow and ruin in the day of his military success. Of this, however, I reserve for another article.

True Sayings.

A good example is the best sermon.

A clear conscience can bear any trouble.

A wise man changes his mind, but a fool never.

A civil denial is better than a rude grant.

It is not how long, but how well we live.

Industry is fortune's right hand, and frugality her left.

No one is a fool always, everyone sometimes.

Better pass a danger once than be always in fear.

Better a little in peace and with right than much in anxiety and strife.

When there is room in the heart there is room in the house.

A silent man's words are not brought into court.

A rich dress is not worth a straw to one who has a poor mind.

Contentment gives a crown where fortune has denied it.

Truth—the open, bold, honest truth, is always the safest, for any one, in all circumstances.

He that will not be counseled can not be helped.

As every thread of gold is valuable, so is every minute of time.

A fool demands much, but he is a greater that gives it.

Give neither counsel nor salt until you are asked for it.

Seek not to please the world, but your own conscience.

Strong passions work wonders when there is a stronger reason to curb them.

You may take the greatest trouble and by turning it around find joys on the other side.

If one thinks that he shall not, it too often happens that he will not please.

It is always well to learn, even from our enemies—seldom safe to instruct our friends.

Doubt is the vestibule which all must pass before they can enter the temple of wisdom.

If some persons were to bestow one-half their fortune in learning how to spend the other half, it would be money extremely well laid out.

The Old Earth.

Old Mother Earth is wan and pale,
Her face is wrinkled sore;
Her locks are blanched, her heart is cold,
Her garments stiff with gore;
With furrowed brow and dim sad eyes,
With trembling steps and slow,
She marks the course that first she trod,
Six thousand years ago.

The Earth is old, the Earth is cold,
She shivers and complains;
How many winters fierce and chill
Have racked her limbs with pains!
Dread tempests, lightning, flood and flame,
Have scarred her visage so,
That scarce we deem she shone so fair
Six thousand years ago!

Yet comely was the youthful Earth,
And lightly tripped along
To music from a starry choir,
Whose sweet celestial song
Through Nature's temple echoed wild,
And soft as streamlets flow,
Where sister spheres replied with her,
Six thousand years ago!

And many happy children there
Upon her breast reclined,
The young earth smiled with aspect fair,
The heavens were bright and kind:
The azure rope above her head
In love seems blending here!
Oh happy was the youthful Earth,
Six thousand years ago!

Alas! these children of the Earth
With hate began to burn,
And murder stained her beauteous robes
And bade the young Earth mourn.
Red ages, heavy ages, still
Have bowed with gathering woe
The form of her whose life was joy,
Six thousand years ago!

Old Earth! dear Earth! thy tender heart
Bewails thy chosen ones;
Thou look'st upon the myriad graves
That hide their gathered bones;
For them, by day and night, thy tears
Unceasingly must flow;
Death chilled the fountain heads of life,
Six thousand years ago!

Old Earth! Old Earth! above thy head
The heavens are dark and chill,
The sun looks coldly on thee now,
The stars shine pale and still;
No more the heavenly symphonies
Through listening ether flow,
Which swelled upon creation's ear,
Six thousand years ago!

Weep not in bitter grief, O Earth!
Weep not in hopelessness!
From out the heavens "a still small voice"
Whispers returning peace.
Thy tears are precious in the sight
Of one who marks their flow,
Who purposes of mercy formed,
Six thousand years ago!

Thy days of grief are numbered all,
Their sum will soon be told:
Thy joy of youth, the smile of God,
Shall bless thee as of old;
Shall shed a purer, holier light
Upon thy peaceful brow,
Than beamed upon thy morning hour
Six thousand years ago!

Thy chosen ones shall live again,
A countless, tearless throng,
To wake creation's voice anew,
And swell the choral song,
Go, Earth! go wipe thy falling tears,
Forget thy heavy woe:
Hope died not with thy first-born sons,
Six thousand years ago!

Life and Letters of the Apostle Paul as our Example. No. 11.

Paul was a great character of a great period in the world's history. The life of such a man is of sufficient importance to engage the attention of every thoughtful mind. It may be a debatable question as to which exerts the greater influence, the man upon the period in which he lives and acts; or the period with circumstances belonging to it, upon the man to develop the gifts with which nature has endowed him. The state of the world at the introduction of Christianity seemed to have been providentially pre-arranged with a view to affording a field for the operation of such gifts as Paul possessed, both natural and supernatural. The world's need was a religion such as Christianity. Instrumentalities and agencies adequate to the task of placing it before both Jew and Gentile were prepared. The mission field was broader than Palestine and the Jewish nation, "Go disciple all nations" was the great commission under which the ambassadors of the cross were to labor—especially to this world-wide enterprise was the apostle Paul set apart, "a chosen vessel to bear the name of the Lord before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel." How broadly this divinely appointed mission contrasts with the one of his own choice as zealot of the law, the persecution of the disciples of Christ.

Under the name of Saul the subject of my paper comes before us in New Testament history as a young man present at the stoning of Stephen and consenting unto his death; and from thenceforth becoming, for a time, the most zealous and bitter opponent of the new faith; in the language of Luke he made havoc of the Church, entering into every house, and hailing men and women, committed them to prison. It seems a pity that our great apostle, the man without a peer among those bearing this official title should rank first, as a blasphemer and persecutor. 1 Tim. i. 13. In an incidental allusion or two made by himself to this part of his life there appears in the meaning of his words a deep and sincere regret, if not remorse, in view of what he did; confessing himself the chief of sinners, and less than the least of all saints and making his evil conduct toward the church to offset in a measure the honor pertaining to his high office. He only wished to humbly say, "By the grace of God I am what I am." What a marvelous change had been wrought in the man. Here was true conversion if ever. The zeal that had so lately spent itself in an evil course was turned into a new channel, and the heart that breathed out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord was now tenderly solicitous for the salvation of sinners. The strength of that iron will that was so determined to uphold the sanctity and integrity of the law was now to carry Paul through a world of opposition in his proclamation of the gospel. His soul was made strong to "suffer great things" for the name of Jesus.

He began to proclaim the honor of that name to his countrymen in Damascus, and to men and women whom he intended to seize with violent hands and bear away to prison. He was "not disobedient to the heavenly vision" but "straightway preached in the synagogues," that Jesus was the Son of God and showed them (the Jews), that they should "turn to God and do works meet for repentance." His zeal for the law was the measure of his zeal for the gospel. So the truth as represented by Galilean fisherman found in Paul a powerful advocate who was able to plant its standard on shores far distant from Palestine. The beginning of his ministry followed immediately his conversion, and the first city to hear his words was Damascus to which he was going a few days before as high sheriff bearing letters or warrants from the high priest, authorizing him to seize and bind men and women of the Christian faith and bring them to Jerusalem for trial and punishment. It was in the synagogues that he preached Christ or the Anointed Son of God to Jewish audiences whose hatred and malice was aroused against the man who had so recently from a zealous defender of the law turned to preaching Christ and the resurrection, thus proving himself a traitor to the Jewish cause. He was more than a match for his opponents, for it is written that "he confounded them"  proving (or as in the Diaglott) demonstrating to them that this was the Messiah. His boldness in defending the faith was likely to get him into trouble, for the Jews took counsel to kill him, and watched the gates of the city day and night, and were only thwarted in their purpose by the disciples taking him by night and letting him down by the wall in a basket. Acts ix. 22-25. His missionary labors were now fairly commenced. Luke in this book of the Acts has sketched the history of his labors and persecutions, and the Apostle himself in some of his epistles, especially the two addressed to the Corinthian church has supplemented what Luke wrote. After gathering up these several fragments, and learning all we can about this man, so "abundant in labors," we feel the record is all too brief. We would like to know more about one who enacted so marvelous a part in the shifting drama of the times when the law was being superceded by the faith of the gospel, and the ancient superstitions of the Gentiles vanishing before the light of the risen Sun of righteousness.

The work of preaching among all nations, necessitating long and wearisome journeys was no trifling matter; especially in those days when we take into consideration the primitive modes of travel in comparison with those of today; but when we add to this the incessant opposition provoked by the truth in conflict with error resulting often in physical suffering and anguish of mind, we may well wonder how he could endure it all, especially if he was the frail man tradition represents him to have been. Here is what he has to say of himself under the head of boasting, the occasion for which was that some in the church at Corinth were calling in question Paul's authority as an apostle, and were forwarding the claims of certain Judaizing teachers in opposition to him. He acknowledges his folly in thus boasting, but charges the Corinthians with forcing him to do what they should have done, that is commended him as not behind those who had been reckoned as chief apostles; for the marks of an apostle had been seen in the deeds that he wrought among them, in signs and wonders and miracles, with steadfast endurance of persecution. In view of these rival claimants he asks, Are they Hebrews? So am I. Are they children of Israel? So am I. Are they the seed of Abraham? So am I. Are they the servants of Christ? So am I. Thus far as to the flesh they had no advantage, but as a servant of Christ he could truthfully say, "Far more am I." "In labors more abundant, in stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent, in deaths oft. Five times I received from the Jews the "forty stripes save one;" thrice I was scourged with Roman rods; once I was stoned and left for dead; thrice I suffered shipwreck; a night and a day I spent in the open sea. In journeyings often, in perils of rivers, in perils from my countrymen, in perils from the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren, in toil and weariness, often in sleepless watchings, in hunger and thirst, often without bread to eat, in cold and nakedness. And besides all the rest, there is the crowd which presses upon me daily, and the care of all the churches. Who is weak but I share his weakness? Who is caused to fall, but I burn with indignation? If I must needs boast it shall not be my strength, but in my weakness." 2 Cor. xi. Here is enumerated enough that was undergone by Paul to dry up the spirits of most men—to utterly discourage and cause them to abandon, for some other calling, their chosen field of labor where everything seems to conspire to make bitter their lot amidst all this opposition, these labors, these sufferings and these cares, this apostle could say, "My light afflictions which last but for a moment work for me a weight of glory, immeasurable and eternal. The secret of his endurance was his faith in the promises of God. He says, "For I know that he who raised our Lord Jesus from the dead shall raise me also by Jesus, and shall call me into his presence together with you." Shall we proclaimers of these last days, with so little opposition, faint and grow weary?

No, dear brothers and sisters, I hope not, but let each and every one of us take fresh courage from our study of the life of Paul; that at the end of this mortal existence we may all have the confidence to feel as did this great apostle in his last days that "we have fought a good fight, we have finished a course; we have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for us a crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give us (the overcomers) at that day." My sincere prayer is that we all be overcomers.

STERLING P. GROVES.

Dear Restitution:

As I have just returned from the vicinity of Strasburg, Va., where I spent thirteen days visiting the daughter and grandchildren of our much esteemed Brother and Sister Hockman, who have both fallen asleep in Jesus, in a ripe old age, blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, for their works do follow them. Soon after the War between the North and the South, during the years of my husband's pilgrimage, it was our happy lot to live near this Brother Hochman. Though in our first acquaintance with him and his family they were not of our faith, but very much prejudiced against it, but this soon gave way on a further acquaintance. It was the custom of my husband, wherever he located to enter into the synagogue of our day, on the first day of the week and teach the people, and Brother Hockman and family became regular attendants never missing an opportunity, and in a short time they made up their minds to put on Christ by baptism, the notice of which was given out at the close of one of our meetings, at which time their daughter, Sister Jane, that I have just visited arose and said while it is called today, I will also come out of Babylon. We then went from the place of meeting to the beautiful Shenandoah River where they were all buried with Christ in baptism, and arose to walk in newness of life. O this was a beautiful scene to witness, the father and mother, and daughter, all having died to him, now lying buried beneath the flowing waters, and rising in the likeness of his resurrection to do as did the eunuch of old, go on their way rejoicing in hope of eternal life. Sister Jane is a good sister, and she makes the Bible and THE RESTITUTION her companions, there being no congregation of our faith near enough for her to meet with. I must say that she made good use of her time, for she is quite a Bible scholar, and by her industry and economy she has accumulated plenty of this world's goods to keep her comfortable, and she seems to be inclined to take the advice of the apostle Paul. He said they that married did well, and they that did not marry did better. She had taken the better part on the side of single blessedness, and her home is a complete little museum, one can be interested for days or even weeks looking over handy work, and the many relics which she has so carefully kept in store. And O the quiet life that she lives, I told her it surely was a paradise compared to the turmoils of life in the busy world around. It had been some seventeen years since I had met with her and her nephews, one of them lives near her, and one at Strasburg, and one at Fishershill, and her sister Mrs. Coffelt lives a few miles away, she too seems to be much interested in Bible teaching. These nephews are the sons of Bro. Hockman, youngest son Samuel, (now deceased). He was also a believer of the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, and my husband assisted him in putting on Christ by baptism after he was confined to his room. His sons are now all grown men and have very interesting families. I visited them all, and will ever appreciate and remember their kindness and especially the water-mellon feast which I enjoyed among them all and at Charley's in particular near Fishershill. Now may they all be blessed in every good work and work is the prayer of your friend.

The Kingdom of Christ.

Editor:

Will you allow space in the Advocate for a few thoughts for the benefit of both old and young? My theme is "The Coming of the Kingdom of Christ." If there is one thing above all others, that all true believers of God's Word are hoping and praying for, it is the coming kingdom of Christ. Why? Because God has promised "to set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all other kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." Dan. ii. 44. "He (the Christ) shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the end of the earth. Yea all kings shall fall down before him; all nations shall serve him." Psalm lxxii. 8-11. See also Dan. vii. 14.

When this kingdom is established under the heavens, and on the earth, as it will be according to the oath of God, then the earth will become altogether beautiful; like the "Garden of Eden," as God in his own good time intended it should be "filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." Hab. ii. 14. "For thou a King shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment." Isa. xxxii. 1.

This grand and glorious time is sure, because "God hath appointed a day in which he will judge (rule) the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead." Acts xvii. 31.

This man who is to rule the world is none other than the Stem of Jesse, and a branch out of his roots; "and the spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him; the spirit of wisdom and understanding; the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord; and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears; but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth, and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips he shall slay the wicked." Isa. xi. 1-4. There will then be no Prime Ministers, Judges or Lawyers, wearing two faces under one hat. But equity, right and justice will be the order in the day of his power.

Well, it is evident that that is not the case today. We see all around us socially, religiously and politically, corruption and fraud. We see all nations differing in language, tastes, appearance, ambitions and modes of life; each one considering itself superior in most respects to the others; each one taking advantage of every opportunity of benefitting itself at the expense of the others. The rulers of these various nations and kingdoms are human and sinful like their subjects; many of them fear not God nor keep his commandments. The world is divided against itself. The nations strive one against the other in their efforts to gain fresh power and wealth, and as a consequence there is war, death, disease, poverty, misery and sin is rampant, and we look for a kingdom divine and universal in which there will be none of these things, and which will have as its centre the one Man among men—the perfect Son of God, Christ Jesus. There is no doubt about it—he is coming! "He shall send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto you: whom the heavens must receive until the time of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Acts iii. 20-21.

Most of our fellow creatures do not look for this kingdom upon earth. They hope for a future existence in heaven, where they hope to go when they die. But as the Bible is silent upon this strange idea, we dare not share their belief, and, more than that, we do not wish to! My dear friends, what is the matter with this grand old earth? Do you wish to leave it as soon as you can for some "shadowy land" beyond the bounds of time and space? or, do you not, with me, long for an existence here on earth from which sin has been swept away, in which sorrow has no place, and which knows no death? That is a hope worth having, and Christ is a King worth worshipping! Listen, "the Son of Man shall come in his glory and the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." Then will come the time when "the Lord of Hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously." Isa. xxiv. 23.

Christ is coming to subdue all the human governments of the earth, and there will be one divine government which will be in his hands, and the seat of that government will be at Jerusalem. "Out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem." Isa. ii. 3.

Christ and his saints will then occupy themselves in effecting in the fullest sense the redemption of the world—a task which sadly needs accomplishing. In place of injustice there will be justice; sorrow will be turned into joy; war will give way to peace. "He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree." "Then cometh the end, when he shall deliver up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule and authority and power."

Men of the world are scoffing at the idea of such a kingdom. They laugh at those whose lives are brightened and made happier at the prospect. Let them laugh. What says the Book? "There shall come in the last days scoffers, saying, Where is the promise of his coming; for all things continue as they were." Therefore be steadfast, be hopeful, be patient. Keep your hearts and minds inclined to the "things which be of God," to the end that, having fulfilled God's necessary acts of obedience, you may occupy an honorable position in the "Coming Kingdom of Christ" and join with that gladsome throng in singing, "Thou art worthy to take the Book and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation, and hath made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth." Rev. v. 9-10.—Thos. Cronkhite, in Algonia Advocate.

The Hope of Israel.

"For if the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the gathering of them be, but life from the dead?" Rom. xi. 15.

When we look abroad on the world around us, and so plainly see all things pointing toward Christ's precious promise—"I will come again"—we cannot fail to be struck with one remarkable fact, and that is the gradual building up again of Jerusalem and the return of many of the Jews to their own land. What a wonderful nation the Jewish nation has been! found in every quarter of the globe, under every climate, under every form of government, wearing the indelible mask of their nationality on their features, with the same fidelity to the institutions of their fathers and the same faith in the promises of their God—and to them are those wonderful promises made which are found in Jeremiah, and where the Lord has sworn by himself because he could swear by none greater.

When we begin to compare the position of that people under the different governments of the present day, and see what history tells us it was not over fifty years ago, we may in some measure understand how all things are working together, under Divine guidance to bring about the fulfillment of prophecy at a day not far off; we see many individuals of the Jewish race rising to remarkable pre-eminence in the world; it is scarcely necessary to name the family of the Rothschilds whose banking houses are established in almost every capital in Europe. Sir Moses Montefiore, the English baronet who has done so much towards the advancement and prosperity of Jerusalem, and not least among these, Britain's late talented and esteemed Prime Minister, Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield.

It seems strange that the religious bodies around us, as a rule are blind to the more sure word of prophecy, and reject the very notion of Israel's future glory under the government of the King of Righteousness and Peace, but their blindness will no more affect the fact of the restoration than the blindness of the Jews could affect the appearance of Christ.

If by any means (says Paul speaking of his people in Rom. ix.) I may provoke to emulation them which are of my flesh, and save some of them. How naturally the tender heart of the great apostle of the Gentiles turned towards his own brethren, and how full of pathos are his words, "If the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the gathering of them be, but life from the dead?" Peter, who has been always called the apostle of the Jews, commences his first epistle thus: Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the elect strangers of the dispersion in Pontus, Asia, Galatia, etc., for twenty years he labored in Judea and Samaria preaching the gospel and afterwards spent many years in Babylon, which held the largest population of Jews next to Jerusalem, writing to them concerning the end of their faith he says, "Concerning which salvation prophets inquired and searched diligently, even they who prophesied of the grace which should come to you and searching what manner of time the spirit of Christ which was in them should signify, when it testified beforehand, the sufferings of Christ and the glory which should follow." The prophet Jeremiah tells us that when Christ returns the Jewish nation will be willing to receive him and cry, "Turn thou me, and I shall be turned, for thou art the Lord my God." "In those days saith the Lord, I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and the house of Judah; I will put my law in their inward parts, and write in their hearts, and I will be their God, and they shall be my people."—Helena M. Hunt.

Don'ts for Christians.

Don't get in and ride while the pastor is tugging up hill. Get out and push.

Don't suck the juice out of all the orange at prayer-meeting. Let others have a bite.

Don't give up the ship because it is dark and rocky. Watch the chart, "the morning cometh."

Don't stand all the day idle. "The devil will get into the saddle if you hold the stirrup."

Don't take any paper that begins Christian with a little "c." Remember we are twenty-five million strong.

Don't take two secular dailies to one religious weekly, and then wonder why your boys "go to the dogs."

Don't constantly hound the young people because they have their faults. Put yourself in their place, and cheer them on.

Don't hold office for life. When you think your usefulness is done, step down and out with Christian grace.

Don't be a sitter, a splitter, or a kicker, but a master-builder. An official "at ease in Zion," a divider, an obstructionist—"the Lord have mercy on his soul."—Stephen A. Northrop, D. D.

"I shall pass through this world but once. Any good thing, therefore, that I can do, or any kindness I can show to any human being, let me do it now. Let me not defer it nor neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again."

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the November Conference of the Church of God in Indiana is to convene in the Church of God at Plymouth at 7:30 P. M. November 18, 1905, the said Conference to continue over the following Sunday. Now, brethren and sisters, come to this gathering. The fall work will be over by that time. Begin now to make arrangements to be present. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth as it is in Jesus, not only in Indiana, but also in adjoining states. We want a spiritual meeting. Let us work for it, expect it, and come. Brother and Sister Woodward of Michigan are expected to be with us.

"Christ loves to dwell in a house which is built according to his own plans, and not according to the whims and fancies of men. The church ought not to set up as her authority the decree of men, either living or dead; her ruler is Christ. Associations formed otherwise than according to Scripture must fail in the long run. I wish Christians would believe this. Chillingworth said: 'The Bible, and the Bible alone, is the religion of Protestants.'"

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

Seventy-five More.

I receive enquiries as to when Pine Woods Bible Class Book will be printed?

In answer, I will say, when I receive seventy-five more subscriptions, the book can be printed, and sent forth on its mission, to teach the glad tidings. If all who really want it had said so, it could now be out sowing seed. When God's professed servants make his cause a secondary matter, and put it off to a "convenient time," his cause suffers. Now all who really want the book please sit down and write me, as soon as you have read this, and then things will move at once. Don't wait until a more convenient time. God's business demands prompt attention.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.
W. H. WILSON.

Announcement.

The Conference at Rollin, Kansas, will be held on October 18, and last over Sunday. Accommodations will be furnished all who come. Those so desiring may bring some bedding, and some of the buildings can be used for lodging. A number of speakers will be present. Come and make the plan of a fraternal unity in Christ a success. Now, if ever, seems to be the time to do something for the colony. So come. Show your love for Christ and his body by a heroic, sacrificing effort of love, to live together in harmony and helpfulness.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us about, give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can hold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and our order will be much more promptly attended

WAITING.—HEBREWS, IX:, XXV, 9.

Then we believe he is coming, there are many that do not; they have no faith in that which is told them about our Lord's return, they scoff at the idea, and ask where is the promise of his coming? It was foretold such would come in the last days. But we believe he is surely coming, we have faith in the testimony of patriarchs, prophets, the Savior, angels and the apostles, these all declare he will come and we credit their testimony. Yes, the sure Word of prophecy shines as a light in a dark place.

Waiting for Jesus. Then are we all ready to meet him? What is implied in being ready? Nothing short of holiness of heart, without holiness no man shall see the Lord. Heb. xii. 14. Can we be waiting for such a stupendous and glorious event when we know that we are not holy? Do we dream of going into the holy city with impure hearts and unclean hands? No, our garments must be washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb. Christ loved the Church and gave himself for it, that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the Word, that he might present it to himself a glorious Church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish. Then if we are waiting for Jesus we must be members of this holy, spotless Church.

When Jesus was on earth he said to his disciples, Let not your heart be troubled, I go to prepare a place for you, but I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am ye may be also. John xiv. 3. Yes, he has gone and today we are looking for him, and like the Church of Thessalonica have turned from idols to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come. 1 Thes. i. 9-10. Then how blessed is this attitude, saved by grace and hoping for glory, looking back to the cross for deliverance from wrath and onward to the crown for deliverance from death.

Waiting for Jesus. Then we must be looking for him, and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation. Then let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience and our bodies washed with pure water. Then let us all press on, overcome by the help of God every discouragement; when we feel like giving up think of the glad time when with a shout and the voice of God the Lord shall descend and gather all the faithful ones, when we shall see the King in his beauty gather about his throne and a vast throng, thousands upon thousands clad in the white robes of righteousness swell the glad song of Moses and the Lamb, Grander, far grander than the multitude of angels sang at his birth, because those assembled will bear the palms of victory over sin and the grave. Can we be there? We can if we strive to overcome and deny ungodliness and worldly lusts in this present age, and be looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ.

Paul says that a crown is laid up for him and for all them that love his appearing, for yet a little while, how short, how short. The coming One will come and will not tarry. Ah, that is what I'm wanting, his lovely face to see, and I am not ashamed to say it, I know he is waiting me.

EMILY GUSTAS.

Dear brothers and sisters:

The lesson I have chosen is "Perseverance," that is, to continue in the things that we have heard. Nevertheless, if we are united for his name's sake, let us persevere in all things that pertain to Christ and his works, for he says in Luke ix. 62, "No man having put his hand to the plough, and looking back is fit for the kingdom of God." But let us one and all keep our eye on the prize of our high calling in Christ Jesus, and he will own and bless us. Let us continue with one accord in prayer and supplication unto the coming of our Lord, rejoice in hope, and be patient in tribulation, and be of the same mind one to another. For Rom. xii. 20 says, "If thine enemy hunger, feed him, if he is thirsty, give him drink, for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head." For if we always abound in the works of the Lord, we know that our labor is not in vain, and he will repay us bountifully at his coming. So let our aim be high, ever keeping his promises before us, and when dark clouds overshadow us; let us look through the storm and gloom, to that peaceful rest that remains for the people of God, and then when we see the clouds with the silver lining, we can thank him for guiding us through, for on every hand some one is ready to take our crown. So let us be watching, and have on the breast plate, and able to say no to the evils that beset us, and walk in the narrow path, that leads to life, and then when our Lord shall come, it will be our happy lot to hear him say, "Well done." May we all hear him say these words is my prayer. Amen.

SUSIE NICHOLLS.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I have chosen for my subject the 12th verse in the 8th chapter of John the words that Jesus says of himself, "I am the light of the world, he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." And again in John xii. 46, "I am come a light into the world, that whosoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness." And again, "As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world." John says of him, "He is the light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world." John i. In the 9th chapter of John we read how Jesus healed the blind man. He had been blind from his very birth, the light had been shining around him all the long dark years of his life, but he had never seen it. In working this miracle Jesus would show the people this truth, not only that he is the light, but the Giver of light also. Blindness was and still is one of the commonest afflictions in the eastern countries, and this miracle which Jesus wrought on the blind man aptly typified the spiritual condition of the people at that time. They were spiritually blind, they had eyes but they saw not. Jesus the true light was present among them, shining in the fulness of his glory and revealing unto them the Father, but they refused to see. We need not only the light, but the power to see it, and if we are not willfully blind, he will give us sight and also flood our hearts with heavenly light, enabling us to see even God himself.

When Jesus died on the cross the light of the world was put out, but he had said to his disciples, "Ye shall be witnesses." Acts i. 18. And again, "Ye are the light of the world." Matt. v. 14. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid, neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick, and it giveth light unto all that are in the house." Matt. v. 15. By the light of a Christian, God seeketh the sinner out of Christ. Are we, dear brothers and sisters, abiding in Christ and he in us, are we shining for him, are we presenting the gospel so brightly that others are being drawn to him? The Lord Jesus has come into the hearts of every one here to day, are we reflecting his light? Perhaps we are shining a little for Jesus, if so how can we make our lives brighter, more Christ-like?

Do you know how candles used to be made in the days of our grand parents? The wicks were fastened to a stick and dipped in hot tallow. In this way a thin layer of tallow adhered, after it had cooled they were dipped again and so on until the candle was of the required size. Is it not just so in our Christian lives? The oftener we dip down into the fountain of Christ's love the brighter our lives become and the better are we equipped for his service. The wick for the candle must be perfectly free from knots and frayed edges, else the light will be flickering and uncertain. So we cannot shine brightly and steadily for Christ unless we give up every thing that is contrary to his will. We must ask him to cut away that frayed edge of worldliness, that tangle of temper and pride, and pray that he will smooth out of our lives that difficult knot of self love. This done, we may diprecly into his love and come up each time from the fountain smooth, well-rounded, consistant Christians.

A candle is not self-lighted, it might stand forever in its place, unless some one touched it with fire. So also with the Christian, God through Christ kindles us into life, he inspires us with a desire for service, and only as our hearts are touched by his love can we hope to be blessed in our work for him. Put a lighted candle in a glass jar—what do we find? The light flickers and finally goes out for want of air to sustain it. The Christian so long as he is in personal contact and communion with God will shine brightly in the world, but let him begin to wander away, let him forget to speak oft with his Lord and feed on his Word and the light will grow dim and often go out all together. Let us keep close to our light to Jesus that we may not walk in darkness that we may be able to accomplish all that he desires us to do in this world. We may think that we cannot do much for him; perhaps we can do nothing that would seem worthy to us, but if Christ has touched us and kindled us into a flame, all we have to do is to keep on shining and leave results to him. God has never lighted a candle but he has some work for us to do—some lost soul to seek. Think of it for a moment just now. The Lord has called us out of darkness into his marvelous light, he has entrusted the ministering of his Word—the gospel to us. Each of us is responsible to him for some soul and shall we shirk the responsibility? Let us begin our work by taking our nearest duty. Perhaps it may be small and insignificant, but this well done shall help to fit us for greater work. Let us each of us here today work the works of him who has called us while yet it is day, for the night cometh when no man can work. Let us strive to enter that city, where there shall be no night and no need of a candle, neither light of the sun, and they shall reign for ever and ever. Rev. xii. 5. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them and shall lead them unto living fountains of water, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes. Rev. vii. 17. Are you struggling along in the face of discouragements and trouble and care? This is the reward to him that overcometh. Is it not worth striving for? May God help us all to be among the faithful, among those that have their lights burning when Jesus comes with his reward.

SISTER KLINGENSTEIN.

ARDENTLY DEVOTED TO A GOOD CAUSE.

The prosperity of every undertaking may be said to increase or diminish as we are earnest and zealous, or discouraged and half-hearted. Writing to the Galatian church Paul says it is honorable to be ardently devoted to a good cause at all times, and not only during my presence with you. Diagiott.

If the cause is good then it is worth while to be ardently devoted to it, and without any hesitancy we can say the cause is good. David says, the purpose of God is to cover the earth with his glory, and Habakuk says the earth will be filled with the knowledge of the glory of God as the waters cover the sea. To this end God has promised to establish his kingdom on the earth, and will send forth his Son to whom he has given all power in heaven and on earth to be Ruler and King. And Isaiah declares he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears, but with righteousness will he judge the poor and decide with equity for the meek of the earth.

Is it not a glorious cause, and should we not be ambitious to be ardently devoted to it, and the more so, when we remember that the promise is to him that overcometh and keepeth my works to the end, to him will I give power over the nations, and will grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne. But I fear it is not knowledge we lack so much as zeal. Can we say we are ardently devoted to the cause at all times. Can we? Peter exhorts, Wherefore the rather brethren, give all diligence to make your calling and election sure. And Paul says, We ought to give the more earnest heed to the things we have heard, lest at any time we let them slip, and again let us lay aside every weight and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race set before us, and when he was speaking of running a race he said to so run that ye may obtain, for we run for an incorruptible crown. We see from these quotations there is great danger of losing the crown unless we are intensely interested, and are pressing toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. If we are really alive to the grandeur of this calling it would seem impossible to be indifferent, for what can compare to an incorruptible crown with glory and honor and power in the kingdom of God. No wonder Paul says, I count all things but refuse that I may win Christ, and attain unto the resurrection of the dead. It is a good thing to meet often to stimulate each other to love and good works that we hold fast the beginning of our confidence steadfast to the end.

Peter gives us a good rule, he says, I would not be negligent to put you in remembrance of these things, though ye know them and be established in the present truth. Yea, I think it meet as long as I am in this tabernacle to stir you up by putting you in remembrance. If Peter felt this way, should not we? Sometimes when urgently requesting regular attendance at meetings, we are told, I would like too, but I have not the time. Well, I would lay aside something else, even if it seemed important, lest the cares of this world choke the Word and we become unfruitful. We have been called from darkness into marvelous light, the glorious light of the gospel, and we are commanded to let our light shine. I fear that we do not always realize that the gospel which is God's power unto salvation, must not stop short with us, must not be hid under a bushel, but be proclaimed and taught that others may have the priviledge of believing and obeying the truth.

The meeting together of the sisters every two weeks regularly, was the outgrowth of an earnest desire to be really fruit-bearing branches, and to you, dear sisters, I would say, be not weary in well doing, stablish your hearts, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh, continue to meet and encourage each other to hold fast the profession of your faith without wavering. The keynote of the gospel is self denial, first the cross and then the crown. You are doing a good work in helping each other, and in assisting and aiding the proclamation of the gospel, that while there is yet time, others may hear the Word of life and believe and obey and be saved.

MRS. MATTIE NEILL.

JESUS OUR LIFE.

In John xi. 25, Jesus declares himself the resurrection and the life. If he had not come to free us from the curse of sin our destiny would have been dead eternal. He came and died that we might have life and have it more abundantly. Should we not recognize and be glad that Christ through his death brought us life, life everlasting, life without pain, sorrow, sickness, parting, grief and weariness, life full of peace and joy and gladness, life which our poor imaginations cannot portray or describe. To obtain this life there are conditions to observe.

The first which Christ tells us about is in Matt. vi. 25. Jesus warns us of over anxiety about provision for this mortal life, because it might become a snare for us. His second admonition we find in Matt. xviii. 8. We are commanded to pluck out and throw away whatsoever would hinder us from entering eternal life. In the 19th chapter 17th verse, we are told that we must keep God's commandments if we would inherit life eternal. Christ also tells us not to covet things of this earth because our real life does not consist in what we possess. Our life is much more than the meat and whatsoever we need to sustain ourselves. The evangel of John is full of declarations about the life which Christ purchased for us through his death. Chapter 1, verse 4 tells us that in him was life and that life was also the light of men. Without this life we would be in utter darkness, in ignorance, woe and misery. With it we have peace and joy and knowledge. In John v. 24 is another condition we must comply with. We must hear the Word of God and believe it. Must be doers of the same, not only hearers. We must search the Scripture because in them is eternal life, for the reason that they testify of Christ Jesus. In verse 40 Jesus deplores that they would not come to him that they might receive life from him.

In the sixth chapter Christ declares himself the bread of life. He commands us not to labor so exclusively for the things which perish, but to prepare for the life to come. He tells the people that Moses did not give them the true bread from heaven, but his Father hath sent him to bring life everlasting to the world. When the people asked him to give them this bread of life, he declares that he himself is this bread. That those who come to him in faith shall never hunger more nor thirst. In verse 40 Christ tells us that it is the will of the Father that every one who believes in Christ the Son shall have everlasting life and shall be raised up at the last day. O for the glorious promise given unto us. In verse 47 Christ emphasizes this promise when he says again, Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that believeth on me hath everlasting life, and again I am the bread of life. All hesitation and doubt ought to disappear after so many solemn declarations. In verse 51 Christ tells us that he will give his own body of flesh to procure us this precious life, and he pronounces us lifeless if we do not partake of his flesh and blood. If we partake of it only then and so can we have life eternal. In verse 63 Christ tells his disciples that the words which he speaks unto people are life and spirit. This speech from Jesus seemed rather hard to understand. Many of his disciples left him. But Peter realized that they would not know where to go, that Christ alone had the words of eternal life and that they were sure that he was the Son of God. Blessed knowledge! May it become our main stay also. May we recognize and be glad that we have Christ for our life.

In John x. 10, Christ gives us a beautiful description of a good shepherd who protects sheep and giveth even his own life to serve them and keep them in fact. The hireling fleeth when he sees the wolf, but the Son sent by the Father layeth down his life that the sheep might not be scattered. The Father loves the Son because he is so faithful even unto death. To become heirs of this life which Christ brought unto us we must believe on him and be baptized in his death and arise to a new life in him. We must die to sin and arise to his righteousness. We must become a sweet savor unto God in them that are saved and in them that perish. To the one we are the savor of death unto death, to the other we become the savor of life unto life. The life we now lead in the flesh we must live in the faith of Christ in obedience to righteousness we must become crucified or dead to the world or the flesh. We must have our understanding enlightened that we may not become alienated from the life with God through darkness of mind or submission to our lusts or desires. We must be dead entirely to sin or all desires leading thereto. Our life must be hid with Christ in God. Godliness we must strive after because it is so very profitable in this life already and much more in the life to come. Christ was made manifest in that he brought life and immortality to light and conquered or abolished death.

John the beloved of Christ tells us that he has seen or heard Christ, or handled things of the Word of life. That life was manifested and they had seen it, and could bear witness and show them the way to eternal life, which was first with the Father or brought to us by the Son. John tells us that we must not love the world or what is in it. If we do the love of the Father is not in us, and God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that we might have everlasting life. God gave him that we might be enabled to lay hold of this life which he brought, or if we reject the Son we also lose life hereafter. God's blessing can only rest upon them which do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and so may enter into the gates of the city of life with Christ. We must lose our life, that means that we must forsake all things which hinder us in the least from living for Christ. We must even lay aside the weights that hinder us to run the race, to fight the good fight to keep the faith that we may receive at the end when Christ shall come the crown of life and righteousness, which the Lord has laid up for all who love him. May it be our happy lot to be among them is my earnest prayer and desire.

SISTER GLAZIER.

REPORT OF SISTERS' MEETING.

Dear brothers and sisters:

Since our meeting at the Conference at Salem last September, we have held twenty-four meetings, with an average attendance of twelve members and one visitor. We have had as many as twenty members present. We have endeavored during the year past, to do all in our power to build one another up in the one faith, aiding those in need and visiting the sick. About sixty calls were made by the different sisters, also many letters written. Six members have been added to our list. We have continued the study of the Book of Acts, having lessons written by different ones on the chapter read. I am sure our lessons and Scripture reading have been of great benefit to us, and we always enjoy the rest from the cares of this life. We have endeavored to do what we could toward helping to spread the gospel, and hope to continue the good work. I am sure I can say for all, we would be pleased to have any of the sisters from a distance join us, they could aid us by their lessons, or even letters written to the meeting. It is always interesting to hear from the sisters, and we always enjoy such talks, although we cannot see face to face. We are very much pleased to have so many at this meeting and trust it may be the means of bringing us closer together. For the benefit of those from a distance I will say, that we hold our meetings on Thursday afternoons, every two weeks. After opening with prayer we have our business session, collect our dues of 5 cents a week, appoint visiting committee, attending to whatever business there may be on hand. Following the business meeting we have our Scripture quotations and lessons.

SISTER GOSS, Sec.

TREASURER'S REPORT OF SISTERS' AID SOCIETY.

I have made a condensed report of our treasury fund from the last Conference held in Salem, O., Sept. 1, 1904. We have made but one change and that was to elect a new secretary upon request of our former one (Sister Tomlinson). In the period of time stated we have held twenty-four meetings, all of which have been held at the homes of the various sisters. We have collected in said period of time a total amount of $74.31—$22.90 of which is donations by honorary members. The total amount disbursed was $71.41, leaving at the present time a balance of $2.90 in hand. I am glad to report our collections have this year exceeded over the collections last year a total amount of $7.50; we have also disbursed $8.00 more, which shows we are steadily growing in this work and hope that each year will show an increase in the good work done, and to this end we ask an interest in all your prayers.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCTOBER 18, 1905. NUMBER 39.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

A union preservation from sin is to be afraid and ashamed of nothing but sin.

Sun-dials mark only the bright hours. Would it not be well to imitate them?

Be sure that conscience be rightly informed, and then faithfully obeyed, and not before.

"The Pharisees were routed by the blind man whose eyes Jesus opened, with the declaration. "One thing I know, that whereas I was blind, now I see." That is heaven's logic, and the feeblest Christian is omnipotent as he uses it."

A marked feature of the Scriptures is their dogmatism. There is an air of unconsciousness that any exceptions can be taken to them any more than the objects of nature can be denied. There is no painful anxiety for recognition, but they are assertive as with secured position and authority. All truth is dogmatic and this quiet self-assertion is one of the greatest of the Word, which, while it assures the believer, has often disarmed the enemies of the truth.

Some one has said the way to secure sunshine in the soul, is to look at your mercies with both eyes, and your troubles and trials with only one. 2. Study contentment. In these days of inordinate greed and self-indulgence keep down the accursed spirit of grasping. What they do not have makes thousands wretched. 3. Keep at some work of usefulness. Working for God and Christ brings heart-health. 4. Keep your heart's windows open towards heaven. Let the blessed light of Jesus' countenance shine in. It will turn tears into rainbows."

"The Bank of Heaven."

Men live and toil and struggle year after year for a fortune, yet suddenly they die and leave it all. Strange that no more of their wealth is deposited in the bank of heaven. There it is safe,—no need of insurance there; there all is security and bliss. Are you a person of large or small means? By all considerations hasten to send on something to the bank of heaven for your future need!"

Pleasant Walking.

The ways of the Lord are right, the just shall walk in them. If ye walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son cleanseth from all sin.

He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.

Teach me, O Lord! I will walk in thy truth.

Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound; they shall walk, O Lord, in the light of thy countenance.

Then shalt thou walk in thy way safely, and thy foot shall not stumble.

They that wait on the Lord shall walk and not faint.

Oh, let us walk in the light of the Lord.

Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me.

And they shall walk with me in white.

"The Gospel of Peace."

Of all the expressive terms used by inspiration to convey the peculiar adaption of the gospel to the varied wants of the church; none, I think, is more significant than, "The gospel of peace."

The whole race the Christian has to run, is one of conflict and danger. He is marching through the enemy's country, and has ever to be on the lookout, lest by any subtle artifice he be led into a snare. The modes of attack being so varied and numerous, makes it necessary that the greatest vigilance be exercised all the journey through. But when the comforting words of the great Captain who has been tried in all these points, and has overcome, recurs to mind, he takes fresh courage, his spirit is revived within him, and rejoices that the strife will soon be over. "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you—Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." This hallowed peace never leaves the child of God, as long as he walks by faith, and strives to "glorify God in his body and his spirit which are his." "My peace," says Jesus, "I give unto you," and what richer patrimony, what greater favor could he bestow on those who have to "come up out of great tribulation." It is a peace which flows like a river,

> "'Tis fresh overflowing
> And better, 'tis free."

Its a peace that passeth all understanding—a peace that the world can neither give nor take away, nor receive. Let not your heart be troubled beloved brethren, "the prince of this world found nothing" in our Master, neither will he in us, if we "abide in his love." The measure of his peace which today flows through your mind, is positive proof that he is worthy of your trust still, and will surely "come again to you, and receive you to himself."

Brethren, strive to be fruit bearing branches of the "true vine," don't grow weary or faint with the crown almost in sight. Having embarked on the gospel ship and battled the wind and waves so long, it would be folly indeed to return at this late hour, because you cannot see land. Oh, have confidence that Jesus, who is at the helm will guide the ship safe home.

Selections.

Great Temple Near Sinai is Discovered.

London, October 18.—By a series of bold and brilliant discoveries the reward of arduous and sustained labor, Dr. Flinders Petrie has remodelled the history of the eastern Mediterranean during the last ten years. Spelling out the records of broken stone and shattered pottery, says a writer in the Chronicle, he has given a new meaning to the word "ancient."

Greeks and Romans are now seen to have been mere moderns, almost treading on our own heels, while far back we look down a long vista of culture and civilization, lasting through many thousand years and stretching around the whole basin of the inland sea. He and his friends—for I take him simply as the prominent man of a group—have given us a new conception of history, a new reading of the modern world, a new idea of human growth. They have literally dug out from the bowels of the earth, in the heat and solitude of exile, a new history of man.

Now they are extending their work further. Hitherto Dr. Petrie's work has been mainly, I think, entirely in Egypt. But, like Moses, he has not been on the best terms with Pharaoh, and this year a small difference as to state rights has led to an exodus. Shaking the dust of Egypt from his feet—happily without insisting on any plagues—Mr. Petrie has gone several days camel journey with the tents and his workmen off into the wilderness, to dig there. Following closely in the track of his precursor in exile, Mr. Petrie has gone to Sinai, and the results in a season's work there are shown in a small, crowded room within the building of the London University in Gower street.

Briefly, these stones seem to explain why Moses and his people wanted to go into the wilderness, for here, close to Sinai, Professor Petrie and his workers have found what is little less than a sort of Semitic Delphi—a great center of worship, prayer and sacrifice for the whole Semitic world. It was Niebuhr, who first discovered that there was a temple near Sinai. But it might have been just an ordinary Egyptian temple to Osiris, Isis or any part of that motley crowd who dog the days and haunt the nights of the modern Egyptian tourist.

It has now been thoroughly dug up and has been discovered to be a Semitic temple, a temple for the Jews and their kindred races. It contains a vast number of cubicles for pilgrims who went to dream dreams after the manner of Jacob and Joseph, and hundreds of little "Bethel" stones which they erected, even as Jacob did, to celebrate a really fortunate dream. Of course, Dr. Petrie is much too cautious a student to suggest any connection between this temple and the Jewish exodus. But may not the suggestion at any rate be thrown out that it was to this spot that Moses first wished to lead the Jewish exiles? Pharaoh, acting after his kind, refused to compromise, but are we quite sure that if he had the Jews might not have gone to Sinai, sacrificed there, and returned to Egypt?

We cannot tell. When all is said and done, the excavators in Egypt have come across very few traces of the Jewish captivity. That episode of Egyptian history figured very small in the immense perspective dynasties. The Egyptians probably regarded the Jews as a very "little people," and looked over their heads with true imperialist disdain. "This," they said, "is the day of big empires." They had many such troubles with small nations—wandering desert tribes, Ethiopians, "vile sons of Cush," and what not.

The Egyptologists have done their best for the British public, jealous of the Old Testament.

There were so many civilizations in Egypt—so many tracks have been covered up—that we must not be surprised at finding few direct traces of the stay of the Jews. So many peoples were carried captive that the memory of the Jews was lost among them. But that is what adds to the value of this Semitic temple at Sinai.

One most astonishing thing about the find is the discovery of a great mass of burnt ashes, the remains of many thousands of burnt offerings by other Semite visitors—perhaps from Tyre or Sidon, or other parts of that great Semite world which was eclipsed by the rise of Assyria. Some of the pilgrims who tried, through the gate of dreams, to foresee the future must have died in that sterile valley, for Dr. Petrie has discovered tombs unlike any in Egypt—tombs built in the shape of beehives, and containing curious bracelets of shell. Or perhaps these were the lonely tombs of the Egyptian miners, far from the embalmers, digging here for turquoises. Those miners kept their food in jars, and when they went home to Egypt they buried their jars for safety in the soil below their huts. Dr. Petrie has found many of these jars just as they were left. The miners who left them never returned to dig them up. Who can tell what happened? What chance of late or death befell them on the way?

Delving in this under world of the past is a perpetual voyage of romance. It surpasses the journeys of Columbus or Cortez. In that wonderful climate, where the sun and air and sand combine to annihilate time, the digger always feels as if he might suddenly enter a new lost world, where man possessed all we are searching after with endless travail of spirit. There are times when the explorer almost feels like an intruder. Suddenly the pick strikes against something, and he sees revealed before him the toy horse of some long dead Egyptian child, the dice of some Egyptian gambler who has long paid his reckoning, the marbles of some boy, the comb and glass of some fine lady, the distaff of some poor woman.

He feels like one who has broken unawares into another man's house, and finds himself alone with the sacred privacies of intimate life.

There are many such objects in this little exhibition—objects found in the Greco Roman settlements by Drs. Greenfell and Hunt. There are beautiful bits of glass and mosaic—scent and perfume bottles with wax stoppers, left on some Roman lady's toilet table—reed pens with sharp, split points, to write on wax—ivory hairpins, egg whippers, all the small devices of luxury known to an advanced civilization. These are vestiges of the last period of Egypt's long civilization—the eve before the long night of Arab barbarism.

At the other end, from the earliest dawn of time, there is a collection of the rudest flint instruments used by prehistoric man in the Nile valley, and found on the tops of the hills at Thebes. From a study of these flints and the positions in which they are found the Egyptologists are gradually deciphering an ancient civilization far back behind the earliest Pharaoh—behind the great pre-Pharaonic civilization that occupied another 5,000 years—the very first beginning of man. These flints belonged to men who lived at least 10,000 years ago. Then the Nile valley was filled almost to the summits of the hills with a great flood of water, and man forgathered on the mountain summits, a precarious tenant of a bare world.

Such have been the results of past work, but Dr. Petrie's work in the Sinai district opens a new field. Some of the "higher critics" tell us nowadays that no exodus took place. These discoveries at Sinai do not seem to support them, but rather to confirm a narrative which, if entirely untrue, is certainly one of the most amazing bits of convincing fiction in all literature.

But may there not be more secrets hidden under those yellow sands? This was the track by which the Jews are said to have wandered. Here was the mountain whence came the laws of conduct which the world still reverences above all others.

"Thy Words."

"The entrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding to the simple. Psalm cxix. 130.

The Psalm from which the above text is taken, is by far the longest of any one of which the book is composed; (being 150) the number of verses composing this Psalm are 176, in all which, (with the exception of one or two verses,) these phrases, or words equivalent occur; such for instance, as commandments, statutes, precepts, judgments, etc."

They form, (so to speak) th sub stratum—the underlying principle of all revelation to man as a subject of moral government—of rewards and punishments, a revelation of his future destiny and the relation he sustains to his Creator, as the rightful Governor of the universe, and to Jesus Christ, who redeemed him from death to which he became subject, by the transgression of the law of Jehovah, which he instituted as a test of his loyalty.

Adam, as the federal head of the race, by partaking of the fruit which was interdicted, "brought death into the world. (and as Milton in his book, entitled "Paradise Lost," has well expressed it,) and all our woe, with the loss of Eden;" and of the restitution of the same, we learn only by consulting the Bible—"the Word of truth." The Spirit—the Word, being identical according to Christ's own testimony. "The words that I speak unto you they are spirit, and they are life." "The words that I speak unto you, shall judge you in the last day." According to the foregoing testimony, we are shut up to the teaching of the the words of Christ and his apostles, as the only medium through which we receive that knowledge which will "make us wise unto salvation," through the exercise of "the faith," which was once (for all) delivered to the saints."

The strongest language which it is possible to employ, is brought to bear, in order to show the estimate which Jehovah has placed upon his own Word. Besides those already adduced, we may cite a few more out of the hundreds which might be cited if space would permit.

His, (Jehovah's) Word "is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart."

Christ said, "If ye abide in me, and my Words abide in you ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be given unto you."

Jehovah "spake (the word) and it was done, he commanded and it stood fast." "His, (Jehovah's) Word shall not return unto him void, but it shall accomplish that for which I have sent it."

Without further specification, as to particular texts under this head, I will observe in general terms, that no Bible subject is treated more explicitly, more elaborately than that which relates to the words of Jehovah, and of his Son Jesus Christ, whom he sent into the world, as the second Adam, the progenitor of a race of immortal beings, who are begotten, not by the corruptible, but by the incorruptible, seed,—"the Word of truth, which liveth and abideth forever."

The apostle Paul exhorts Timothy "to study the Word, to show himself a workman who need not be ashamed, to rightly divide (classify) the Word, and give to each one a portion of meat in due season." It is axiomatic, that words are the signs of ideas, and I know of no good reason which can possibly be assigned, why words occurring in the Bible should not be subjected to the same rules as in other books, especially so in the absence of anything to the contrary. It certainly would appear very unreasonable to suppose even that our heavenly Father would hold us amenable to any law which would be susceptible of different interpretations, and these in conflict with each other, without furnishing the key to unlock the same. I know it is often urged that the Spirit's teaching is by a certain influence, such as was exemplified on the day of Pentecost, like a rushing mighty wind which could not be known from "whence it came or whither it went," but it must be ever borne in mind that this was the fulfillment of God's prophecy which was for a specific purpose, viz., to qualify the apostles for their mission and work—to confirm the Word by miracles, signs, etc., no promise of its recurrence. The gift of tongues, with the other miracles ceased with the apostles.

The injunction of Paul to Timothy to study the Scriptures, the Word for the reason that the Bible is the only channel or medium by which the Spirit communicates to man. A failure then, to search the Scriptures, the Word, is sure to bring leanness and barrenness

Paul, in his letter to the Hebrews, says, "God who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in times past unto our fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds." Heb. i. 1, 2.

It would seem by this, that we are now shut up to the teaching of Christ and his apostles.—M. J. Lewis.

Stand Fast.

Every virtue is tested sooner or later. A time for trial is sure to come. Blessed indeed is it for the tried one to know that he has principles which must carry him safely through the ordeal. Many a brave, true man has to suffer for the wrong-doing of others; wholly innocent himself, and yet misunderstood, maligned and cruelly wronged. And yet such hardships, such sufferings as these, are only a feather's weight compared with that which is inflicted by a consciousness of falseness, meanness, deceit, or overreaching another, or taking advantage of another's weakness, or poverty, or helplessness for self advantage, or revenge. The Lord was with Joseph in the Egyption prison-house.

> 'Stone walls do not a prison make,
> Nor iron bars a cage;
> Minds innocent and quiet take
> That for a heritage,
> If I have freedom in my love,
> And in my soul am free,
> Angels alone, that soar above,
> Enjoy such liberty."

Nothing But Leaves

Oh, the golden opportunities that are thrown away! The precious moments that are lost forever, which might have been given to God! Oh, the hours spent in seeking for worldly pleasure which only brings a feeling of emptiness and dissatisfaction after all! How sad it is to think of the many who have had the privileges offered them of becoming sons or daughters of the Most High, kings and priests unto God, and yet they have rejected it all and grieved the Holy Spirit, and for the perishing things of this life have thrown away a glorious eternity! But sad indeed will it be when the Master comes, and in place of the fruit which they might have borne, he finds, as he did on the barren fig-tree, "nothing but leaves."

Report of Labor.

Again the Body of Christ in Millbrook rejoices in another addition to its numbers, Brother Benjamin Cummings who has long been studying to make sure these things were true, on Saturday, Oct. 7, walked into the liquid grave and Brother Woodward buried him with Christ. While we expect life will have its rough places for him as well as for others, we trust he has a helper now who will see him safely through all the storms, and with his wife and family hear the welcome given when Jesus comes.

On Monday I joined my husband and we held a week of meetings in the Allen School House, with splendid interest and good congregations. I left him there over Sunday while I went to Watson to speak over Sunday. The friends and brethren are doing well at this place; there is a good interest there, and they are about ready to paint the little church, built twenty-one years ago, whose light has been nearly extinguished by removals, death, and a degree of false doctrine creeping in, has altogether done its work; but at this time the few remaining ones are exerting every effort to redeem the lost ground, and let the light shine.

We both reached South Bend, Ind, this morning where we will begin a series of meetings.

Loved ones in Christ, pray that this meeting may be to the honor and glory of God, inasmuch as some dear souls may accept his love and be saved.

Yours in the work.

M. A. Woodward.

Love for Jesus.

If a child love a parent or a pupil a good teacher, he will delight in obeying his commandments. Jesus says, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." Keeping his commandments is a test of our loving him "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love, even as I have kept my Father's commandments and abide in his love." The Common Version would read, "If ye keep not my commandments, ye shall not abide in my love." Again he says, "This is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you." We must have the same love for our brethren that Christ had for us, hence he says, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend." He adds, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doth the will of my Father which is in heaven." He then informs us how we may know when we are doing our heavenly Father's will. "Therefore, whosoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man which built his house upon a rock and the rain descended, and the floods came and the wind blew and beat upon that house and it fell not; for it was founded upon a rock; and every one that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them not, shall be like unto a foolish man which built his house upon the sand, and the rain descended and the floods came and the wind blew and beat upon that house, and it fell and great was the fall of it." Hence the whole issue of salvation turns upon hearing and doing these sayings of Jesus Christ.

May our heavenly Father help each of his loved ones to do his will; for he has said, "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may enter in through the gates into the city," is my prayer in Jesus' name.

Z. E. Grant.

Dear Bereans:

Paul says to have love is better than to have the tongues of men or angels, the gift of prophecy, the understanding of all mysteries and knowledge. Love is long-suffering, kind, without envy or pride, is well-behaved, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil, rejoiceth in the truth. Love beareth, believeth, hopeth, endureth all things. Prophecies, tongues, knowledge shall vanish away, but love never faileth. "But now abideth faith, hope, love, these three, but the greatest of these is love.

The duty of God's children is to care for, and love one another

Emma & Lilly Lindsay.

Dear Bereans:

"Oh love the Lord, all ye his saints; for the Lord preserveth the faithful and plentifully rewardeth the proud-doers." Psa. xxxi. 23.

Many are the promises given to the faithful saints who keep his word; for by the word they shall be justified, and also, if they know the word and doeth it not they shall be condemned. Every man will be judged according to his several ability, as we see in the parable of the talents that it is in accordance to our faithfulness and to our desire that we are judged rather than how much we do. Man looketh upon the outward appearance, but God looketh upon the heart. Therefore let no man deceive himself like Ananias and Sapphira, but let him be faithful; for the Lord has said that if ye give but a glass of water in his name, and do it faithfully ye shall be rewarded. Let us take a lesson from this and be encouraged to press forward to the mark of the high calling, for it is only to those that are faithful to the end will a crown be given.

Changes.

The snowdrop has bloomed, and the crocus has gone;
The daffodowndillies have fled like a dawn
Frail flowers of the woodland that greeted the feet,
Claytonia, Hepatica, Arbutus so sweet.
Have blossomed and perished; the wildwood is green.
And Summer was with us in wonderful sheen,
Ere spring time had so lovingly lifted her hand,
To weave into verdure, with magic 'wand,
Field forest and garden, so tearful as I,
Must yield to her sceptre, so entirely to die.
The loyal old lilies that stand by the door,
Donned garments of purple, but wear them no more;
And roses whose beauty—God's seal to the heart—
But equalled their fragrance,—they came to depart:
For June, too, fled from us, and heats of July
Brought forward the grains that were ripe by and by,
When the wonderful corkets evolved from the mold,
The sunshine of August transmitted to gold.
Blest God for the changing of seasons and time!
Let singing souls break into music and rhyme!
And heart that are filled with the gladness of love,
Adore thee, and praise thee, our Father above!

Hieremias (or "Iremiah").

CHAPTER 6.

1. May ye have become strong, ye sons of Benjamin from the midst of Hierousaleem, and in Thekoue may ye have signaled with a trumpet and over Baitharma may ye have lifted up an ensign; because calamities have poured out from the north, and a great crushing blow hath occurred.

2. And the exaltation of a daughter of Sioon will have been taken away.

3. Shepherds will come into her and their flocks, and they will pitch their tents round about against her, and each one will shepherd with his hand.

4. May ye have made ready against her for war; arise and let us go up against her at midday; alas for us that the day hath declined, that the shadows of the day are leaving off.

5. Arise and let us go up against her by night, and let us destroy her foundations.

6. Because thus saith the Lord, cut off the trees thereof, pour out a host against Hierousaleem; O thou false city, all oppression in her.

7. As a well maketh water cool, even so her evil-doing maketh her cool; irreverence and wretchedness will have been heard in her constantly to her face; with pain and scourge

8. Wilt thou have been chastened, O Hierousaleem, lest my soul stand away from thee, lest I make thee a trackless land which hath become uninhabited.

9. Because, thus saith the Lord, Glean ye, glean ye the remnants of Israel like a vineyard; turn them over as doth the vintner to his kartallion, (a basket with a pointed bottom).

10. Unto whom shall I talk and go through the testimony and he will hearken? Lo, their ears are uncircumcised and they will not be able to hearken; lo, the Lord's oracular word hath become a reproach to them, they will not desire it.

11. And I have made my anger full and have held it against them and have brought them to an end; from the outside shall I pour out upon their children and upon an assemblage of their young men at the same time, because man and wife will have been jointly taken and elders with fulness of days.

12. And their houses will have been turned over to others, their fields and their wives at the same time, because I am going to stretch out my hand against those who inhabit this land, saith the Lord.

13. Because from their small even unto their great they have all consummated transgressions; from priest even unto false prophet they have all made lies.

14. And they have healed the crushing blow of my laity, despising and saying peace, peace; and where is there peace?

15. They have been put to shame and have failed; and not even when put to shame have they been ashamed; and they have not comprehended their dishonor; therefore will they fall with their smiting blow, and in a period of their visitation will they perish, hath the Lord said.

16. Thus saith the Lord, Stand in the highways and see and ask the Lord's age-lasting paths, and see what sort of a way the good way is and walk in it, and ye will find purification for your souls; and have said, I will not go our way to it.

17. I have set spies over you, (saying); Hear the sound of the trumpet; and they have said we will not hear.

18. Therefore the nations have heard and those who shepherd their flocks.

19. Hear O earth, Lo, I am leading upon this laity calamities, the fruit of their apostrophe, because they have not heeded my words, and my law have they thrust away.

20. Why do ye bring me many frankincense from Saba, and cinnamon from a land afar off? Your whole burnt offerings are not acceptable and your sacrifices have not been sweet to me.

21. Therefore thus saith the Lord, Lo, I am giving to this laity weakness, and together will fathers and sons be weak, and his adjacent one and his neighbor will perish.

22. Thus saith the Lord, Lo, a nation is coming from the north, and nations will have been stirred up from a farthest of the earth.

23 Bow and javelin will they hold, impetuous is he and will not show mercy; the sound of him like a waving sea; on horses and in chariots will he array himself for war against thee like fire, O daughter of Sioon.

24. We heard the report of them,—our hands were paralyzed—tribulation laid hold of us—birth pangs as of a woman bringing forth.

25. Go not out into a field, and in the highways do not walk, because a sword of your enemies is sojourning round about.

26 O daughter of my laity, gird on sack-cloth, sprinkle thyself with ashes, make a pitiful sorrowing for thyself, a mourning for a beloved, because suddenly will wretchedness come upon you.

27. I have given thee as a judge of value to laities who have been tested for value, and thou wilt know me when I have tested their way.

28. They are all disobedient, going their way crookedly; copper and iron are they, they have all become corroded.

29. Blowpipe hath left off from the fire; lead hath left off; in vain hath a silver-heater break; their wickedness hath not melted.

30. Silver of unapproved value call them, because the Lord hath rejected them as unapproved.

COMMENT.

The difference of reading in this chapter when compared with the C. V. and R. V. as well as "the American Revised" are important, but nothing like as important as we have been showing in the preceding chapters and we pass them by for scholars and polemics to note them for themselves.

The assayer of gold and silver will be interested in the process in vogue in that day, so different from that now in vogue, as given briefly in the 29th and 30th verses—namely in the reference to "the blow-pipe" (not the bellows" as in the R. V.) and the "lead" consumed with the intense heat, and the product being beaten by "the silver-beater" with no result. This last clause translated in the R. V. as "In vain do they go on refining;" but how do they go on and why is there no resultant silver? This is told in the text, but omitted entirely in the R. V. namely "Their wickedness hath not melted." An answer I think will understand this. Read the last chapter of Malachi where you have another picture of the refiner of silver again given and compare it with this in Hieremias.

CHAS. GARDNER.

"At the Table of the Lord."

Our lesson chosen this morning is Titus ii. 13, "Looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our Savior Jesus Christ." Hope means to desire with expectation of obtaining. Then, our text means looking for that we desire—expecting to obtain it at the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, "Who gave himself for us that he might redeem us from iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people zealous of good works."

The context of this chapter shows that this hope which is made up of expectation and desire, is intended for the highest incentive to live consistent with such a hope. This hope is to purify our lives. In the first of this chapter the aged men are exhorted to be sober, grave, temperate, sound in charity, in patience, and the aged women, likewise, that they be in behavior as becometh holiness, not false accusers. In all things showing thyself a pattern of good works, in doctrine showing uncorruptness, gravity, sincerity. Sound speech that cannot be condemned. That he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of you. When we apply this to our own lives, it means much.

The first chapter of this book is addressed to, "The chosen ones in hope of eternal life." It is this glorious hope of eternal life that is held up as an incentive to overcome all obstacles. Brothers and sisters, in order for us to do these things, it will take close study, and critical examination of self "For the favor of God that bringeth salvation, hath appeared to all men, teaching us that denying ungodliness, and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world looking for that blessed hope and glorious appearing of the great God, and our Savior Jesus Christ." It has been said, "The coming of Christ is the very pole star of the church." Why is it? It is because of what we expect at the appearing of Jesus Christ. When he was here, he said it was expedient for you that I go away. John xvi. 7. He also said, "If I go away, I will come again, and receive you unto myself that where I am there ye may be also." Yes, the coming of Christ is the acme of all our hopes.

In Phil. iii. 20-21, the apostle says, "Your conversation (citizenship, Diaglott) is in heaven from whence we look for the Lord Jesus Christ. Who shall change our vile bodies and fashion them like unto his own glorious body. Is this not enough to make us rejoice even now, to know we shall be made like Christ. No wonder he tells us to sorrow not as others who have no hope. This hope is indeed an anchor to the soul both sure and steadfast. It is a strong consolation to those who have fled for refuge, to lay hold of the hope set before us."

We firmly believe those who sleep in Jesus God will bring with him. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words." Are they not comforting words? We are begotten unto this lively hope or living hope, hope of living by the resurrection of Jesus Christ. 1 Pet. i. 3. For which we are asked to praise the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us unto a lively hope reserved in heaven for us. To a lively hope reserved in heaven for us. When do we receive the inheritance reserved in heaven for us? The following verse says, "For you who are kept by the power of God through faith, ready to be revealed in the last time." He tells us temptations, yes, manifold temptations will cause heaviness. He also tells us these trials are more precious than the trial of gold by fire. Why? That the trial of your faith might be found unto praise and honor and glory—when? At the appearing of Jesus Christ. According to the whole of the Scriptures we know we do not go to our reward at death. The praise, honor and glory is at the appearing of Jesus Christ. Hence we are looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God our Savior Jesus Christ."

At the Breaking of Bread.

PSALM CXIX 80.

Let my heart be sound in thy statutes, that I be not ashamed. How thankful we should be that these things are written, and that it is possible for our hearts to be thus established, that we need not be ashamed. It is possible for us to know his will, for his Word is a revelation, not a mystery. He has not left us to grope in the dark, and never be able to come to the knowledge of the truth, but has plainly revealed all things essential to salvation.

The Scriptures were given for this purpose, that we might read and understand and become wise unto salvation. We are commanded to search as for hidden treasure, and when we read in John xii. 48, He that rejecteth me and my words, the same shall judge him in the last day. It becomes a very serious matter for those living in the land of Bibles who will not take the time and trouble to learn the truth.

God has always dealt with men by laws, and has been very particular to have them understood. And in all the history of his dealings with men we find he has been just as particular that his laws be obeyed to the letter. When the law was given to Israel we read that the Lord by Moses, exhorted them to obedience in these words, Hearken, O Israel unto the statutes and unto the judgments which I teach you to do them, that ye may live, and go in and possess the land which the Lord God of your fathers giveth you. Ye shall not add unto the Word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish aught from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the Lord your God. We read of those who disobeyed and how they were destroyed, while those who kept the statutes were preserved alive.

The law of eternal life is just as plainly revealed to us. We are to attain unto a life of joy and blessedness, which shall never end if we render obedience to God's requirements, and continue steadfast until Jesus comes. Only the obedient will obtain this life. Those who have hated instruction and despised the Word of the living God shall be utterly destroyed and be as if they never had been.

We like David desire with our whole heart to be sound in the statutes of the Lord, but we can never become rooted and grounded in the truth without a careful, prayerful study of the Word. We must seek as for hidden treasure, and know assuredly that our faith and hope is based on what is written. Let us believe and hope for what is promised, and only what is written. If we have no Scriptural proof for our hope, be it ever so bright it is vain. O let us be always able to give a reason for the hope within us, and be built on the rock, the statutes of God, for all other ground is indeed sinking sand.

We are small and despised, and yet we have great peace, a peace which the world knows not, because we love his law. His words have entered our hearts and filled us with light and hope, which grows brighter as we see day by day his promises fulfilled, and know by the signs which he has given that the time of our redemption is drawing near. With David we exclaim, My soul fainteth for thy salvation but we hope in thy Word. When wilt thou comfort me. Let thy mercies come also unto me, O Lord, even thy salvation according unto thy Word upon which thou hast caused me to hope. This is my comfort in my affliction, for thy Word hath quickened me. May God help us to continue steadfast in the things which we have learned, and to grow in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to wait patiently for his appearing and each receive a crown of life.

LUELLA SMITH.

Question in Our Question Box.

1. What is the reason the miraculous powers demonstrated in Paul's day, and the Apostolic Age, are not now possible?

2. Is it from a deterioration or lack of faith?

3. Why has not the power been deputed to them to heal and work miracles if they are equally worthy divine approval for such use?

4. Do they, and if so by what power do so-called faith-cur sts perform miracles?

5. Is it Divine healing?

The questioner after asking the second question affirms the belief that "there are saints of God now living whose faith would withstand the test of any the ancient worthies endured"—as in the fires of Smithfield"—thus answering his own question i. e. "Is it from a lack of faith"—and I am quite in harmony with this view myself, but will proceed to take the questions in turn as they were asked.

An explanation of terms may help us to come to an understanding of this question. And first let us see what is meant by a miracle or something miraculous. Worcester's Dictionary says "a miracle is an event which cannot be explained by the laws of nature; an effect above human power."

It is admitted by the question that the power wielded by Paul and the Apostles was miraculous; that is to say, could not be explained by laws of nature and above human power."

In Matt. x. 1 to 10 we have an account of the conferring of this power upon the Apostles by the Lord—"And when he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power over unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of disease.  Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils; freely ye have received freely give." Here are two points to be noted; (1) that as the source of this power was Divine, coming from God, through his Son Jesus Christ, the Power may be rightly called Divine—therefore their works were truly divine healing. (2) the closing words make a grand distinction between this power vested in the Apostles and the so-called divine healing and Christian Scientists and Faith Curists of our day.

Jesus says, "Freely ye have received, freely give." Its without money and without price. Had for the asking. Rich or poor, all might have the blessing of perfect health and even the dead might have life again.

But to answer the question, why is this power not possible now—I would answer that the only thing which makes it impossible is the absence of the One—the only one who could confer that Power—the same that gave it to the Apostles.

But that time will come when these powers will be the possession of all his saints, for he said in Jno. xiv. 12, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, that he that believeth on me, the works that I do, ye shall do also, and greater works than these shall he do; because I go to my Father." Also see Matt. xi. 11 speaking of John the Baptist as greater than any Prophet, yet he says: "He that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he." So that we see that in the coming age great powers will be possessed by the saints.

To answer the 2nd point: I would simply say that the gift of power to heal was not given to the Apostles on account of their faith—that is not simply as a reward for or a recognition of their faith, but solely for the benefit of others and as a demonstration of the truth of their preaching—to witness that they were sent of God.

Notice how Jesus appeals to his works as evidence of the truth of his words—"If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not. But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the works that ye may know, and believe, that the Father is in me and I in him." Jno. x. 37.

This was a sign and proof which could not be denied by any willing to receive the truth, and a confirmation of Prophecy. He performed such things as were foretold "the Christ" should do in curing all manner of diseases, causing the blind to see, the lame to walk, and even to the raising of the dead. See Isa. xxxv. 5, 6, and Matt. ix. 29. In a similar way Peter on the day of Pentecost quoted Joel ii. 28-31 as then being fulfilled before their eyes as a confirmation that they spoke the truth.

This covers the 3rd point of the question—why the powers given to the Apostles was not given to the saints in our day as well, if they were equally worthy of divine approval. It was not given as a mark of approval of the person, but as a seal of the truth of his preaching to confirm the faith and establish his Church.

4. Do the Faith Curists perform miracles?

5 If so, is it Divine Healing?

When we remember the definition of the word "miracle"—an effect above human power"—we must answer the 4th question emphatically NO they do not perform miracles. If we could not say this, neither could we say the same of the next question, as we do. Is it not clear that if they perform miracles they are doing it by divine power. On the other hand not being miraculous or "above human power" the "cures" of present day Faith Curists cannot be called "divine healing."

If the question were, "Do they perform cures," I would have to admit that sometimes they do—sometimes not. Whereas when God gave his power to heal any one it never failed but worked a complete and radical cure. Again, a power which is used by its possessors for personal gain and not simply as a seal of the truth is contrary to the conditions under which the spirit of healing was given by Jesus to the Apostles—which was, "Freely give." But they may point to the cures, and say, "If not divine healing, what is it? But we can only reply, "If divine why so limited—why ever fail?"

If none but those who claim to operate by faith could perform cures by similar methods theirs would be a fair presumption, but unfortunately for their claim, others who repudiate any element of faith actually do the same class of "cures" and frequently succeed where "Faith Cure" was impossible, because the subject exercised no faith and could not therefore be benefited. In such cases, I have read of a physician using the power of suggestion—suggesting to the patient how he was to be benefitted and the influence of the mind over the body has done the same that the "Faith Curist" does—the same law of mind worked by a different spring or lever, so to speak.

Another thought and I will close: Seeing God condemns all false religions and beliefs, and desires the truth in purity, is it conceivable that he would give his witness, the Holy Spirit Power to confirm the teachings of those who know not the truth, whose minds are groping in darkness, not knowing the gospel of the kingdom and being strangers to the Covenants of Promise.

Certainly not: If any people possessed the power claimed by Faith Curists, Christian Scientists, etc. that people would be the Church of God.

The works they perform are every day matters of fact to those who read the books and publications of the day devoted to the particular lines of knowledge known as Mesmerism, Hypnotism, Psychology, or Science of the mind—influence of Mind in disease, etc. They are working in harmony with natural laws and yet are themselves dupes of a system built upon a misunderstanding of the Scriptures and the plan and purpose of God in the gift of healing power to Apostles.

Brethren and Sisters:

"Let brotherly love continue." Heb. xiii. 1. "Be kindly affectioned one to another, with brotherly love, in honor preferring one another." Eph. v. 21. "Submitting yourselves one to another in the fear of God." Phil. ii. 4. "Let nothing be done through strife or vain glory, but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves." Phil. ii. 13. "For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure." I John iv. 7. "Beloved let us love one another; for love is of God and every one that loveth is born of God and knoweth God." 1 John iii. 22. "And whatsoever we ask we receive of him because we keep his commandments and do those things that are pleasing in his sight." 1 John iii. 24. "And he that keepeth his commandments dwelleth in him and he in him, and hereby we know that he abideth in us by the Spirit which he hath given us." 1 John iv. 11. "Beloved if God so loved us we ought also to love one another."

Brethren and sisters, we are a chosen people, we have been called out of darkness into his marvelous light to see the beauty there is in his only begotten Son which he had given us that through him we might have everlasting life. What a peculiar people we must be to be called by God. O what a calling. Is'nt that a high calling? Let us continue steadfast in his love unto the end and great shall be our reward, and meet Jesus at his appearing. Amen.

Dear Restitution:

The eighth Annual Meeting of the Church of God for Kansas and Missouri was held at Severance, Kan., Sept. 2 to 10, 1905. On account of almost continual rain the attendance from a distance was not as good as had been expected.

The speakers present were A. J. Eychaner, W. L. Crowe, J. F. Pearson, J. P. Bitner, A. W. Darby.

Bros. Crowe and Chadwell reported having baptized twenty-two while working for the Conference the last year. The reports of the Evangelists were accepted as presented, also the reports of the Treasurer and Secretary were adopted as read.

There was raised during the year from all sources, $223.72. Paid out to Evangelists $158.88. To speakers in attendance $30.00. On table and tent account $13.45.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, J. P. Bitner, Severance, Kan.; Vice President, Eugene Howard, Morrill, Kan.; Treasurer, E. M. Saylor, Morrill, Kan.; Secretary A. W. Darby, Hanson, Kan.

A number of essays were sent in by different parties, for which the thanks of the Conference was extended.

This folder contains a full description of several important extensions of the North-Western Line that open some of the finest territory in the West. Free on application to A. H. Waggener, Trav. Agt. 22 Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill.—Nov. 15.

Dear brothers and sisters:

Of late I have been deeply impressed with the words found in James II. 17, "Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead alone." The man or woman who has true faith must have works, as fire must have heat. Whatever we may say, it cannot exist without. In the absence of works a man saying, he has faith is of no avail; he is not to be believed, because he does not speak the truth. Where the fruits of faith exist, there can be no doubt as to faith itself, any more than about fire where strong heat is felt, although the fire is not visible, it must be there. The Searcher of hearts alone can see faith, but its fruits are seen by all. The case of Abraham is one of the most remarkable illustration Scripture can supply. The great points here contrasted are a dead and living faith. Abraham's faith showed itself by his works. The works perfected the proof of its existence. An untried faith is a dead faith, being alone. Faith without trial finds no scope for demonstration, or evidence of its existence. Thus it is written, Faith if it has not works is dead. You see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith alone. Without faith, says Paul, it is impossible to please God. And in another place this same apostle calls faith the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. The faith which God is pleased with, is a faith that is made manifest by works, of which Noah, Abraham, Job and Jesus are pre-eminent examples. Now this precious faith can only be educed by trial, for the trial elaborates the works Paul tells us that it is through much tribulation we must enter the kingdom. Probation is a refining process: we must be courageous, and hold fast the confidence and rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end. It is a working faith. There is life in it; and its exercise proves that the believer loves God. Such a man God delights to honor, and though like Jesus he be for the present despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrow, acquainted with grief; the time will surely come, when God will acknowledge him in the presence of angels, and overwhelm his enemies with confusion of face. Probation before exaltation, then, is upon the principle of a faith in the promises of God, made precious by trial well sustained. The Captain of our salvation was made perfect through suffering. For that he himself hath suffered, being put to the proof he is able to succor them who are tried.

O for a faith that will not shrink,
Tho' pressed by many a foe,
That will not tremble on the brink
Of poverty or woe,

That will not murmur or complain,
Beneath the chastening rod;
But in the hour of grief or pain
Can lean upon its God.

My prayer is, dear ones, that we may continue steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. And may we one and all hear that well done from the King of kings when he comes to make up his jewels.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the November Conference of the Church of God in Indiana is to convene in the Church of God at Plymouth at 7:30 P. M November 16, 1905, the said Conference to continue over the following Sunday. Now, brethren and sisters, come to this gathering. The fall work will be over by that time. Begin now to make arrangements to be present. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth as it is in Jesus, not only in Indiana, but also in adjoining states. We want a spiritual meeting. Let us work for it, expect it, and come. Brother and Sister Woodward of Michigan are expected to be with us.

Seventy-five More.

I receive enquiries as to when Pine Woods Bible Class Book will be printed?

In answer, I will say, when I receive seventy-five more subscriptions, the book can be printed, and sent forth on its mission, to teach the glad tidings. If all who really want it had said so, it could now be out sowing seed. When God's professed servants make his cause a secondary matter, and put it off to a "convenient time," his cause suffers. Now all who really want the book please sit down and write me, as soon as you have read this, and then things will move at once. Don't wait until a more convenient time. God's business demands prompt attention.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 634 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. • PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, NOVEMBER 1, 1905. NUMBER 41.

The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on the earth, with Christ and his saints as kings and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the right-eous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

THE BIBLE.

Much will I praise God's holy book,
And day by day in it will look,
And pray for grace that it may be,
The Word of Life and Light to me;
That it may rule my heart and ways,
And be my guide through all my days,
And teach my soul sweet songs of praise.
At morn and noon and night to raise,
To the great Lord who gave it me
That I might live eternally.

Notes by the Way.

On August 16th, I took the train for South Bend, Indiana, at which place, by previous arrangement, I met Bro. Zilmer and Bro. Wagoner. Bro. Zilmer preached for the church at South Bend that night. Bro Zilmer and myself were kindly entertained over night at the home of Bro. and Sister Ezra Railsback. The next morning the three of us started for the Lake Shore depot, in order to take the train for Cleveland, Ohio. While waiting in the depot, we engaged in conversation with a Jew. We found him enthused with Jewish patriotism, fully alive and expecting the fulfilment of God's covenanted blessings to Israel, in the covenant land. He said that he had no use for what is called "Reformed Jews," in place of being "Reformed Jews," they were in fact, "Deformed Jews." He was an enthusiastic Zionist. His cry was Palestine for the Jew. Neither East Africa, or any other spot on earth, could take the place, in the heart of the orthodox Jew. The train came, and we had to part. He was going to Chicago, and we to Cleveland.

You can be sure that Bro. Wagoner, Zilmer, and myself enjoyed sweet counsel together, while on our journey. We harmonize together thoroughly as to our faith, and pretty generally too, as to our opinions outside of that. The train arrived on time. We then made our way to the Woodland Ave. Church, where we found a large number of the local congregation, and also visitors from different parts of Ohio, and other States.

Supper was soon ready, it was spread on tables beneath a tent erected on the church grounds in the rear of the church. After supper we enjoyed a social visit with each other. We made the acquaintance of many of the Household of Faith, whose names we had become familiar with, but had never before met face to face. How sweet such interviews are; it furnishes sweet reflections even after we are separated, and while alone in the retirement of our own homes, as our minds go back to that memorable gathering at Cleveland.

Soon the time arrived for the evening meeting, which was opened and carried out according to the programme, which I need not repeat here, as that has already been given by the Secretary. Such meetings have a wonderful uplifting effect, upon the mind of every true hearted believer, as the Holy Scriptures are opened and spread before our mind's eye, in panoramic vision, we enthusiastically exclaim:

Let others boast of wealth or power,
And glory in their pride
Thy Word, O God, we value more,
Than all the world beside.

At the close of the evening service, each visitor was supplied with a home. Bro. Zilmer and myself were quartered with Bro. and Sister Moore, the place where I made my home, part of the time, on my previous visit at Cleveland. We enjoyed our sojourn with Bro. and Sister Moore, who made our stay with them exceedingly pleasant.

I was much impressed with the Sunday school exhibit on Sunday morning led by Sister Tomlinson, their Superintendent. The children from five years upward, were thoroughly educated in the fundamental principles of the faith, and could recite the texts which were used as proofs of the several items, and could readily tell where they were to be found.

Bro. Robison, who is a school teacher, addressed the children, said he had been listening to recitations for thirty years, but rarely ever heard a better one. I admire this kind of instruction. I advise our Sunday schools every where to throw away your Inter-national lesson leaves, and quarterlies, and give straight Bible lessons.

While sitting at the supper table, a sister from Michigan, said to me, Bro. Wilson, I want to ask your advice:

She asked, would you advise me to send my two children to other Sunday schools? I replied, that depends what you want to do with them. If you want to sacrifice their eternal interests, that is the best way to do it. She thought a mother's influence could restrain them. I showed her, that when they become young people, they would be drawn into the various social church clubs, which would destroy your mother's influence. So many parents have in this way lost their children. Isolated believers have also made shipwreck of faith, by being drawn into the fellowship of Campbellite churches. We can have no fellowship with paganized Christianity, if we want the approval of our Lord when he comes in his glory.

The meetings each day were carried out as outlined in the programme. Success and satisfaction characterized each session of the Conference.

I remained in Cleveland for a week after the adjournment of Conference. I made my home with Bro. and Sister Geo. Elton, and Sister Saunders and husband. My stay with them was made very pleasant.

The following Sunday I preached to the united congregations of the Church of God and the Blessed Hope Mission.

We also had a pleasant visit for a day at the home of Bro. and Sister David Elton at Nottingham, Ohio; and also made short calls on Bro. and Sister Joblin, Sister McLauchlan, Bro. and Sister Tomlinson, Shourds, etc.

My next trip was to Salem, Ohio, where I conducted a series of meetings in the neat comfortable church owned by the congregation located at that place. This church is presided over by Bro. and Sister Nell, the present Evangelists for the State of Ohio. It is also the home of our Evangelist Sister Nancy Barber. My visit with the dear ones in Christ was very pleasant, indeed.

"How blest the sacred tie, that binds
In sweet communion kindred minds!
How swift the heavenly course they run,
Whose hearts, whose faith, whose hopes are one.
To each, the life of each how dear!
What tender fears—What holy fear!
How does the generous flame within Refine from earth, and cleanse from sin!"

While the services at Salem were not largely attended from without, yet we had what was much better, and that is, quality and interest. At least a half dozen manifest strong interest.

I visited at the homes of Sister Baker, and also Sister McCave and husband.

I think the church at Salem will soon have accessions to their number. The last day I was at Salem, by request I held two services, as several wished me to give a discourse on the Physical and Geographical changes in the Holy Land, as predicted by the Prophets, and also give the boundaries of the Covenant Land, as illustrated on a large chart specially prepared for this discourse.

The next morning Bro. Nelli, escorted me to the depot, where I took the train for South Bend, Ind., where the Annual Conference was to be held. Having to change cars at Plymouth, I concluded to remain over night, and so I wended my way to the home of Bro. and Sister Underwood. It happened to be the seventy-fifth birthday of Sister Thompson, the mother of Sister Underwood, and so accordingly a surprise party was planned for her. I then had the pleasure of meeting a large number of the Plymouth Church.

The next morning, in company with others, I started for South Bend, about thirty miles distant. On arriving there, myself and others were taken to the home of Sister Harsh.

The time for Conference meeting having arrived, the President, A. H. Zilmer, called the meeting to order, when the programme as outlined previously was carried out.

All the Conference meetings that I ever attended in the State of Indiana have been a success. The President, Bro. Zilmer, has fine executive ability, and keeps things moving in the right direction.

The Conference resolved on starting a Bible Institute, to hold three sessions daily for about two weeks previous to Conference. A line of study on Old Testament Characters to be given on one part of the day. Following this a similar study on New Testament Characters. The nights to be given up to elementary doctrinal discourses. A sufficient number of instructors are to be engaged, so as not to make it burdensome on one.

The Conference also resolved on increased evangelical work in the State. All seemed to realize that we are living in momentous times, when increased energy should be manifested by the household of faith wherever located. Bravery and self-sacrifice are the watchwords of the hour.

"Shrink not, Christians,—will ye yield?
Will ye quit the battle-field?
Fight till all the conflicts o'er,
Nor your foes shall rally more.
But when loud the trumpet blown,
Speak their forces overthrown,
Christ your Captain shall bestow
Crowns to grace the conq'ror's brow."

The social meetings of the Conference was a pleasing feature. Much life, and Christian zeal and earnestness was manifest all through these meetings. I trust they will carry this zeal home with them, and manifest in increased evangelical work in their respective neighborhoods. These social meetings seem to promote brotherly union.

"How sweet, how heavenly is the sight
When those that love the Lord,
In one another's peace delight,
And thus fulfil his Word.
When each can feel his brother's sigh,
And with him bear a part;
When sorrow flows from eye to eye,
And joy from heart to heart!"

The local congregation at South Bend, feel uplifted by the meetings and have resolved to move forward with increased energy, and may God bless them as they shall move forward. The last two nights I was at South Bend, I was very hospitably entertained by Bro. and Sister Cordill. I understand that Bro. Richard Railsback and Bro. Cordill are the elders in charge of the Church at South Bend. During the sessions of Conference, the Sisters at South Bend organized for Christian work.

The next morning after the Conference Bro. Cordill went with me to the railroad station. I was glad to meet my family once more, and was pleased to find them in fair health.

The times in which we live are of such a character as to arouse the earnest activity of the Household of Faith from one end to the other of this great Continent. I am willing to spend and to be spent in my loving Master's service. I can do but little without your co operation, but by working in unison much may be accomplished. I am at the service of the Brotherhood, no matter where you are located. Those who wish preaching in their neighborhood, please say so immediately, so that I can arrange a trip with the view of saving railroad expenses as much as possible. Let us all be alive, energetic and prompt in the King's business.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.
W. H. WILSON.

He that Hath the Son Hath Life.

The opposite to the above is that "He that hath not the Son of God hath not life." The question in dispute is what is it to have the Son and how do we get him? There are two thoughts on this subject. One is that we possess an immortal soul that renders us deathless. The other is that we are mortal and must get a touch of the Son through faith in him. 1 John v. 11 says this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son.

It is evident that we must in some way come in touch with the record that God hath given of his Son which is found in the writings of the Old and New Testaments. The doctrines taught by the churches of today have little in common with the truths of Scripture. Drummond in his book "Natural Law in the Spiritual World" gives some very interesting scientific truths along this line. In his chapter on Biogenesis he states that "For two hundred years the scientific world has been rent with discussion on the Origin of Life. "One party claiming that matter can spontaneously generate life, the other that life can only come from pre-existing life." Experiments were made by such men as Huxley and others, which proved that spontaneous generation was an error. I wish here to give some of Mr. Drummond's arguments in favor of the position that life can only come from pre-existing life. On page 68 he says, "Let us first place vividly in our imagination the picture of the great kingdom of nature, the inorganic and the organic, as these now stand in the light of the Law of Biogenesis. What essentially is involved in saying that there is no spontaneous generation of life. It is meant that the passage from the mineral world to the plant or animal world is hermetically sealed on the mineral side. This inorganic world is staked off from the living world by barriers which have never yet been crossed from within. No modification of environments, no chemistry, no electricity, nor any form of energy, nor evolution can endow any single atom of the mineral world with the attribute of life.

Only by the bending down into this dead world of some living form can these dead atoms be gifted with the properties of vitality, without this preliminary contact with life they remain fixed in the inorganic sphere forever. It is a very mysterious law which guards in this way the portals of the living world." "And if there is one thing in nature more worth pondering for strangeness it is the spectacle of this vast helpless world of the dead cut off from the living by the Law of Biogenesis and denied forever even the possibility of resurrection within itself."

We may now read with more interest the account of the creation of man. In Gen. ii. 1 we read and the Lord God formed (molded) man of the dust of the earth and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and man became a living soul. Man was formed of the inorganic substances and it needed a bending down from above to make him a living person. He was then placed under the law that would have given him a better life than he possessed. In this trial he failed and the means of continuing life was removed.

It is stated that the man was driven from access to the tree of life and forced to perpetuate his life by the sweat of his face. In passing sentence upon him it is "dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." He was to return to the original elements. If he received life again it must be from pre-existing life. When Christ who is our life shall appear then we shall appear with him. Our life is hid with Christ in God. Again Drummond says page 71, "The passage from the natural world to the spiritual world is hermetically sealed on the natural side."

The door from the inorganic to the organic is shut, no mineral can open it; so the door from the natural to the spiritual is shut, and no man can open it. This world of natural men is staked off from the spiritual world by barriers which have never yet been crossed from within. No organic change, no modification of environments, no chemistry, no electricity, nor any form of energy, nor evolution can endow any single atom of the mineral world with the attribute of life. The spiritual world is guarded from the world next in order beneath it by a law of Biogenesis—except a man be born again, etc. except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God. It cannot be that this life can produce a better life except in a moral sense. "The plant stretches down to the dead world beneath it, touches its minerals and gases with its mystery of life, and brings them up ennobled and transformed to the living sphere."

"He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." The future life depends upon contact with life. Jesus said, "I am the bread of life." Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you. Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life, and I will raise him up at the last day. Many of his followers thought this a hard saying and followed him no longer. He said to the twelve, Will ye also go away? Peter said, Lord to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life. To have the words of eternal life is to accept life on the condition of faith repentance and baptism. By this we are transformed by the renewing of our mind, that we may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God. We become sons of God by adoption. When we have put on Christ in baptism we are his sons and daughters. We have been touched by that mysterious force that is the power of God unto salvation of every one that believeth the gospel. Come Lord Jesus, come quickly, and give us this life is my prayer.

Later Years the Best Years.

To a man of middle life existence is no longer a dream, but a reality. He has not much to look forward to, for the character of his life is generally fixed by this time. His profession, his home, his occupation will be for the most part what they are now. He will make few new acquaintances—no new friends. It is the solemn thought connected with middle age that life's last business is begun in earnest; and it is then, midway between the cradle and the grave, that a man begins to look back and marvel with a remorseful feeling that he let the days of youth go by half enjoyed. It is the pensive autumn feeling—it is the sensation of half sadness that we experience when the longest day of the year is passed, and every day that follows is shorter, and the lights fainter, and the feebler shadows tell that nature is hastening with gigantic footsteps to her winter grave. So does man look back upon his youth. When the first gray hairs become visible—when the unwelcome truth fastens itself upon the mind that a man is no longer going up hill but down, and that the sun is always westing, he looks back on things behind. Now, this is a natural feeling, but is it the high Christian tone of feeling? We may assuredly answer, No. We who have an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, what have we to do with things past? When we were children, we thought as children. But now there lies before us manhood, with earnest work, and then old age, and then the grave, and then home.

And so manhood in the Christian life is a better thing than boyhood, because it is a riper thing; an old age ought to be a brighter and a calmer and a more serene thing than manhood. There is a second youth for man, better and holier than his first, if he will look on, and no back. There is a peculiar simplicity of heart and a touching singleness of purpose in Christian old age which has ripened gradually, and not fitfully. It is then that to the wisdom of the serpent is added the harmlessness of the dove. It is then that to the firmness of manhood is joined almost the gentleness of womanhood. It is then that the somewhat austere and sour character of growing strength, moral and intellectual, mellows into the rich ripeness of an old age made sweet and tolerant by experience. It is then that man returns to first principles. There comes a love more pure and deep than the boy could ever feel. There comes a conviction, with a strength beyond that which the boy could never know, that the earliest lesson of life is infinite—Christ is all.—F. W. Robertson.

About Jonah and the Whale.

"Doctor," said a Tribune reporter yesterday to a city minister, "Is there not a natural explanation of the whale's swallowing of Jonah?"

"Yes. In the first place there is nothing in the Hebrew to show that it was what we call a whale. The word translated in both the Septuagint and the New Testament by the Greek 'Ketos' means simply a sea monster; and this word was the one used by our Lord in his reference to this account of Jonah. Matt. xii. 39-41. So far, therefore, as the Hebrew or Greek words are concerned the fish may have been a whale, a shark, a sea serpent, or any other large monster of the deep. Hence, there is nothing incredible in the statement that Jonah, upon being thrown into the sea, was quickly overtaken by a sea-monster and swallowed without any mutilation, providing the monster was large enough.

"It is well known that the waters which a vessel in sailing from Joppa to any Spanish port must pass, were frequented in early times by a species of shark called 'sea-dog,' having a throat large enough to swallow a man whole. The French naturalist, Lacepede, in his 'Histoire des Poissons, states that sea-dogs have a lower jaw of nearly six feet in semicircular extent; which enables us to understand how they can swallow entire animals as large or larger than ourselves. Blumenbach, the German zoologist, in his 'Manual of Natural History,' is authority for the additional facts that sea-dogs have been taken weighing five tons, and that a horse has been found whole in the stomach of a sea-dog. And Pliny, 50 A. D., gives an account of the skeleton of a sea-monster forty feet long, whose ribs were higher than those of an Indian elephant. The skeleton, Pliny says, 'was brought from Joppa, a city of Judea, and exhibited in Rome by M. Scaurus.'"—Salt Lake Tribune.

What an Eminent Judge Says.

Listen to the strong words of Mr. Justice Hawkins, sitting as judge at Durham: "When I come to look through the calendar, and when I see the number of crimes which have been committed under the influence of drink, I cannot help saying a word or two on that subject. Every day I live, the more I think of the matter, the more firmly do I come to the conclusion that the root of all crime is drink, that tyrant which affects people of all ages and of both sexes, young, middle-aged and old, father and son, husband and wife—all in turn become its victims.

It is strong drink which, for the most part, is the immediate and direct cause of those quarrels which terminate in serious mischief. It is strong drink which is the incentive to crimes of dishonesty. It is strong drink which causes homes to be impoverished; and I believe, knowing what I do, and having by experience had my attention drawn to it, I believe that nine-tenths of the crime in this country is engendered inside the doors of the public houses."

"Not in the contemplative, but in the active, lies true hope; not in the realm of ideals, but among tangible things, is man's sanctification wrought."

"Satan has no right to this world; he entered it as a rebel at the outset."—W. G. Leesley.

THE chains of habit are generally too small to be felt till they are too strong to be broken.

WE attract hearts by the qualities we display; we retain them by the qualities we possess.

EVERY kind action done in the world is working to restore the balance between right and wrong. Kindness has converted more sinners than either zeal, eloquence, or learning. These three never converted any one unless they were kind also. The continual sense which a kind heart has of its own need of kindness keeps it humble.

The Church

In Cleveland witnessed the obedience of faith by Bro. Arthur Baker, a young man in the vigor of life, who for several months, has been searching the infallible record to learn what the will of God is, with a view to this act; and has also availed himself of much private instruction and public preaching; and is therefore able to give a reason of the hope within him with meekness and fear to every one who asks it. From the thorough investigation he has made, and his gratitude to God for the priceless pearl he has found, we are hopeful that he will be an earnest worker with God till the end of life's journey, or the coming of the Lord.

"A Friend,

Is a good thing to have; one who will come to you not only in June when the birds are singing, and the flowers are blooming and the trees flourishing, but in chill December, when the trees are bare, and the flowers are dead, and the birds are gone, and you are alone, and weary, sad, and heart-broken; one who will come to you then, and with the divine intuition of true friendship will see what is the matter, and who, without being pulled at, or pressed with broad hints, will do the thing that ought to be done, and go away, leaving you to rejoice in the strength of his help, and the inspiration of his presence.

Reader, are you wishing you had such a friend, and wondering how you may get him? Nay! rather do you strive to be such a friend to somebody else? That is the worthier strife and nobler ambition.

The Czar Yields.

To write the details of the changes in Russia since our last issue, would be to fill our entire paper many times over. On Oct. 30 the Czar signed the documents granting "civic liberty, based on the real inviolability of person, freedom of conscience, speech, union and association."

The manifesto is complete enough in promises, but whether it will satisfy the people is yet to be determined. There are now two factions: the one rejoicing over the fact that at last Russia is freed from autocracy, and that this last absolute monarchy of Europe is passed away. These are the conservative people, who understand what kind of government exists in England and other lands. They see that with this start for a constitutional government in Russia her people will gradually be educated and brought up from the serfdom of the past, and raised to a higher plane, equal with other nations.

The other faction are not content with a peaceable settlement of the trouble, but are determined to have bloodshed, and so are agitating the discordant elements in different parts of the empire, killing, rioting, pillaging shops and residences. Thousands of people are dead, fighting is the rule, quiet in one place is but the signal for disorder in another. In localities where there are Jews they are made to suffer.

This element of the revolutionists would have the entire government swept away, as in the French revolution. It is now a fight to see which side wins. The seed has been sown for years and years, and now the Czar and his minions are trying to avoid the whirlwind that threatens them. We can only wait and see what the outcome will be.

The Land Question.

There certainly is an individual Christ—the Anointed Jesus—and just as certainly there is a multitudinous Christ, of which the Lord Jesus Christ is the head. Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Jesus are not to be the sole possessors of the earth. The whole body of righteous men and women are to possess the land, and dwell therein for ever. These form the body of Christ. He is the head, they are the members. So that there is a Christ—multitude, all made of one pattern with one faith, and one hope, and all baptized with one baptism. These are spiritual seed of Abraham; sharers of his faith and hope, and, if Gentiles, grafted into the Abrahamic stock by belief of the truth and baptism. Baptism introduces them into Christ. They are covered by his saving name, and become, so to speak, part of him, and as such—by their union with him—they are constituted the seed of Abraham. This enables us to understand Paul further on, in that 3rd chapter of Galatians. Verses 27-29, "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.....and if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise," that is, of the land forever. Hence in other places, the believers are spoken of as heirs, "heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him that we may be also glorified together. Rom. viii. 17. This glorification takes place at his return from heaven.

The immortal Ruler of men with his associates goes forth to dispossess the kings of the earth, and the oppressors of mankind of their dominion and their spoils. The Bible goes largely into details which we cannot now give. The world rulers will oppose his authority. They will not kiss the Son and so will perish from the way when his wrath is kindled but a little. There will be awful carnage and frightful judgments; the slain of the Lord shall be many. There will be no respect for vested interest in those days,—and there will be no compensation—not a cent. Then will be fulfilled the prophetic utterance of Mary the mother of Jesus: "He hath showed strength with his arm; he hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts. He hath put down the mighty from their seats and hath exalted them of low degree. He hath filled the hungry with good things; and the rich he hath sent empty away." That doesn't look like compensation! No! it will be the history of Canaan over again on a world-wide basis. The Hittites and Perrizites, the Amorites and the Canaanites and others had long taken possession of the soil. They had their vested interests, but Joshua paid no respect to them. There was no consideration for their acquired rights when Jehovah cast them out before the Israelites. Their rights were not bought up; yea, their very life was forfeited, and they were, on accounts of their wickedness judicially destroyed. Similar things will happen again. Joshua the second is coming to lead his people into the rest that remaineth for the people of God; and the oppressors will cease out of the land, and every proud and haughty person shall be brought low. Isa. ii. 11-12. Then will be fulfilled the song of the saints whom John saw in vision, Rev. v. 10: "Thou hast made us unto our God kings and priests and WE shall reign on earth. Every one shall have his portion, and under their beneficient rule the inhabitants of the earth will be permitted to cultivate it, while peace, plenty and righteousness will everywhere abound.

This, very briefly, is the Bible solution of the LAND QUESTION, and of every other problem which baffles the wisdom of statesmen the wide world over. God himself will rule by that man whom he hath ordained.

The gospel invites men and women to be associated with him in this great and glorious work. In the aggregate they will be a vast multitude which no man can number, all of whom have come up out of great tribulation, all of whom have, like Moses, counted earthy honor worth little, but have esteemed the privilege of association with Christ above all earthly good. They have counted the cost. They have weighed everything in the balance. They have resigned honor and privilege and worldly good—they have forsaken friends and acquaintances, husband and wife, father and mother—aye father and mother often necessary—that they may win Christ. And God will bless them eternally—for the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us. Rom. viii. 18.

There is no hope apart from this glorious scheme. There is a law of sin and death in existence, which is impartial, the same for the rich and the poor. Before it all must fall. There is no exception—the high and the low are swept before the scythe of death. Princes of royal blood whatever their wealth, their privileges, their learning, or their honor, must fall like the humblest man who tills the soil. Christ only can liberate from the power of death. He will burst the bars of the tomb for all whose names are written in the Lamb's book of life.

Reader, has your name been recorded there? If not, make haste to have it recorded there, because the Master will soon rise up and shut too the door; it will be too late to have it inserted then."

CHAPTER 8.

1. In that period, saith the Lord, they will bring out the bones of the kings of Jouda and the bones of his rulers, and the bones of the priests and the bones of the prophets, and the bones of those who dwell in Hierousalaem, out of their graves;

2. And they will expose them to the sun and moon and to all the stars, and to all the army of the heavens, things that they loved and to which they did bond-service and after which they went their way; they will not be publicly mourned and they will not be buried, and they will be for an exemplary-spectacle upon the face of the land;

3. Because they preferred death rather than life, and they will be an example for those left from that race, in every place where I shall thrust them out.

4. Because thus said the Lord, Doth not the one who falleth arise? or the one who turneth away not return?

5. Why is it that this my laity hath turned away in a disgraceful apostrophe, and allowed themselves to be controlled by their preference, and have not desired to return?

6. May ye have marked it well and may ye have hearkened; not in this wise shall they say; there is no man who repenteth of his evil-doing, saying, What have I done? The one who runneth hath left off from his running like a horse tired with his neighing.

7. And the Asida in the canopy knoweth her appointed time; and the turtle-dove and the gelidoon of the field, little birds, have watched to observe their own due times for coming in; but this my laity have not known the judicial-renderings of the Lord.

8. How will ye say, We are wise and the law of the Lord is with us? In vain hath there come to be a false measuring-line for scribes.

9. Wise men have been put to shame and astounded and taken, because they have discredited the law of the Lord; what wisdom is then in them?

10. Therefore am I going to give their wives to others and their fields to heirs at-law.

No 11th verse.

No 12th verse.

13. And they will gather the generic products thereof, saith the Lord; there is no grape cluster on their vines and no figs on their fig-trees; and the foliage hath been cast down.

14. Why do we remain seated? Gather yourselves together and let us go into the walled cities, and let us cast ourselves away there, because God hath cast us away, and given us to drink water of gall because we have sinned in his sight.

15. We were gathered together into peace, and there were no good things; into a period of healing, and lo, haste.

16. From out Dan shall we hear the sound of the swiftness of his horses; at the sound of the neighing of his cavalry all the land hath been shaken; and he will come and devour the land and the fulness of it, city and those who dwell in it.

17. Because lo, I am sending in among you serpents that kill, whom it is not possible to charm, and they will bite you.

18. With incurable bites in the midst of the woe of your discouraged heart.

19. Lo, a sound of the cry of a daughter of my laity from a land afar off; is not the Lord in Sioon? Or is there no king there? (answer no) Because they provoked me to wrath with their idols and with their other inutilities.

20. The summer is gone, the rowen is past, and we have not been saved.

I bid myself in darkness at the crushing blow of a daughter of my laity; in perplexity woes as of a woman bringing forth laid strong hold of me.

22. And is there no balm in Galaad or is there no healer there? Why hath not healing arisen for a daughter of my laity? (The 20th, 21st and 22nd verses are in substance a soliloquy of the prophet, continued in the next chapter.)

COMMENT.

The gist of the thought is given well enough in the Revised Version of this chapter as far as the last clause of the 2nd verse which is made to read, "They shall be dung upon the face of the earth." Should read, "And they will be for an exemplary-spectacle (or an example) upon the face of the land."

The whole of the third verse is wrong—for the third clause of it gives as a reason for "the example", "because they preferred death rather than life" and the rest of the verse states for whom this "exemplary spectacle" will be. Read and compare.

The 4th, 5th and 6th verses are somewhere near the thought but there is enough difference of thought to repay careful comparison I think—especially the last clause of the 6th where the figure of the neighing horse occurs. There is nothing about "the horse rushing headlong in the battle" and no words that can be twisted into meaning this. But the importance of a preference and a right choice, and though one fail, arising again and preserving to the end; and these are teachings now of the highest value. Do you sin and fall? Repent and try again.

In the 7th verse, which is fairly rendered, how they get "stork" out of the proper name "Asida" or "swallow" out of "Gelidoon" is more than I can make out; and is like making "conies" out of "hedge-hogs" in another place; and "spider" out of "lizzard" in "The spider taketh hold with her hands and is in kings' palaces."

In the 8th verse "the false pen of the scribe" should be "a false measuring line for scribes."

There is only one clause in the text of the 10th verse. The rest of it and all of the 11th and 12th seem to have been imported from somewhere.

The 13th is open to comparative criticism in its statements. Read and compare and see for yourselves.

In the 14th it reads "hath cast us away" instead of "let us be silent then," etc.

In the 15th it reads "we were gathered together into peace" instead of "we looked for peace," and "into a period of healing and lo haste" instead of "we looked for a time of healing and behold dismay."

16th verse begins "From out Dan shall we hear the sound of the swiftness of his horses," etc. "Swiftness" and "neighing" both translated "snorting" in the R. V. besides changing the tenses of the verbs and other things.

In the 17th verse I don't find any word meaning "basilisks."

The 18th is connected with the 17th by a comma only and is not an exclamation but expresses a consequence of the "bites of the serpents."

The 19th is well enough; but the 20th reads "summer" first and "rowen" last meaning "the summer-harvest" and "rowen" meaning "the aftermath" that follows it—and that precedes "the vintage" and gathering of "the fruits." Read and compare the 21st verse with the same in the R. V. and try and find a word meaning "black" in the text, any text. This is not a parlor picture—and you won't find it.

In the 22nd verse "healer" and "healing" instead of "physician" and "health" R. V. brings out the thought exactly and the latter does not. Remember that "Java" (commonly vocalized so as to read "Jehovah") was and is the ineffable name of "Our Father" and also keep in mind that it means, when translated, "A Healing-Breath." So God, in the final analysis, is "the Great Physician."

Report of Labor.

Dear Restitution:

I will give a report of our meetings at Ripley, Ill., conducted by Bro. S. J. Lindsay, of Oregon, Ill.

He came the 7th of October and preached until the 26th. His sermons were earnest and stirring to attentive audiences. There were seven additions, James Crookham; Alpha Howell; Anna Howell; Mrs. Norah Mallory; Mrs. Mae Patterson and Wilburn Robins and wife Emma. These intelligent brothers and sisters in obedience to the command, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, took up their cross and followed the meek and lowly One down into the watery grave to arise and walk in newness of life. Have gone through the door into the sheepfold and are ready to accept Peter's exhortation "to make their calling and election sure." Brother Lindsay shuns not to declare the whole counsel of God. Some believe and will not be baptized, and some are baptized first and believe afterwards, but he gives Scripture after Scripture that this is not the apostolic order to get into Christ, also those that have been legally adopted if they do not keep in the straight and narrow way they will not gain the prize of the high calling in Christ Jesus. How true that the truth cuts and divides and separates. If he has any enemies it is because he tells them the truth. I am so thankful to our heavenly Father in heaven for our own talented brethren and sisters, who manifest so much love and zeal for the truth. I do hope all the brethren and sisters will manifest as much by doing all they can to keep those in the field that can preach the gospel. Sure we want the glorious light to shine into other hearts.

Gigantic Tunnel Scheme.

The first project laid before the Czar after the close of the war was a gigantic scheme for the building of a tunnel through the Caucasus, under the present military Georgian road, running from Vladikavkaz to Tiflis. This will be the biggest thing of its kind ever attempted, and the costliest. The total length of the tunnel will be thirty-two miles—one section of fourteen miles and another of eighteen miles.

The mountain will be entered just within sight of the peak of Kasbek, to which according to legend, Prometheus was chained. Within sight of the Tiflis line it crosses the river Rion, the ancient Phasis, up which Jason and Argonaute sailed in quest of the golden fleece.

Prince Khilkoff, Russian minister of ways and communications, is warmly advocating the project which is regarded as certain, the assent of the crown already having been given. The tunnel will cost $150,000,000. The strategic advantages of the line are enormous, for by it it will be possible to move troops from St. Petersburg to the Persian frontier in seven days.

When prohibition went into effect in Kansas, that State had a population of 996,816. Out of this population she had 917 convicts. After many years of prohibition, even under officers who did not want the law enforced, the population has now reached 1,470,495, an increase of nearly 50 per cent, but she has only 788 prisoners; while the population has increased 50 per cent, crime has decreased in proportion to the present population 65 per cent. During the same period, the criminal population of license Nebraska has outrun the general growth of the population 47 per cent. Crime is the most expensive item in the state's expenses, and liquor is the great cause of crime.

Conference Report.

The Quarterly meeting of the Central Washington Conference met at Waterville, Washington, October 13, 14, 15, 1905.

To those who were privileged to attend, the meetings were indeed enjoyable and profitable. On account of sickness Bro. A. L. Corbaley was not able to attend the meetings at the church. So on Saturday at 11 o'clock A. M. the brothers and sisters met at his home, holding a social meeting followed by the business meeting. The social meeting was one long to be remembered by those present. Such perfect harmony and Christian love permeated the meeting that each one felt free to speak of those things which were nearest the heart. We certainly had a time of refreshing. We were especially pleased to have Bro. Cardill from Mdan, Washington present, who gave us many words of encouragement.

At the business meeting the Evangelists reported two new ones added to the Body by means of baptism. Bro. A. L. Corbaley also reported two more baptized.

The treasurer reported the sum of eighty-six dollars and twenty-five cents, on hand for evangelist's work.

The next Conference will convene at Wenatchee, Washington, Jan. 5, 6, 7, 1906 Brothers and sisters, bear this in mind and arrange to be present and enjoy the feast.

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. For the month of November we can offer it at $1.95 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

Do Not be a Second-Class Man.

You can hardly imagine a boy saying: "I am going to be a second-class man. I don't want to be first-class, and get good jobs, the high pay. Second-class jobs are good enough for me." Such a boy would be regarded as lacking in good sense, if not sanity. You can get to be a second-class man, however, by not trying to be a first-class one. Thousands do that all the time, so that second-class men are a drug on the market.

Second-class things are only wanted when first-class cannot be had. You wear first-class clothes if you can pay for them, eat first class butter, first-class meat, first-class bread; or if you do not, you wish you could. Second-class men are no more wanted than any other second-class commodity. They are taken and used when a better article is scarce, or is too high-priced for the occasion. For work that really amounts to anything, first-class men are wanted.

Many things make second-class men. A man menaced by disposition, whose understanding is dull and slow, whose growth has been stunted, is a second-class man, if he is not third-class. A man who, through his amusements in his hours of leisure, exhausts his strength and vitality, vitiates his blood, wears his nerves till his knees tremble like leaves in the wind, is only half a man, and could in no sense be called first-class.—Success.

Read This Slowly and Think.

Does my life please God?
Am I studying my Bible daily?
Am I enjoying my Christian life?
Is there anyone I cannot forgive?
Have I ever won a soul for Christ?
How much time do I spend in prayer?
Have I ever had a direct answer to prayer?
Is there anything I cannot give up for Christ?
Just where am I making my greatest mistake?
How does my life look to those who are not Christians?
How many things do I put before my religious duties?
Is the world made better or worse by my living in it?
Am I doing anything I would condemn in others?

STAND FAST.

Stand like the anvil, when the strokes
Of stalwart men fall fierce and fast;
Storms but more deeply root the oak,
Whose brawny arms embrace the blast.

Stand like the anvil, when the sparks
Fly far and wide, a fiery shower;
Virtue and truth must still be marks,
Where malice proves its want of power.

Stand like an anvil, when the bar
Lies red and glowing on its breast;
Duty shall be life's leading star,
And conscious innocence its rest.

Stand like an anvil, when the sound
Of pond'rous hammer pains the ear;
Thine but the still and stern rebound
Of the great heart that can not fear.

Parable of the Hidden Leaven. Matt. xiii. 33-36.

"The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will shew them his covenant to make them know it." Margin Psa. xxv. 4

"I will open my mouth in a parable I will utter dark sayings of old." Psa. lxxviii. 2.

"Having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure which he hath purposed in himself that in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are on the earth in him, in whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will." Eph i. 9-11.

In the elucidation of this parable we showed the Scriptural meaning of the woman, (namely, the church,) and the leaven (namely the false teaching which was hidden in the doctrine of the church) and concealed in the three measures of meal which had ought to have been made into the bread of sincerity and truth, for the chosen people of God to be nourished with until the coming of Christ—and this leaven must be purged out, and we must eat this unleavened bread of sincerity and truth, if we would eat the passover with him in the kingdom of God.

Jesus in this parable takes us back to Abraham's day. Here the three measures of meal was first given to us. "And the Scriptures foreseeing that God would justify the Gentiles by faith preached the gospel beforehand unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all the nations be blessed, so then they which be of faith are blessed with the faithful Abraham." Gal. iii. 8.

Here is the covenant of God first given to his people the church of the living God, "Which is the faith of Abraham who is the Father of us all." Rom. vi. 16.

And we at this time claim to be of "The Church of God of the Abrahamic faith."

Until the whole was leavened, reads the parable, showing that time was necessary in the process, and from Abraham's time unto our own time shows plainly that three measures of time must be allowed for the three measures of meal, a measure at a time was leavened and three measures was to be measured out before the whole was leavened.

We find written "By measure hath he measured the times"—and we found in former writings that 1260 years was one measure, and three measures of this number traces the centuries and the years back to Abraham's eventful days, when Sarah took the three measures of fine meal to bake into cakes for the three heavenly visitors to partake of.

Three measures of time counts up to 3780 years—the year 1808 B. C. Abraham entertained these messengers from God when the promise of a Son was made to Abraham and Sarah. "She shall be a mother of nations, kings of people shall be of her" was the promise to Sarah from God and in 1807 B. C. the promised Son was born.

In the birth of Isaac Abraham in faith saw the greater Son promised in Jesus the Christ. He "who when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons." Gal. iv. 4.

"In the midst of the years make known, in wrath remember mercy." Note this point that Jesus made when they rejected him, their Messiah, and their promised Son of God. He said, "Fill ye up then the measure of your fathers," for his first advent was "in the midst of the years." "I have considered the days of old the years of ancient times."

We can see how Abraham our father looked down the long vista of time and rejoiced to see the day of Christ, and he saw it and was glad.

From the eventful days of Abraham we see, as it were, a book, and in the pages of this book up to the middle of the leaves we see it headed on every page with the letters B. C. and the date of the occurrence of the event chronicled on the page, while the last half of the pages of the book is marked with the letters A. D. with the various dates attendant. Here is "the midst of the years" shown with Jesus the Christ the centre of the hope of his people, while the blessed hope of his second coming is the anchor of our souls, as it is written, "So look upon the works of the Most High for there are two and two one against another." "All things are double one against another, and he hath made nothing imperfect." Ecclesiasticus.

We will take the time as given in our Bible chronology when Abraham was called out of Ur of the Chaldees in B. C. 1923 for here was the beginning of the nation of Israel, the called and chosen of God—three measures of 1260 years equals 3780 years—which marks off the centuries of time till it reaches down to our own days of A. D. 1857.

Jesus said to his followers, "This generation shall not pass away till all be fulfilled." Three score and ten are the allotted days of man, seventy years, a generation, plus A. D. 1857 reaches to A. D. 1927, a year longer and beyond the time given for the fulness of Gentile times.

B. C. 1913 "The Word of the Lord came unto Abram in a vision saying, Fear not Abram I am thy shield and thy exceeding great reward.....and he brought him forth abroad and said, Look now toward heaven and tell the stars, if thou be able to number them, and he said unto him, so shall thy seed be, and he believed the Lord and it was accounted unto him for righteousness, and he said unto him, I am the Lord that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees to give thee this land to inherit it, and he said, Lord, God, whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it.....And he said unto him, Take me a heifer of three years old, and a she-goat of three years old, and a ram of three years old, and a turtle-dove and a young pigeon, and he took unto him all these and divided them in the midst and laid each piece one against another, but the birds divided he not.....And when the sun was going down a deep sleep fell upon Abram, and lo, a horror of great darkness fell upon him, and it came to pass that when the sun went down and it was dark behold a smoking furnace and a burning lamp that passed between those pieces. ("Thy Word is as a lamp to my feet," "And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us.") In that same day the Lord made a covenant with Abram saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates." Gen. xv.

It was this vision that enabled Abram to see the day of Christ and an unwavering faith in waiting for an entrance into that city whose builder and maker is God.

It was in this year that Melchisedec blessed Abram. He who was the "King of Salem" and "the priest of the Most High God." Gen. xiv.

3780 years after this time, B. C. 1913 follows down the stream of time to 1867 A. D. and in this year Edward Illme lectured on "The Lost Tribes of Israel as traced and found in the Anglo-Saxon race," and in them was the dying blessing of Jacob fulfilled.

"And Jacob called unto his sons and said, Gather yourselves together, and hear ye sons of Jacob, that I may tell you that which shall befall you in the last days." "Anglo-Saxon Israel."

B. C. 1898 7. Sodom was destroyed for her great wickedness. In these years the promise was given and fulfilled to Abraham. "Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son."

Three measures of years sweeps down the centuries of time for 3780 years unto A. D. 1882-3 and reaches the notable sign year, "The sign of the Son of Man in heaven." The notable brilliant red sunsets and sunrise of the fall of 1898. "For the sky is red." "Can ye not discern the signs of the times?" Matt. xvi. 3.

While these red sunsets were brilliant in their evening glory and morning splendor, this question came to me from a sister in Lanark, Ill. "Do you believe that Jesus could be the son of Joseph and Mary, Brother M— is teaching the Bible class here that he was?" Thus was presented to me the question that Jesus asked of his disciples "Whom say ye that I the Son of Man am?" After searching and investigating the Scriptures I could say with Peter "Thou art the Son of God." I know thou art "the Holy One from heaven."

From the trial of Abraham's faith in a promised son to the trial of the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith in the promised greater Son, THE SON OF GOD, was just three measures of time "until the whole was leavened."

Here in this fiery trial we purged out the old leaven of Unitarian doctrine which was given to us to partake of—and gladly eat of "the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth"—as we found "the truth as it is in Jesus."

B. C. 1892 Abraham put away Hagar and Ishmael, "for in Isaac shall thy seed be called." The three measures from this time brings us to A. D. 1888. Among those who looked for the coming of Christ various doctrines were brought forward to try the Church of God—Paul taught us "to prove all things and to hold fast that which is good," but at this time when the Herald of the Morning began to teach that in the future age the first fruits were to become Saviors and to do for the inhabitants of the distant stars what Jesus did for our earth. I had no faith, it looked akin to the old delusion, a home in the sky, or as Talmage taught a home in the stars.

Another publication The Spirit of the Word, taught the great love of God, at this time without dwelling on the fear of the Lord, but declared that ultimately all would be saved, even Judas Iscariot. These teachers did not seem to see that their doctrines as variously taught made void the Word of God.

B. C. 1872 God bade Abraham to take his son Isaac and offer him for a burnt offering. Abraham responded to the command without hesitation, until the countermand came from God "Lay not thine hand upon the lad,.....for now I know that thou fearest God seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son from me. .....And Abraham called the name of that place Jehovah-jireh as it is said to this day, In the mount of the Lord it shall be seen.....By myself have I sworn saith the Lord.....that in blessing will I bless thee and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven and as the sand which is upon the sea-shore because thou hast obeyed my voice."

Three measures of time, from this event brings us to the near future of 1908 A. D. when we hope to see the elect seed of the Church of God accepting "the whole counsel of God" that Paul taught in that no word of God shall be made void. "And thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies .....and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Gen. xxii.

In 1857 B. C. it is written "And Abraham was old and gone into days (Heb. Margin) and the Lord had blessed Abraham in all things, and in this year his son Isaac was married. Gen. xxiv. Three measures of time reaches down the ages to A. D. 1923.

"Watchman what of the night, the morning cometh, and also the night. If ye will inquire, inquire ye, come ye again." (Margin.) Isa. xxi. 11, 12. "The night is far spent the day is at hand."

It is recorded that in 1853 B. C. Abraham gave all that he had unto Isaac. Gen. xxv. 5.

The three measures namely 3780 years afterwards brings us to A. D. 1927, when we hope to be in the age to come. The trials and troubles of Gentile times ended. We hope to rest in the kingdom of God with our Savior. "My times are in thy hand."

The leaven was idently working when Esau sold his birthright for a mess of pottage to stay his hunger "who afterward could find no place for repentence though he sought it with tears." The act was final in its effects. "Jacob have I loved but Esau I hated."

How prone, during the leavening of this first measure of meal was Israel to sin, they who saw God's mighty works in their behalf. They were God's chosen people. He was with them in their goings out and their comings in. He showed them his loving kindness in their behalf, and yet they rejected him that he should not reign over them, after he had brought them out of the land of Egypt and gave them the land of Canaan for a possession. "So I gave them a king in my wrath." Later Solomon sinned and the whole nation fell into idolatry—until the Lord in 721 B. C. scattered the ten tribes of Israel and sent them into captivity among the heathen nations, wherein they became lost, yea, lost to the world and eventually to themselves.

Evil was in the land of Judah when the first measure of meal was fully leavened in the days of Josiah, king of Judah, B. C. 638.

The leaven was working in the second measure for we find in B. C. 624, Huldah the prophetess spoke "Thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will bring evil upon this place and upon the inhabitants thereof even all the curses that are written in the book which they have read before the king of Judah. Because they have forsaken me and have burned my incense unto other gods that they might provoke me to anger with all the works of their hands, therefore my wrath shall be poured out upon this place and shall not be quenched." 2 Chron xxxiv. 24.

The events of this second leavened measure of meal proved as disastrous to Judah as to Israel for it brought on the power of the Gentile times.

While the third leavened measure reaching to our own days, shows the wicked teachings in the nominal Christian churches of our days, in "thou shalt not surely die" but when you have passed away you shall be angels in heaven, while the prophet Ezekiel says "When I say unto the wicked thou shalt surely die."

MRS. ELIZA K. HOLT.

Dear Friend:

I am still reading volume five of Dawn, and once more I take the liberty of writing, not waiting for a reply to my last, which I did expect would receive notice.

I wish to call your attention to page 351 of the fifth volume; commencing with the fourth line from the bottom. "God will redeem my soul from the grave (sheol—the condition of death)." Psalm xlix. 15. And, as we have seen, it is because all souls are thus redeemed in the one redemption that all our friends all mankind are said to sleep in Jesus." 1 Thes. iv. 14. We remark here that the apostle could not, in this expression refer merely to the saints, as when he speaks of those who are in Christ, for those referred as "new creatures" are those only who are begotten of God through the Spirit, to joint heirship with Christ, as his church; the members of his body (that is true). But those who sleep in Jesus include the entire race (that statement is false) for our Lord was a propitiation for our sins, and not for ours only; but also for the sins of the whole world." (That is true). There is too much perversion, and special pleading to weaken the force of the apostle's words. But the apostle refers to the whole as being thus asleep in Jesus." What a statement for a man of letters to make. Turn and read, and allow Paul to speak the truth on this important subject and tell us who are in Christ. 1 Thes. iv. 13 to 17. "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope, for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him, for this we say unto you by the Word of the Lord, that we which are alive (of the church) and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep; for the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain (of the church) shall be caught up together with them (those who were asleep) in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." Any one who has a thimble full of brains ought to see that the apostle is not referring to the whole world, when speaking of those which are "sleeping in Jesus" "and dead in Christ," for if he were referring to the whole world as Russel contends, then all the dead sleepers from Adam to the judgment, including all the cannibals, savages, Hottentots and idiots, all the children of Satan; which Russel makes to include all the saints of the first four thousand years. See Dawn 3rd volume, page 121, with all the scum and rottenness of Adam's race who have lived and died. All these Russel says "sleep in Jesus." And Paul says, "them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him, and they shall rise at the sounding of the "last trump." And with the pure and undefiled of earth be "caught up to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall they ever be with the Lord."

O, what a collective body, what a meeting, will they all be spirit born, and see and know each other? This is universalism run mad, or Russelism boiled down. Do you, can you believe such trash? No, the apostle was speaking only of those who had come to a knowledge of the truth, and thus become "Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." To be in the Christ is to be a "new creature," and no longer a stranger from the covenants in which is found the Christ. All who are strangers from these are in Adam.

Paul speaks of those "who also were in Christ before me." Rom. xvi. 7. How could he write thus if all the world were in the Christ without regard to fitness? Turn again to Psa. xlix. 12 to 20. Nevertheless man being in honor abideth not; he is like the beasts that perish, this their way is their folly, yet their posterity approve their sayings, like sheep they have are laid in the grave. Death shall feed on them; and the upright shall dominion over them in the morning; and their beauty shall consume in the grave from their dwelling; but God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave; for he shall receive me." In contrast with those he will not redeem and receive; they shall go the generation of their fathers; they shall never see light; man that is in honor and understandeth not; is like the beasts that perish." "O Lord our God, other lords beside thee have had dominion over us; but by thee only will we make mention of thy name; they are dead; they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise; therefore hast thou visited and destroyed them and made all their memory to perish." Verse 19 in contrast with the foregoing: "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise; awake and sing ye that dwell in dust; for thy dew is as the dew of herbs; and the earth shall cast out the dead." Isa. xxvi. 12-14 and 19. No marvel that we find Daniel, saying many that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake (not all). Dan. xii. 2. And Christ using the terms "accounted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead." Some will not be accounted worthy. Luke xx. 35. And Paul in Phil iii. 11, "If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead." Paul did not believe all men were asleep in Jesus, and would rise from the dead, or he would not have thus written.

Witness the arrogance of the man for effect, "But the apostle refers to the whole world as being thus asleep in Jesus; although none know it from this standpoint except the heavenly Father and his consecrated people; whom he has instructed respecting his future gracious plans through the Word of truth." Where has the Father of the faithful ever taught such a doctrine in his Word? No where can it be found; such a doctrine as the resurrection of all men; and that all the world is asleep in Jesus, is a perversion of the truth, and offering a premium for sin.

In volume III., page 240, we read, "Hence with all of the feet who die since that date (1874) the moment of death is the moment of change (true from life to death). They die like men but in the same instant they are made like their Lord, glorious spirit beings. They are caught away from earthy conditions, to be forever with the Lord in the air, in kingdom power and glory."

You will notice what Paul says in 1 Cor. xv. 51, we shall not all sleep (die), and 1 Thes. iv. 15 and 17, "That we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep." Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air." There is no dying of the living saints at the Lord's return; the change takes place in a moment without dying. You will notice on page 352, that Russel uses death and sleep synonymously; just as Paul and the Christ use the terms, St. John xi. 11-14, Igo, that I may awake him out of sleep. How belt Jesus spoke of his death; but they thought that he had spoken of taking rest in sleep; then said Jesus unto them plainly, "Lazarus is dead." Verses 25-26. I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live, and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this? If so, then what about Russel's having the saints "to die like men" after the "Lord comes"?

Yours in defence of the truth.

THOS. CRONKHITE.

Report of Labor.

Complying with the request of the President of our State Conference I took the train and came to Eagle Grove Oct. 21. The next morning I spoke in the church at 11 o'clock on "Things concerning the kingdom." Also spoke in the evening. It was thought best to continue the meeting. So I remained there and preached Monday and Tuesday evenings, and visited and talked with our people exhorting and encouraging them to continue in the faith. The little congregation at Eagle Grove have indeed had trials as well as difficulties to overcome, but they now have the church building paid for, painted, papered, with cement walk in front, and electric lighted. It is a nice little place, and no one there deserves more credit for these church comforts than Bro. and Sister P. J. Allard. We would also mention the untiring efforts and help of Sister Rhoda Flowers Wadell, who is treasurer and secretary of the congregation. Sister Wyman seemed earnest in the love of the gospel. Brother A. M. Jones has returned from Kansas to his old home and it is hoped he will show his old time vigor and help in the Sunday school and church work. Let us beware of worldly work that it do not "choke the Word" and make us unfruitful in the work of the Lord. We are sure that our work at Eagle did much good, and the Conference cannot do better than to help and encourage our churches where they have no pastor, by sending a good worker to them to help them along. We made four discourses and twelve visits in the homes, and nearly all these families attended the services in the church. From Eagle we went to Bradgate and visited Bro. W. C. Nowlan and family; and when we say "family," we mean a little more than ordinary, as there are thirteen children in this family; the youngest being over 20 years old—are all alive and well. Surely Sister Nowlin is a "mother in Israel" in more senses than one.

We had a very pleasant little meeting at the home of Tom White, one of the sons-in-law of these estimable parents. We will not soon forget our short but pleasant visit at Bradgate. Bro. Nowlan took me to the depot and after an hour's ride in a chair car of the C. & N. W. I stepped upon the platform of the depot at Marathon. Here there was formerly a church of over sixty members, principally brought into the faith of the gospel by the labors of Eld. T. J. Whitesitt, now at rest. We went directly to the home of his son George. Here I found Sister Whitesitt engaged in the millinery business and also found her father L. J. Sample, who makes his home with them since the death of Sister Sample. During our stay at Marathon Bro. Sample and myself roomed together, and our visit together was truly pleasant, and we talked much of life and its opportunities, its joys and its sorrows, as well as our hopes for the life to come. I came to Marathon on Thursday Oct. 26, and visited and held meetings until Oct. 30. Many changes have taken place here. Some are dead, some have moved away, and some alas, have loved the present world more than God's promise of eternal life. Some however are true to the principles of the faith and are looking for the coming King and Life-Giver and a home in the kingdom.

During my stay at Marathon I preached four times in Griffith hall and held two cottage meetings—one at Sister Dell Garton's and one at Arthur Garton's. Bro. John Garton will hold meetings here every two weeks. We are now at Sioux Rapids at the home of Bro. J. S. Howard. We came here Oct. 30. The Baptist people have given us the use of their furnace-heated, electric-lighted church. After putting up a notice of our meetings in the post office and chalking the walks, we held our first preaching service in this city. We spoke briefly upon the Rainbow covenant, the covenant with Abraham and the covenant with David, and shall speak tonight upon the New and the Everlasting Covenants as presented in the Old and New Testaments. From here I go to Sac City, if the Lord wills it.

Your brother in the hope of the gospel.

A. J. EYCHANER.

Of the billion, five hundred million people in the world, the billion never heard the gospel. Christians think of that.

Faith that does not bring rest needs another place.

Seventy-five More.

I receive enquiries as to when Pine Woods Bible Class Book will be printed?

In answer, I will say, when I receive seventy-five more subscriptions, the book can be printed, and sent forth on its mission, to teach the glad tidings. If all who really want it had said so, it could now be out sowing seed. When God's professed servants make his cause a secondary matter, and put it off to a "convenient time," his cause suffers. Now all who really want the book please sit down and write me, as soon as you have read this, and then things will move at once. Don't wait until a more convenient time. God's business demands prompt attention.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.
W. H. Wilson.

Will All Men be Saved?

I have written and published, and now offer for sale at ten cents per copy, a book of 60 pages, which is intended to be, as indicated in the sub-title, "A Consideration of the Doctrine of Universal Salvation." Some of the divisions are, An Introductory section, A section treating the historic origin of the doctrine, Tendencies and effects, God's methods of dealing with men, The Savior of all men, Who will have all men to be saved, The paid debt, the sovereignty of God.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Gospel of the Kingdom, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Poetry.

I'm Not Alone.

I'm not alone, for God is near;
He watches all my pangs of grief,
And kindly sends me sweet relief,
And dries up sorrow's tear.
When trials come my heart to fill,
He gently whispers, "Peace, be still;"
—I'm not alone.

I'm not alone, O blessed thought!
When on life's stormy billows tossed:
When faith and hope and trust grow cold,
Then comest with blessings manifold,
To cheer me on my weary way:
Up, then, faint heart, thou'rt more than conqueror,
A lamp by night, a cloud by day.
—I'm not alone.

Communicated.

Not Guilty.

"And now, behold, I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more. Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men. For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God." Acts xx 25 27.

What made this grand old soldier of Jesus the Christ "pure from the blood of all men?" The answer is, "For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God." In what did this counsel consist? This is couched in the phrase, "Among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God."

We occasionally come across a person who in days gone by, used to preach "the kingdom of God," as the message of life, both by voice and press, who have ceased to so proclaim it. These people continue to preach A message, but are as silent as the grave about "the gospel of the kingdom of God," as the message of life. If blood guiltiness would have been attached to Paul, if he had shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God by neglecting to "preach the kingdom of God," "How shall we escape if we neglect so great a salvation; which at first began to be spoken by the Lord." Heb. ii. 3. The message "which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord," is found in Mark i. 14: "Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God,.....repent ye and believe the gospel," which Jesus preached, and that which Paul preached, as "the counsel of God," which made him "pure from the blood of all men."

The question arises in my mind, how many preachers are "pure from the blood of all men?"

Another thought comes to my mind, can preachers only incur blood guiltiness, or can it attach to others who are not in the evangelical work?

To illustrate this point, I will quote from a letter received, which is only a sample selected from many which I receive, then you can judge for yourselves, who is responsible because "the kingdom of God," is not preached in localities where the call comes for its proclamation.

"Oct. 10, 1905.
E——, Mo.

Dear Bro. Wilson:

I am as you might say, alone in the faith, and have been only one in the true faith, in twenty-four years. * * *

If you come near here this fall, I would like so much to have you come and preach a few sermons. We are very poor in this world's goods, I could not have you come very far, but I am so willing to do what I can. Will you please let me know what it will cost, and when you can come, if at all.

Your sister in the hope of the soon coming Savior.

Mrs. M—— S——.

Now, here is a sister who has remained firm in the faith for the space of twenty-four years, all alone, and has only met one believer in all that time. She is desirous of having the "counsel of God"—"the gospel of the kingdom" preached by Jesus, proclaimed to her community that they may also be saved. She is not able to contribute the means to pay railroad expenses, and something toward the support of the family of the Evangelist of her choice, and the Evangelist himself not being able to carry the burden, besides the labor of preaching the message, then the question arises, who incurs the blood guiltiness in this case? I would say, answer the question yourself. Is the Evangelist who cannot bear all the burden, or those who could by his or her means, send the Evangelist, the responsible party? Judge yourselves.

You surely must admit that our Evangelists are not the sole responsible parties in the household of faith. There are others besides them, who will have to give an account of their stewardship when the day of rendering accounts shall come. It would be better to consider this question now, and not put it off until the day of reckoning shall come. There are many seekers after light who would gladly accept it, if some light bearer, could go to their midst and let the light shine in the darkness.

How many name-bearers are willing to send the light to those who dwell in darkness?

Yours in the Blessed Hope,
W. H. WILSON.

The Sanctuary.

DAN. VIII. 13, 14.

The Greek word in the Septuagint here is to hagion, "the holy place," the neuter of the adjective hagios, used as a noun.

The same word is used by our Lord in Matt. xxiv. 15, quoting Dan. ix. 26, where it is translated sanctary in A. V.; but the Dinglott and the R. V. margin have it "a holy place" in Mat. xxiv. 15. The same word is used also by Paul in Heb. viii. 2; ix. 1-3; xiii. 11, where it is translated santuary in A. V., R. V. and T. C.

The sanctuary in Dan. ix. 26 was destroyed by the Romans in A. D. 70; but the sanctuary of Dan. viii. 13, 14 would exist at the end of the 2300 days, and at that time need to be cleansed. The Romans destroyed the typical sanctuary; but the little horn abused the antitypical sanctuary, its service and its host.

Some have made a great mistake in seeking a physical similarity between Jewish types and their Christian antitypes. In the case in hand it would be idle to argue, because the New Testament tells us exactly what and where the sanctuary of the Christian system is.

What was called to hagion in the Old Testament is called ho naos in the New Testament—29 times before Revelation and 16 times in Revelation, but Heb. viii. 2; ix. 1-3; xiii. 11 retains to hagion. But Paul is there writing to Hebrews about their own dear holy place.

Unfortunately, however, in the A. V. or common version of the New Testament naos and hieron are both translated temple. In the R. V. when Naos occurs in the Greek "sanctuary" is put in the margin. But in Rev. iii. 12 after "sanctuary" in the margin are these words, "and so throughout this book." And yet the word temple does occur in Revelation in the R. V. as in the A. V. and should not because hieron is not in the Greek.

Hieron was the whole temple; naos was the cell or space in the pagan temple where the image of the god was placed. It is strictly any house or dwelling"—Liddell and Scott.

Naos occur forty-five times in the New Testament. Translators have so seriously obscured the text by translating it temple always, which it never means, that I give all the references. The reader would do well to mark each text with an S on the margin in his Bible. Matt. xxiii 16, 17, 21, 35; xxv. 61; xxvii. 5, 40, 51; Mark xiv. 58; xv. 29, 38; Luke i. 9, 21, 22; xxiii. 45; John ii. 19, 20, 21. 1 Cor. iii. 16, 17; vi. 19; 2 Cor. vi. 16; Eph. ii. 21; 2 Thes. ii. 4; Rev. iii. 12; vii. 15; xi. 1, 2, 19; xiv. 15, 17; xv. 5, 6; xvi. 1, 17; xxi. 22; Acts vii. 48; xvii. 24. Better study the above well, to learn what the Christian sanctuary is.

Hagios was a common word in the Old Testament, many times was called "holy." Christian inspiration brought forward the essential idea in the adjective hagios and put it into the noun naos, which became the name of the Christian sanctuary.

1. The first Christian sanctuary was the physical body of Jesus Mat. i. 18 20; Luke i. 26 35; Matt. iii. 16, 17; John ii. 19-21.

2. After his ascension his spiritual body, the church, was the sanctuary, Those who believed unto him. Rom. xii. 5. Note especially 1 Cor. iii. 16, 17; vi. 16; 2 Cor. vi. 16; Eph. i. 22, 23; ii. 21.

You cannot learn from Leviticus what the cleansing of the sanctuary in Dan. viii. 14 means. The marginal word there "justified"—gives us a hint; "made even, made correct." That cleansing seems to be a John the Baptist before the second coming. As John was a voice crying throughout Judea: "Repent ye; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand..... prepare ye the way of the Lord; make straight in the desert a highway for our God." Isa. xl. 3; Matt. iii. 1-3; Mark i. 1-3; Luke iii. 2-6.

A similar voice has been sounding through Christendom 70 years. It has wrought great changes in the church. The Lord's prayer for oneness when it seems more imperative now than ever. The proposed inter-national Conference in Newark this month is significant. Better make the call as comprehensive as Christendom. If all phases of Christianity should meet there in friendly conference, no harm but much good might come from it. Remember the cleansing of the sanctuary, Dan. viii. 14, is getting the church ready for the Lord's coming. If every member really believed that he was liable any day to come personally to Jerusalem to assume universal sway, there would be greater excitement throughout Christendom than there has been in Russia in the last week; but how different. Socorro, Lord Jesus.

Hieremias (or "Iremiah").

CHAPTER 9.

1. Who will give water for my head and a fountain of tears for mine eyes, and I will lament for this my laity day and night, for the wounded of a daughter of my laity?

2. Who will give unto me in the wilderness a farthest station and I will leave my laity behind and go away from them? Because they are all committing adultery a synod of those who set aside obligations;

3. And they have stretched their tongue like a bow; a lie and not faith hath become strong upon the land, because they have gone from evil-doings, and they have not known me, saith the Lord.

4. Ye have each one of you watched to guard himself against his neighbor, and ye have not trusted in your brethren, because every brother will spurn with his heel and every friend will go his way deceitfully.

5. Each one will mock at his friend; they will not speak truth; their tongue hath learned to talk lies; they have done wrong, and they have not stopped to return.

6. Interest upon interest and deceit upon deceit; they have not been willing to know me, saith the Lord.

7. Therefore, thus saith the Lord; Lo, I am going to burn them with fire and test their value, because I am going to put away from my face the wickedness of a daughter of my laity.

8. A weapon that woundeth is their tongue, the words of their mouth are deceptive words; to his neighbor he speaketh words of peace and in himself he holdeth enmity.

9. Shall I not visit for these things? saith the Lord, or on such a laity shall not my soul requite?

10. Upon the mountains take up mourning and upon the paths of the wilderness a throne, because they have failed of men being there; they have not heard a voice of tribute from flying-things of the heavens even unto domestic-animals; they have stood out, they have gone away.

11. And I shall give Hieromuleem up to removal and to be a habitation of dragons, and the cities of Jouda I shall make so desolate as not to be inhabited.

12. Who is the man, the understanding man? And let him understand this. And unto whom is word of a mouth (a mouth-piece or prophet) and let him tell you on account of what the land was lost, and tied up like a wilderness so that no one goeth through it.

13. And the Lord said unto me, Because they have utterly forsaken my law which I gave before their face, and have not hearkened to my voice;

14. But have gone their way after the things pleasing to their evil heart, and after the idols which their fathers taught them;

15. Therefore thus saith the Lord God of Israel, Lo, I am going to morsel out to them necessities and I am going to give them water of gall to drink;

16. And I am going to scatter them in among the nations, in respect to whom they have not known, they and their fathers, and I am going to send upon them the sword until they are lavishly destroyed therewith.

17. Thus saith the Lord, Call the threning women and let them come, and send for the wise women and let them give utterance;

18. And let them take up a threne over you, and let your eyes lend down tears and your eyelids flow with water;

19. Because a voice of pity hath been heard in Sioon to this effect; how wretched have we become, how exceedingly have we been put to shame, because we have left our land behind us and cast away our tabernacles.

20. May ye have heard ye women forsooth a Word of God, and may your ears have accepted words of his mouth, and may ye have taught your daughters pity, each woman her neighbor a threne.

21. Because death hath gone up through your windows; it hath entered your land to crush children out therefrom and young men from the public squares.

22. And the human dead will be for an exemplary-spectacle on the face of the plain of your land like grass behind a reaper and there will be no one to gather it.

23. Thus saith the Lord, Let not the wise man boast in his wisdom and let not the strong man boast in his strength, and let not the rich man boast in his riches.

24. But rather let the one who boasteth boast that he understandeth and comprehendeth that I am the Lord who doeth mercy and judgment and righteousness upon the earth, because in these is my will, saith the Lord.

25. Lo, days are coming, saith the Lord, and I shall visit upon all those who are circumcised their acts of uncircumcision;

26. Upon Aigupton and upon Idoumain and upon sons of Ammoon and upon sons of Moomb, and upon every circumcised one his acts to his face, those who dwell in the wilderness; because all the nations are uncircumcised in flesh, and every house of Israel uncircumcised as to their hearts.

COMMENT.

Read what Paul says about circumcision and compare it with what is said in this chapter about the circumcised in flesh, but not in heart. Paul you will remember says that after his conversion he did not go up to Hierousaleem or the doctors of law of that day to take any post-graduate courses in theology as a preparation for his "ministry" to which he had been called; but did go into Arabia, he says, which was a part of the old kingdom of Edoom and practically a wilderness in Paul's day; and at the end of three years and fifteen years afterwards he says he did go up to Hierousaleem to interview Petros and other apostles "who seemed to be pillars" in the church—to take notes and compare their gospel with the one he had been heralding so far, and he says they did not add anything to that which he already had; and moreover as a result of that first church Conference, they gave him "the right-hand of partnership" (not "fellowship") with specific directions to go on with the good work he had already been engaged in. Now I think Paul went to the Arabian solitude to study the old Covenant Scriptures under the new illumination he had received, and the Greek version of them too, not the Hebrew; for his writings are full of verbatim quotations from them and never from the Hebrew. This made him familiar with the Hebrew apostasy and how it had been brought about, and prepared him also for the Gentile—Christian apostasy which was to come and which was already beginning in his day to show its dragon-head, and which he vainly attempted to scotch.

This whole chapter reads so differently in the C. V. and R. V that the scholar will do well to compare it verse by verse with this translation and give it a "Berean" study, and then conclude which commends itself to his "enlightened reason," as there is neither time nor space for me to do it critically for you; and I will conclude by asking some one to inform me where the following statement in the R. V. was obtained—in the 26th verse it reads, "And all that have the corners of their hair polled, that dwell in the wilderness." This reads in the text, "and upon every circumcised one his acts to his face." That is God says he will visit the acts of every such an one to his face.

Obituary.

Jeremiah S. Hatch was born in Huron Co., Ohio, Feb. 28, 1823; died in Indianapolis, Indiana, Oct. 26th, 1905; age 82 years, 7 months, 28 days. Obeyed the gospel in 1861, and soon after began to preach the Word of life. To this noble calling he devoted his life until his physical and mental powers rendered him unable to longer pursue his favorite calling. Kind hands laid him gently in the Plummer Cemetery, and full hearts could say, "Good bye Bro. Hatch, until Jesus comes."

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wakes to weep."

Through a personal acquaintance of over forty years the writer has known Bro. Hatch as a faithful defender of the truth and can testify as doubtless others can who knew him, "We always knew where to find Bro. Hatch." Sound in the faith, earnestly devoted to the Master's work and valiantly defending the Word of God in a number of discussions with men of scholarly ability, yet triumphantly defending the Word of God. When the personal question demands an answer,

"Is my name written there,
On the page white and fair,
In the book of remembrance
Is my name written there?"

Let us hope the recording angel may say, "Yes, and it has not been blotted out." To God's roll of honor let us hope another name has been added and that we can say of Bro. Hatch, "he died in the faith," for an essential to this high honor is to "live in the faith."

An audience that filled the Plummer House of worship listened to a discourse on "How future life is to be attained."

J. F. WAGONER.

If the books were lost which record the earthly life of Christ my faith in him as my Savior from sin, the Lord of conduct, and the Giver of eternal life would still rest on strong and immovable foundations; for my personal experience of his power and love is confirmed by the experience of sixteen generations of Christian men. I find that Christian faith often fails in those who live a solitary religious life; but I find that it is strong and vigorous in those who know the blessedness and power of the communion of saints.—*R. The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION of all (not the final) restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations, the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Tunnel Boring in Ancient Palestine.

Unmistakable evidence exists that 2,500 years ago certain Hebrew engineers (in the time of King Hezekiah) executed exactly the same kind of work which was carried out in the Simplon tunnel, though perhaps on a slightly smaller scale. Dr. Berthelet, a professor at the University of Basle, is the gentleman who claims to have made this discovery. The Jewish records state that King Hezekiah, or Ezekias, who reigned at Jerusalem 727 B. C., was much troubled at the bad state of the water supplied to the people of that city. He accordingly had a vast reservoir made at the gates of the city, to which water was led from various springs lying at more or less greater distances from the reservoir in question. At first his project seemed doomed to failure, as there existed, between Jerusalem and the springs, from which the water was to be derived, a high chain of hills, over which it would be impossible to convey the water. It was therefore determined to open a passage for the water through the solid rock; one of the Sirach MSS. dating from this period states in this connection: "Hezekiah fortified his city by bringing water thereto, and he bored through the solid rock by means of bronze, and he collected the water in a reservoir."

It is true that, about fifteen years ago, an open conduit was found in the vicinity of the Holy City, but this appears to have been made by a predecessor of Hezekiah's, which seems to be clearly proven by an inscription in old Hebrew characters found close to Jerusalem and preserved in the Constantinople Museum. Translated, this inscription reads: "The piercing is terminated. When the pick of the one had still not struck against the pick of the other, and while there was yet a distance of three ells, it was possible to hear the voice of one man calling to another across the rock separating them. And the last day of the piercing, the miners met pick against pick. The height of the rock above the heads of the miners was one hundred ells. Then the waters flowed into the reservoir over a length of 1,200 ells."

Recent explorations have enabled this predecessor of the Simplon to be thoroughly identified; it is said to be the Shiloah tunnel, by means of which water was brought down from a source to the east of Jerusalem, and poured into the Pool of Siloam mentioned in the Bible. This conduit is 360 yards long. The distance as the bird flies between the two mouths of the tunnel is only 360 yards, which proves that the work was not executed in a perfectly straight line—due doubtless to the difficulties which the engineers encountered in their task, which (for the period) was of a really marvelous nature. That the work was commenced from both ends of the tunnel is not only proven by the inscription, but also by the fact that the marks of the boring tools, etc., may still be seen, all bearing in opposite directions. The direction of the tunnel was altered several times during the construction thereof, as there are several short galleries, which were evidently abandoned as soon as it was noted that working was being done out of line. The floor of the tunnel is finished with the greatest care, and the workings vary from five-eighths of a yard to one in width by from three feet to nine feet in height, more or less, according to the hardness of the rock.

In the light of modern engineering science, the following questions suggest themselves: How did these old-time engineers gage their direction, recognize and remedy their errors in alignment? What tools did they use to execute a piece of work which has remained without equal or rival for 2,500 years? To these inquiries no answer can be given; the wondering student can only turn away with the exclamation: "In good sooth, my masters, there is nothing new under the sun!"—Scientific American.

A LETTER from Sister Woodward says that Brother L. C. Chase of Adrian, Mich., died last Saturday. We hope Brother Zilmer or some one will write an obituary for next issue. One by one the stalwart defenders of the faith fall by the wayside. Brother Hatch and Brother Chase so close together, both untainted by any of the contending elements that tend to lead away from the simple gospel that Jesus and the apostles taught, and which rests on the promises made to the ancient fathers. May their rest in the silent tomb be short. May Jesus soon come and end the sufferings and tumult of this age, and usher in the better, the eternal.

THE situation in Russia is becoming more settled. Conflicts between rioters and troops are frequent, but not so alarming as last week. By an edict the Czar has freed Finland, thus restoring the system of government they had before the annullment of the Constitution in 1899. All ordinances enacted since then are cancelled, including the military laws of 1901, which caused so much discontent. Special enactments are being made in various parts, and meanwhile Count DeWitte is striving to arrange some plan that will satisfy the people, and quiet the threatening masses. The poor Jews have had to take their full share of the wrath of the different factions, and their property has been destroyed, and their lives taken without hindrance.

Modern Christendom.

The Northern Christian Advocate gives a view of the present condition of affairs in the Methodist denomination, and what is true of it is equally so of all others. There is a "form of godliness" in many places but the "power" is lacking.

"Our slow growth is at least suggestive of serious consideration, nay, more, is appalling. Methodism never had such opportunities as today; never was so strong numerically, socially, organically, financially and educationally. And yet with our nearly three million members, twenty thousand ministers and missionaries, a Sunday School army of approximately three millions, three hundred and fifty thousand Sunday school teachers and officers, and our mighty host of Epworth Leaguers; with $158,000,000 invested in churches and parsonages, a yearly pay roll of nearly $15,000,000 to ministers, missionaries and other official workers, an annual offering of $8,000,000 for church benevolence, over $37,000,000 invested in educational institutions and endowments exclusive of debts, and $5,000,000 in homes and other institutions for deaconesses; with all our church periodicals and printing presses, our able and scholarly editors, our educated ministers and trained choirs, our homiletics and hallelujahs, that nestor of ecclesiastical observation, Dr. Ford, tells us we have made a gain in membership this last year of but one per cent; that with all our superior paraphernalia and advantages, it has taken on an average the united efforts of one hundred church members to secure one recruit.

Can we suppress our blush of shame? One soul added to the records of the church militant for every one hundred workers! How does this compare with the increase resulting from the great evangelistic movement recorded in the Acts of the Apostles when the church with a membership of one hundred and twenty saw accessions of three thousand, then five thousand, and then multitudes, the number being too great to enumerate? Today the great Methodist Episcopal church claims one annual recruit for every one hundred members.

But brethren, that is not the worst of it, for, "Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon," we all know too well that there are more than one to every hundred who annually lose their interest, backslide and drop out, though they nominally retain their membership. Hence conservatism compels us to admit that the great Methodist Episcopal church, in genuine evangelistic work of the initiative type, is making no progress at all, but instead is actually running behind. Little Wales, out there beyond the sea, with practically one evangelist, and eighty thousand accessions in three months; but the great Methodist Episcopal church in the world, with an increase of but thirty-two thousand in a whole year! This has been our showing for at least the past eight or ten years. Surely the times are opportune for the sounding of the reveille, summoning the church to an aggressively evangelistic movement.

Again, we must concede that the internal condition of the church is exceedingly deficient in genuine, fervent spirituality. Our work is becoming more routine, educational and cultural. We simply follow a carefully arranged program, while that divine spark which arouses, thrills and enthuses, is more and more meagerly manifested. There is great need among the saints of a breeze from heaven which always accompanies a great evangelistic movement.

Would to God that we might suspend, for a time at least, all attempt at further legislation—for we are already over-organized but under-energized—waive our carefully set programs and concentrating all our energies upon a single idea, marshal our great host into one mighty evangelistic movement."

Brothers and sisters, this only proves we are in the time of the end, for the apostle Paul said to Timothy, "The time shall come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears. And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables. But watch thou in all things, endure afflictions, do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry." 2 Tim. iv. 3-5. Are we ready, are we watching? Let us "make full proof of our ministry," and be found of him when he comes.

Question.

What is the proper explanation to make to an outsider of the story of the thief on the cross? Luke xxiii. 39-43.

There are several ways of replying to an outsider on this record, and I think it would depend some on the reason the Scripture was brought up, and the views of the outsider, to determine what would be the proper points to use as explanation, as our question states.

I have taken as a foundation for an answer, the general belief that this Scripture teaches that the immortal souls of both Jesus and the thief were taken to paradise that day. Let us examine some facts of this account according to this theory. First, it must then be God's purpose to save all who believe in Jesus by taking them to paradise at death. When the thief was upon the cross he makes one earnest request of Jesus, when he well knew he had, at most, but a few hours to live, and that Jesus also was about to die, and that if any thing could be granted to him, it could not be in his then present life, but must be salvation from God; his desire was: "Remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom" under these circumstances, why did he not ask for the salvation of God—for Jesus to take his soul to paradise? The reason was that: although he had lived during the time when Jesus was teaching everywhere, he had not learned anything about this salvation, because in all Jesus' teaching he had not told his own disciples anything about going to paradise at death, and the thief who was much less fortunate could not have known it. Then, was he mistaken in expecting Jesus to come in a kingdom and remember him there? Or, did Jesus bestow upon him, by promise, a salvation for which he did not ask, and which he knew nothing of and so could not expect? Then, if paradise is a place to go to, where is it? It is not at the throne of God, because Jesus said after his resurrection, that he had not yet ascended there, John xx. 17; we do not see any immortal souls inhabitants on earth, so the belief that it is somewhere in the heavens is taken for granted, there is no Scripture to verify this.

If these few facts are inconsistent in themselves without trying to harmonize them with the Scriptures, we must then determine the true meaning of this record by comparing it with the Scriptures.

First, Jesus made a direct promise to the thief that he should be with him in paradise; every one would agree that to be in paradise with Jesus would be to have attained to salvation; although this promise showed Jesus' love for mankind, yet we cannot conclude that he would make a promise at an impulse of his own, or even for the gratification of saving one from death in disregard of his Father's law for salvation; we learn what his character was from his words in John v. 30; vi. 40. "I can of mine ownself do nothing: as I hear, I judge, and my judgment is just; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me." And this is the will of him that sent me that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him may have everlasting life, and I will raise him up at the last day." And in Heb. xi 6 Paul tells us that "without faith it is impossible to please God." With this testimony of God's law in mind I would ask, did Jesus promise to save the thief without faith?

Jesus tells us that "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." Matt. xii. 34. This would be especially true of one who was facing death, with a desire to live, so we can determine something of what the thief had faith in from his words; first, his reply to one who was being crucified on the other side of Jesus was: "Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation?" These words would imply that he did fear God, and we read in Prov. xiv. 26 27. Solomon's words: "In the fear of the Lord is strong confidence and his children shall have a place of refuge." "The fear of the Lord is a fountain of life, to depart from the snares of death." And then he continues, "And we indeed justly, for we receive the due reward of our deeds." Paul's testimony in Rom. vi. 23 is: "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." "But this man hath done nothing amiss." Peter speaking of Jesus in 1 Peter ii. 22 says: "Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth. And he said unto Jesus, Lord remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." And we read in Matt. i. 14, 15. "Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, the time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand, repent ye and believe the gospel." And in John xiv. 3, "And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also." This shows that the words of the thief were in perfect harmony with what was taught by Jesus, Solomon, Peter and Paul. The next thing to determine is why Jesus' reply was so very different from what was expected, according to the idea that he took the thief to paradise. He said: "Verily I say unto thee, Today shalt thou be with me in paradise." Did Jesus go to paradise that day? While he was teaching his disciples he told them and the Pharisees where he would be, Matt. xii. 40. "For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." It may be objected here that Jesus only referred to his body being buried and not his soul; but we can find a good account of where he was, plainly stated by Peter in Acts ii. 25 27 quoted from Psa. xvi. 10, David's prophecy of the Lord. "For David speaketh concerning him, I foresaw the Lord always before my face, for he was on my right hand that I should not be moved. Therefore did my heart rejoice and my tongue was glad; moreover my flesh shall rest in hope; because thou wilt not leave my soul in hell (or hades) neither wilt thou suffer thine holy one to see corruption." Then Peter explains in the 31st verse, "He (that is David) seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hades, neither his flesh did see corruption." This plainly shows that it was both Jesus' body and soul that died upon the cross, was buried in Joseph's tomb, and remained there until the third day, when he was raised from the dead by the power of God. And he tells us in Rev. i. 18, "I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forever more." We can hardly consider the thief going to paradise any longer, as Jesus did not go there; so the next question would be, how will Jesus fulfil his promise? Where and when? First turn to Gen. ii. 23-24, and learn the record that was given after Adam and Eve had disobeyed God. "Therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the Garden of Eden to till the ground from whence he was taken." So he drove out the man; and he placed at the east of the Garden of Eden cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way to keep the way of the tree of life." Then read Rev. ii. 7. "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the spirit saith unto the churches; to him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God." In these verses what is spoken of as the Garden of Eden in Genesis is called the paradise of God in Revelation; what had been paradise in the beautiful Garden of Eden was lost through Adam's transgression, see part of verses, Gen. iii. 17, 18, "Cursed is the ground for thy sake, in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life." "Thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee." This we all see and know, but there is an equally sure word spoken of a time when this condition shall be changed; see Isa. lv. 10 13. The Lord said of his Word spoken, "It shall not return unto me void; but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereunto I sent it. "Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree; and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off." Isa. lv. 13. This will be accomplished at the time we are told of in Rev. xi. 15, "And the seventh angel sounded and there were great voices in heaven saying; the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever." Then in Matt. xxviii, 18, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." The result of his reign will be to remove the ills of mankind and to re-beautify the earth as is described in the 35th chapter of Isaiah. And speaking of the same time it says: Rev. xxii. 3, "And there shall be no more curse." Then paradise was upon the earth before the curse was pronounced and will be restored through Christ when he comes as King over all the kingdoms of earth. God will then remove the curse and restore all the beauties of paradise in the Garden of Eden throughout the whole earth. Then we know that Jesus will not fail to fulfil his promise, but will grant to the thief what he desired and believed in; he will be remembered by Jesus when he comes in his kingdom, and shall be with him, as he promised in paradise restored.

The reason that the verse of Luke xxiii. 43 reads: "Today shalt thou be with me in paradise," is: The original writing in Hebrew did not have any division into sentences, and those translating the writings placed the punctuations according to their understanding; the comma separating the sentence being placed after the words, "I say unto thee," instead of the words, "today." The verse rightly translated would read: "And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto you today, (as though to affirm the promise) thou shalt be with me in paradise."

The unbeliever may be asked in relation to this question, If the thief's request was granted? And where paradise is? And the following points may be used for an explanation, That there are no immortal souls to be taken away. That Jesus could not save the thief without faith. That Jesus did not go to paradise that day. That the reward of the righteous is at the coming of the Lord only. And the latter point is shown very plainly by Paul, 1 Thes. iv. 16, "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven, with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first." And Col. iii. 3, "When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." 1 Cor. xv. 54, "So when this corruption shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory."

JENNIE SALISBURY.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

Brother Lindsay came to our home to administer baptism. He arrived Nov. 1, 10 p. m. We enjoyed hearing Bro. Lindsay tell the good work he had been doing. We talked the good news of the soon coming kingdom. The hours were so pleasant, they rapidly passed away until three A. M. We then retired to rest. Nov. 2 we invited some friends and neighbors to our home. Bro. Lindsay read Rom. vi. and gave us a nice talk on baptism. Exhorted the young converts to love and good works and holy life as being essential to final salvation. We then gathered at the water and buried three of our dear children (Irenaeus, Hermus and Lula) into the all-saving name of Jesus. O may they ever walk in newness of life. After this we gathered around the table of the Lord and partook of the emblems of the broken body and shed blood of our loving Savior. At night Bro. Lindsay talked to the people at Fair Dealing. Gave them an outline of the faith, read Psa. xxxvii. Subject, The kingdom and the King, the saints as joint-heirs, the literal resurrection of the dead, destruction of the wicked, repentance and immersion and a holy life. The attention was good, some interest was manifested, some asking Bro. Lindsay questions, some wishing he could stay longer. Friday morning Nov. 3, our hearts were sad when Bro. Lindsay bade us fare well, and went on his mission of love and good works. He is indeed a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth. We feel much encouraged to see our children come out from the world and sacrifice the love of the world to gain the love of the Father and the Son. May they ever walk in the footsteps of our blessed Savior, patiently enduring all things and striving to overcome evil with good, that they may share in the kingdom when our Savior takes his great power to reign. Brothers and sisters, let us walk worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forebearing one another in love, endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. Hold fast the form of sound words. Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life. Oh, may it be my lot to meet all dear ones in the resurrection morning never more to say farewell.

Your sister watching and waiting.

KETURAH ROGERS.

Be Not Afraid.

"Fear not, for I am with thee." It has come to us, and made us strong and unafraid, many times before, and all who have heard it know the comfort of it. Do we not need for our equipment a fresh accession of courage? Fear is a paralysing thing. We may be shaken by many storms that do not wreck us, but a storm of fear plays sad havoc with all our forces. It makes the eyes unsteady, the hands unskilful, the knees feeble, the heart weak. That there is nothing to be afraid of is a fact difficult for even faith to receive, but it is more easy, as it ought to be, to the old than to the young. So many times we have been frightened by alarms which have proved to be false that it would be strange if the years had taught us no lessons in quietness. So often the ghosts we feared were unreal, the passages that looked dark were lighted by some glimmer of hope, there was a path across the desert that appeared to be trackless, and we have come to no mountain too high to climb. Things are never so bad as fear had made them out to be; but ah! what unnecessary pain we have given ourselves to bear in every year of our lives.

But at last we grow less afraid—at least those of us who have many sorrows. We found them all bearable when we looked in their dark faces, and generally they wore a smile behind the frown. Some cares and crosses have become quite familiar to us, and we do not exactly hate them even yet. We have some blessings which nothing else could have brought us; we have seen certain divine truths, which only they could have illuminated. If we were asked I think we should admit that we would rather have the trouble and the blessing together than go without them both. Therefore, let us take heart again, and let those of us who have got ahead of the others call back the message of cheer, "All is well; there is nothing to be afraid of!"—Marianne Farningham.

Ruling the Tongue.

Do not talk too much. Learn how to be silent. There is nothing like the man or woman that can keep the mouth shut. Not that people should always keep the tongue still; it is made for use, but there are times when silence is the best and most effective reply. When a boor speaks roughly or uncivilly to you, when you are asked an impertinent question, when a sneer is conveyed under cover of an inquiry for information, or when, having appealed [illegible] question of taste, your opinion [illegible] with ridicule, the best answer [illegible] and like exigencies is masterful [illegible] bespeaking reserve power, control [illegible] strength, dignity, self command; [illegible] nothing at times is so effective as the [illegible] silence which springs from contempt. He who can endure reproach silently, and keep silent under trying circumstances, is a man of uncommon character. He who is irritated, and who loses control of tongue and temper, is at the mercy of his opponent. He who can keep calm and cool, can mold men as he will. The cold hammer bends the hot iron. "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body." James iii. 2

A Big Contract.

A deaconess carrying a large bundle entered a street car and found a seat beside a man with a hooked nose and a business like grey eye. He coolly proceeded to "take her in," his reflections evidently running somewhat as follows:

"Black dress and bonnet—widow probably; dress rather rusty—poor, of course; works for the shops; looks like a good worker—it's a big bundle." Then aloud: "What do you make, madam?"

"Make," said the deaconess, somewhat startled, "why, nothing." Then, as the situation dawned upon her, she added: "I am trying to make the world better."

It was the man's turn to look confused: "Oh, beg pardon, I thought maybe you wanted work; but"—grimly—"I see you've already got a big contract on hand."

MARRIED.

October 25, 1905, near Albion, Ind. at the residence of Brother Ransom Miller, Sister Anna Pearl Taylor was married to Mr. Charles W. Hill, all formerly of Warren Co., Ind. Brother and Sister Miller spared no pains to make this a very pleasant occasion to the score or more invited guests, and the bride, who is the neice of Sister Miller, with her husband will make Benton County their future home.

Some very beautiful gifts were presented to the happy pair. Elder Woodward officiated at the wedding nuptials.

The young people have the best wishes of their many friends.

Obituary.

Died, at Indianapolis, Ind. Oct. 21, 1905, John S Quackenbush.

Brother Quackenbush was born in Syracuse, N. Y. Oct. 9, 1837; was married to Miss Kate Weybright, June 17, 1860. There were born to them 7 children, 4 of whom are living. They are Edward Quackenbush of Cincinnati, Ohio; Mrs. Blanch M. Covert, Huntington, Ind; Miss Neva Quackenbush, California, and Mrs. C. D. Bailist, Pierceton, Ind.

The deceased was baptized in 1875, at Buchanan, Mich., by Elder Mathewson. He lived a consistent life up to the day of his death. For 20 odd years he was a resident of Pierceton, and for about 7 years of Warsaw, Indiana.

In 1904 he with his family moved to California with a view to bettering his condition in life, but was disappointed in this and after a few months residence there returned to Pierceton some time during the present year, where he worked awhile at his trade, that of painting wagons, and later at Huntington, from whence he went to Indianapolis to the hospital to have an operation performed. A second operation was thought necessary. This he survived but a short time.

Funeral services at Pierceton, Monday, 22nd, conducted by the writer.

To the bereaved wife and children, I will say, "Sorrow not, even as others who have no hope; for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." (1 Thess. iv. 13, 14.) From the tomb, from the death state. They will rise as he rose. "For this we say unto you by the Word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent (precede) them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; so shall we ever be with the Lord."

What these words teach, namely the coming of the Lord and the resurrection are sources of comfort to the sorrowing ones.

...oetry.

...e Night Cometh."

...el passed through a busy street:
...tep was swift, and his smile was sweet,
...he sped in the path of the rising sun,
Saying, softly, "The day is begun,
The night cometh."

He met a child, who laughed and ran,
Chasing the butterflies with her fan,
A circlet of lilies, white and fair,
Crowning her waving yellow hair;
And, stopping, he asked in gentle tone,
"Do you love the Master, my little one?"
She raised her beautiful, sunlit head,—
"I am one of his little lambs," she said.
"Then do," said the angel, "as he commands;
Your work is ready, it waits your hands!"
The child made answer, "I'll not forget,
I shall do my work ere the sun has set;
But 'tis going to be such a long, long day;
It is morning now and I want to play!"

The angel watched her in sad surprise,
As she flitted away with the butterflies;
And he sped in the path of the rising sun,
Whispering oft, "Will the work be done?
The night cometh?"

An hour flew by, and the child lay dead—
A stain on the beautiful sunlit head,
A stain which the lilies could not hide,
Though they spread their waxen petals wide;
And the angel heard in a voice divine,
Like the solemn moan of a wood-fired pine,
"The night cometh!"

The angel passed through the busy street,
And met a man with hurrying feet:
"Stay!" he cried; "are you one of those Who love the Master and hate his foes?"
"Oh, yes!" he replied; "my name is enrolled
In the books of the church. I am safe in the fold."
"Then do," said the angel, "as he commands;
Your work is ready, it waits your hands!"
"Good sir," said the man, "I shall do my work
All in good season, I'm never a shirk;
Just now I am busy, as you must see,
But some-time—yes, sometime—I hope to be free
To work for the Master; I'm still in my prime,
With life before me,—there's plenty of time!"

The angel watched him speed along
With a troubled brow through the jostling throng;
And he followed the path of the setting sun,
Whispering soft, "Will the work be done?
The night cometh."

The years rolled on. Through a city street
A man walked slowly, with tottering feet;
His form was bent, and his face was old,
And his heart was as hard as his silver and gold;
But he seemed to hear, like a mournful rhyme,
"Life is before me, there's plenty of time!"
And those who were nearest him heard him say,
"It is growing dark,—I have lost the day!
The night cometh!"

Jews to Celebrate Founding of Faith in United States.

That the Jews of the United States late in this month are to celebrate the 250th anniversary of the first Jewish settlement in the new world is a statement likely to attract attention and wonderment from the average non-Jewish reader. There are 1,250,000 Jews now in the United States, and New York City has more Jews than has any other city in the world. But that there was a Jewish settlement in America 250 years ago—well, at the least, that's another story.

To the mind of the average citizen of this country there is an impression that the Jew never was and never will be a pioneer. This impression has been that when the city has been built and the marts of trade established the Jew has come in, looked about him with characteristic shrewdness, and fixed upon his successful calling in life. Perhaps it is a significant expression enough to quote a Jewish writer in his remark that "Jews, not jewels, were the basis for Columbus' first expedition." Queen Isabella's personal jewels long have figured romantically in the voyager's first demonstration of the roundness of the earth, but the truth nevertheless is that the confiscated wealth of Jews driven from Spain in 1492 entered much more largely into the funds for the expedition.

Not only this, but the astronomical researches of the Jews had aided the discoverer of the West Indies, just as Jewish influences upon the state, and Jewish seamanship in the Columbian craft themselves pressed directly home upon this greatest discovery in the world's history. Luis de Santangel and Gabriel Sanchez were Jews whose influence upon the crown had much to do with Columbus' sailing, and on the three vessels of the Columbian fleet were at least five Jews. Columbus' journal, indeed, refers to the historical fact that on the day before his sailing from Palos 800,000 Jews left Spain under orders of the Catholic monarch, while the first account of his own discoveries in the new world were given in a letter to his Jewish ...onsor and patron, Santangel.

... to the settlement of the Jews in the new world it may interest the reader to be told that the original John Jacob Astor, founder of that family and its fortunes in the United States, was an employe of a Jew in 1780, beating furs in the house of Hayman Levy at $1 00 a day.

In celebration of the first Jewish settlement in America it was arranged at a meeting in New York last April that the dates Saturday, Nov. 25, and Sunday, Nov. 26, should be set aside as anniversary days. Committees were appointed, with Jacob H. Schiff chairman of the executive body and a general body, made up of representative Jews from every state and territory and dependency of the United States, has acted in cooperation with it. As a result of the committee actions, every Jewish congregation and its dependencies is to hold appropriate anniversary services on the Saturday preceding the national Thanksgiving day, while on the following Sunday the Jewish Sabbath schools shall take up the services adapted to the occasion, thus bringing the significance of the anniversary home to every Jew in the country.

The chief object of the celebration is to make plain that the Jew is a citizen, and a good citizen, of the United States; that he has been a pioneer in more countries than one, and that, following the fortunes of these countries, he has become a leader in material and social prosperity; that he has given his talents and his money to the best interests of those countries where he has had citizenship; and that in general he is a loyal, conscientious, dutiful respecter of all that appertains to the welfare of the great new republic in America, where by ancestry and tradition he is becoming more and more a factor and fixture as time and evolution move on.

Every fifth person in New York City is a Jew, and New York is the richest city per capita that exists on the globe. Sixty thousand Jewish immigrants in a year have landed at its port and the two or three other eastern ports of entry, where Jewish influences already there have received the newcomers and taken them as pupils of a new language and a new government and a new possibility in life. And with the United States leading all other countries save Russia and Austria in Jewish population, the American Jew is feeling that, after 250 years of residence in this republic he is entitled on this anniversary of his coming to remind himself and the world of his place in the republic, past and present.

About forty years after the settlement of New Amsterdam the Jews began to arrive there. Jacob Barsimon was the first Jew whose name has come down as a pioneer in the settlement, arriving there on board the ship Pear Tree, on July 8, 1654. In the same year a party of twenty-three others from the West Indies in the bark St. Catarina. Peter Stuyvesant was the Dutch governor of New Amsterdam and he showed an unfriendly spirit toward the arrivals. He wrote to the directors of the Dutch West India company seeking authority for their exclusion.

Not until April of the following year did Stuyvesant hear from the company. Then came the direct refusal to comply with his request, based upon the "considerable loss that has been sustained by the Jews in the taking of Brazil and also because of the large amount of capital which they have invested in the shares of the company." Further this definite refusal to comply with the governor's petition directed that "they shall have permission to sail to and trade in the Netherlands and to live and remain there."

One year later, in March, 1650, the substance of this communication was repealed by the Dutch company. It was directed that the Jews should not be allowed to erect a synagogue in the settlement; that they should be ineligible to employment in public positions; and, further, they should not be allowed to engage in retail trade anywhere in the settlement. In verbiage these limitations upon Jewish rights were:

"Jews or Portuguese people, however, shall not be employed in any public service (to which they are neither admitted in this city,) nor allowed to have open retail shops; but they may quietly and peaceably carry on their business as beforesaid and exercise in all quietness their religion within their houses, for which end they must without doubt endeavor to build their houses close together in a convenient place on one or the other side of New Amsterdam—at their choice—as they have done here."

In this restriction of trade, however, the Jews of the colony found material profit which at the same time redounded to the prosperity of the whole colony. They were forced to direct their energies toward foreign and intercolonial trade, and having relations through racial ties with almost every section of the world they became purveyors of an endless variety of commodities, thus opening the new settlement to trade which otherwise might have been long in materializing.

At home, however, the race had a champion in the person of the sturdy, persistent Asser Levy, who would not see that the Jew of the colony was not a citizen of it, interested and occupied with its welfare as was the immigrant of any other nationality. Stuyvesant had denied citizenship to the Jews and in lieu of the required military service had exacted a tax of them. Levy made protest against the tax and presented himself for his military service, willing to stand guard with any and all the other worthy burghers of the settlement.

Stuyvesant persisted in his demand for the tax and Levy appealed to headquarters in Holland. The home government there seems to have granted his petition, and step by step this pathfinder to citizenship carried up his grievances, finally to become the first Jewish citizen of the embryo new republic in the new world.

The puritan life of New England did not appeal to the early Jewish comer. Rhode Island, under the influences of Roger Williams, made room for many of the semi-refugees from the New Amsterdam settlement. Pennsylvania offered inducements to Jewish settlements, and gradually the Jewish immigration fixed itself all down the Atlantic coast colonies. In this connection it has been remarked in history that the first white male child born in Georgia was Isaac Minis, child of Jewish parents.

On the occasion of this 250th anniversary of the first settlement of the Jews in New Amsterdam there are a million and a quarter representatives of the race in the United States. New York state alone contains more than one-third of these people. Pennsylvania has one-fifth of the total Jewish population and Illinois has another one-fifth. In Illinois, even under the French rule, there were Jewish residents. However, the first authentic reference to a Jewish settlement in Chicago dates from 1841, perhaps four years after the city's charter was granted. Henry Mayer was the first Jew to buy land in Cook county in 1847. The first Jewish organization in the county was "The Jewish Burial Ground Society," established in 1845. Here the Kehillet Anshe Ma'arab Society was organized in 1847 as the oldest Jewish congregation in the northwest country. B'nai Sholom followed in 1852, and in 1858 the Jewish Reform association was organized and the Sinai congregation was a result in 1861.

At the present time there are more than fifty Jewish congregations in Chicago. The Jewish educational institutions, hospitals and charities are to be counted only as the needs exist for them. The medical, legal, musical, and ar... world in this second city of the union are well represented by Jews, and in sixteen other cities and towns of the state are Jewish communities. Everywhere in every work of community interest and standing the Jew is representative of the best that individual and collective effort may accomplish.

Contemporaneously with the first synagogue in the New Amsterdam colony, which at that time was New York, the Jews established schools. First of these were in private houses, but soon afterward a school was established in connection with the synagogue itself, where religious training and Hebrew and English courses were established. For secular education in general the ordinary schools were resorted to, most of these under the Roman Catholic or Protestant churches.

In 1848 the Hebrew Education society was founded in Philadelphia, with the purpose of taking pupils through the grammar grades in secular education, and also to inculcate religious principles and a knowledge of the Hebrew tongue. In 1864 the Jews of New York established the incorporated Hebrew Free School association, and from this movement sprang other schools throughout the country designed to afford free instruction to the children of the Jewish centers of population.

Always in the United States the Jews have been congratulated upon the efficient manner in which they have distributed charity to their own. It was one of the provisions for tolerance of the Jews in the New Netherlands that they care for their own poor, that they should not become burdens upon the gentile community. This lesson was well learned and the works of the leaders in Jewish charities still follow them.

As a modern development in the dispensing of Jewish charities the organization of the National Conference of Jewish Charities is a factor. It was founded in Cincinnati in 1900 and embraced forty relief societies. Its object is to promote reforms in administration and uniformity of action without interfering with the work of any local society.

"There are at present fifteen homes for orphans, or societies for their care in the United States; twelve homes for the aged, and nine hospitals. It is estimated that there are 503 Jewish philanthropic organizations in the United States.—Isaac Morse in Chicago Tribune.

The Hapless Jews of Russia.

The butchery of the Jews in Odessa is explained in two ways. In official circles the Jews are blamed. It is said that they offended the patriotic sentiment of the rabble by unseemly demonstrations of delight when they heard of the czar's manifesto. It is said that they made insulting remarks about him and tore down the national flag. Then the "loyalists" fell upon the Jews—the innocent as well as the guilty—and, being greedy as well as patriotic, plundered their houses. The explanation of the liberals is that the rioters were egged on by government officials. The liberals assert that the simultaneous manner in which attacks were made on the Jews in many towns indicates that they were dictated from St. Petersburg, but they are in error. Count de Witte has done all in his power to stop the attacks on the Jews.

When men are in a passion, as most Russians are, they make wild charges. It is almost incredible that the mob which massacred at Odessa was incited by government agents. It would be altogether incredible if it were not that there have been occasions where the dregs of the populace have been given to understand that if they engaged in the pastime of Jew baiting they would not be interfered with by the authorities. At Kisheneff two years ago the authorities were so supine as to leave no doubt of their complicity.

It has been the domestic policy of the autocracy to divide to rule. It has stirred up race against race and religion against religion as if fearing that peace and harmony would endanger the government. In the Caucasus the Tartars were induced to attack the Armenians. The troops remained passive while the fighting went on. That tolerance of disorder led to the fearful destruction of property at Baku and the neighboring oil fields and the temporary paralysis of the petroleum industry. Probably the direct loss is not less than $95,000,000. That is what the playing off of one race against another in one corner of the empire has cost.

The autocracy has long been aware of the spread of socialist doctrines among those in the manufacturing towns of Poland. The Jewish Socialist union, or bund, is one of the large and uncompromising socialist organizations in the empire. The autocracy has reasoned that whatever tended to imbitter the relations between Jews and Christians would serve to keep the different organizations apart. The "programs," as these raids on the Jews are called, serve also to keep the criminal classes in the cities quie... They let the government alone when they have other game to pursue.

It is asserted, also, that on different occasions the same classes have been instigated by the police to fall on students and other "liberals." They have called themselves "loyalists," and in the name of loyalty have attacked respectable people who were petitioning for a little liberty and reform. There is reason to believe that local officials, brought up under the Plehve regime, have used the criminal classes to fight the reformers. It cannot be believed that instructions to that effect have emanated from St. Petersburg since Plehve's death.

It is a relief to read in the sickening tales of the massacres in the cities of southern Russia—tales which, it is to be hoped, are exaggerated—that the Jews have begun to arm and defend themselves. They have long borne with wonderful meekness and patience the manifold outrages inflicted on them. As Dr. Hirsch says, they have given Christians a lesson in Christianity. But "who would be free, themselves must strike the blow." The Jews of Russia are taking the first step towards freedom by procuring arms and using them to defend their lives and property when attacked by mobs.

Faithfulness.

Though few it may be that have sought this narrow path, choosing to obey the Lord's commandments, I am glad to reckon myself among the narrow road travelers; "for narrow is the road that leadeth to life eternal, and few there be that find it."

Among the men most prominent for faith is Abraham, who was faithful in all things, always listening to catch the sound of the still small voice which reaches a tired and weary soul. The offering demanded of Abraham was indeed very valuable; it was all that he had—the son of promise. Nevertheless Abraham staggered not, knowing well that his own eternal life could only be obtained by perfect obedience.

Like Abraham, we ought not to consider flesh and blood, but hasten to make a clean sweep and get rid of the detrimental element contained in nature. Detrimental indeed are all the carnal elements, for "to be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace."

Like our first parent, we sometimes stand looking at the fruit. How beautiful it appears on the surface, but underneath the exterior crawls the unseen worm, whose name is death. Beware of forbidden fruit, in whatever form it may appear. Let it hang there. When it is ripe it will drop down of its own weight, never to trouble you again. Should we at any time be undecided what to do, let us ask this question: What would Jesus do? for we ought not to do anything he would not do.

Our life is short, and what is done in the past can never be undone; but we can guard ourselves in the future. It is also of great importance how we occupy the time, since there is so much to be done, and so few to do it. It may be all right to sing "Rescue the perishing, care for the dying," but it will be far better to go about doing it. Our Lord said, "Let your light so shine, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

How careful also we ought to be in our conversation. For instance, our brother might err on the way, and step aside. The tongue in its unsanctified state will spread the disastrous news abroad; but instead of talking it over let us go down in dust and ashes and stay there until our brother is recovered. We cannot judge about the temptation of others, and it is only for our own selves that we are held responsible.

Faithfulness is indeed a required virtue that we should aspire to obtain, for though we may at present only discover glimpses of its world-wide beauty and fulness, yet there is a possibility of getting nearer and nearer the object we so much desire to have. What can be more desirable than to behold the glory and beauty of the only begotten Son of God, full of grace and truth? (Not the Son of Joseph, for he would have failed like all the rest of us.) The glory of our Lord was perhaps not so much on the outside; it was rather the glory of character that made him the Savior of a fallen race. He was the express image of the Father, the second Adam and progenitor of a new race. It is a perfect view of him that we should seek to obtain. Look at the picture of his crucifixion. While dying in agony, we hear the most beautiful language and it was here he established his precious teaching. Never before had those words been uttered—"Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Again, "He cried out, It is finished." The whole universe trembled; even the sun itself, so to speak, was ashamed to give her light, being darkened at that very hour. By the faithfulness of Christ "even unto death," man became responsible for themselves. The bridge between life and death was made. There is no longer any excuse for men to remain sinners; we are all made free by the blood of the Lamb. And now he says to those that have started on the way, "Be faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."—E. G. Carlson in Herald of Life.

"Let the winds and waves of adversity blow and dash around you if they will; but keep on the path of rectitude, and you will be as firm as a rock. Plant yourself upon principle, and bid defiance to misfortune."

...Is Rev. xii. 1-6 ... And I saw another beast coming up out of the earth and he had two horns like a lamb. Now the first beast he saw came out of the sea having seven heads and ten horns which beast was the Roman Empire and the head that was wounded to death as it were was the taking away the power of the pope, and that occured in 1798 in the French Revolution. This second beast could not possibly be on the same territory for it (the first) was losing its power as the second was coming up, we will have to look on other territory for the symbol of the second beast. Where was there a power gaining prominence at that time, 1798. The very year that the French revolution began 1789 Barnes Geo. Hist., p 528. In accordance with the provisions of the constitution and a resolution of congress the first Wednesday of January 1789 was named as the time for the election of a chief magistrate or president. Ridpath Hist. U. S. p 828. So we see that America had from 1776, Declaration of Independence, until 1798 (going down or wounding of the one head of the first beast) to become... ing up and had made quite a bit of progress by that time. Two horns like a lamb (or lamb-like) mild government, religious liberty and freedom of speech, two horn two heads of governments, congress and a president, but I believe ultimately this government will be just as the Revelator saw the second beast to be.

What a clamor there is in the so-called religious world today for a Federation of churches. Four have been swallowed up in the last year, and when they all get mixed up it will be Church and State, just as the first beast was. Then those that do not subscribe to that religion will be killed, and can neither buy nor sell.

May we that are of the household of faith have strength granted us to hold out to the end, if it is our lot to be living when that time comes, is my prayer.

Your brother in hope.

C. F. Randolph.

Turgenieff, the Russian novelist, went out hunting golden pheasants with his father. One was seen; he fired and wounded it, then followed it into a thicket, where, with the instinct of the mother, she was trying to reach the nest where her young brood was huddled. She reached them, spread herself upon them, her head toppled over, and she died. He then and there vowed he would destroy no living creature; and he kept his word.

I always have had, and always will have, a profound regard for Christianity, the religion of my fathers, and for its rites, its usages, and its observances.—Henry Clay.

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. For the month of November we can offer it at $1.95 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Famous Train Music.

Last June the Pennsylvania lines established its eighteen-hour train service between New York and Chicago, and this now famous train has earned for itself a world-wide celebrity. The latest is a musical composition called "The Pennsylvania Special," a march composed by the well known band master F. N. Innes, and played recently in Chicago, by his noted New York orchestra band. It is a rare hit in the musical line, and is destined to be widely used. The piano score has been handsomely engraved and printed in keeping with the high-class character of the composition. A presentation copy of the music may be obtained by sending a sequest with four cents' postage to Pennsylvania Lines Advertising Bureau, 702 Union Station, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Seventy-five More.

I receive enquiries as to when Pine Woods Bible Class Book will be printed?

In answer, I will say, when I receive seventy-five more subscriptions, the book can be printed, and sent forth on its mission, to teach the glad tidings. If all who really want it had said so, it could now be out sowing seed. When God's professed servants make his cause a secondary matter, and put it off to a "convenient time," his cause suffers. Now all who really want the book please sit down and write me, as soon as you have read this, and then things will move at once. Don't wait until a more convenient time. God's business demands prompt attention.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.
W. H. WILSON.

Will All Men be Saved?

I have written and published, and now offer for sale at ten cents per copy, a book of 60 pages, which is intended to be, as indicated in the sub-title, "A Consideration of the Doctrine of Universal Salvation." Some of the divisions are, An Introductory section, A section treating the historic origin of the doctrine, Tendencies and effects, God's methods of dealing with men, The Savior of all men, Who will have all men to be saved, The paid debt, the sovereignty of God.

Send Money Orders or stamps to the author, A. H. Zilmer, Plymouth, Ind.

WILL YOU TRY IT?

Pine Woods Bible Class in Book Form.

I have several times been solicited to have the past lessons of the Class put in book form.

I have decided to do this, if I can secure enough subscribers to the book to warrant the expense of publishing it.

The book if printed will contain over four hundred pages. How many copies will you take at $1.25 each?

Send your pledges but no money until I can see if sufficient is subscribed for to warrant the expense.

Send your pledges right away, so that the book can be put to press as soon as possible. Address W. H. Wilson, 420 N. Willow Ave., Austin Station Chicago, Ill.

Low Fares West and Southwest. Special Home Seekers Excursions via Pennsylvania Lines.

Anyone contemplating a trip West may take advantage of the reduced fares for the special Home-Seeker's excursions via Pennsylvania Lines to points in Colorado, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, the Dakotas, Oregon, Washington, Texas and other sections in the West and in all the States of the South.

Stop-over privileges permit travelers to investigate business openings. These tickets will be on sale certain dates during the summer. Detailed information as to fares, through time, etc., will be freely furnished upon application to Local Ticket Agent of Pennsylvania Lines.—Dec. 15.

Industrial Opportunities.

A new folder giving concise information regarding industrial openings along the Chicago & North-Western Railway, with particulars as to factory buildings and desirable sites available for immediate use and other information of much value to manufacturers seeking new locations. There are hundreds of splendid openings for manufacturers, jobbers and retail dealers in territory reached by the North-Western Line.

This folder contains a full description of several important extensions of the North-Western Line that open some of the finest territory in the West. Free on application to A. H. Waggoner, Trav. Agt. 22 Fifth Ave, Chicago, Ill.—Nov. 15.

Northwest Conference Work.

In response to the appointment of the Northwest Conference, I wish to devote my time more exclusively to evangelizing. Brethren desiring my work will notify me so I may arrange my labor.

Address me at Scholls, Oregon.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time.

Assorted package 80 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshal., co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

"It Came Upon the Midnight Clear.

It came upon the midnight clear,
That glorious song of old,
From angels bending near the earth,
To touch their harps of gold:
"Peace on the earth, good will to men,
From heaven's all gracious King."
The world in solemn stillness lay
To hear the angels sing.

[illegible]
With peace on earth good will to men,
And [illegible]
Over the earth it spreads,
And every heart bows down and owns
The blessed angels' song.

But with the woes of sin and strife
The world has suffered long;
Beneath the angels' strain have rolled
Two thousand years of wrong,
And man, at war with man, hears not
The love-song which they bring:
O, hush the noise, ye men of strife,
And hear the angels sing!

And ye, beneath life's crushing load
Whose forms are bending low,
Who toil along the climbing way
With painful steps and slow—
Look now; for glad and golden hours
Come swiftly on the wing:
O, rest beside the weary road,
And hear the angels sing.

For, lo! the days are hastening on
By prophet-bards foretold,
When, with the ever circling years
Comes round the age of gold;
When peace shall over all the earth
Its ancient splendors fling,
And the whole world give back the song
Which now the angels sing.

Hieremias (or "Iremiah").

CHAPTER 14.

1. And a word of the Lord occurred unto Hieremias concerning the drouth.

2. Joudaia hath sorrowed, and the gateways thereof have become empty, and they upon the land have become darkened, and the clamor of Hierousalem hath gone up;

3. And her officials have sent their young men for water. They have gone to the wells and have not found water, and they have returned with their earthen-vessels empty;

4. And the employments of the land have left off because there was no rain; the husbandmen have been put to shame; they have covered their heads.

5. And deer in the field have brought forth and forsaken—(their young) because there was no herbage.

6. Wild asses stand in shady vales and draw in a breath of wind; their eyes have failed because there was no grass.

7 Our sins have stood against us, O Lord, do for us for thine own sake, because our sins are many in thy sight, because we have sinned against thee.

8. O thou patient-endurance of Israel, O Lord, thou dost save even in a period of evil-doings; why hast thou become a sojourner as it were upon the land and like a native inclining out unto an inn?

9. Art thou going to be even as a man who sleepeth or like a hero who is unable to save? And thou art in us, O Lord, and thy name hath been invoked upon us; do not ignore us.

10. In this wise saith the Lord unto this laity, They have loved to move their feet; they have not been sparing of them, and God hath not been satisfied with them; now will he have remembered their iniquity.

11. And the Lord said unto me, Do not offer votive prayer for this laity for good things;

12. Because if they fast, I shall not hearken to their supplication; and if they bring whole-burnt-offerings and sacrifices, I shall not be satisfied with them, because with sword and with famine and with death am I going to bring them to an end.

13. And I said, O thou Being (Ho Oon) O Lord, Lo, their prophets are prophesying and saying, Ye will not see a sword, nor will there be famine with you because I shall give truth and peace upon the land and in this place.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. Dead X PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DECEMBER 20, 1905. NUMBER 47.

14. And the Lord said unto me, The prophets are prophesying lies in my name; I did not send them and I did not command them, and I did not talk with them, because false ways of seeing and divinations and bird-augeries and preferences of their heart are they prophesying unto you.

15. Therefore thus saith the Lord concerning the prophets who are prophesying lies in my name, and I have not sent them, who are saying, a sword and famine will not be upon this land, with an unwholesome death will they die, and with famine will the prophets have been brought to an end.

16. And the laity unto whom they are prophesying they also will be cast down in the streets of Hieroualeem from before the face of a sword and the famine, and there will be no one to bury them, and their wives and their sons and their daughters also, and I shall pour upon them their evil-doings.

17. And thou shalt say unto them this word, Lead down upon your eyes day and night, and do not let them leave off, because a daughter of my laity hath been crushed with a crushing blow, and an exceedingly woeful blow is it.

18. If I should go out into the plain, lo, even wounded of the sword; and if I should go into the city, lo into pain of famine, because priest and prophet have gone their way into a land which they had not known.

19. Hast thou disapproved Joudа and hath thy soul stood away from Sioon? Why is it thou hast smitten us and there is no healing for us? We have waited patiently for peace and there were no good things, for a due time of healing, and lo, tumult.

20. We are aware, O Lord, of our sins, of our fathers iniquities, that we have been sinning in thy sight.

21. Allay it for thy name's sake; do not destroy the throne of thy glory. Remember, do not abrogate thy covenant with us.

22. There is no one among the idols of the nations that causeth rain; and if the heavens shall give a satiety of it art thou not he? (who causeth it) and we will patiently wait for thee, because thou hast caused all these things (meaning the casual creation).

COMMENT.

No "came" in the first verse but "became" Joudaia instead of "Jouda" in the 2nd verse—the land not the person, "gateways" instead of "gates" and "empty" instead of "languish"—there is no "they sit in black upon the ground" (R. V. I am quoting from) but "they" the people have become darkened."

"Officials" instead of "nobles" (there were no "nobles" in Joudaia 3rd verse "young men" instead of "little ones." "For water" instead of "to the waters." "Wells" instead of "pits." No "they have covered their heads."

4th verse "because of the ground which is chapt" should read "and the employments of the land have left off because there was no rain."

5th verse who ever heard of "a hind" having "calves"? should read "and deer in the field have brought forth and forsaken their young" "herbage" in this verse and "grass" in the next verse.

6th verse "shady vales" rendered "on the bare heights" (this seems to be a staple phrase with C. V. and R. V. for anything there is doubt about).

7th No "though" in this verse nor is the thought stated conditionally.

8th "Hope of Israel" should be "patient-endurance" and "Lord" omitted R. V. and "wayfaring man" should be "a native" or a native-inhabitant—"who turneth out unto an inn" instead of "to tarry for a night,"

9th verse "astonied" should be "sleepeth" and "leave us not" should be "ignore us not."

10th verse 2nd clause not correct. Compare and see.

11th verse "for their good" should be "for good things"—a very different ethical teaching.

12th verse "When" should be "if" "burnt-offering" should be "whole-burnt-offering" and "oblation" or margin "meal-offering" should be "sacrifices"—"accept" should be "satisfied with," and "consume" should be "bring to an end" and "pestilence" should be "death."

13th verse "Oh Lord God" should be "O thou being," "O Lord" and "assured peace" margin "peace of truth" should be "truth and peace."

14th verse "false ways of seeing" instead of "lying vision" and "bird auguries" instead of "a thing of naught" and "preferences of their heart" instead of "the deceit of their own heart."

15th verse "lies" omitted in R. V. and "with an unwholesome death will they die" instead of "by sword and famine shall those prophets be consumed."

16th verse near enough, but "evil-doings" instead of "wickedness" makes their "wickedness" concrete.

17th "a daughter of my laity" instead of "the virgin daughter of my people" and "a crushing-blow" instead of "a breach" and "an exceedingly woeful blow" instead of "a very grievous wound" R. V.

18th verse neither the text nor the marginal alternative of the R. V. is correct, but substantially conveys the thought.

19th verse "stood away from" instead of "loathed" and "a due time of healing and lo tumult" instead of "a time of healing and lo dismay" R. V.

20th verse well enough.

21st verse "allay it" instead of "do not abhor us" "Do not destroy, etc." instead of "do not disgrace," etc. and "abrogate" instead of "break."

22nd verse first clause an assertion and not a question, and "the idols" instead of "vanities." The second clause is a condition and a consequence as stated—"if etc. art thou not he"? No "Lord our God" in the text.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Preaching the Bible.

"They preach the Bible," was the comment of a young friend who had been attending a series of services at one of our orthodox churches. "They preach about the Bible, for they talk about the coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead."

"Did you listen carefully?" I asked. "Where was the coming of Christ placed; at death, or at the end of the Christian dispensation? and was the resurrection of men and women from the dust of the grave or a change of place for man's spirit or soul, from earth to heaven at death?"

She frankly replied that she did not know.

"Well," I said, "how then can you say, 'They preach the Bible?' Preaching a little truth mixed with a great deal of error, not preaching the Bible. No man can get up and tell a lost and undone sinner that he can come to a mourner's bench and be pardoned, and preach the Bible, yet, you tell me these men get their converts in this way."

The Bible is emphatically against such a procedure; it lays down an entirely different rule. Its ministers were instructed to teach the people the gospel of the kingdom as the first step. The hearers were to believe that gospel; were to repent by turning away from their sins in such manner that they would no more commit them and they were then to be baptized, be pardoned by God himself and receive the name of Christ, or Christian as their name. The law of pardon is, or includes faith, repentance and baptism. Then outside of that law what is there of hope? No man who has not been baptised can prove that he is "in Christ." He is still outside, because not legally "In." Nor can he prove that he is a Christian, because it is only through baptism that he can legally obtain the name. Nor can any man get up and say that "sprinkling or pouring," will answer in the place of immersion, and preach the Bible. He is "teaching for doctrine the commandments of men. And Jesus says, worship offered in such a case is vain—that is it will not be accepted of God. Just look at it as it must look to the author of the Bible. God has made one law of forgiveness, has given us one baptism, and these teachers give us two more so that those who want to evade the crucifying law of the great Jehovah can take their own way, and deceive themselves into thinking they will be saved anyhow, whether they mind or not. And just so it is in relation to other doctrines. It is not "preaching the Bible," to get up and say that "man is immortal and can never die," or that "our dead friends are in heaven singing the praises of God." Whoever does so preach, helps to perpetuate the devil's lie—that awful lie—that has been the cause of all our sin; of all our misery, of all the diabolical demon worship of the world; of all misrule, of all poverty, of all drunkenness and war and death, that awful lie that has been the father of Antichrist and of Mohammedanism, of the inquisition and of the stake; everywhere making rivers of blood to flow, and opposing at all points the will and the purpose of God.

"Ye shall not surely die" is the stone upon which is built the ghost stories of spiritualism and the purgatorial fires of the Catholic and Greek churches. When it is proven false all error will fall to the ground and the kingdoms of men will become the kingdom of our Lord and Savior, and the knowledge and glory of the Lord will cover the earth as the waters cover the sea."

No man can "preach the Bible" and at the same time declare "that there is an eternal hell, where wicked men will be tormented forever and ever. This doctrine is but another offshoot of that same dreadful lie.

The Bible says wicked men are to be destroyed, are to be blotted out, are to be as chaff, are to be burned as the fat of lambs, are to consume away into smoke, and not that they are to live and suffer eternally.

I am but a weak woman but I must stand up for God, with all the strength of my being. I have enlisted in his army to defend his truth; I must do it at all hazards even though it be at the cost of my life.

I have been told "to stand fast;" to "be not moved away from the hope of the gospel;" to "be rooted and grounded in the truth," to "build my house on the rock," and that "whoever shall preach another gospel than that which Paul preached is to be accursed when the Lord comes." And again that "whoever adds to or takes away from the Word of the Lord, will have his name taken out of the Book of life and out of the holy city," so I dare not say, that is truth which is not the truth, hard as it is to go against those whom I respect and love. Better to go squarely against them than to leave them in the enemy's country to perish. I may save them by showing them their errors; I never can by telling them their unbelief of the Bible will make no difference.

In my baptism I entered into a solemn covenant with God to go out in his vineyard and engage in his work, letting the light of truth shine that by my baptism I had professed to believe. Death was pictured in that baptism; resurrection in that baptism. All my hopes for the future depend on the resurrection of the dead. If there be no resurrection there can be no future life.

My money, time, talents and voice must be thrown on the side of truth. I can help the orphans, can feed the hungry, can send Bibles to Judah, can do good to all men, but can give no support to the enemy.

"Life only through Christ" is my watchword, I stand on that Rock like dear Etta Fry, though I stand alone.

THE BIRTH OF THE CHRIST CHILD.

At this joyous season of the year, the Christmas time, there seems to be no more appropriate theme than the birth of the Christ child. Joseph and his affianced bride, Mary, went to Jerusalem to be taxed. Every room in the inn was occupied and the only place of shelter afforded them was out in the barn. Then follows the old, yet ever new, story of the birth of the Babe in that rude structure, whose only cradle was the manger But what a life of power and beauty was this child's, begun in such a lowly place!

Out on the plains of Judea, while the shepherds were tending their flocks, they heard the voice of God speaking to them through an angel, dispelling their fears and telling them good news of the birth of their Savior in Jerusalem. The shepherds eagerly exclaimed to each other, "Let us go and see." Hastily they went into the city, and found the child and worshipped him, praising God for all things they had heard and seen.

Not alone did the humble shepherds worship the child, but sages from the east, hearing of this wonderful babe, and guided by a beautiful star, came to the inn, and placed their gifts before the child, and fell on their knees in devotion.

What a beautiful picture! On one side the young mother, near by the baby cradled in the manger, the wise men kneeling in adoration, above the rude timbers, and beneath no carpet save the straw.

Let us each at this happy Christmas time ever bear in mind the lowliness and humility of our Savior and emulate his example.

JOSEPH'S AND MARY'S FLIGHT WITH CHRIST INTO EGYPT.

After the wise men were departed, the angel of the Lord appeareth unto Joseph, saying, Take the young child and his mother; flee into Egypt, for Herod will seek to destroy the child. It was night, a winter's night, "But they obeyed." What a feeling of sorrow must have come over Mary at this sudden warning, so soon after the wise men had worshipped her Babe and bestowed rich gifts upon him. Now she must steal away in the night with him from the Holy Land into Egypt, the old land of bondage, and remain there until God should bring them Word.

One of the faith.

MRS. MITTIE CHANDLER.

Dear Bereans:

Lest some of you may be growing weary in well doing I will write you a few words on the importance of continuing the studies you have so well began. Thus "adding to your faith knowledge," without which how can we know the way of life eternal. And can we bear the piercing thought, what if our name should be left out?" Because the knowledge of the love of God had not so permeated our hearts as to beget a corresponding love and fill us with a desire to do his will as written in his Word.

Jno. vi, 45 says, "It is written in the prophets, and they shall all be taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard and hath learned of the Father cometh unto me."

How is that, "Every man that hath learned of the Father cometh unto me." How is he to learn? By an appeal to the Father, or by an appeal to the Word he has sent us? You notice Jesus says, "It is written in the prophets." How did Jesus know it was written? By direct revelation or by a study of the prophets? By a study of the Word, for he says in verse 31, "As it is written, He gave them bread from heaven to eat. He had evidently learned that fact from Jewish history. When he was tempted in the wilderness, how did he overcome the tempter? By an appeal to the Father? No! but each time by an "It is written," Matt. iv. 4, 6, 7, 10. He would not have known what was the promise of God to the tempted if he had not studied his Word, and if he had not known what was written there, who can say what the consequences might have been to him and to us. Thank God that by the knowledge of the Word stored in his mind he was able to overcome temptation and confound the arguments of his enemies. He knew all that was going to happen to him, did he know it by direct revelation? No, but because he was a student of the Word, Matt. xxvi. 24, says, "The Son of Man as it is written of him." Matt. xxvi. 31, "For it is written, I will smite the shepherd and the sheep of the flock shall be scattered abroad." I could multiply instances showing how well posted was our Lord in the written Word, but I think these are sufficient. And if it was necessary for the Son of God, the perfect one, to know the written Word, is it not much more so for us sinful ones, beset by worldly temptations, and by our sinful nature inherited from our father Adam, to be filled with the knowledge of the Word, so that we can have an answer ready for the evil one, even as Jesus did. Jesus says, Jno. vi. 63, "The words that I speak unto you they are spirit and they are life." If we do not learn those words, can we have that life? Evidently not. Is it not important then to keep up the study of the Word that we may learn the way to life eternal. We cannot say to our Lord when he calls us and says, "Depart from me," "I did not know Lord, or I would have done thy will," for he says in his prayer in Jno. xvii. 7, 8, "For they have known all things, whatsoever thou hast given me are of thee, for I have given them the words which thou gavest me and they have received them and have known surely that I came out from thee and they have believed that thou didst send me." Simon Peter testified. Jno. vi. 68, "Thou hast the words of eternal life." All those words are written for our instruction, that we may learn the way of eternal life, and if they abide in us, Jno. xv. 7, "Ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you." Then let us earnestly study the Word, and in our weekly assemblies confer with each other that we may be fully equipped to withstand the enemy and be ready with full hearts to greet our Lord when he comes, because we know his Word and his works, and have tried to walk "In his steps."

Through the influence of Bro. S. J. Lindsay, who recently held a series of meetings at Ripley, a Berean society of thirty-six members, has been organized at that point, with the following officers:—Pres. Wesley Cooper, Vice Pres. Miss Jennie Cox, Secretary Miss Verna Woods, Treasurer Miss Florence Lanning. May all become active workers in the vineyard of the Lord, and through their efforts bring many into the light of the glorious gospel of Christ.

Our tract fund is getting low, just a few cents from each Berean would greatly assist in this work. We believe tract distribution one of the best mediums for sowing the seed, let us not neglect this, for it is a work that all can do. When tracts are sent you from our committee, give them where you think they may do good, be careful to select the ones you think will meet the need of the person to whom you give them. Let us do our part, and God will give the increase. Address all letters for this work to Miss Viola Eaton, Stockton, Ill.

Evangelizing Notice.

I expect to make an evangelising trip to Arizona in December and return late in the winter or early spring. Any brethren that may be reached on or near the Southern Pacific R. R. between Portland, Oregon and Phoenix, Arizona, may secure my service by corresponding with me at Scholls, Ore., or Phoenix, Ari. I have cut loose from my farm and desire to devote my whole time to the work. Help to the cause will be greatfully accepted.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the full restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DEC. 20, 1905.

BEFORE our next issue the Christmas season of 1905 will have passed. Popular sentiment has made it a time for family reunions, and general merriment. There is no harm in this if we do not allow it to crowd out the real meaning of Christmas. Though it may not be the exact day of the birth of the Christ, it is a day when we remember his birth and celebrate the event. While thus having in mind his first advent, we should look forward to the time when he will come again. He has now gone away, but a promise was left us that he would return. The exact date was not given us, but we are assured that in the due time that the Father has in his keeping, he will again send his Son, Jesus Christ, our Savior and Redeemer, back to the earth again to call to life his sleeping saints, and to give immortality to the ready ones, and establish his reign, that will eventually include all the people of the earth. We believe from the signs given and which we can see daily, that this time is not far in the future—that Jesus will soon come. Our hope is centered on that event, and our prayer is Lord hasten the day. Meanwhile we wish all of our readers a "Merry Christmas."

WERE you ever placed in a position where an extra call was made urgently demanding that you raise a sum of money on a given day? Did you not then wish that those who were owing you would consider your strait, and send in early what they could, so you could rest easy at night and not have to worry through the day, as the exact time of settlement drew near? We are asking you kindly to consider us in this position. Some have responded, but not quite half enough. We trust that our friends will do all they can. Today is the time to send, then we will have a pleasant Christmas.

THE Russian situation is worse than ever. The Czar has announced that the revolutionists must be put down. Word has been sent to the governors of the various provinces and districts which gives them the power to use any means they deem best in suppressing uprisings without consulting St. Petersburg. The revolutionists are calling for a general strike, which will paralyze all business. They also ask the troops to aid them in their struggle. Many regiments are now in revolt, and more becoming affected, so that the outlook is very grave.

WHEN you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

"The Temple of God!"

The subject selected for consideration this morning, is "The Temple of God," and may be found in 1 Cor. iii. 16, 17, "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." It would be hard to select a more important or more interesting subject for the consideration of the Household of faith. And if our conduct through the week has been such as becometh saints of God, I doubt not we will be blessed in our study of it! A great deal depends upon this. There is a vast difference between coming to the House of God in a prepared state of mind,—a mind which has maintained a constant intercourse with God during the intervals of business, and so has a keen appetite for spiritual food, and the pure water of life,—yea; there's a vast difference between such, and those who have to get into the proper frame of mind after they get there. Indeed, I am afraid they do not always succeed in getting into a proper frame of mind, yea, I am afraid they do not often succeed. I do not see how they can sow to the flesh six days and reap spiritual things on one day.

The Spirit in our text employs a magnificent emblem, not merely sentimentalism, but of the most practical character. It is not for description, or picture painting, but for the guidance of our lives in its common rounds,—in every day affairs, as well as in its nobler aspirations. Brethren and sisters, can you think of more solemn or weightier words than these? "Ye are the temple of God's Spirit." "The Spirit of God dwelleth in you;" "The temple of God is holy;" "Ye are the Temple of the living God;" "A habitation of God through the Spirit;" "Your body is the Temple of the Holy Spirit;" "Ye are built up a spiritual house;" "I will dwell in them, and walk in them;" "We will come unto him, and make our abode with him;" "His Spirit that dwelleth in you;" "God dwelleth in him, and he in God." Is it not a startling list of statements to come direct from God to the community of saints in Cleveland; and also to each individual of the community? Do they not

STRIKE US WITH AWE?

If they do not make us tremblingly look ourselves over, within and without, and institute a thorough spiritual house-cleaning there is something wrong in us? Take the figures employed by the Spirit in these quotations in connection with any of the kinds of habitation spoken of in Scripture, the home, the tent, the palace, and the temple, and it exhibits a most comforting truth to us, if a truth at all in our case. To be God's home, or dwelling, his tent or tabernacle, his royal palace, his chosen temple, of which that which stood on Mount Moriah was the merest shadow. Oh, how solemn the admonition as to personal holiness that is conveyed to us by this!

In the temple there was the blood, the fire, the smoke, the water, the lamps, the incense, the shew bread, the cherubim, the glory,—all consecrated things, and all pointing to what is heavenly! These symbols have gone, and the heavenly, spiritual realities have come,—that is the heavenly things themselves have come. If, then, we are God's temple,—if our bodies are temples of the Holy Spirit, what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness! It is the practical use of this inspired figure or symbol that I wish to bring before you! If we are God's temples, what then? What then? What an absorbing question? What intimacy with God it implies? Acquaintanceship with him who has made our heart his home is the least which could be expected. He can be no stranger to us under those circumstances. There must not merely be reconciliation,—for that may consist with some distance, or restraint,—there must be intimacy, peaceful friendship, loving acquaintanceship,—he seeing deep down into our hearts and lives with its many frailties, and we measurably see into his, with all its goodness, and longsuffering, and paternal, yet holy gentleness and love. If God be our intimate how intimate, yet with a holy reverence, solemn, sacred intimacy; an intimacy which expels fear, and at the same time casts out all irreverent freedom.

CHILD OF GOD.

How it must warm your heart and draw out your affection to read the sweet words of Jesus in John xiv. 23, "If a man love me, he will keep my words; and the Father will love him, and we, the Father and the Son, yea; the Son says, "We will come unto him, and make our abode with him." What transcendant love; what amazing condescension! But what will the indwelling of God do for us? Give calmness of spirit. In all false religions there is excitement. In the religion of Jesus there is calmness. The more of God we have, the more of the inner and abiding calm we have. The indwelling of God preserves that calm. The tendency of much that is called religion in our day is to agitation, bustle, noise, unnatural fervor. In the excitements at what are called revivals, there has been an amount of excitement which is of the flesh, not of God. The presence of Christ in the ship calmed the sea, and his presence in our affections or hearts produces calm. His words, his looks, his presence all tend to calm not to excite. The temple of the God of peace should surely be the calmest spot in the universe. No disturbing breath, no jar, no ruffle there. No storms nor earthquake, nor war, nor tumult can reach it. Look at Stephen before the council; his face was as the face of an angel. God will keep his temple in perfect peace, if our minds be staid upon him. Sobriety? If God dwell with us, the flippancy, frivolity and levity in word will not characterise us. We will not be austere, sour,—these are caricatures of a godly life. With an eternal weight of glory in the balance, the world's rude laughter cannot echo through the aisles of the divine temple, or its uproarious mirth ring through the holy of holies. Imagine, if you can, the high priest of old entering the most holy place in any thing but a solemn and serious mood,—think of him, if you can, standing before the mercy-seat, and the cherubic representatives of the divine presence, in a frolicsome mood,—and then think that not only once a year, but all the time, if we have

PUT ON CHRIST

as a garment, or to use the figure employed by the Spirit in our text,—if we be the habitation of God through the Spirit, we are over in his presence and not a symbol of it; and to think of that is to think of the solemn and awful mission we have undertaken for God and Christ,—what a faithful witnessing we have to do,—what an important message we have to deliver, —what a holy charcter we have to represent to the world of mankind, even that of him who knew no sin. What if we *mis*represent him? Where I ask will the dire consequences end if we *mis*represent him? The consequences will not end with us,—they will extend to others. And this fact seems to be emphasized by the Spirit in Rom. xiv. 7, "For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself." But what next? If the Father abide with us? Our minds and wills merge into his mind and will; and all our enterprises and plans will in some way connect with his; so that in our approaches to him, or communion with him will be without destruction. We shall be able to gather up our thoughts and keep them gathered. The calm and peace we have been speaking about, the humble boldness and assurance that, figuratively speaking, will prevent the ashes of the sacrifices, or the water of the laver, or the incense of the altar, or the fragments of the shewbread from being scattered to the ends of the earth. In a word we will be self-recollected in the presence of

THE HOLY INHABITANT.

I am aware that our early training and environment have thrown a mystery around both these Scriptural statements and the divine processes involved. The general idea, as I understand it, is, that by some miraculous influence, or divine afflatus or breath of the Spirit of God takes possession of a person and erects his throne in the heart, which, as I take it, means to assert divine authority or control over a person, when said person shall have by prayer and praise or other acts of devotion prevailed upon God to do this. Man was morally,—that is, religiously organized,—and therefore accountable to God for his conduct; but like all other faculties, it can be starved out; by disuse it will almost disappear and then reappear under favorable circumstances. This can be proven at any time,—seldom, I think ever, does the last trace of a religious faculty in man disappear. And if God had published no law of pardon in connection with his gracious and glorious gospel, it would be natural to conclude that when a person's religious faculty was deeply aroused he could be pardoned for the asking whenever the good God saw fit to exercise his pardoning power. But the law of pardon absolutely precludes all such ideas, because they dispense with the gospel, and its conditions. Without faith it is impossible to please God, and God will not pardon those with whom he is displeased. But it may be objected by a person that he DID HAVE FAITH.

What faith? Was it faith that God would hear and answer his prayer for pardon? That would be well enough if God had offered such terms of pardon! How can men have faith in what God has not said? How can they have faith in God while not believing what he has said about pardon? Oh, friends, the conditions of pardon, peace, reconciliation and adoption are parts and parcel of the glorious gospel of the kingdom with eternal life!! I want to emphasize that—the conditions are gospel, and must be believed. And when this comes home to us, how very reasonable it is. Eternal life in the kingdom of God is offered to all who will put away sin by the divine formula, after accepting by faith what is promised,—one part of the gospel is useless without the other. And when we consider that the love of God as displayed in the gospel is the influence, or moving power which God exerts upon the affections and intellects of men and women to induce in them faith and repentance unto life,—we see that people religiously excited have no motive—I mean no real motive for faith and repentance unless they know what God in mercy offers them. If they are ignorant of that, then the moving power in their case is the traditions of men. But from the inception to the consummation the gospel is the power employed by God to save. After this brief reference to the first principles for any who need it,—I again turn to those whom the Spirit styles the Temple of God. When and how did the process leading up to this exalted state commence? It commenced with every one in this room whose Body is a temple of God, just as it commenced on the Day of Pentecost with Peter's three thousand converts. They heard the gospel of the kingdom by the mouth of Peter, were pricked in their hearts and embraced the truth in the love of it, and were eager to know what to share the great salvation offered, for the first time, doubtless, to very many of them. Having believed, they were told to reform their lives, and be baptized into the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins,—the pardon of their sins. This is in harmony with the Apostle James, who, some 30 years after Pentecost said, (see chap. i. 18,) "Of his own will begat he us with the Word of truth." So the truth about God's love in preparing in his eternal purpose, a kingdom of glory, with eternal life by a resurrection from the dead through the risen and glorified Jesus, found response in their hearts,—the love of Christ constrained them to love him, and those who love him are loved of the Father,—and loving him they want to obey him; and it was he who told Peter what to say to those who believed the gospel and wanted to know what they should do. See Mark xvi. 16. Having been baptized into Christ they became joint-heirs with him to God's kingdom and glory. Well now, it is the same promises which were first believed that exhibits the love of God and of Christ now. It is the glorious prize first offered, that WE are told to set our eyes upon the mark of today. The joy set before us when we first heard the good news is still set before us to make us endure the cross and despise the shame. And as we ponder over the will which sets forth our Father's eternal purpose in creation and redemption, and dwell upon his

THEY HAD TO DO

UNSPEAKABLE GIFT,

our intercourse with his mind causes ours to blend with it.—more and more we then think with God and study to please him, by denying self, and this is the way God dwells with us, and we with him. No mystery is connected with this transforming process. Here, as else where the effect can be traced to its cause. Natural laws pervade the spiritual realm. Just as characters are improved by association with men of excellent traits,—so does intercourse with God, in a far greater degree, lift men to a higher plane of existence, and make them to dwell in. But what more results from the indwelling of God? I answer, spirituality, unworldliness. God is worshipped in spirit and in truth. We need no rites, no peculiar garbs to worship in,—no postures, no candles, no crosses, these are the mockeries, the gew gaws of a dark materialistic, or mechanical worship. What more? Why, if the temples of God are holy, then vanity of person, of life, of word, of dress, ornament, of accomplishments and of property are shut out. When God comes in these go out. If these come in, he departs. What besides? The love of pleasure. Can a frequenter of the ball-room, a lover of the dance, a haunter of the theatre, a slave of lust have God dwelling in him? What besides? But I must close by saying, I have once more tried to hold up the divine mirror so that we may all see ourselves somewhat as the Spirit sees us, and to know more and more exactly how to walk with God,—how we can live in him, and he in us,—and how to do always what will please him,—and how to prevent his withdrawal from us. We are but a handful in a world lying in wickedness. But by the favor of God we have a real hope. It is

TEMPLES FOR GOD

A BLESSED HOPE.

Let us cherish it more and more, because the more we bring it into contact with the phantasmal hopes cherished all around us, the more we realize the firmness of the Rock of Ages upon which it rests. The more it is tested by enemies the more fully we realize that it will never fail us. When a conflict is forced upon us, how the strength of our fortress is realized,—and how it makes us pity thousands of our fellow mortals who are struggling in the vortex of deceptive and destructive delusions. In battle our hope is a sword and a shield, in loneliness it is a companion, which makes us oblivious of the flights of time. In distress and perplexity it is a sweet solace and a solid comfort. O, the strength, the courage, the joy, the gladness it gives even amid the trials of life. Since it has been ours, what has become of the slavish fears and terrifying ghosts of Pagan and Romish superstition? O, is not our hope a pearl of great price? What would you take for it brother,—sister? Why you would look over the busy world in vain for any that would serve you as well in this life even, and when we think of the eternity of the glorious life to come it makes us sing from the heart, "Blessed are they that know the joyful sound." God help us to remember that the temple of God must be holy! God help us to bear in mind that the doom of him who defiles the is destruction. God help us to watch passing events, and know what time of night it is,—keep our lamps full of the oil of the Spirit of truth. And if asked why we stand gazing up into heaven, we can answer, we are watching. If asked the reason of our wakefulness, we can answer, we are watching—when they think it strange that we run not to the same excess of riot with them, we can tell them we are watching—we cannot sing their songs, and taste their pleasures, that we may forget our sorrows, we can say, we dare not,—we are watching. If scoffers mock us and ask where is the promise of his coming—we will not heed them,—we will continue watching, and clasp our hope more firmly. If a feeble, doubting, inconsistent brother asks in astonishment how you keep up a tone so elevated, and maintain a walk so close, so consistent, so unworldly—we can answer, we watch. If he asks how we overcome sloth, and selfishness, and love of ease, or selfishness, and love of ease, or check forgetfulness, we can answer,—we watch. If he asks how we make head against fears, and challenge danger, and defy enemies, and keep the flesh under,—we can reply, we watch! If he asks how we wrestle with our griefs, and dry up our tears, and heal our wounds, and even glory in tribulation? We can answer, we watch. O, what this watching can do for the church when it gets thoroughly down to it! Watch and pray—watch first,—'tis the Lord's command, then prayer is in order. Prayer is of little or no value without watchfulness, stumble after stumble, stumble after stumble will be the history of every day without watchfulness. The divine idea is to do for us what we cannot do for ourselves. He cannot watch for us. The Lord foresaw the spirit of unwatchfulness into which his people would fall while he tarried, and warned us against it. He saw the danger of easy-mindedness, and content with his delay instead of mourning because of it, and joining in the cry, How long, O Lord, how long? He saw the world would throw many off their guard, that few would keep awake,—and many would try to make themselves comfortable without him. Hence his oft repeated warning, Watch! And then he gives the reason:—"Lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. His desire for us is that when he knocks we may open to him immediately. Luke xii. 36. If we are running hither and thither to put on proper raiment instead of welcoming him at once, what a plight to be in! What consternation! What fear, what bustle when the tidings is brought, "The Lord has come!" Let us be sure that his coming does not find in us such confusion, and then the prospect of that morning of joy will nerve us. We can set our faces to the storm, for behind it lies the calm. We can bear the parting, for the meeting again is not distant. We can afford to weep, for the tears shall soon be wiped away. We can watch the tedious sick bed, for soon the inhabitant shall not say, I am sick. We can with comparative calm look into the grave of buried love, and cherished hope, for resurrection shines beyond it. Hail happy day. Soon may it come and find us fit to be gathered home.

TEMPLE OF GOD

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

Obituary.

Joseph Davis was born August 30, 1804, in Boon Co. Ind. and died Nov. 16, 1905, aged 41 years, 2 months and 17 days.

He moved to near Oxford, Kansas, in 1878, with his parents, where he lived till about 11 months ago, when he with mother and neice, moved to near Udall, where he lived until his death.

He leaves a mother, brother and sister to mourn the great loss which death has caused. Funeral services were conducted by the writer at the residence. Words of comfort were spoken from Isa. xxv. 8, "He will swallow up death in victory. And the Lord God will wipe the tears from all faces." He was laid to rest in the Oxford cemetery, to wait the Master's call. "Thou shalt call and I will answer thee. Thou shalt have the desire to the work of thine hand."

Neuralgia of the stomach was the cause of his death.

He united with the Church of God near Oxford in 1894, and was baptized by the writer, since which time he has lived a consistent Christian life, endearing himself to all who knew him by his kind and loving disposition. He died as he had lived, in the full hope of a resurrection when Jesus comes.

He was a good musician, having taught music, and will be greatly missed by the church and community in which he lived.

May the glad assurance that there will be for him a glorious resurrection when Jesus comes, be a source of consolation to the bereaved ones in their sorrow.

Just a word from one who witnessed the last prayer and last song that Brother Joe ever offered while apparently unconcious. Those words of prayer was so grand and so full of meaning that they seemed almost supernatural. The last song was "I'm going home to Jesus."

Where None Shall Say Good-Bye.

Two strangers stand beside an office door:
The firm will fail—on that you may rely.
I trust your house will not be badly pressed;—
We know at least that you will do your best.
Keep us informed! Good-bye.

Two playmates roam the hills at set of sun;
With harmless fun the happy moments fly.
Across the fields there sounds a distant bell—
Mamma is calling; I must go now! Well,
To-morrow, then; Good-bye.

Two brothers pace an anchored steamer's deck
The parting moment drawing swiftly nigh.
Years, oceans shall divide, and who can say
If these two part forever: yea, or nay?
Is this the last Good-bye?

A mother kneels within a prison cell.
Her son with careless ear attends her cry:
Your whole young life doomed to this cursed place?
God in his mercy, send you saving grace!
Dear boy, a long Good-bye.

Good-bye! The swan song of a heart's desire
When hope and love and gladness droop and die.
Ah! Strange indeed, the same word should express
Form, friendship, love, the depths of bitterness.
Oh, solemn word, Good-bye.

Yea, when the deep sleep from Almighty God
Falls on our dear ones, stilling song and sigh,
The last love-token of a priceless heart
The low, sad moan as clinging fingers part,
Is that old word, Good-bye.

Lord, haste the day when, on the ransomed earth,
Before the glorious throne of God, most High,
We meet together safe at home at last
With parting, pain and death forever past—
Where none shall say, Good-bye.

—Alice M. Goodwin.

"Inasmuch as Ye Did It Unto the Least of These, Ye Did It Unto Me."

I cried aloud, "There is no Christ
In all this world unparadised!
No Christ to go to in my need—
No Christ to comfort me and feed!
He passed in glory out of sight,
The angels drew him into light;
Now in the lonesome earth and air
I cannot find him anywhere.
Would God that heaven were not so far
And I were where the White Ones are."

Then from the gray stones of a street
Where goes an ocean drift of feet,
I heard a child's cry tremble up,
And turned to share my scanty cup,
When lo, the Christ I thought was dead
Was in the little one I fed!
At this I drew my aching eyes
From the far-watching of the skies;
And now whichever way I turn
I see my Lord's white halo burn!

Wherever now a sorrow stands,
'Tis mine to heal its nail-torn hands;
In every lonely lane and street,
'Tis mine to wash his wounded feet—
'Tis mine to roll away the stone
And warm his heart against my own.
Here, here, on earth I find it all—
The young archangels white and tall,
The Golden City and the doors,
And all the shining of the floors!

Incidents in the Work.

Dear Brother Underwood:

I send you a religious paper called "The Chosen People," published by Leopold Cohn, in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mr. Cohn is a converted Jew, and is a missionary among his own people in Brooklyn. He is a believer in the second advent of the Savior. His paper, which is published monthly is a resume of his work for the previous month.

My object in sending you this paper is to request you to publish the article entitled "Incidents In The Work."

The subject of this story, Mr. Rosenzweig, has had a most wonderful experience with his own people, the Jews. Will our Heavenly Father ever cause the Gentile nations to cease their persecution of the Jews so long as they continue to persecute members of their own people with such relentless hatred, for no other reason than the simple fact that they accept Jesus as their Messiah, and Savior?

It seems strange that they have never learned or practiced the Golden Rule. The rules of favor laid down by Jesus and his apostles for the government of the followers of the Master have never been learned or practiced by the Jews. They claim that they are under the law and not under grace. That they are in no way bound to heed or comply with the teaching of Jesus and his apostles. This will never be changed until Jesus comes and is accepted by the Jews as their Messiah. May our Heavenly Father hasten that time.

Your brother in the one hope of eternal life.

R. S. Dwiggins.

A WONDERFUL STORY.

The accompanying sketch represents a Jewish Christian family, consisting of father, mother and five children, the head of which is a remarkable servant of the Lord Jesus Christ. He was baptized in the First Baptist German Church, by the Rev. Dr. Grimmel on Sunday, the fifth of this month. On account of his not knowing English, and being desirous of speaking to the audience and explaining his position, I introduced him to this German church instead of to Marcy Avenue.

Twelve years ago in New York I met this Mr. Rosenzweig, then a mere boy of about twenty-four. He was an enquirer after the truth and we had many conversations about the Lord Jesus Christ. I coveted the man's gifts for the service of the Lord Jesus, and used to pray earnestly for his conversion. Sometimes it seemed as if the truth had gotten hold of him and again he would utter such expressions as would lead me to think him very far from Christ.

He had been married while quite young, as the orthodox Jews believe in this, and his wife was in Poland. His mother, whom he loved very dearly, lived there also and his father whom he highly respected and all his numerous relatives. He remembered their honor and their feelings which would be greatly injured if they learned that he had anything to do with Christianity and on one occasion when I pressed hard the need of his acceptance of the Lord as his Savior, he said in a very earnest attitude and with an air of confiding a secret, "When I put my mind to thinking of accepting Christ, a small voice seems to whisper to me, 'Don't, don't. It is idolatry.'" This of course gave me no hope for his ultimate conversion. But as heaven is higher than the earth, so are God's ways above our ways and our thinking. It seems that this was the last struggle between darkness and light in the young man's heart, for he at last confessed the Lord Jesus Christ and began to talk about him to other Jews. Soon after, he was told by physicians that this climate did not agree with him, so he decided to go to his home in Poland. The following facts are as given me by himself.

Upon his arrival, he began to present the Gospel to his wife and she having great confidence in his sincerity, piety and learning acquiesced in her husband's new doctrines and was on the road of acceptance of Christ as her Savior. Mr. Rosenweig, being happy at the results of his first labor which he considered most important, began then to reach out, gathering in his old acquaintances, young men with whom he used to study in rabbinical schools and in an orthodox Talmudic way he explained to them many of the Scriptures and passages from Talmudic literature which are mysteries to most Jews owing to their ignorance of the Lord Jesus. Soon he showed them that all these verses referred to Christ. They at once fell in line with him and a circle of educated young men believed and confessed Christ. This all happened in the town Pshedbosh, which is exclusively a Jewish one with a population of about one thousand families. Not one Gentile is to be found amongst them except those who come in to help on the Sabbath.

The Jews all over the world observe the Sabbath in a very rigid manner. They do not make fires or light a candle or strike a match on that day, but employ a Gentile man or woman who is taught beforehand what there is to do, because it is a sin even to tell a Gentile about work on the Sabbath. A person helping in this way is called a Shabbath Goy. He comes in Saturday morning and makes a fire and heats the prepared foods made ready the day before.

Now when the parents of these young men heard of their new belief they were shocked, and severely questioned and exhorted him not to continue propagating his ideas. But the young man showed the rabbi and others present not only from the Scriptures and from the prophets that the orthodox Jews usually regard as obscure and beyond their understanding, but also from Talmudic passages that Jesus is the Messiah, so that they could not gainsay him. This however only made things worse. Satan caused them to grow more angry and finally decide to put him in prison.

They went to the government officials and said that Mr. Rosenzweig had just come from America where he had imbibed socialistic ideas which he was promulgating among the young men. This was sufficient to imprison him at once with a prospect of being sent to Siberia, where he might be kept for all his life, for that is the way they do things in Russia. The first day of his imprisonment he wrote me a letter stating the facts. When this reached me I went over to Mr. Gabelein, who was doing mission work among the Jews in New York at the time, and he secured a certificate endorsed by the Russian Consul, that Mr. Rosenzweig was a converted Jew, an honest and upright man, but not a socialist.

In the mean time, fourteen weeks of a miserable existence had passed for our friend. He was not allowed to see anybody, or talk to anybody until the certificate came, when he was brought for examination. An army officer was detailed to be present at the trial and after Mr. Rosenzweig had told his story, the officer questioned him and asked him why he did not unite with the Greek Catholic Church, if he was a Christian. To this he answered, "What! I just escaped one sin; should I commit another?" They were much enraged at this and the officer said, "Do you dare to offend our church of which his Majesty the Czar is the head? Now you have condemned yourself, and I am going to send you to Siberia."

It is well known that when a Russian merely hears the name of Siberia he shudders; how much more terror-stricken must be one upon receiving such a sentence.

But Mr. Rosenzweig calmly and smilingly answered the officer "If I am sent to Siberia I'll proclaim the gospel there, and it doesn't make any difference to me as long as I have found my Savior Jesus." At this all present in the court were astonished. How could a man be so peaceful in the face of such a calamity. They all looked at each other, and the clerk raised his finger to his head indicating that the man must be demented. After a short consultation they decided to set him free as they did not want to send an insane man to Siberia.

When our brother reached his home all his people were stirred again and they began to plan some other means to stop this fellow from teaching other young men to believe on the Crucified One. So the rabbi and the rulers of the synagogue held a meeting at which they put him under excommunication This meant that no Jew, man or woman was allowed to come near him, to speak to him, to sell him anything or to buy anything from him. When the news of his excommunication was circulated the first one to show its effects was his wife, who, although she loved her husband and sympathized with the gospel, yet being a true and loyal Jewish woman found it her duty according to tradition to obey the rabbi and the synagogue rulers as Moses himself.

Then began most terrible suffering for the young man. He was locked up alone in his house and some one threatened to throw him into the nearby river, if he ventured out at all. The excitement was so great that had he escaped this fate he would have been attacked by the youths and ruffians of the town. He could not buy a piece of bread, no matter how much he paid for it, and his plight was becoming very serious when fortunately the Shabbath Goy came in to do his weekly tasks. The man was fond of Mr. Rosenzweig who had talked to him about Christ, and he managed to bring him daily food for some time. But when the Jews found it out they sent word to all the dealers not to sell anything to that Shabbath Goy. He, however, walked four miles daily to another town and so supplied his patron's needs. But it was a life of utter misery, and the young man began to pray that God would take him out of the world.

This terrible condition lasted fully a month until one day Mr. Rosenzweig's mother called to him from a distance that she had persuaded the rabbi to be lenient to her son if he would go barefooted to the synagogue and lying on the threshold let every Jewish communicant step on him, and spit at his face. Then he must go into the synagogue and standing on the platform announce his regret for his great and terrible sin. Her son at once said that he would do as suggested and a day was appointed and every one notified to be at one large synagogue.

The young man obeyed the directions and those that entered apparently stepped on him, but did not hurt him. There were, however, a large number of fanatics who spit in his face which made him very uncomfortable. At last he went into the synagogue and stepping up to the platform near the shrine containing the Scroll called Thorah (The Law of Moses), which is considered the most sacred thing in the world, addressed himself to the large audience saying, "Brethren, you want me to confess that I am a sinner, so am I, and because I am a terrible sinner therefore I must believe on the Lord Jesus Christ who is the only sacrifice for my sins according to that Thorah," pointing in the direction of the shrine, "and be it known unto you that if that Thorah is true then Jesus of Nazareth is our true Messiah and Savior and if he is not the Messiah then the Thorah is a lie."

No bomb would have terrified that company as the words of this humble believer. They began to shriek and to wail as if they were going to be killed and ran out with great speed, tumbling over one another and rolling out of the doors of the building. But no hand was laid on Mr. Rosenzweig who had expected to be killed and who really wished for death.

The secret of this action may not be realized by Gentiles, for superstitious Jews regard such utterances especially in their sacred places and in the presence of the Holy Thorah as the greatest blasphemy and they feared that God in his displeasure would destroy the building.

The young man was not satisfied to be left alone, but ran out after the people and among them groups discussing the subject with serious faces were all about and when he came near to tell them further of his belief in the Lord Jesus they at once retreated. They did not molest him further though there was hatred and prejudice in all their hearts, but a little later, however, he gained their love and admiration.

At this juncture, Mr. Gabelein and a friend visited him and the village officials were so frightened at the presence of the foreigners whom they imagined might take Mr. Rosenzweig's part that they accused the rabbi and synagogue leaders with the excommunication which is a serious crime in Russia. Consequently they were arrested and brought to Warsaw for trial, but he refused to press the charges against them. On the contrary he begged the court to set them free. Then the people took notice that the young man had been with Jesus and the door was opened for him to preach the gospel to them.

Mr. Gabelein, however, placed him in Warsaw where there are over one hundred thousand Jews. There he worked in his peculiar way, going to the synagogue and doing all that the Jews do, and yet showing from the Scriptures that all are lost who do not accept Christ.

When the troubles in Russia began to grow worse and worse his work was greatly hindered and he had to return to America with his family.

He arrived here last August and settled down in Brownsville, has visited the synagogue every time it has been open for services and has preached Christ to his brethren whenever opportunity offered itself. He has been to nearly every meeting of the Mission and has spoken to the audiences who have appreciated his earnest appeals to accept the free gift of God.

The accounts which follow were told me not only by himself, but by others who witnessed the incidents.

Last Jewish New Year's Day, Sunday October first, as he was standing in the synagogue, he spoke of Christ to some of those nearby from passages in the prayer book. The rabbi was performing the most solemn part of the prayers, namely, the blowing of the Shoffar (Ram's Horn Trumpet) to commemorate the ram substituted for Isaac, supposed to have happened on that day and asking God for his sake to have mercy on them and forgive their sins. The talking disturbed the rabbi as all the Jews turned around to the speaker, when suddenly they sprang on him shouting. "This is a Missionary. He talks about the Crucified One. Heraus mit him," One said "Break his bones," another, "Rush him out." There was tumult and confusion in the whole congregation, but the brother stood calm, not at all afraid. A relative of his, however, hastened to his rescue and assured them that he was not a missionary and begged them to leave him alone and succeeded in restoring quiet.

As the man is without any employment his cousin who has been helping him look for work went to the president of a Jewish society in New York consisting of a large number of wealthy members, to see if they could not give him a position. For his cousin's sake, the president gave some encouragement, but said he must be a member of the club. Consequently the cousin introduced him to the society at their session on October fifteenth, having paid all necessary dues. After they had read the by-laws to him and his duty to the club brothers had been made plain, Mr. Rosenzweig asked for an opportunity to speak and addressing an audience of one hundred and fifty wealthy prominent Jews gave a word in season connected with the Feast of Tabernacles, which was then being held. He spoke of the tabernacle of David and the tabernacle of Peace which was broken, according to the Jewish prayer books, and then followed with a most powerful testimony as to his belief in the Lord Jesus as his personal Savior from sin. "I must tell you," he said, "what my faith is, so that you shall not say later on that I deceived you and pretended to be a Jew in the sense you mean." Then a terrible uproar arose, shouting and howling, "Stop that, stop that, get out of here." But Mr. Rosenzweig not minding, went on with his speech from the platform until a number of Jews ran to him seizing his arms and coat and trying to drag him down. At that he jumped on a chair and escaped their grasp shouting still louder, exhorting them to accept the Lord Jesus Christ according to their own Scriptures.

Here he was again in a critical condition, but some of the men who were near him and had watched his face with interest warned the others saying, "This man talks like a prophet of old. You'd better leave him alone." This discouraged them somewhat and he finally got away safely being kept in perfect peace. But the remaining members were not peaceful and after excitedly discussing until after midnight they expelled him from his recent membership. His cousin was blamed for it all and he came asking me to persuade Mr. Rosenzweig not to talk about Christ among the Jews because he disgraced him, although he loved him and wanted to find work for him. I told him that his relative would never listen to a man and not even to any creature for he was impelled by the Holy Spirit through the Word of God. "As for me, I thank God that he does talk about Christ. I would not advise him to stop for any consideration." He became very sad, but there is hope that he, too, will eventually come to this wonderful light of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Mr. Rosenzweig is anxious for work that he may labor with his hands to support his family, but preach the gospel in his spare moments. In the mean time he is assisting me in the two fields.

A Land Without a Saloon.

Iceland, about the size of Missouri, has "no jail, no penitentiary; there is no court and only one policeman. Not a drop of alcoholic liquor is made on the island and its 78,000 people are total abstainers since they will not permit any liquor to be imported. There is not an illiterate on the island, not a child ten years old unable to read, the system of public schools being practically perfect. There are special seminaries and colleges, several good newspapers, and a printing establishment which every year publishes a number of excellent books on various lines." Such is the report brought by northern travelers of this incomparable and ideal land.—Lisbon Daily Parrio.

Oftentimes it is difficult to see how certain promises of God are to be realized. We have nothing to do with that however. God keeps our hands off his promises quite as surely as he keeps them off his stars, and if he will not let us intermeddle with his planets, and do our little scrubbing and burnishing upon those great lights, he will not ask us to have anything to do with the outworking and realization of his promises. He asks that their fulfillment be left to him, and afterwards he will challenge our own life as the witness, and answer, and confirmation of all that is gracious and all that is sure in the outworking of his words of promise.—Joseph Parker.

Of the 150,000,000,000 human beings that are supposed to inhabit this earth, 1,000,000,000 are non-Christians. Some 6,000,000 or more are Jews, 200,000,000 are Mohammedans, and about 800,000,000 are heathen.

The American people spent as much money last year for gems and jewelry as they spent for pianos and other musical instruments, and more than three times as much as for sewing machines.

We wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If such one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

"Here, boy, let me have a paper."

"Can't."

"Why not? I heard you crying them loud enough to be heard down to the City Hall."

"Yes, but that was down 'tother block, ye know, where I hollered."

"What does that matter? Come, now, no fooling. I'm in a hurry."

"Couldn't sell you a paper on this here block, mister, cos it b'longs to Limpy. He's just up the furdest end now. You'll meet him."

"And who is Limpy? And why does he have this block?"

"Cos us other kids agreed to let him have it. Ye see its a good run, 'count of the offices all along, and the poor chap is that lame he can't git around lively like the rest of us, so we agreed that the first one caught sellin' on his beat should be thrashed. See?"

"Yes, I see. You have a sort of a brotherhood among yourselves?"

"Well, we're goin' to look out for a little cove what's lame, anyhow."

"There comes Limpy now. He's a fortunate boy to have such friends as you."

The gentleman bought two papers of him, and went on his way down to town, wondering how many men in business would refuse to sell their wares in order to save a weak halting brother.

Obituary.

Charles William Clark was born Dec 4, 1854, and died Nov. 20, 1905. In 1877 he was married to Miss Annie Dall. For twenty-five years he and his wife have been members of the one faith, and strong believers in the coming and kingdom of God.

He leaves a widow, two sons and a daughter to mourn his death: Claud T. Clark the eldest son, Mrs. Mary M. Walden his only daughter, and J. W. Clark the younger.

On Nov. 20, in the morning, he was taken with paralysis, which was the second stroke he had. He fell asleep just at sunset the same day. We laid him away to await the coming of our Lord, and we prayed that he might soon return to raise our loved ones from their last slumber. It was hard indeed to give our father to the hands of the enemy, but we sorrow not as those having no hope, for we expect to meet him again on the morning of the first resurrection, for the dead in Christ shall rise first.

Mrs. Mary M. Walden.

We are called upon by persons to whom we are under obligations, to raise several hundred of dollars this month. The matter is imperative and must be met. We cannot borrow, as we have nothing to borrow on. Now if each one who is owing us will kindly remit to us what is now due, we will not need to worry longer. We might mail statements to each one, but this means expense and labor. We cannot afford the expense, and our time can be all used other ways to better advantage. So we trust that no more appeal will be needed. Let each one who knows he has not paid for his paper, hasten today to send in his renewal, and in ten days from now we can be assured of means to make our mind easy before Christmas time. Brothers and Sisters whom we have served, please let this have your attention at once. Now—because next week other things will claim your consideration.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Editor Restitution:

We have a small company of believers here who meet each Wednesday evening at some one of our houses and have prayer and praise service. A few evenings ago our subject was love as defined in I Cor. xiii. The love there defined means much more than human affection. One brother presented his views in such a kind spiritual way in a paper he read, that I asked him to let me send his paper to you for publication. It is enclosed.

R. S. DWIGGINS.

Our subject "love" is a theme, without doubt the most stupendous and important of all things to be considered. For love is an attribute of God, an immortal principle, which exists only in divine law; all law being the fulfilment of God's love. It is not to be mentioned with human law; merely human law is chaotic, imperfect and therefore at annity with the law of love.

How are we to know love and its law? It is the simplest thing possible, because it is the nearest to us; its manifestations are omnipotent. It tells us of itself in so many ways that we overlook it. To become Godlike, to know our own divine likeness, in which we are created, is to know what is love.

We should distinguish between human and divine love; human love is a respecter of persons, therefore more or less selfish; God's love, on the contrary, is no respecter of personality, it goes out to all. "He redeemeth our lives from destruction, he crowneth us with loving kindness and tender mercy."

It would be difficult to express the importance of love in our lives so concisely and completely as did Paul in his first epistle to the Corinthians xiii. (new version). Without love we are, indeed, nothing;" it is the key to the kingdom of God, without which there is no hope. So important is this that our heavenly Father—in his plan—gave to mankind an ensample of perfect love as manifested in the life of our Savior, who fulfilled his own definition of perfect love, which reads "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." He emphasized the importance of his mission as an elder brother and Savior, by adding "Ye are my friends, if ye do the things which I command you."

We can see how it was that Jesus was able to pass through the ordeal of crucifixion; nothing but his perfect love could have made it possible; for "he suffered in all things like unto man," and as stated in Hebrews v. 8, "Though he was a Son yet he learned obedience by the things which he suffered." By this we know what love is and what it demands of us; the willingness, if necessary, to follow in Jesus' footsteps.

"Perfect love casteth out fear;" the burthen becomes no longer a burthen and the yoke is made easy." Love seeketh not its own;" "vaunteth not," "is not easily provoked," "Suffereth long and is kind." Love should inspire us in all the affairs and relations of life; without love there is no real happiness, yet we cannot possess it until we first love God and to love him is to obey him and keep his commandments. Then the husband can love the wife, the wife the husband and the parents the children; for love begetteth wisdom, whereby our temporal affairs are adjusted to fruitful ends. With love we cannot want, it "maketh us to lie down in green pastures, it leadeth us beside still waters." Nothing in the affairs of men offers us anything as promising nor as sure, as when we are inspired by God's love. When selfishness in all its forms is cast behind us, and with God's love in our hearts, we find it our greatest pleasure to do good to our fellowmen. "Whoso keepeth his Word, in him, verily, hath the love of God been perfected."

Christ was the personification of divine love, who sits at the right hand of the Father, victorious over sin, sickness and death; utterly sacrificing self that all who will may have eternal life. "Spiritual things are spiritually discerned," and some things we can know intellectually. "We know we have passed out of death into life because we love the brethren." "He that loveth not abideth in death." "Hereby know we love, because he laid down his life for us and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren." "My little children let us not love in Word, neither with the tongue, but in deed and in truth." "Hereby shall we know that we are of the truth and shall assure our heart before him." Much on this topic is to be found in the first epistle of John, which would be profitable to read very often, until the power of its truth has saturated our very being and created in us a thirst for that "fountain of living water, springing up in our hearts unto life."

Seventy-five More.

I receive enquiries as to when Pine Woods Bible Class Book will be printed?

In answer, I will say, when I receive seventy-five more subscriptions, the book can be printed, and sent forth on its mission, to teach the glad tidings. If all who really want it had said so, it could now be out sowing seed. When God's professed servants make his cause a secondary matter, and put it off to a "convenient time," his cause suffers. Now all who really want the book please sit down and write me, as soon as you have read this, and then things will move at once. Don't wait until a more convenient time. God's business demands prompt attention.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Pine Woods Bible Class in Book Form.

I have several times been solicited to have the past lessons of the Class put in Book form.

I have decided to do this, if I can secure enough subscribers to the book to warrant the expense of publishing it.

The book if printed will contain over four hundred pages. How many copies will you take at $1.25 each?

Send your pledges but no money until I can see if sufficient is subscribed for to warrant the expense.

Send your pledges right away, so that the book can be put to press as soon as possible. Address W. H. Wilson, 420 N. Willow Ave., Austin Station Chicago, Ill.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshal., Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for "Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DECEMBER 27, 1905. NUMBER 48.

The Restitution.

The Restitutionist advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

The Flying Years.

Oh years! Oh years! how soon ye fly!
Like eagles sweeping down the sky:
How rapidly your moments pass,
Like sand-grains dropping in the glass.
Brief years like life is still more brief,
A fading flower, a falling leaf,
A passing shade a fleeting gleam,
A thought, a phantom, or a dream:
We greet the sire of yesterday,—
Tomorrow we may pass away.
And leave no track upon the sand,
As thus we tread the wave-washed strand.

But oh, the Everlasting One,
Who marks the ages as they run;
Whose years eternally endure,
Who lives in endless bliss secure;
Though years may pass, and life may end,
This God, this Savior is our Friend:
And we may share his love divine,
And in his endless glory shine.

What years of bliss shall for us wait
When we shall pass the pearly gate,
And in perpetual peace behold
Those streets of paltnes and gold;
And in the endless glory see
The King who died upon the tree
Who bore the cross and won the crown,
And on his Father's throne sits down:
While all heaven's host triumphant sing
And praise the everlasting King.

To that eternal happy home
No shades nor changes e'er shall come;
No sins nor sorrows, doubts nor fears,
Shall cloud the glad eternal years,
But joy unspeakable shall roll
Through every blood-washed, ransomed soul.

And they who, through the passing years,
Have felt earth's sorrows, woes and fears,
Redeemed from earth and purged from sin,
Shall hear the welcome, "Enter in,"
And in those palaces divine,
Shall with the ransomed sing and shine;
Released from sorrows and from fears,
From disappointments, sighs and tears,
With joy their anthems they shall raise,
And sing the Savior's wondrous praise.

Oh, ye who mark each fleeting year,
Your [illegible]
For not with gold and costly gems,
That glean in monarch's diadems,
But through the boundless love of God,
Your souls have been redeemed with blood;
That ransomed, pardoned, cleansed from sin,
You might that endless kingdom win,
And gaze upon the glories there,
And all the joyous rapture share.

Oh years! Oh years! How fast ye fly!
Bringing redemption's morning nigh;
Speed on! Speed on your arrowy flight;
Change eve to morn, and morn to night,
And bring the everlasting day
When tears and sighs shall flee away;
There may we meet, redeemed by Blood,
Within the Paradise of God.
And there, beyond all care and fear,
Hail God's eternal, glad New Year.

Communicated.

Notes by the Way.

After returning home from my trip east, I took a brief rest, preparatory to a trip south.

The first place I visited was Morse Mill, Missouri, located about forty miles south of St. Louis. Bro. Hines met me at De Soto, and conveyed me by carriage to Morse Mill, distant some fifteen miles.

Meetings commenced the night of my arrival, in the neat church building owned by the Church of God, located at that place.

Meetings opened with satisfactory congregations, which increased in size as time went on. The interest also began to grow. Most of my discourses being illustrated by charts, make it much easier to comprehend the thoughts sought to be conveyed to the minds of the hearers. The attention given was fine, and I have good reason to believe that there was seed sown, that will not be lost. Seeing that this is the case, Oh, let us be energetic in the work of the Lord.

"Awake, my soul, stretch every nerve,
And press with vigor on;
A heavenly race demands my zeal,
And an immortal crown."

I had the pleasure of visiting at the homes of several of the members, but stayed nights part of the time with the Hines family, and also with Bro. and Sister John Williams.

Social interviews with those of the household of faith were very pleasant, and profitable also.

"I love thy church, O God!
Her walls before thee stand,
Dear as the apple of thine eye,
And graven on thy hand.
For her my tears will fall,
To her my prayers ascend;
To her my toils and cares be given,
Till toil and care shall end."

The time came when we had to part and say good bye, which was done with hearty hand shakes, and many expressions of good will toward me personally, and for the prosperity of the work that I am engaged in. May God bless his faithful ones at Morse Mill.

The next visit I made was at Fredericktown, Mo. The Church meets in a school house, about six miles out in the country. This is a place in which we always have good meetings. This was my third trip in among them. I made my home with Bro. and Sister Graham, as I did on my two previous trips. There is nothing these people like so well as to hear the Word of God rightly divided. There is one thing sure, these people are not "stay-at-homes," when they know that the "Blessed Hope," is going to be sounded in their ears. It is sweet music to them. The good news of the coming kingdom Jesus preached, is the saving message to all who believe and obey it from the heart, and afterwards live a pure and holy life in harmony with this pure message of life.

"The glad tidings of the kingdom,
Jesus preached in Galilee;
Bade their followers in their mission,
Tell the same to you and me;
Hope and life are in their message,
Peace, and rest, and joy are there;
If believing you receive it,
Run the race with patient care."

These people seem to have a love for those who give their life to preach the glad news. At the close of my last meeting the whole congregation filed past me, to give a final hand shake, while singing:

"We will never say good by in Eden."

Uncle John," having previously arrived, he remained to continue the meetings.

My next visit was at Elvins, Mo. This was a new field entirely. The ancient faith of the gospel was never publicly introduced at this place. Elvin is a land mining town, a very rough place, in every sense of the word. The people have very little regard for sacred things. It is a difficult matter for any denomination to draw a large audience, at this place unless they can get up an excitement, by acting like persons bereft of reason, by screaming, yelling, running, jumping, pounding, falling down in fits, etc. These people only go there for "fun," the same as they expect from the comic antics of a clown in a circus.

Sister Satterfield is a hard working woman, struggling bravely against the adverse things of this life, but always cheered amid the trials of this life, on account of knowing that she is a child of the King eternal, and hence an heir to riches greater than any thing this world can offer. She obeyed the gospel twenty-fours ago, and still holds her steadfastness in the faith, although as far as fellow believers are concerned, she is all alone. Only once in all that time had she ever met a gospel believer. Attempts have been made to draw her into the fellowship of churches, who know not the "joyful sound," but without avail. Never in all her life has she had the privilege of meeting with believers around the table of the Lord. I have met others who should be stronger than she, who have entered Campbellite churches for a church home, and wrecked homes they were. Our Sister by hard work, and careful saving of her earnings, had laid by little by little, small sums of money for the purpose of having me come, when I should get near enough to her, so that it would not cost too much to have me visit her. When she wrote to me, my heart was touched, I said to the brethren, I am going there if I don't get a cent, and have to pay my own expenses; but she did what she could, which is infinitely more than many more comfortably off do.

She hired a hall and had hand bills printed to advertise the meetings but the attendance was small, the number varying from fifteen to thirty persons. Some few seemed to manifest a little interest, but whether anything will ever come from the seed sown is hard to tell, but we hope for the best.

The sister felt sad because her desires had not been met; but yet she said, that she had an easier conscience, in that she had done her duty, and was not responsible, if the people would not give heed to the Word preached. How many have easy consciences on account of duty done?

"In the furrows of thy life
Scatter seed, scatter seed!
Small may be thy humble field,
But a goodly crop 'twill yield;
Sow by kindly word and deed,
Scatter seed, scatter seed!
Up! the morning flies away,
Scatter seed, scatter seed!
Hand of thine must never tire,
Heart must keep its pure desire,
While thy brothers faint and bleed,
Scatter seed, scatter seed!"

I received an invitation from the Baptists of this place to preach for them, after their Sunday school session; their pastor being absent, I consented to do so. After the school service was over I took the rostrum for the purpose of opening the meeting; but before I had a chance to say a word, they all left the house. These are what I would call "run-away Baptists." They left so quick, that it reminded me of the stampeding of a lot of frightened cattle. Dear sister, fight the battle bravely, the conflict won't be long.

"Son of God, thy people's shield,
Must we still thy absence mourn?
Let thy promise be fulfilled,—
Thou hast said, 'I will return.'
As a woman counts the days
Till her absent Lord she see,
Longs and watches, weeps and prays,
So the church must long for thee.
Come, that we may see thee nigh;
Then the sheep will feed in peace;
Hushed forever troubles sigh,
Sin and sorrow's triumph cease."

I next visited the Townsend family at Lebanon, Illinois, located about twenty miles north of St. Louis. This family I first visited nearly four years ago, for the purpose of conducting the funeral service of the father and husband, who had fallen asleep in Jesus.

"Asleep in Jesus! blessed sleep,
From which none ever wakes to weep;
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the last of foes."

On the day following the funeral, I baptized the mother, and Kathryn, her daughter, who have since then held forth their steadfastness and rejoicing in the faith.

Sister Kathryn met me at St. Louis, we then left for Lebanon, by the electricline. Arriving at the family home, a kind reception awaited me by all the family. During my brief sojourn at Lebanon, I can assure you that we had a pleasant time conversing on those topics which lie the nearest to every true believer's heart. While there, I visited College Hill cemetery, where Bro. Townsend awaits his summons from on high.

There are others of this family who have not yet obeyed the gospel. I trust dear ones, that you will not delay, until it is too late. We want to see all the Townsend family on the evergreen shore.

I next started for Mountain Grove, Missouri, by way of St. Louis. While at the Union depot at St. Louis, I met Sister Flora Harris, of Rensselaer, Indiana. It was an agreeable surprise to both of us. Sister Harris is a loyal adherent to the one true faith and hope of the gospel.

At nine o'clock, P. M. Bro. Dale met me at the Mountain Grove depot. Arriving at the family home was welcomed by Sister Dale and daughter.

Meetings were held during my sojourn at Mountain Grove. The attendance all through was satisfactory, and the interest was good. I feel assured that there has been seed sown at that place, which will not be lost.

Bro. and Sister Dale are in earnest in the good work, and sound in the faith. They passed through that terrible flood at Galveston, Texas, which destroyed so much life and property. Their family were all saved, but they have not yet fully revived from the loss of property. It can be truly said of Bro. and Sister Dale:

"Great God, nice eyes with pleasure look
On all the pages of thy book;
There my Redeemer's face I see,
And read his name who died for me."

My next trip was to Cedarville, Mo., by way of Lockwood.

Bro. R. Fyfe met me at Lockwood, with a carriage, and drove me to the family home at Cedarville, some twelve miles distant. On arriving there I was welcomed by Bro. and Sister J. M. Fyfe and family. While at Cedarville I also visited at the homes of two married sons.

Meetings were opened at the Union Church building. Here I met a great deal of prejudice and suspicion. It appears that the different denominations had had a falling out along denominational lines, and were very suspicious of each other, and in a large measure, were scary about inter-denominational visits. I had all this to contend with.

Bro. Fyfe and myself visited the Christian Church on Sunday morning. As the pastor entered the Church, he was told to "look out," there was another preacher present. As he saw me, he said, he is all right, he is a friend of mine. I had met him on a previous occasion, and found him further advanced, than many ministers of that order. He invited me into the pulpit to read the Scriptures, and talk a little while to the congregation. I then announced the meetings I was going to hold. He then backed me up, and told his charge that he wanted them all to attend our meetings, and not to feel that I was preaching dangerous doctrine. They began to attend, and as the meetings advanced, they grew larger, until I had a large number of hearers. The attention to the Word preached was fine. On the last meeting the congregation was large. I presented the life and death question under the question, "Who is your Father?" This was illustrated by two charts. I presented it in a very kind but forcible manner, which took effect. When I got through one man asked the other, What he thought of that? He replied, "I believe it, every word of it." Many people gathered around me with congratulations, and declarations of being benefitted, and extended strong invitations to return. There is much in the manner in which truth is presented, as to whether it will create opposition and prejudice. A pugilistic spirit will create a like spirit in the audience.

My next effort was at Everett, Mo. I was sent for by Sister Chloe Sims. Sister Sims is a niece of our good old brother Stedman Chaplin, who used to edit THE RESTITUTION.

She secured the Baptist church in which to hold meetings. The meetings as far as they went, were a success. After about four discourses I took suddenly sick, and had to close the meetings. I was so sorry, because Everett seemed such a promising place to sow the seed. Sister Sims and husband were so kind and attentive to me while I lay sick at their home. May the Lord add his blessing to them.

The route I have marked out will be next in the State of Kansas, then in Oklahoma, and from there through Texas and Louisiana.

Let all who desire meetings in those places notify me at once. Expenses will be much less when I am in your neighborhood.

Along this route there are isolated ones, who are too poor to sustain the expense, who are so anxious to have their neighbors hear the glad news. I will give you one letter, which is a sample of others which come.

"B——, Texas, Nov. 20, 1905.

Dear Bro. Wilson:

How I wish that I had means to ask you to come and preach the gospel for us. I am alone in the faith here, have not heard a gospel sermon in nearly thirty years. My husband and daughter are both anxious to hear you preach. If you should come to Oklahoma, or Texas, please let me know what it will cost, and if I can possibly get the money would like for you to come and preach for us.

Your Sister in Christ.

KITTIE W——."

These isolated places I have found to be new fields, where the most good can be done. Oh how I wish I was able to visit these needy ones of the Church of God, without charge. I would gladly do so.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

W. H. WILSON.

Hieremias (or "Jremiah").

CHAPTER 15.

1. And the Lord said unto me, If Mousses and Samouel should stand before my face, my soul is not with them; send away this laity and let them depart.

2. And it will be, if they shall have said unto thee, Where shall we go? Thou shalt also say unto them, Thus saith the Lord, Some to death, to death, and some to a sword, to a sword, and some to famine, to famine, and some to captivity, to captivity.

3. And I am going to requite on them four ways, saith Lord; the sword for slaughter and the dogs for robbery, and the wild beasts of the earth and the flying things of the heavens for eating and corruption.

4. And I am going to give them up to necessities in all the kingdoms of the earth, because of Manasseh, son of Ezekias king of Jouda for all the things that he did in Hierousaleem.

5. Who will be sparing of thee, O Hierousaleem? And who will be cowardly in thy presence? Or who will bow down to thee for peace?

6. Thou hast turned away from me, saith the Lord; after whom wilt thou go thy way? And I am going to stretch out my hand and destroy thee; and I shall not remit unto them any more.

7. And I am going to scatter them in dispersions. In gateways of my laity have they been rendered childless; they have destroyed my laity because of their evil-doings.

8. Their widows have been multiplied more than the sand of the sea; I have led wretchedness upon a mother, upon young men at mid-day; I have cast upon her suddenly trembling and haste.

9. She who bringeth forth seven hath become childless; her soul hath been afflicted utterly; her sun hath sat while it is still midday; she hath been put to shame and reproach; I shall give the residue of them to a sword in the sight of their enemies. (Prophet speaks for himself).

10. Woe is mine, O mother, that thou didst bring me forth a certain man of influence, a dicast and a discriminative-judge of all the land; neither have I profitted nor hath any one profitted me; my strength hath failed by reason of those who curse me.

11. May it (the curse) have come to pass, if I have not stood by thee, O thou sole Lord of those whose aim is straight, in a period of their calamities and in a time of their tribulation, for good things against the enemy.

12. Will iron have comprehended? And thy strength is a copper covering. (See 1st chapter) (prophecy resumed).

13. And thy treasures am I going to give for plunder in return for all sins and within all thy borders.

14. And I am going to do bond-service to thine enemies round about thee, in a land which thou hast not known; because fire hath flamed out from mine anger, and upon you will it have burned. (Prophet pleads for himself).

15. O Lord, remember me and shelter me and account me guiltless from those who are persecuting me not in a long-suffering way; know thou that I have been reproached for thy sake

16. By those who set aside thy words. Do thou bring them to a full end, and thy word will be a rejoicing to me and a joy of my heart, because thy name hath been mocked on me, O thou all-controlling Lord.

17. I have not sat in an assembly of those who scoffed, but I have been truly reverent before the face of thy hand; I have sat solitary because I have been filled with bitterness.

18. Why are those who make me to sorrow become strong against me? My blow is a hard one; whence will I have been healed? It hath become to me like lying water as it were; I have no faith.

19. Therefore thus saith the Lord; if thou wilt turn I will also restore thee and thou shalt stand before my face; and if thou leadest out that which is accounted unworthy, thou shalt be as my mouth; and they will turn back unto thee and thou wilt not turn back unto them.

20. And I will give thee to be to this laity like a fortified copper wall as it were; and they will war against thee, because I am with thee to save thee.

21. And to deliver thee out of the hand of the wicked, and I will redeem thee out of the hand of scourges.

COMMENT.

The first six verses are substantially correct in R. V. but not carefully nor scrupulously rendered—compare for yourselves and see. The seventh though is very wide of the mark. There is nothing said about "fanning" them "with a fan" nor about being "weary of repenting" and "in the gates of the land" is connected with the wrong clause of the verse. Should read also "they have destroyed," etc." instead of "I have destroyed," etc. and "I am going to scatter them in dispersion" entirely omitted in R. V.

In the 8th verse "mother" and "young men" are both objects of "I have led wretchedness upon" instead of "the mother of young men" R. V. also "trembling and haste" instead of "anguish and terrors," R. V.

In the 9th verse, instead of "languisheth" R. V. it reads "hath become childless" and "her soul hath been afflicted utterly" instead of "she hath given up the ghost" and reproach" instead of "confounded."

In the 10th verse it reads "a certain man of influence, a dicast and a discriminative judge" instead of "a man of strife and contention of all the earth." For that was Hieremias office "of all the land," not of "all the earth." There is nothing about "lending on usury." Compare the last clause as this is also very different.

The 11th verse does not approximate a translation. Read and compare with the R. V.

The same is true of the 12th.

In the 13th "without price" should read "in return for all thy sins."

The 14th is somewhere near the thought, but compare.

At the 15th verse the prophet resumes his personal plea to the Lord; but it is a very different plea from that given in the R. V. He does not ask the Lord to "avenge" him and he does not say "thy words were found" but something much more consonant with the sense of the plea in the 16th verse, and he gives a good reason for saying what he does, namely, "because thy name hath been invoked on me, O thou, All-controlling Lord" instead of "O Lord God of Hosts" R. V. There is nothing about "eating them." This whole passage in 16th and 16th verses is twisted out of shape in R. V.

In the 17th verse "make merry nor rejoiced" should be "scoffed" and the conclusion should be "but have been truly reverent, etc." a very different thought from the R. V.

And the reason of his sitting "alone" is said to be "because I have been filled with bitterness" another very different thought. There is nothing about his being "filled with indignation" in the verse.

The 18th verse is all wrong. Compare and see for yourselves. R. V. doesn't even get the thought. In the final clause the prophet confesses that he has "no faith" and the Lord addressed him in the 19th verse accordingly, "If thou wilt return, etc." and states the condition upon which he can and will win back the laity and in the 20th verse he restates that he will make him "a copper wall" against them and that they will not be able to prevail or harm him, and the 21st verse contains the promise of ultimate deliverance and redemption; but "the terrible" in the R. V. should be "scourges."

Plymouth, Indiana, Dec. 27, 1905.

With this issue the volume for 1905 is finished. The history of the past year is so vivid in the mind of each one, that to recount its events would seem to be needless. Some of our well-known and able advocates of the faith have fallen under the hand of the enemy death. Have any others been added to fill up the ranks? Have we made all the effort we could as speakers, writers, teachers in our Sunday Schools, any where and every where, to instruct and train others to fill the places made vacant when some fall by the way? If we have failed to do our whole duty—our utmost—in the past year, will we be more active and energetic in the year to come? God will not be satisfied with less than our utmost endeavor. He gave his best, his choicest, his only, for us, to us. We cannot, we dare not, do less for him. Have you consecrated your time, your money, your all, your very self to his cause? He demands this of you. If there has been any holding back in the past, let a new resolve be made that nothing will be left undone in 1906. We thank all of our friends for the support given our work, and we know the Father will reward for each kind act. The contributors to our paper have been in the main kind and forbearing to those differing, yet firm for the truth, and we thank you each, and ask you to not become weary in your good work, but to continue as before, and the Lord bless you every one. We shall do our best, while occupying the position we do to give our patrons the same high class of reading that has been characteristic of our paper in the past. We do not expect to be able to always please all—indeed no Editor quite pleases himself even. So we ask your kind forbearance with any short-comings. Consider a question from all possible sides before you pass judgment. Get over on the side your brother occupies, and take a view from where he stands. Possibly he may have reason to think as he does. Do not be severely critical, but give your brother the same right you claim. God wants us to manifest a large degree of Love one for another. This is impossible with harsh criticism. Let us be kindly affectioned toward one another, forgiving each other, as God for Christ's sake forgave us. With best wishes for you all for 1906, we bid farewell to the past year, and press on to the new, apprehensive yet confident—knowing the coming of our Lord is so much nearer.

Horror upon horror is the history of Russia for the past week. The revolutionists in Moscow have made a stand, and the result has been thousands killed, and immense property loss. St. Petersburg has been comparitively quiet, but part of the time cut off from communication with the world. Reports from Vladivostock are to the effect that the city is in ruins as a result of the uprisings. In various parts of the empire the government is arresting supposed leaders of the revolutionists, and making a desperate effort to stamp it out.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "The Restitution," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

Were you ever placed in a position where an extra call was made urgently demanding that you raise a sum of money on a given day? Did you not then wish that those who were owing you would consider your strait, and send in early what they could, so you could rest easy at night and not have to worry through the day, as the exact time of settlement drew near? We are asking you kindly to consider us in this position. Some have responded, but not quite half enough. We trust that our friends will do all they can. Today is the time to send.

A World of Opportunities.

The above suggests some good thoughts. A world filled with opportunities. I call to mind an old Spanish proverb, viz: "A lost opportunity is one of the three things that never returns." There are a thousand opportunities that relate to this life the loss of which has but little effect as another comes up, if embraced will render us useful or famous. The Civil War developed a Grant, a Sherman and a Sheridan. Their opportunity came and they embraced it, and will go down in history as the great military chiefs. Lincoln and Garfield, though born and reared on the frontier became famous, chiefly because they embraced the opportunity offered. Lincoln with few advantages to learn good English produced in his speeches and papers the clearest English of the age in which he lived. His Gettysburg speech contains 266 words and yet it carries with it the inner thoughts of the great liberator. He said, "We have come here to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that this nation might live. But in a large sense, we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our power to add or detract." It requires some effort to call up the name of the one who delivered the oration for the day. Lincoln's speech is in the minds of many and will so remain as long as the English language is used as the vehicle of thought. I am credibly informed that this speech is preserved in the British museum in London and is one of two selected on account of its pure English. What a lesson we have in the life of Garfield. Born and reared in a log cabin, yet by his own efforts he reached the summit. Few men have been loved as was Garfield. On his death bed it was said, "The American people are bowing at his bed side. And the whole world is waiting at his chamber door. I mention these things to show the young people what may be accomplished if they will but embrace the opportunity as it comes to them. My observations as a teacher lead me to state that if a young man or woman does not want an education you cannot give it to them. If they are determined to get an education you can not prevent it. We must become receptive to good impressions or we will not be benefitted. Too many resolve and resolve and then die the same. Our environments have much to do in shaping our lives. The Catholics boast that if you give them a child until it is fifteen years old it will not depart from the faith of the church. We must rise above our environments and produce a character as God requires.

Adam was created and given an opportunity of elevating himself to the head of the race and becoming the ruler of the earth. His disobedience wrought his downfall and all those who are born of the flesh. Our heavenly Father has given to each son and daughter of Adam an opportunity to become one of the rulers in the "age to come." This opportunity comes but once, and if neglected it will never return. What a sad fate was that of Cain's, who neglected to offer the sacrifice required, and when Abel's was accepted he became angry and murdered his brother. Esau's opportunity to be the one through whom the seed should be called, sold it for a mess of pottage. Saul's opportunity was lost through his wilful disobedience. The Son of Man embraced his opportunity and lived a life that meritted the Father's approbation; "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased, hear ye him." He was tempted like as we are, but sinned not. Though put to death the Father raised him from the dead and is now seated at the right hand of the Father.

Paul though educated a Pharisee became a follower of Christ and a coworker with those whom he had persecuted and gave his consent to their death. Near his death he knew that God had approved of his work. His words are these, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but to all them also that love his appearing." Paul embraced his opportunity and near the end of his life expressed an abiding faith. There are three things that we must do to place ourselves in a justified position before God. Believe the gospel of the kingdom of God which embraces the future ruling of the earth. Repent of your former sins, and be baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. If you have done this you are admonished to "Walk ye in him (Christ)." Don't deceive yourselves with the idea that your baptism is valid if you have been buried in water. Your baptism is valid if your faith was valid.

Your brother in the hope of the gospel of the kingdom of God.

Come, Let Us Reason Together

John xii. 32, 33, 34. "And if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."

"This he said, signifying what death he should die."

"The people answered him, We have heard out of the law that Christ abideth forever: and how sayest thou, The Son of Man must be lifted up? who is this Son of Man?"

Jno. viii. 28, "Then said Jesus unto them, When ye have lifted up the Son of Man, then shall ye know that I am he, and that I do nothing of myself; but as the Father hath taught me, I speak these things."

John iii. 14, 15, "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up; that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have eternal life."

Kindly note that it is only through Christ that we obtain eternal life, eternal life is not inherent by nature nor do we get it through Budha, or Confucius but through Christ and he alone.

John x. 1, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber."

John x. 9, "I am the door; by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and find pasture."

Read again John viii. 28, "Then said Jesus unto them, When ye have lifted up the Son of Man, then shall ye know that I am he, and that I do nothing of myself but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things." Keep in mind this part of the very just read, "When ye have lifted up the Son of Man, then shall ye know that I am he." Now read Mark ib. 11, "And unclean spirits, when they saw him, fell down before him and cried, saying, Thou art the Son of God." Mark i. 34, "And he healed many that were sick of divers diseases, and cast out many devils; and suffered not the devils to speak, because they knew him."

Now we know why Christ would not permit the evil spirits or devils to speak, they knew he was the Son of God and Christ had not been "lifted up" yet "signifying what death he should die," and when he was "lifted up" "then shall ye know that I am he."

Now turn to 1 John iv. and we find how to discern good spirits from evil spirits, verses 3 and 4, "Hereby know ye the Spirit of God. Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, is of God. And every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God; and is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now is it already in the world.

Does not the leader and founder of the sect called Christian Science, also the teachings of that sect claim that Jesus Christ did not come in "the flesh?"

One that knows any thing about Spiritualism cannot deny there exists a phenomena but I deny the source, they say from the dead and my Bible says "the dead know not anything." Eccl. ix. 5; the evil spirits when Christ was on earth knew more than the people, may it not be of this source, I speak of the phenomena of Spiritualism, and I think I possess many proofs that it (Spiritualism) is from the evil spirits or devils.

Howard Giddings.

We now know that if the sun and planetary worlds, that taken together, make what is known as the solar system, were not synchronous in their genesis, the sun must have been in existence prior to the formation of the earth, and the other planets; for it is the sun that holds them in their orbits. The question then arises, why in the genesis of Moses does it appear that the sun, moon and stars were not made till on the fourth day of creative work, and therefore after the formation of the earth. To those engaged in the study of natural sciences this question naturally presents itself. A century ago, it would have been difficult to frame a satisfactory answer.

Today we are happy to record the knowledge gained in the study of natural science, enables us to answer the question; and the answer is not only satisfactory, but it affords a striking confirmation of our belief in the inspiration of the genesis of Moses. In order to make this appear, two lines of investigation are to be followed. One relates to what scientific research has revealed regarding the formation of the earth and the changes that have taken place on, and under its surface, since its formation. The other to the method by which the facts of creation; and the successive manifestations of creative energy, were conveyed to, or born in on the mind of the seer making the record found in the first chapters of Genesis.

As to the first the study of the science of geology reveals much that is of absorbing interest relating to the formation of this earth, and the changes that have taken place in the rocks of which it is composed; revealing and manifesting the power, wisdom and benevolence of the Creator, but for the sake of brevity we refer to those conditions only, having a bearing on the subject under consideration.

An examination of the rocks found in the outer crust of the earth reveal the fact that the thermal conditions were once very different from those that obtain now. The entire mass of matter constituting the earth was so hot as to be incompatible with the existence of life in any form, either vegetable or animal. Water existed only in the form of vapor; or of those gases that in combination make water, and even the matter of which the rocks are composed was molten—melted.

The change from this superthermal condition, to the condition that now obtains on this earth, has been very gradual. As the cooling process proceeded solid rocks were formed; vapor was condensed, forming water; and as soon as thermal conditions compatible with the existence of life were reached, we find in the rocks the organic remains of living things, both vegetable and animal. In the rocks of earliest formation containing organic remains; we find only the lower or simpler forms of organic life, vegetable and animal, to be followed by those of more complex organisms pari passu with the improvement in environment, till at last the climax was reached in a paradise (the Garden of Eden) on the one side; and the primal pair of the human race (Adam and Eve) on the other.

Turning now to the method by which the operations of the creative energy were revealed to the human instrumentality recording the same, we find that it is the opinion of many of those, having given the subject careful consideration, that it was at least in part by vision or pictorial representation; that the days of the Mosaic record were not days of 24 hours, but were long periods of time and that each period was marked by an epoch, and was characterized by a manifestation of creative energy suited to the conditions that obtained on the earth at that particular stage of its development; and as the narrative of creation proceeds visions or pictorial representations of the earth as it would appear to an intelligent observer, pass before the eye of the seer.

And God said let there be, and I beheld and it was so. If the foregoing be conceded then draw a mental picture of this earth, with the waters of all its oceans, seas and rivers converted into vapor and enshrouding it. The sun's rays cannot penetrate it. Darkness prevails. But changes are gradually taking place. The density of the earth's envelope is diminishing. The sun's rays begin to penetrate it. Accordingly the first recorded change is the introduction of light. God said let there be light. (I beheld) and there was light. This was the work of the first period.

Another long lapse of time, and a portion of the vapor is condensed, forming water under the firmament, while the vapor that remains as such, floats in the higher regions of the atmosphere—water above the firmament. So ends the work of the second period.

After another long lapse of time, the waters below the firmament have so increased that seas are formed, but vapor enough remains to obstruct the view and the heavenly bodies are not yet visible to one stationed on the earth. Dry land appears and conditions arise favorable to the introduction of vegetable life, and God said let the earth bring forth the herb yielded seed and the fruit tree yielded fruit after his kind * * * And it was so. Completing the work of the third period.

Another lapse of time and condensation is complete. The clouds are gone, the heavenly bodies would be visible to the eye of an observer standing on the earth. And God said let there be lights in the heaven * * * And God made (or established) two great lights, and he made the stars also.

No doubt there was other creative work done in the fourth period, but in a pictorial representation of it, a view of those shining orbs, that in all previous visions, had been invisible, would have been well calculated to arrest the attention, and take precedence of all other changes.

We have now followed this line of thought as far as the object for which this inquiry was instituted requires: and we think this method of accounting for the naming of the sun, moon and stars, on the fourth day in the Mosaic record is at least a plausible one. And if it be allowed, as remarked in the outset, it affords a striking confirmation of the inspiration of the Mosaic record.

Indeed the record found in the rocks agrees with and corroborates the record of Moses; and the former naturally divides into eras, or epochs, corresponding to the periods of the latter. In both there is a marked progress, higher and more complex forms of organic life succeeding to lower as the narrative proceeds.

Dear Restitution:

Dear old welcome friend of the many years in the past. I wish we could have had a Christmas Love Feast this year. Last year I looked for it but was disappointed. It is such a comfort and cheer to the many isolated ones scattered all over the country.

Dear Brother Underwood, I thank you gratefully for sending me the paper the past year, but I am just as needy, and just as hungry for the true bread of life at the close of 1905 as in the past. I wish I could pay for the paper, but I cannot, as I am in my old age dependent upon the brethren and sisters in the church for my living. I do thank my Heavenly Father every day for what they have already done so kindly and lovingly for me, although so unworthy.

God bless you all in your work and labor of love

Miss R. Beardsley.

[We will say to our aged Sister and all others, that we will gladly find the room for all the Love Feast letters sent us.—Ed.

A Fatal Mistake.

Two bright boys were on the horse-car with me one day. They were dressed with care, and one would think, I am sure, that they were watchfully cared for in their homes. Boys and girls always attract me, and these boys had faces that made me like them at once. They had pleasant voices, too, and I was not sorry when the crowding of the car pushed them nearer me. The first thing that I heard distinctly startled me. The taller—I think the older—of the two said, "I was lucky this morning! I got a ride downtown free."

"No such luck ever happens to me," said the other. "Nor very often to me; the conductors are awfully sharp."

I've been sorry and anxious about those two boys ever since, for they have the beginning of a very fatal disease. Cheating in little things makes boys ready for stealing.—King's Own.

Zeal and Knowledge.

A young minister came into a pulpit full of zeal for social reform. A business man said to him kindly: "Now you are going to discuss the ethics of business. By way of preparation you ought to know how business is done. If you will come to my countingroom, I will give you an opportunity to learn all that can be known about the conduct of our business and the condition of all who are engaged in it." The invitation was never accepted; and the zeal of the young man, having no basis in knowledge, soon faded away.

If we are living so as to make the tasks of those around us less heavy, their hearts a little lighter, their souls more sure of God, then we are living rightly, and the question "Is life worth living?" will never occur to our minds as a pertinent one. That inquiry belongs to those who are not doing much to make it so, for themselves or others.

Peter or Paul?

When the Lord Jesus Christ said to Peter, "Feed my sheep," his first question was, "And what shall this man do?" There are persons who seem to be successors of Peter who are asking the same question and meddling in the same way. When the Lord Jesus spoke to Saul of Tarsus he said, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Peter received rebuke for his meddling; Paul received instruction for his submission. Which example do you wish to imitate?

There are multitudes who are much more anxious to know about other people's work than they are to do their own. They like to manage, control, oversee, direct, and to tell what "this man" shall do. There are others who are not so anxious to know what "this man" should do, but whose great ambition is to know what they themselves must do—what they must do to be saved, and what they must do after they are saved.

The Lord is pleased to hear the question, "What wilt thou have me to do?" but it does not appear that he has ever paid much regard to the question, "What shall this man do?" The Lord can hold communication with each man for himself. It is not necessary that you should know precisely what the Lord wishes your neighbor to do, any more than it is necessary that you should handle the money which the Lord wishes your neighbor to have. He can teach that man directly the things he wants him to know, and he can give him directly the things he wants him to receive. Let each one for himself seriously enquire of the Lord not "What shall this man" or that man do, but "What wilt thou have me to do?"—The Christian.

Resisted by God.

No man can resist God: no man can prosper if resisted by God. The apostle tells us that God "resisteth the proud." They may be rich, they may be respected; they may be honored and honorable, but God is against them. Any man who is proud has God standing in his way—He "resisteth the proud."

We may think we can succeed while God goes against us, but it is impossible. Heaven and earth are too weak to go forward when Almighty God resists. Are we willing to run the risk of His resisting us in our course? Who ever hardened himself against God and prospered? Where, in all the world's history, can a man be found who was strong enough to cope with the Almighty? Let us humble ourselves under the mighty hand of God, and pray that he who "resisteth the proud" may be our friend and helper; may take our part against our enemies, and deliver us from our foes, our sins, and ourselves. —The Christian.

Wholesome Neglect.

An eminent minister used to say that the devil got rid of most of the best ministers by patting them on the head and making them work themselves to death. Plenty of people have been thus worked to death while less popular people were neglected, allowed to live on, and do good work for years. Good singers sing themselves to death, while those whose voices are less melodious are allowed to live and sing on. Too much popularity is unprofitable.

Be thankful for the obscurity that allows your faults to be unnoticed; the neglect that keeps you humble before God; the unpopularity which allows you time for rest and meditation; and the lowly lot which saves you from envy, and delivers you from many a fall and many a danger.—H. L. H. Christian.

Becoming Like Christ.

A beautiful statue stands in the market place. It is that of a Greek slave girl, but she is well-dressed, tidy and handsome. A dirty, forlorn, ragged slave girl passes by. She sees the statue, stops and gazes at it in rapt admiration. She goes home, washes her face, and combs her hair. Another day she stops in passing to look at the statue. Next day her tattered clothes are washed and mended.

Each day she stops to look at the statue, and each next day she has imitated some of its beauties, until the dirty, ragged slave becomes completely transformed—she becomes another girl.

This is the way Christ teaches. He does not hurl his own individuality upon others; he simply lives and loves and works before men, not to be seen of them, but to inspire to a holy emulation.

For the New Year.

Another year! another year!
Has borne its record to the skies.
Another year! another year,
Untried, unproved, before us lies:
We hail with smiles its dawning ray—
How shall we meet its final day?

Another year, another year!
Its squandered hours will ne'er return.
Oh! many a heart must spend with fear
Or memory's blotted page to turn.
No record from the Book will smile,
Not one erasure may be made.

Another year, another year!
How many a grief has marked its flight!
Some who a year ago were here,
To-day repose in dust and death in night,
While many blessings crowned your
Have thrown me more to grieve here.

Another year, another year!
Oh! many a blessing, too, was given,
But let us look on how to cheer,
And strive to do the joy of heaven
But then, too, humble in the past,
We [illegible] at last.

Another year, another year!
Our years have lingered on the past,
Some [illegible] still [illegible]

Oh! to [illegible] that day
May come, no pared to pass away.

The Union of the Two Houses.

Many suppose that the union of the two houses or kingdoms into which God's chosen people were divided during the reign of Rehoboam, when the Ten Tribes seceded, was brought about when the Jews returned from their seventy years captivity in Babylon. If this conclusion be admitted then some other conclusions must logically follow. If the union of the two houses took place then, no future union is foreshown by the prophets; and Ezek. xxvii 20 25 must be made to fit in at this crisis of the history of the two houses. This, David Baron, in a tract before me tried to do, or [illegible] this prophecy in proof of this theory. No writer or talker during all the years of controversy on this point, have attempted to give an exposition of this prophecy. If he has it has not fallen under my notice, though I have heard and read a great deal on that side of the question. The prophecy is simply quoted and a few assertions made in the face of plain facts. If the union took place under the decrees of Cyrus, Israel and Judah have been for about 2400 years dwelling in their own land upon the "mountains of Israel"—are there to-day and one king reigning over them, and he God's servant David! The united nation also walking in the Lord's judgments and observing his statutes, being cleansed from all their sins. Who does not know that such a condition of the two houses, as portrayed by the prophet, has not since the return from Babylon, existed? The restoration and blessing and reformation as predicted here and in numerous parallel prophecies are to be permanent—no more national apostasies, and consequent captivities, and dispersions foreshown to be the condition and lot of the confederated tribes.

It is no wonder that in the light of these facts that men, who flippantly assert that God is done with Israel after the flesh and nationally drop this and similar prophecies and set themselves to the [illegible] showing that certain prophecies had their fulfilment in the return of the Jews from Babylon, and of asserting that in connection with this return a sufficient number fell away to Judah from the Ten Tribes to constitute a united nation by representation. "Representation" as used by these writers is a very convenient word, but I feel sure that it betrays a good deal of ignorance in those who would deal with this "Jew question" as it is sometimes called by those who refuse to make a distinction between Judah and Israel. It is but the merest guess or jumping at a conclusion to assert that Israel of the Ten Tribes is right before us in a people known as the Jews, and that to identify them in a people apart from these is worse than useless, even wicked, and the theory a latter day delusion!

There is such a thing as an objection or argument, that when urged against an opposing theory is fatal to that theory against which it is brought. Such an objection or argument is said to be, by logicians, insurmountable or insurmountable, like the fortress of Gibraltar which Spain covets, but could only assail in vain. Such is the nature of the argument as found in Ezekiel xxxvii. Here is a plain prophecy of a future gathering, union and exaltation to national greatness of the two houses Judah and Israel. No exegete, however skillful, can show that this prophecy met its fulfilment at the time of the return of Judah from Babylon; and every expositor on that side of the question feels the force of the argument as against him to such a degree that he drops it without an exposition. Seeing then that this argument for a future restoration and union of the two houses, is unassailable what ought the advocates of the Babylonian theory to do? Yield the point of course. But, what will they do? They will continue a hopeless assault. But it may be asked, Are they carrying on the discussion without any show of argument? Is their noise merely declamation? To be fair with them, I will say they bring what in their estimation is proof of their side of the question—argument that bears down all opposition or opposing argument, except Ezekiel xxxvii. This in their consciousness is not disposed of but remains as a kind of a thorn in their side. They only say that this prophecy was fulfilled, or in some way fulfilled. They do not try to show this because it involves too much. They must show that the two kingdoms as such were united at that time; that united they were ruled over by one king called David. That in union they become a righteous nation, cleansed from all their sins; and that they and their children, and their children's children would dwell in the land forever. Here are four particulars constituting the very warp and woof of the prophecy not fulfilled at the return of the Jews from their captivity in Babylon. Without these four particulars there is nothing left to meet a fulfilment at any time past or future. Notwithstanding the failure to make this prophecy and others of like import apply to that return it is still claimed that there was a gathering, restoration and union of Judah and Israel at that time, and inspired history is appealed to in proof of these points. The design of these writers is to show that numerous members of the ten-tribed kingdom from time to time fell away to the Kingdom of Judah. These writers in order to prepare the way for their conclusion or to give it greater weight go back of the dates of Cyrus' edicts, even back to near the time of the accession of the ten tribes. Our attention is called to 2 Chron. xi. 17 which states that the Levites left their suburbs and their possession, and came to Judah and Jerusalem, and that after them, out of all the tribes of Israel such as set their hearts to seek the Lord came to Jerusalem to sacrifice unto the God of their fathers. This falling of Israelites to Judah is limited to three years, the length of time that Rehoboam walked in the way of David and Solomon.

It is also stated that in the days of Asa there were gathered to Judah out of Ephraim and Manasseh and out of Simeon; for they fell to him out of Israel in abundance when they saw that the Lord his God was with him. 2 Chron. xv. 9. There are several other mentions of additions to Judah from the ten tribes. This all amounts to nothing in point of argument. It matters not if a half of a million left Israel and identified themselves with Judah while the two kingdoms existed side by side. Let Elder Baron and those who hold with him emphasize the word "abundance" all that it will bear, the disproof of their theory is right before their eyes in the language they quote. They are so wedded to their notion that Israel is with Judah by representation, that they are blind to the plainer kind of proof on the other side.

1. The Bible nowhere affirms that these fragments of the Ten Tribes are the ten tribes or Ephraim.

2. The passages quoted teach that Israel existed apart from the groups that from time to time allied themselves with Judah. These seceders, however numerous, are "out of Israel," and "fell to Judah." Since the great famine in Ireland in 1846, hundreds of thousands of Irish people have come out of that nation—have fallen in abundance to the Americans. No one would think of affirming that the Irish nation is here in America, and not in the Emerald Isle. Current history still has to treat the people of that country as the Irish nation, and classes those who have come here as Americans.

3. Those of the ten tribes who went and joined Judah on religious grounds did so while the kingdom of Israel existed as an independent government, between the time when Jeroboam founded it and he captivity as effected by Shalmanezer; covering a period of 255 years. If this constitutes a union of the two houses, be it noted, then that this union, if union it is, was effected before the return of Judah from Babylon, and in fact before Judah's captivity. Then why talk of a restoration and union of the two kingdoms when Judah went back from Babylon, and why say that the "envy and rivalry between the two kingdoms ended with the return. This envy and rivalry is represented as ceasing after the "rod out of the stem of Jesse and branch out of his roots shall come forth. Isa. xi. 1. That the person brought to view under these beautiful figures of speech, and in the verses following described as a beneficent, just and wise ruler, is no other than Jesus, great David's greater Son. To this view of this part of the prophecy I have never come across a dissenting view in all my reading. V. 10, "In that day," and this phrase is repeated in verse 11—this wise ruler will accomplish certain things, among these the "assembling of the outcasts of Israel and gathering together the dispersed of Judah." It is in that day, the day of the Messiah that "the envy of Ephraim (ten tribes) departs and the adversaries of Judah cut off." It is in that day Ephraim shall not envy Judah and Judah shall not vex Ephraim. This fraternal feeling of the rival houses was not brought about at the time of the first advent nor at the earlier date of the return of Judah from Babylon. At the return the Branch had not come forth, and yet, in the face of this fact Elder Baron says the rivalry of the two houses ended then, i. e. at the return from Babylon.

4. Following this recovery of the two houses there is to be such a condition of things as has never obtained in the history of the past from the date of Israel's captivity down to the present time. This glowing description of an era when the rivalry of the houses was to cease must relate to the future when the Messiah shall reign gloriously in Jerusalem, and all the world be at peace. What if many of the Ten Tribes allied themselves with Judah while the two kingdoms existed side by side; what, if as is claimed, some went out of Media and joined Judah's returning captives? Israel is still left to be sifted among the nations, but with the assurance that not the least grain or stone shall fall upon the earth. This latter sentence is a promise of preservation, and this with a view to their national restoration, a matter of promise also as set forth in numerous passages, two of which have already been quoted.

I will close by stating that the names of Judah and Israel are not properly synonyms. Israel is generic; Judah is not. The former is common to all the tribes, the latter is applied to Judah, Benjamin and Levi, but never to the ten tribes. All Jews are Israelites, but all Israelites are not Jews. All oaks are trees, but all trees are not oaks. No one can reason logically unless he learns to distinguish between things that differ. Genus and species must not be confounded; neither in the volume of inspiration, nor in the volume of nature. The fact that some of the ten tribes falling to Judah and becoming absorbed were then classed as Jews does not prove that Judah and Israel are equivolent names in meaning and usage. Frenchmen coming to the United States soon rank as Americans, but how foolish it would be and wide of the truth to conclude therefore that all Americans are Frenchmen.

Dear brothers and sisters:

Do we realize that another year is most gone, and with it some of the old soldiers of the cross have passed away. Who can tell the ones that will be next to go. The enemy death is still in our land, and it may be you or it may be me that he will claim for his next victim. Are we ready? Have we got on the robe of righteousness? Are our lamps trimmed and burning? Could we say like Paul in 2 Tim. iv. 7, I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord; the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day. And not to me only but to all them also that love his appearing.

Do we long for his coming, for the time when righteousness will cover the earth as the waters that cover the face of the mighty deep. When none shall say Know the Lord, for all shall know him from the least to the greatest. Blessed day; soon may it come. Then God will wipe all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow or crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things shall be passed away.

What a glorious hope is the Christian hope. How it cheers us up in times of trouble, and we can rejoice and sing "Lift up your heads, despondeng pilgrim, fling to the wind your needless fears. He who has said redemption is nearing, soon is to reign a thousand years."

Just think of it—Christ to be our King, and rule the world in righteousness a thousand years. Then he will restore all things, and the desert shall blossom like the rose, and Paradise will be restored.

Then with these blessed promises before us, let us be of good cheer, and put on the whole armor of God, and in due time we shall reap the reward, and enjoy the home, and wear the crown that God will give to all the faithful.

Yours in the hope.
MRS. M. A. CALDER.

Editor Restitution:

It has been some time since you have heard from me, but I am busy the whole year round working for the Master, and love to read the dear old story of Jesus and his love. Antichrist has been revealed in the past two years more than ever before, the hypocrites and mockers are doing their best now; but dear ones in Christ stand fast, for it will not be long till our change comes. Then the heirs of the kingdom shall live and reign with Christ on the earth. Then the wicked one and the folly stricken followers will be consumed into smoke.

I stand firm to the faith once delivered to the saints. I come in contact with the enemy every day, but I never take a back seat for any of them, not even the priest of Baal. All he could say was "Well woman, I pity you." I told him that I pitied him ten times more than he could me, for I knew he knew better if he would give up the false shepherdship. But how long will a lamp burn without oil. So keep your lamps trimmed and burning—filled to the brim with the love of Jesus, and feed the hungry souls, and be ever ready to lend to those who need the lamp light of life. Press toward the mark; make your calling and election sure. Remember the cross of Christ is the power of God to them that believe. Read 1 Cor. i. and not only read but study it thoroughly, for there are a great many Bible readers, and when you get them in conversation you soon see they are not students. Some say they never have any time, and others say it is something [illegible] cannot understand. This is because they read and think of their worldly affairs at the same time.

If we are grafted into Christ then we have eternal life abiding in us. We have come out from the Adamic curse. What would be the use of putting on Christ if we only attain the curse of the first Adam. If I did not belong to God by having put on Christ, I never would write this word of greeting, but the adversary could have his way. I would be numbered with the dead bodies long ago; but thanks be to God who has the victory over death and the devil, I am hale and hearty, and able to stand my grounds against the workers of darkness. My love is great toward those who love God.

I send a hearty Christmas greeting to all.

Your sister in Christ.
MRS. C. CORLENTZ.

Let every man learn that everything in nature goes by law, and not by luck, and that what he sows he reaps.—Emerson.

In Memory of Ray C. West.

The subject of this obituary fell asleep in Jesus Sunday afternoon after a brief life of little more than twenty-five years. After his interment on Tuesday his sister, Mrs. Gault of Morse, requested me to write a sketch of those things that were especially characteristic of his life. Other members of the family have since expressed their wishes in the same direction.

I write these lines most cheerfully because I had opportunity to know the deeper things of Ray's character better perhaps than any other outside of his immediate family. Some years ago, I remarked that I regarded Ray West as, without exception, the finest young man in Crowley. I have had no reason to lower this estimate.

In saying this I do not under-estimate the fineness of a number of other young men. Crowley has several who are clean and true, and free from bad habits. Ray was one of them. There are not a few who are sociable and companionable. Ray was one of them. Ray was so as much as they. Where there was misery and suffering he was one of those who were practically sympathetic. Upon a moral basis, that of the scripture I "Good Works," he was in the circle that is proud of character and makes it practical.

The true religious nature has morality only as one of its elements. Faith in the Divine, and works built upon this faith is far above mere morality. Ray was early a believer and he lived the Berean life, not only searching to find whether those things were true, but largely searching to find what things were true. He wanted the Truth, the One Faith, and nothing less.

Ray was early a studious Sunday School scholar. Later he was one of the most punctual in Christian Endeavor services. All the while he was seeking to find a substantial Bible basis. With him it was not merely faith in general, but a correct and deep faith. He learned to believe not merely that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, but from the heart that Jesus is the Christ, the Anointed, the promised Messiah. He learned to realize that the messiahship involves the question of the "Gospel of the Kingdom" and that in this lies God's plan of salvation. His faith grasped the resurrection thought. Jesus was the first-fruits, one risen for eternity before all else. Next, when Jesus enters upon his second presence, when he comes again, his very own, the bride of the Savior, shall be called from the dead or gathered from among the living of all parts of the earth, to put on immortality. Blessed sleep from which none ever wakes to weep. Then comes the period of their labors, as priests and kings with the Lord. At its close opens the final stage with the general resurrection and the judgment period, at the conclusion of which all the incorrigibly wicked will have entered gehenna destruction, the second death. This is the point to which the apostle refers when he says that then cometh the end, when Jesus shall have put down all authority and power, and shall have destroyed the last enemy, death. Some believe that all the human family will eventually be saved, but Ray told me not long before he left for Texas that he could not understand the Bible otherwise than that some at least would enter eternal death.

There are two distinct religious systems, that of spiritualism and that of the Bible, involving a resurrection. Ray was in no sense a spiritualist, in whole or in part. He believed with the apostle, as told in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, that Abel, Noah, Abraham, Moses, David and many others had through faith and good works obtained a good record, but had not received the promise, God having provided a better thing that they without us should not be made perfect. In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet sound, the dead in Christ and the living in Christ shall be together immortalized. Ray had no faith in a sky kingdom for the human family. He did not believe that there are ghosts of men to go to heaven or hell at death, staying there until the resurrection for judgment and reward. I know of no peculiar passage in the Bible that he had not studied and mastered.

We had studied together the twelfth chapter of Ecclesiastes, especially the seventh verse. From Daniel we learned that man's breath is in God's hand. The Psalmist informed us that God takes away man's breath, he dies and returns to his dust and that when his breath goes forth and he returns to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish. Solomon taught us in this very Ecclesiastes, third and ninth chapters, that by nature and without any hereafter, man and the beast are alike, they have the same kind of breath, as the one dieth so dieth the other. The word spirit in the last chapter is the same word in the original as breath above and should be thus translated. The conclusion in the last two verses is in another vein. Fear God and keep his commandments. God shall bring every work into judgment.

Likewise are there several New Testament passages that we studied carefully and comparatively, and Ray seemed to possess a full appreciation of the complete harmony of the Word of God, when the few difficulties that frail man has made are removed.

He had long believed that he ought to be baptized and about a year ago he put on Christ by being buried into his name, rising in newness of life. He afterward united with a church at Waco, living a true Christlike life until he was called to lay it down to await the summons again to life when Jesus comes.—J. G. Haupt, in Crowley, La., Signal.

The revolutions of human nature are these, and not much to brag of: Poverty begat Necessity; Necessity begat Convenience; Convenience begat Pleasure; Pleasure begat Luxury; Luxury begat Riot and Disease; and these between them both begat Poverty again.

Editor Restitution:

Dear Brothers and Sisters scattered from Maine to California: A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and Jesus our Lord.

The last year has been a year of sorrow to many of our dear brethren and sisters. Oh, how sad to hear of the death of our preaching brethren. Of our knowledge of the old soldiers dropping out of our ranks. To begin with W. J. Orem, Kansas; J. C. Kimsey, Arizona; L. C. Chase, Michigan, J. S. Hatch, Indiana; Brother Barber, Pennsylvania. I ask myself the question, who will be the next one to follow these old soldiers—is it I? I was acquainted with all these except Brother Barber, but I was well acquainted with his teachings, and he died strong in the faith, as did all the rest of these worthy ones who have spent all their means, and made themselves nearly poverty stricken, and some of them would have to go the poor house, if death had not released them from their toil and labor. But they are not dead, they are only fallen asleep.

Onward Christian Soldiers, as Sister Harriet E. Boice of Champaign, Ill., said, of which I read in THE RESTITUTION. Our Sister's views are very good, and a good thing to do for the young. But what will we do for the old worn out preachers. Them who have taken their families and lives in their hands, and have emigrated to the westward, and spent all their means in the proclamation of the gospel? Who believed the gospel was not to be preached in Jerusalem, Judea, and Samaria only, but to the uttermost parts of the earth.

Will we turn them out in the cold without shelter, clothing or food to starve, as some men treat an old worn out horse.

While I have not done very much preaching this year, only baptized 4 persons, and preached about 45 sermons. On Oct. 9, I buried two more young men into the all saving name of Jesus Christ at Blush, Mo. I had the pleasure of hearing S. A. Cooper, whom I baptized a year ago, preach as good a sermon on History and Immortality as I ever heard. While he has a good English education, he has also studied to correctly divide the Word of truth. That is what counts in preaching, to make people see the truth.

Well dear ones, I am 73 years old past, but I am just as determined to win the prize of the high calling in Christ Jesus as at any time in my life. It will be only those who run to the end of the Christian race who will win the prize. I ask an interest in the prayers of all God's children that my faith fail not.

Now brethren, look up your account and see if it is not time to renew. My time is up, and I enclose in this money to renew. Dear brethren, don't ask Brother Underwood to wait on you any longer, and do not let him ask you for it again. It only takes one time to pay in, so do pay promptly all you owe him. Stop tobacco, coffee and ten bills long enough to raise one dollar and a half and pay for your paper. Uncle John Foore says for all to pay up and not to be asked any more, but pay all up and ahead for 1906.

Again I will say, A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. God be with you till we meet—if not in this life, in the life to come.

JOHN FOORE.

Seventy-five More.

I receive enquiries as to when Pine Woods Bible Class Book will be printed?

In answer, I will say, when I receive seventy-five more subscriptions, the book can be printed, and sent forth on its mission, to teach the glad tidings. If all who really want it had said so, it could now be out sowing seed. When God's professed servants make his cause a secondary matter, and put it off to a "convenient time," his cause suffers. Now all who really want the book please sit down and write me, as soon as you have read this, and then things will move at once. Don't wait until a more convenient time. God's business demands prompt attention.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

W. H. WILSON.

Pine Woods Bible Class in Book Form.

I have several times been solicited to have the past lessons of the Class put in Book form.

I have decided to do this, if I can secure enough subscribers to the book to warrant the expense of publishing it.

The book if printed will contain over four hundred pages. How many copies will you take at $1.25 each?

Send your pledges but no money until I can see if sufficient is subscribed for to warrant the expense.

Send your pledges right away, so that the book can be put to press as soon as possible. Address W. H. Wilson, 420 N. Willow Ave., Austin Station Chicago, Ill.

We are called upon by persons to whom we are under obligations, to raise several hundred of dollars this month. The matter is imperative and must be met. We cannot borrow, as we have nothing to borrow on. Now if each one who is owing us will kindly remit to us what is now due, we will not need to worry longer. We might mail statements to each one, but this means expense and labor. We cannot afford the expense, and our time can be all used other ways to better advantage. So we trust that no more appeal will be needed. Let each one who knows he has not paid for his paper, hasten today to send in his renewal, and in ten days from now we can be assured of means to make our mind easy before Christmas time. Brothers and Sisters whom we have served, please let this have your attention at once. Now—because next week other things will claim your consideration.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us about, give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M Joblin, 624 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, O.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

A Backward Look.

"Add ye year to year." Isaiah xxxviii.

So goes the old year forever, no more
A King with no mercy to rule,
As grey a destruction, when moves
His mother of earth in wrath:
In stately sequence they have gone
The empires round the mid-new ribbon,
The old year passing into rest,
The new year comes to sit on the throne.

Within the hours of the year
While hands the sorrow threaded red
That in the time-glass ever speeds
Should we look back on the years
Whereon [illegible]
Or should we gaze [illegible]
And see what is never to be?

Ages backward! Let us [illegible]
Look backward at the receding hills
Ere yet old Time with gentle grace
With darting hair the distance fills
Count now the heights which life goals
Which not been ours to win and keep.
Have that we in our thinking souls
Feared that the [illegible]

Now the horizon widens we stand
Seeing but a path all smooth and clear,
Where frowning hill and valley lie
And may hand we light to bear.
Could we go back! Ah, might we go
Once more upon the dwindling way,
The trip should not [illegible]
The times, now, of yesterday.

So, in the temple of the years
We come back at the ending view
The composite of hands and tears
Then turn to face the roadway new.
The new year comes, we welcome a King
Apparelled in rich stuffs, and gold—
Grant that into it we may bring
The good we garnered from the old.

ork out Your own Salvation.

ue have presented to us today specular situation. Men and n claiming to be followers of and the only thing they have w for it is, they have their name ed on some church book. They their quarterly dues and live as rely and contentedly as if they w themselves to be saved. They seem to have no thought that they must "work out their own salvation." There are certain sects who put this question to their congregation, viz: "How many know themselves saved now?" I was in an audience some time ago when this question was asked, nearly the whole audience rose. I remained seated. When the audience was dismissed the preacher came to me and asked me why I did not rise. I answered, I do not believe your proposition. If we are saved now, why do anything more? These people I have never learned Peter's addition sum. Neither have they learned to be diligent. To my mind it is a very dangerous position to occupy.

"The situation that has not its duty, its ideal, was never yet occupied by man. Yes, here in this poor, miserable, hampered, despicable, actual, wherein thou even now standest, here or nowhere is thy ideal; work it out therefrom; and working, believe, live, be free."—Carlyle. The above selection expresses my thoughts of a true Christian life. Paul in his letter to Timothy says, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." This was not said early in his ministry, but just before he suffered martyrdom. When he knew he could do nothing more for Christ and the Church he expressed a certainty of his salvation. The peculiar situation before us now is that the churches promise salvation to those who take protection in their fold. How many thousands are deceived in this manner. To me it is a sort of parasitism. Cling to some body and draw nourishment from it and live. Or take shelter in some coast off shell and live the life of the hermit crab. Parasites are found every where. We have to fight them from our vegetation and fruit or we will not get our share of what we plant. We have young men of today who live just this kind of life. They are known as the son of John Jones and get their subsistance from him. Labor to them is degrading. To belong to some fashionable club and spend father's money is the height of their ambition. This would be a miserable world indeed if made up of such persons. There are certain plants—the Dodder for instance, which lives a parasitical existence. It seems to start out with good intentions, but soon clasps and lives off of the object to which it clings. Webster says, It is a leafless paragitical vine with yellowish threadlike stems. It attaches itself to some other plant, as the flax, goldenrod, etc., and decaying at the root, is nourished by the plant that supports it. All that the parasite seems to want is food and shelter. In getting these it seems satisfied.

For twenty-five years I have lived an isolated life. In doing so I have found protection only in defending the truth. I have been offered a home among the religionists, but did not accept knowing they had no truth. No isolated brother or sister can live the life of a parasite. The naturalist tells us of the Hermit Crab. Its peculiarity is that it takes up its abode in the cast-off shell of some other animal. The creature lives a solitary but not an inactive life. Those who have visited the seaside have observed that the crab is a very active animal and is well prepared for self defense. To give up this active life for that of a hermit is sacrificing a great deal. And naturalists tell us that the hermit crab degenerates and loses largely the means that nature provided them with. "Any principle which secures the safety of the individual without personal effort or the vital exercise of faculty is disastrous to moral character." Those who are satisfied with this parasitical doctrine of salvation do so at their own expense. Our heavenly Father has given us the means of living an active, aggressive life and to forfeit it means degeneration. The active business man will succeed where the careless indifferent one will fail. When Jesus was baptized he was tempted and during the remainder of his life he was active. While his three apostles slept he gained the great victory over self. What an example we have in the lives of the apostles. When they were called before magistrates and commanded not to preach in the name of Jesus any more they answered, "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God. Judge ye. For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard. Acts iv. 19, 20. We are admonished that it is through much tribulation that we enter the kingdom of God.

The life of the apostle Paul teaches a very important lesson. In writing to the Corinthians he says that he had been in labors more abundant, in stripes above measure in prisons more frequent, in deaths oft. Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day I have been in the deep; in journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by my own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren. In weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness. Besides those things that are without, that which cometh upon me daily, the care of all the churches. With all the above what an earnest, patient worker the apostle was. Well could he say, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." The lives of such men as the apostle Paul should remind us that there is much for us to do. The night is well nigh spent and the day will soon be here.

Jesus and his apostles went every where preaching the kingdom of God and calling upon men to repent and believe the gospel. The promise is to us and as many as will call upon themselves the name of Christ.

In concluding let me call your attention to Phil. ii. 12-13, "Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling. For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure."

D. C. ROBISON.

To the Church of God.

"Oh! daughter of Zion, awaken to duty,
The Master is calling thee now to arise;
Endeth thee in garments of love, truth and beauty,
Your Bridegroom is coming now soon from the skies."

"Occupy till I come." Luke xix.

If we have caught the spirit of the Master's words we know that this means business, not idleness and indifference, but activity and personal responsibility. Jesus at twelve years of age says; "I must be about my Father's business." When he had called his twelve disciples together. He commanded them saying, "Go." If you do not think that "Go" means "business" please read the 10th chapter of Matthew, and compare it with the life work of those disciples, and note the suffering, privations, self denials and cruel death. Do you feel like making excuses? Please turn to Luke ix. 57 to the end, "No man having put his hand to the plough and looking back is fit for the kingdom." Turn to the 23rd verse of this chapter, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross daily, and follow me." Now my brother, my sister, this means every day business for you and me. No shifting of responsibility or excuse for neglect. If we have made failures in the past, we must make the greater effort today. "Whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple." Lu. xiv, 27 to the end.

We hear Christ and his disciples exhorting and teaching their followers to continue in the faith, and that "we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom." Paul, the great apostle, sums up the cost of his discipleship in these words, "I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus, my Lord; for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ." Phil. iii. 8 to the end.

Are we enduring anything for the sake of Christ? What sacrifice is he requiring of you, and how are you meeting that requirement? We talk much about sacrifice and cross bearings and self-denials. But what are we really rendering to God for all his benefits? How are we suffering for the cause of Christ? We read with a quicker pulse, perhaps, that sublime utterance of Paul: "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril or sword? "I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

Brothers, how much do we endure of hardship, suffering, inconvenience, sorrow, loss; what measure of tribulation, distress, persecution or peril fall to our lot because of our alliance with Christ? Very few of us really enter into the fellowship of Christ's sufferings. We know nothing of active sympathy with his passion. We do not pay a very high price in sacrifice, toil or distressing hardship for the benefits of the Christian brotherhood. If we did we would have a higher regard for the obligations of that brotherhood, and a keener appreciation of the suffering of Jesus, and we would come into the enjoyment of a larger degree of his companionship, and serve him with a greater zeal and more fervent loyalty.

It was no idle question the Master put to his worldly minded, place seeking disciples, "Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? And if Jesus should put that question to you today, what answer would you give, and how would you treat him in the hour of emergency? The cause of Christ today needs disciples who will meet the emergency without playing the coward: who will stand loyally by the side of Jesus in the presence of his enemies; who will follow him whithersoever he lead; who will serve him with fidelity under all conditions and circumstances. This great commission was placed upon every follower of Christ: "Go ye into all the world, preach the gospel to every creature." Mark xvi. 15, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations," etc. "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen." "Go preach." "Go teach." "Preaching" "teaching." Are you waiting for some one to come to you, you who have been sitting at the feet of the greatest of all teachers, Jesus, or are you willing to "Go preach," "Go teach." Are we in the condition Paul describes, "For when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again the first principles of the oracles of God." Have you been studying to show yourself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth? Have you been searching the "Scriptures daily?" If you have, the demand is laid upon you, the opportunity is yours. If you cannot go, you can send one in your place, and you can take up the work at home. Now there is no way of shirking or placing responsibility of the Master's cause on some one else. It is yours and you must provide for the emergency or prove yourself traitor to his cause. These are cold facts, none the less true. The testing time is sure to come to us sooner or later, the supreme moment when we must act. Have we on the whole armor of God?

"If thou my Christ, today
Should'st speak to me and say;
What battles hast thou fought for me?
Show me thy scars; I fain would see
Love's depth of victory.
If thou should'st speak, my Christ;
My Leader and my King;
And bid me lay my wounds in sight,
The scars borne just for thee in fight,
What love-scars could I bring?"

BIBLE SCHOOL WORK.

I have before me a letter bearing date, Chicago, Dec. 16th, 1905, from Bro. Howard Giddings. He says: "I have just finished reading your plan for a "Memorial Home" and can only say that God is working through you, and may his richest blessings be yours." Further, "I have an 8 room house in Kirksville, Mo., worth $1600.00, it is located near the State Normal school and near to what used to be Dr. Ward's College of Medicine and Osteopathy, and now a sanitarium. the rent is $10.00 per month, which I will turn over to the right one, less the expense of keeping it up, for the "Memorial Home" fund, or if one is wanted to be started in Kirksville, I will give the property outright, but at any time it is not used for the above purpose, then the income must go to some other home in some other city.

Kindly give Bro. Alexander the credit for obtaining the above." Bro. Giddings is one among many, I believe, who have been waiting for something to be done to strengthen our work for the Master. I appeal to you again, you of the household of faith, will you throw away these opportunities afforded at our Universities and Normal schools? Send in your names and pledges now. Let us organize our National Evangelical and Bible school Association and be ready for the business in hand. Yours in hope.

VOLUME LV. Kent, PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JANUARY 3, 1906. NUMBER 1.

Asleep in Jesus.

Sister Emily J. Rathbun was born May 22, 1828. She fell asleep in Jesus Thursday, Dec. 21, 1905, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Comestock in the city of Chicago.

She married at the age of 19½ years, and became the mother of eight children, three have passed away, and five remain to mourn the loss of a good mother. She was firmly rooted and grounded in the faith once delivered unto the saints. Her faith and hope was a great comfort to her during her declining years.

The following is the

delivered by the writer at the funeral service:

The child of God has an ever-sympathizing friend in the person of Jesus. He always did have a tender heart for suffering humanity. He would groan in spirit and weep with the sorrowful. Copious showers of blessing fell from his hands wherever he went. His sublime teachings ever touched the heart, they were soul-inspiring, their tendency was to fill the mind of his hearers with pure and lofty aspirations. They also pointed to a glad day coming in the sweet by by. We have the comfort of knowing, that in that day there will be no more tear-stained faces, because death has taken from us some treasure upon whom our affections have been placed. It is written over the gateway of the Eternal City, "There shall be no more death." This is not a dream, a mere fancy of the mind, No! No!! It is based upon the sure Word of the Great Eternal.

When death draws near, then is the appropriate time to compare values. Ask at this time of the gold of Ophir, the onyx stone, the saphir, the crystal, the coral, the topaz of Ethiopia, the pearl, or the rare jewels of gold. Have you length of days in your hands? Are you a tree of life? Have you riches and honor that will not fade away? Listen to the answer;—Omulous silence.

Oh, how different the assurance pictured to us in the Blessed Hope? Here we have promises filled with captivating joy, yes, transporting, enrapturing. They fall upon the believer's ear, like a benediction of seraphic sweetness; our inmost thought wells up in gratitude, and our hearts sing for joy. In heaven's own sweet melody, we break forth in praises unto him, who has loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood.

Yes, in the midst of life's trials and conflicts, while in the seclusion of home, all alone with God, in sweet meditation, our mind can catch a glimpse of the great day coming, and for the moment feast on the joys to come. Thus may the sunbeam of hope, light up the mourner's heart; at such a time gloom is converted into glory. It may be compared to the glorious orb of day, which may be obscured for the time being, by a passing cloud; yet the silver lining soon appears, and when the cloud rolls away, the sun breaks forth in magnificent glory. It sometimes requires the crushing of the flower, to make it give forth its fragrance. So the true child of God may emerge from the fires of affliction—purer gold.

Let us follow the leadings of the star of hope, its refulgent beams will guide us past the breakers, and tempestous seas, and land us safely upon the evergreen shore.

"Hail sweetest, dearest tie
That binds our hearts in one;
Hail sacred hope that tunes
Our minds to harmony divine."

Are we sorrowful, today because death has entered our midst, and yet we are not hopeless. God, through his Son, purposes to extract death's sting. God is good, God is love, and in the goodness of his heart, he longs to fill us with his rich blessings. Have we been in sweet companionship with Jesus, and learned from him the lesson of life, even as he was taught by his Father, and reflected his great heart, as if seen in a mirror? If we have, then we can in turn, become reflectors of his sweet life. In this way we may grow into that pure life, to the extent of entirely changing the carnal nature. To a person thus refined, and made sensitive and pure, by the indwelling and close companionship of that only which is pure and holy, then that which is sinful appears hideous and repugnant.

In the sad hour of bereavement, we lift our faces heavenward, and ask: Is there hope? The answer comes, Oh, yes, hope so strong, that the heart exultant leaps for joy. We may lift the curtain, and by faith catch a glimpse of the glory that is impending. It is even like the glorious sun, bathed in heaven's blue, which laughs at the storm, when the clouds are rolled away.

Then publish abroad the glad tidings, ring merrily the gospel bell, let its sweet notes vibrate upon the air, and thrill every heart in unison divine, and in one grand united chorus, praise God for the Son of his love. Oh, such a message! glorious message! fraught with such tender affection to the bereaved whose beloved one sweetly sleeps in Jesus.

There is sweet rest in Jesus, even now, while the lamp of life still burns. There is no rest half so sweet as the trusting soul finds in Jesus. It is the Man of Galilee alone, which can speak peace to the troubled wave.

Jesus has trod the lone valley of the shadow of death, and broken asunder its bars, and now the bow of hope spans the arch between the dark valley and the evergreen shore.

God's pure love can never fail us, it is fathomless. No chain is long enough to fathom the depths of that ocean. Send forth this beauteous message over sea and vale, mountain fastness, broad prairies, and the leafy forest, that those whose hearts are bowed down with sorrow, may sing for joy, and the heart be buoyant as the lark, which cleaves the [illegible] vault of heaven, and [illegible] notes of melody.

Soon the trump shall sound, when those who sleep in Jesus will emerge from their dusty beds, clothed in the beautiful garment of immortality. Then there will be no more farewells between the living and the dying, no more bereaved family circles, death itself shall die. Heaven will then ring with glad shouts of victory. This hope can pierce the dark cloud, and let a gleam of sunshine in.

Should we now feel the chastening hand, don't repine

"Since a Father's arm sustains thee peaceful be;
When a chastening hand restrains thee, it is he.
Know his love in full completeness,
Feel the measure of thy weakness,
If his wound thy spirit sore,
Trust him more."

Yours in the Blessed Hope.
W. H. WILSON.

Dear Restitution:

As the Old Year is passing out and the New Year will soon be ushered in, I am glad to say that our lives have been spared to once more say that we are still striving to serve our dear Savior. We are trying to let our light so shine before men that they may know that we are serving the true and living God. We are living in perilous times. I feel as though we must be up and doing; for we know not when our Savior may come. Dear Brothers and Sisters, let us put on the whole armor and be watching for our dear Savior. My heart was made sad to read of our dear Brother Hatch's death. I have heard him preach many times. He used to bring his daughter Azorah to conference at Cicero, Ind., when she was little, and she would sit on his knee and sing with him. May she look to the blessed Master for comfort in her sad affliction. I can sympathize with her because I lost my father twelve years ago this next April. He died in the faith. Pray for us that we may hold out faithful unto the end.

Your Brother and Sister in Christ, wishing you all a Happy New Year.

MR. & MRS. I. E. FLOREA.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

As we start the new volume for another year, we can with a thankful heart praise the Giver of all good for the blessings of the past year, and step out upon the new, relying upon his all-powerful arm to protect and his loving hand to guide.

There is little to say regarding the trouble in Russia. The revolutionists are getting the worst of it. Where a stand is made the troops are brought up and shoot as long as there is any one to shoot; then arrests are made till that point is clear. The prisons are so full that sixty are crowded in where only fifteen ought to be. After a time relief is given by taking some out and shooting them. The course marked out seems to be that the insurrection must be put down, and the way to do that is to kill all who are opposed to the government. Such measures are certainly effective.

Were you ever placed in a position where an extra call was made urgently demanding that you raise a sum of money on a given day? Did you not then wish that those who were owing you would consider your strait, and send in early what they could, so you could rest easy at night and not have to worry through the day, as the exact time of settlement drew near? We are asking you kindly to consider us in this position. Some have responded, but not quite half enough. We trust that our friends will do all they can. Today is the time to send.

At the Breaking of Bread.

"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through him might be saved. He that believeth on him is not condemned, but he that believeth not, is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. Here we have brought to our notice Christ and the name of Christ. The believer and the one who believes not. The one who believes on him is not condemned, because he believes in the name of the only begotten Son of God. This teaches there is more to be believed than that he lived, died and rose again. Yes, even more than this. He that believeth not is condemned, why, because he hath not believed in his name.

What is it to believe in the name of Christ? What is the name of Christ? God hath highly exalted him and given him a name that is above every name. That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow. And that every tongue should confess that Jesus is Lord to the glory of God the Father. It is this great power that constitutes the great name. Yet have I set my King upon my holy hill of Zion. I will declare the decree, the Lord hath said unto me, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession. Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." "A scepter of righteousness is the scepter of thy kingdom. Thou hast loved righteousness and hated iniquity. Therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness. We see the great ruling force he obtained by loving righteousness and hating iniquity, by becoming obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God hath exalted him and given him a name which is above every name. That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow. We have taken upon us that great name. May we love righteousness and hate iniquity, that we may be exalted with him. Humble ourselves under the mighty hand of God that we may be exalted in due time. Christ learned obedience by the things which he suffered, being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him.

We have accepted the name and are striving to walk worthy of the vocation by which we are called, exhorting one another to be strong in the faith, to walk worthy of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. We commemorate his death till he comes to share the name in its fullness with all his saints.

"Let them praise his name with the pipe. Let them sing praises unto him with the timbrel and harp. For the Lord taketh pleasure in his people, he will beautify the meek of the earth. Let the saints be joyful in glory. Let the high praises of God be in their mouth and a two edged sword in their hand. To execute vengeance upon the heathen, and punishments upon the people. To bind their kings with chains and their nobles with fetters of iron. To execute upon them the judgments written. This honor have all the saints. May we continue in his name, that all these honors may be ours when Jesus comes.

Nancy Barber.

col. iii. 2.

Set your affections on things above not on things on the earth. For ye are dead and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ who is our life shall appear then we also appear with him in glory. Beloved, now are we the sons of God and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. As for me I will behold thy face in righteousness, I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness. For we walk by faith not by sight. If ye then be risen with Christ seek those things which are above where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth where moth and rust doth corrupt and where thieves break through and steal. But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust corrupt and where thieves do not break through nor steal. For where your treasure is there will your heart be also. Thou wilt show me the path of life; in thy presence is fulness of joy, at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore.

Annie Burton.

Charity never fails. 1 Cor. xiii. 8. Love fails not at any time. Diaglott. God so loved the world that he sent forth his only begotten Son into the world that we might live through him. And he has given us his commandment that we should believe in the name of his Son Jesus Christ and love each other. If God so loved us we also ought to love one another.

Christ on one occasion tells his disciples, if we have love one to another by this shall all men know that ye are my disciples. Let us therefore be followers of God as obedient children, be kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving one another, even as we for Christ's sake have been forgiven. More than that let all we do be with the earnest desire to enlighten and promote the good of all and the glory of God.

Let our love be without hypocrisy. If our love is out of a pure heart and a good conscience before God and his Son Jesus Christ, our work and labor together will be, "In honor prefering one another," not selfish, desiring to have the pre-eminence for all our knowledge and faith and sacrifice will profit us nothing, if love be absent.

Brothers and sisters, how very essential love is, greater than faith, greater than hope. Love fails not at any time, love can bear the finger of scorn, and slights and unkindness, is not easily provoked, envies not. We find a perfect example of this life revealed in the character of Jesus. All through his life he was bearing the cross for others and finally gave himself that we might be partakers of divine nature. Behold what love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God. O let us exercise the very best in us, and not grow discouraged, but prayerfully and in patience await his coming and the words, Well done, enter into the joy of thy Lord. What a glorious result of all our labor, is it not worth every effort to obtain such words from him? May we each one be more and more imbued with this quality, for the more we love, the more like our Lord and Master we shall be.

Sister,
Mrs. Ira McCave.

this do in remembrance of me.

"And he took bread and gave thanks, and break it, and gave unto them, saying, This is my body, which is given for you; this do in remembrance of me." Luke xxii. 19.

The memorial supper of which Jesus is here speaking is the emblems of his broken body and shed blood which was a sacrifice for sin, by which we obtain forgiveness, "In whom we have redemption in his blood the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace." And by being forgiven we have become reconciled to God. Jesus lived a life of sacrifice and then gave himself to die to obtain this forgiveness for us, and it was one of his last requests before leaving his disciples that they keep this simple ordinance in remembrance of him; their remembrance could only be one of love for a friend who had the character of Jesus which was purity, righteousness, gentleness, meekness, unselfishness, and love; doing good to all he came in contact with, and teaching them of the glorious future life which God had promised them. If we can remember him as the same today as when he was with his disciples, meeting at his table will not be a duty to us but a great privilege, and we shall receive a blessing, for he has promised that "where two or three meet together in my name, there will I be;" do we always come to the Lord's table with a desire to meet him and receive his blessing? If we are all waiting and watching for his return, it should be our greatest desire to meet to remember him while absent. But we must examine ourselves and see if our thoughts and actions are in accordance with God's will, "For as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show forth the Lord's death till he come. Wherefore, whosoever shall eat this bread and drink this cup of the Lord unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord. But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread and drink of that cup. For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily eateth and drinketh condemnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body." 1 Cor. xi. 26-29. This would be a terrible thing for any of us to do, after learning of Jesus' purpose of ordaining this supper to do this in remembrance of me.

We all feel our unworthiness and liability to sin, but as the chosen of the Lord we should take him at his word, and Paul has said: "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and cleanse us from all unrighteousness." Brothers and sisters, after all the Lord has done for us, let us conform our lives to his will and do all his commandments; and when we meet each first day may it be to remember our absent Lord until he come, and then may we have found his favor and enter into his joy.

Jennie Salisbury.

everlasting consolation. 2 thes. ii 16.

Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself and God, even our Father which hath loved us and hath given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace comfort our hearts and stablish us in every good word and work. Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. The Father of mercies and the God of all comfort who comforteth us in all our tribulations, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God. For as the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation also aboundeth by Christ, and whether we be afflicted it is for our consolation and salvation, and our hope is steadfast, knowing that if we are partakers of the suffering, so shall we be also of the consolation. Yes, Christ is our consolation, our only hope is in him who has promised us eternal life in the kingdom, when he comes whose right it is, for the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air and so shall we ever be with the Lord, wherefore comfort one another with these words. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil, for thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. What a comfort to know that we have a friend in Jesus, what a privilege to carry everything to God in prayer.

Dear Restitution Readers:

Between the necessary affairs of this life and the more necessary things of the life to come, I have had little or no time to write about the work of preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ.

I cannot now enter into details, suffice it to state that since the Conference at Cleveland in August, of which you have read in The Restitution,—we,—Sister Barber, wife and I, have proclaimed the glad tidings of salvation wherever we had, or could make opportunity. For weeks we preached in the schools around Salem where the gospel never had been sounded: The interest and attendance varied. In those meetings we had further proof that guessing or jumping at conclusions will sometimes hinder the work. For instance, where we thought the attendance would be good, very few came, where we guessed the opposite, we had good meetings. We expect to continue this work.

Sister Barber and wife took care of the Salem Church while I went to Rootville, Pa. the home of Bro. J. T. Ongley. The attendance there was good, better, best, the attention was equal, the interest was simply intense. I gave opportunity for questions, and for the first time in my experience question after question was asked. When I had no Scripture answer, or where the question was such that could not be answered by the Word, I said, "I do not know." Some were surprised, some pleased. For instance,

Where is Elijah?

Ans. Elijah went up in a whirlwind into heaven.

Where is he now?

Ans. That is all I know.

Well, but what do you think?

Ans. I do not think.

What is your opinion?

Ans. I have none, and if I did answer by my thoughts or opinions, such would be of no value to you.

This confinement to what is written proved to be the safeguard of the meetings. Several denominations were represented, but no one seemed offended, though I shunned not to declare those things that must surely be believed and obeyed in order to salvation.

I would like to write more about those I met, the homes I was invited to, the kindness shown to me, and other items, but will pass on to say that I next went to Kimball, Ohio, the home of Bro. B. F. Smith. Out of five meetings we had two of unusual interest. At North Monroeville the Saturday night meeting was intensified by quertions from a Methodist minister who was to preach there on Sunday. His last question was,—Then, you say, we must believe this,—The kingdom restored—in order to be saved?

Ans. Pardon me friend, but I have not said anything. I read to you from Moses and the prophets. It is the Word of God. He seemed deeply impressed, so were the audience who had waited to hear.

At the School,—near Bro. Smith's, on Sunday night the impression made by the same subject was most profound. Some took notes, and assured me that they would carefully look up the Scripture. I entreated them to believe what they read. I commended them to Bro. Smith. Being then but a few days to Christmas, I bade Bro. Smith and family who had made my stay very pleasant, good-by. On my way home had a few happy hours with Brother and Sister Juergensen. Called on Sister Davis at Barberton, on Brother and Sister Heacok at Canton, and got home safely to find all well, and at once got ready for our extra meetings. They have begun to the satisfaction of all present. May the Lord find some hearts and minds to bless.

We had the pleasure of the company of Brother and Sister Heacock, and Brother and Sister Geo. Neill. Bro. Heacock was baptized, with Bro. Barber, at the Conference in Cleveland, both men are earnest. Brother Heacock, though young in the truth, is not, anywhere, ashamed of the Gospel of Christ. May our happiness be made complete this year by the coming of the Lord.

P. Neill.

Editor Restitution:

I will write you a few lines this morning to let you know that we feel like we were imposing ourselves on the brethren and sisters, having them pay for The Restitution, and we thank those dear brothers or sisters, whoever they are, and we hope and pray that the Lord will bless them for their kindness to us poor old folks. We are all alone here in the Church of God. Not a brother or sister nearer than fourteen miles, and we are not able to go. We are too poor for one thing and our health will not permit us to go, we are not able to support ourselves, but we have very good neighbors to donate to our wants, but they are the world's people. Oh, how glad we would be to have some of the dear brothers or sisters to talk to and encourage us on our journey to the kingdom of God. We are old pioneers in the faith. It is between 40 and 50 years since we embraced the truth. God bless the blessed truth. Dear brothers and sisters, pray for us that we may hold out faithful to the end.

Obituary.

F. M. Pope was born in Hendricks County, Tennessee, May 9, 1840. Died in Argonia, Kansas, Dec., 4, 1905, aged 65 years, 6 months and 17 days.

He was married in Gentry County, Missouri, Dec., 20, 1862, to Sarah C. Long. Of this union nine children were born. Five of these children are now living and were at the funeral. In 1877 Brother Pope came to Sumner County, Kansas, and settled on the old homestead in Morris Township, and lived there until a few years ago when he moved to Argonia, Kan. where he lived until the day of his death.

He leaves a wife, a son, four daughters and a host of friends to mourn the great loss his sad death has caused.

He embraced the faith of the kingdom of God and the resurrection of the dead, under the preaching of Bro. Fisk, some years since, and was well posted in the teachings of the Bible. He was loved and respected by all who knew him. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer to a large gathering of sympathizing friends, when we laid him to rest in the cemetry, near his old homestead, to wait the call of the Lord.

May the glad assurance that there will be for him a glorious resurrection when Jesus comes, be a source of consolation to the bereaved ones in their sorrow.

Character and Confidence.

A great financier, in speaking of a man who had gone astray, said: "After all is said and done, our only protection is in common honesty. Confidence in a man of character is better protection than any bond."

How true this is can be proven on a moment's reflection. In our personal dealings with men how little we think of the protection of law. In business and credit, in religion and belief, in doctor and medicine, in friend and favor, we depend upon common honesty, and show our dependence by the confidence through our judgment of character. Confidence in those whom we know is our guide, comfort and strength, and we depend upon it everywhere, except in our drug trade organizations.

In those whom we should know best, because of the fact that their thought and action follow the same paths as our own, we show no confidence. All our organized effort is clouded by dark pessimism. Why? Because we do not know each other; because we cannot place confidence in a man until we know his character, and we cannot know his character until we know him. We base our ever-changing judgment upon his reputation, forgetting that a reputation may be made or ruined by the babble of the village gossips, while his character is himself—the man.

A man's character cannot be measured by the money he has made, nor yet by what he has done. The man of character is greater than his performances, no matter how great the latter may be. In the presence of such a man we are surprised at no great act of his, but feel that within him lies the power to do much greater things. This feeling is confidence, and though our judgment may sometimes fail, it is the safest, surest measure of man by man, that man has ever known.

We cannot know a man's character except by personal contact. Through printed or written words we may know all that he does, all that he says, but without direct contact we cannot know the motives from which emanate these doings and sayings; without knowing him we cannot know what he is. If we know what he is, we not only know how much confidence to place in him, but by comparison we learn how much confidence he can place in us; and in the consciousness of our own comparative frailty we determine to be stronger—to possess character.

The man of character may say little, may do little, but in his presence we feel a something which makes that little great. We follow his lead, knowing, absolutely knowing, that he leads in the right direction in the right way.—Joel Blanc.

Bridling the Tongue.

Perhaps we cannot practice a better discipline than by bridling or guiding control over our tongues. If any one has a doubt as to the importance of this discipline, let him read what St. James says about it in the third chapter of his epistle. It is a terrible description of a most deadly evil, and yet every word of it is true. Nor is this all. The evil thing set forth is widespread, all but universal. Some are more thoughtful than others, but none among us are sufficiently careful as to what we say or when we say it. The apostle tells us, "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body."

This is strong language, but it is true. Self-control is one of the highest attainments we can ever reach. The man who can so control his passions, his feelings, his emotions, as that they shall never find untimely or improper expression in word, is as Christ-like or perfect as he can ever be in this world. Sometimes the excuse is made for evil speaking, that the person is thoughtless, that he does not mean what he says. But is thoughtlessness really any excuse? Does it not add to the offense?

However this may be, Christians ought not so to offend. They are as lights and witnesses in the world. They are the Savior's representatives, and as such they should seek to be as much like him as possible. Never should they forget that by their inconsistencies they inflict upon Christ's cause the deepest wound it ever receives. How awful the thought that by our words and acts we may become the stumbling-blocks on which others may fall and be lost forever—God forbid it.

To guard against this, we shall do well to improve by trying to gain control over ourselves, and particularly over our tongues. Would Christians cease their evil speaking, the power of our religion would be increased a thousand fold.—Parish Visitor.

How easy it is to tear a piece of paper along the line in which it has originally been folded. How easy it is for a second temptation to overcome us if the first has been yielded to. A habit that has once gained the victory over us, our moral nature, has put a fold, as it were, in that nature, and destroyed its straitness and smoothness, so that when the same temptation comes a second time it seeks the weak point which it had formerly made, and by the line of least resistance, we are turned from our righteous principles and strong resolutions.—Hugh Macmillan.

The Master said: "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples." It is evident that fruitbearing is a sign of discipleship. Therefore one cannot be a disciple of Christ without bearing fruit. Here is further evidence: "Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away." When one ceases to bear fruit he ceases to be in Christ. Again: "As the branch can not bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine, no more can ye except ye abide in me."

"Do not talk too much of your temptation and do not think of it too much," is Edward Everett Hale's shrewd counsel. What is kept out of our thoughts and talk cannot easily get into our lives. We must set our thoughts to work, and get them too busy in other directions to leave them hanging round Temptation Corner.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

Poetry.

Thy Gracious Love.

All I ask and all I plead for,
'Is thy presence, full and sweet;
Let thy gracious love enfold me;
Let thy Spirit fill and mold me.
For thy service full, complete.
O, to feel the fire enkindling
All my being into glow!
O, to win sad hearts to trust thee!
This is all I care to know.

Thoughts on Christmas.

As I sat musing this Christmas my mind went back to a time when long ago there were shepherds watching their flocks by night, and lo, an angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them, and they were afraid, and the angel said unto them, Fear not, for behold I bring you glad tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people, For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord, and a heavenly host joined with the angel singing, Glory to God in the highest, peace on earth, and good will toward men. And this child waxed strong in spirit, and was filled with wisdom and the grace of God was upon him. This is the child the angel told Mary should be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give to him the throne of his father David, and he should reign over the house of Jacob forever and of his kingdom there shall be no end. And when he arrived at manhood he began preaching this same gospel of the kingdom which the Lord God said he would give him. For three years and a half he went about through every city and village, preaching the glad tidings of the kingdom to God.

Afterwards he chose twelve disciples and sent them out to preach the kingdom of God, the same kingdom that he had been preaching. And just before he ascended he said unto them, Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned.

Then the disciples went to Jerusalem and abode there as Jesus commanded them, until they were endued with power from on high. And when the day of Pentecost was fully come they were all of one accord in one place, and the Holy Spirit came upon them as the sound of a rushing, mighty wind, and filled the whole house. Then Peter, filled with the Holy Spirit, stood up and preached the first gospel sermon that was preached after his Lord had ascended. He told them just where they stood, that they had crucified the Lord of glory, and when they heard this they were pricked in their hearts and cried out, Men and brethren, what shall we do? Repent and be baptized every one of you for the remission of your sins, and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. Then they that gladly received his Word were baptized, thus they preached as the Master directed, and there has been no alteration in the way marked out for sinners to become children of God and joint heirs with Christ to all the glories and honors of the kingdom, the glad tidings of which he sent them to proclaim to a dying world.

Would it not be best for you who have not obeyed the truth to wisely consider the matter, for when the Master went away he said, I will come again, and he will render to every one according as his works shall be whether it be good or whether it be evil, he will soon come and reckon with us and we shall want to hear him say, Well done. Come before it is too late, humble yourselves and be buried by baptism into death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, so you will rise from the watery grave, to walk in newness of life. And then add to your faith all the Christian virtues which you are commanded, and there will be an abundant entrance administered unto you into the kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Paul says eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, the things God has in store for them that love him. To live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world is demanded of us if we would hear him say, Well done, good and faithful servant. Now is the time to become the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ, and if ye are Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise.

Dear Restitution:

Believing as I do that we are near the end of Gentile times, and the restitution of all things which God has spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began, the question arises, What is to be restored? The Bible contains the only record of what God has promised to restore. Paul in his defense before King Agrippa says he stood and was judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto the fathers. God promised Abraham, Isaac and Jacob the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession, and that in Abraham and his seed all the kindreds of the earth were to be blessed. This covenant is yet unfulfilled, as to the land and the blessing of the nations.

Paul in Heb. xi. informs us that all from righteous Abel until his day, died in the faith, not having received the promise, God having provided some better things for us, that they without us should not be made perfect. Stephen in Acts vi. speaks of the covenant to Abraham that God gave him none inheritance in it, not so much as to set his foot on; yet God gave it to him by promise, and to his seed after him, for an everlasting possession.

In 2 Sam. vi. God renews this covenant to David. Nathan informs David that his son would build a house, and God would be his father, and he should be God's son, with a condition that if he committed iniquity God would chasten him with the rod of the children of men. Solomon built this house as God promised David in Psa. cxxxii. David says the Lord has sworn in truth unto David, he will not turn from it; of the fruits of his body will I set upon thy throne, if the children keep my commandments. So there is a condition in this covenant. Solomon and the children of Israel broke the covenant, and at the death of Solomon the house of Israel was divided. Ezek. xxi. God overturns the kingdom of Judah until he whose right it is shall come, and God will give it to him.

In Amos ix. the destruction of the kingdom is repeated. In 1 Chron. xvii. God informs David that a son of his sons should build a house, and God would establish this son on the throne of David, and he should build a house, but God would not take his mercy from him, as he took it from him that was before him; and David the king said "Who am I, O Lord God," that thou hast spoken of thy servant's house a great while to come. In Psa. lxxxix. David refers to this covenant that God had sworn unto him, thy seed will I establish forever, and build up thy throne to all generations, and the heavens shall praise thy wonders, and thy faithfulness, also in the congregation of the saints. In this covenant there are no conditions, the same as the unconditional covenant made to Abraham.

Solomon in fulfillment of God's covenant to David, built the house of God at Jerusalem. I would ask, are we to expect that the son of David's sons will build the house spoken of in 1 Chron. xvii. I answer, Yes, if God fulfills his promise to David. Zech. iv. we read, Behold the man whose name is the branch, shall grow up out of his place, and he shall build the temple of the Lord, and he shall bear the glory, and sit and rule upon his throne, and the council of peace shall be between them both (Father and Son.)

In Isa. ix. we read the increase of this son's kingdom and peace shall have no end, upon the throne of David, to execute and establish with justice and judgment, from henceforth; the zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform it.

In Luke i. an angel was sent from God, to a city called Nazareth with a message from Jehovah to Mary; and the angel informs Mary that she shall bring forth a son, and that God will give unto him the throne of his father David, and that her son should rule over the house of Jacob forever. It is evident that this promise has not been fulfilled.

The description of this city and temple is given in the last nine chapters of Ezekiel. In chap. xxxiii. Ezekiel's attention is called to the future in these words: Son of man, the place of my throne, and the place of the soles of my feet, where I will dwell in the midst in the children of Israel forever. And my holy name shall the house of Israel no more defile. This prophecy has not been fulfilled. The restoration of the land of Canaan and the restoration of the kingdom to Israel, is one of the things God has promised to restore.

In Acts i. the apostles ask Christ, Lord wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel. Jesus answers it is not for you to know the times or the seasons that the Father has put in his own power.

We learn from this that the apostles were expecting the restoration of the kingdom of Israel, and Jesus' answer to them confirms this expectation.

The kingdom of Israel restored would be the fifth and last universal kingdom, that will stand forever, and is to be given to one like the Son of Man, when he comes in the clouds of heaven, and all people, nations and tauguages shall serve him. Dan. vii. 18; Luke xxi. 25; Rev. xi. 15. At the sound of the seventh trumpet the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ, and he shall reign forever.

Micah iv. speaks of the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established above the hills, and people shall flow into it. And many nations shall come and say, Let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob, and he will teach us of his ways. The law shall go forth from Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem, and he shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off. They shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks. Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more; but they shall sit every man under his own vine and figtree, and none shall make him afraid, for the mouth of the Lord has spoken it. Christ and the saints will reign one thousand years, Rev. xx. 2, 5-6, on the earth, Rev. v. 9, 10, over the nations, Rev. ii. 26, 27, to execute upon them the judgments written. This honor hath all the saints, Psa. cxlix. 4 to 9; Rev. xx. 6.

During the thousand years the nations cannot be deceived, from the fact that God will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the veil that is spread over all nations, and will swallow up death in victory, and God will wipe tears from off all faces, and the rebuke of his people shall be taken away from all the earth, for the Lord has spoken it.

The darkness will no longer cover the earth, and gross darkness the people, for the Light of the World will have come. That Light can lighten every man that cometh into the world John i. 9; Isa. vi. 1, 2.

Our prayer is Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven.

Editor Restitution:

As the year of 1905 has passed into history, with all its joys and sorrows, its record is complete and sealed, and what we all have done either for good or bad, cannot be undone. I thank God for all the blessings that I have received from his bountiful hand through the year. I have been keeping my eyes Zionward, yet I have no doubt I have done many things contrary to him that giveth us these blessings. I ask his forgiveness for all the wrongs I have committed in the past year.

I am still strong in the faith, still looking for the soon coming of the Lord, our Redeemer, and the King of the saints, who will take his seat on the throne of his father David in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, and shall have dominion from sea to sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth. The law shall go forth of Zion and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem, and he will rebuke strong nations afar off. Men shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks, and learn war no more. Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, nor kingdom against kingdom; but every man shall sit under his own vine and figtree, and nothing shall make him afraid, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea.

In view of this no wonder those who are looking for the soon coming of their Redeemer cry with a loud voice, Come Lord Jesus, come quickly, and pray thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven. Darkness is upon the earth, and gross darkness upon the people. The people are lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. If they make a feast they ask the man with the gold ring and fine apparel. They judge from outside appearance, but God judges the heart. God says not every one that saith Lord, Lord, shall enter into my kingdom, but he that doeth the will of God. Not he who thinks he is doing his will, but he that doeth it. If we don't know the will of God, we should find it out, for it is the will that doeth his will that will enter the kingdom.

A person can know God's will and not do it; but brothers and sisters, I think we all know his will, and should strive with all our hearts to do it. We cannot all meet together in this life, but how sweet it will be to meet some bright day in the kingdom of God. The signs bespeak the soon coming of our King. Oh, what a bitter cup the Jews are drinking of in Russia in the evening of 1905. The year closed with them in bitter wailing, but in Isa xlix. 26 we are told—And I will feed them that oppress thee with their own flesh; and they shall be drunken with their own blood, as with sweet wine, and all flesh shall know that I the Lord am thy Savior and thy Redeemer, the mighty one of Jacob.

Again chapter li. 11, Therefore the redeemed of the Lord shall return and come with singing unto Zion, and everlasting joy shall be upon their head. They shall obtain gladness and joy, and sorrow and mourning shall flee away.

Again in chapter lxi. 4. And they shall build the old wastes, they shall raise up the former desolations, and they shall repair the waste cities; the desolations of many generations. And their seed shall be known among the Gentiles, and their offspring among the people. All that see them shall acknowledge them that they are the seed which the Lord hath blessed.

This will be a national blessing to the Jews, and as the year 1905 closed in bitter wailing with them, may the year 1906 end with the joy and blessings promised to them. May this be the last bitter cup they will have to drink. But we have to wait God's own appointed time.

The visits of the dear old RESTITUTION through the year has been a great pleasure to me. It has been and is yet a school master to me. It brings me good tidings of great joy. It and my Bible are all the teacher I have. I try in my feeble way to defend the cause of Christ, but truth is unpopular. The time is coming when it will prevail. Wishing it to come soon is my prayer.

Wishing all a happy new year, hoping the time will soon come when we may all meet in the kingdom.

Yours waiting for our Redeemer.

JESSE HARROLD.

Am I Called to Preach?

Is there any Scripture teaching us that in our day God in a special manner calls men into the ministry to preach the gospel? We certainly know of no such teaching in the Bible. But says one, "I know I have been called to preach and it would be useless for any one to attempt to prove to me any thing to the contrary." Well brother, how do you know you have been called? What evidence have you as to that fact? You have no tangible evidence. Perhaps you think so by some feeling that you have had. Perhaps you have allowed your mind to dwell upon the question so long, that finally your imagination has enlarged upon that particular subject until it has finally grown into the form of a call from God.

I once heard of a farmer that began to think on this same question of a call to preach, and as the story goes, One day as he was plowing corn in his field he chanced to find a peculiar shaped stone and on one side of the stone he fancied he could see carved these letters C. P.—called to preach. The man ceased to work and went home and told his good wife he had quit farming, as he had a call to preach. The wife knowing his poor ability as a speaker and gift of language, wondered at his receiving such a call began to question him as to the authenticity of the call. He readily produced the little stone, saying, Do you see those two letters there, C. P., called to preach? After looking at the stone a moment the wife exclaimed, "No, John, you have made a great mistake in these letters. They read, Called to plow corn. Go back to your work.

As far as any special call to preach is concerned we have no more proof for that fact than we are called to be a farmer or mechanic. Nearly all ministers claim to have been called by God to preach and yet how different, conflicting and contradictory are their messages with one another. No two hardly alike. God is said to be a God of order. Would he call these men and give them contradictory messages? This alone is proof that their claims are not true.

Another fact proving that they themselves have but little faith in their call from God to preach is when ever many of the called ones find a more lucrative employment for a living than they get by preaching, they readily accept that call.

If I claimed to be called of God to preach I would not dare to disregard the call as many do. But says one, What is your idea of the question? I think if God calls men to preach there has been some great mistakes made some where in the calls. When God calls men to preach their messages will agree. When God calls men to preach the world will know and feel their power. When God calls men to preach he will see to it that the minister has a congregation as of old to listen to his message. The Scriptures teach that the church is the body of Christ. Rom. xii. 1; 1 Cor. xii. 1, that this church is composed of many different members and is compared to the human body, many members but one body. And these different members in the church performing different offices. These different members of Christ's body (the church) all have different "gifts," "talents" or traits of character differing one from another, both in quality, quantity and power. There may be quite a difference between a "gift" and a "talent," taste or adaptability to go forward and perform a task, from that of being especially called to the mission or work regardless of the lack of all three pre-requisite "gifts" or qualifications. Paul in 1 Cor. xii. and Rom. xii. teaches that the different members of the church are endowed with different "gifts" (not calls) or adaptability for different position in the church and not a call to that position. There may be quite a difference between a gift to perform a piece of work and a call to do that work. Paul in Rom. xii. 6-8, "Having these gifts (not calls) differing according to the favor that is given us whether prophecy, let us prophecy, etc., or ministry let us wait on our ministry, or he that exhorts an exhortation. He that giveth let him do so with simplicity. He that ruleth with diligence." All these different missions that come up in a Christian's life Paul teaches are to be carried out and performed, not by any special call but through the power of the "gift," adaptability, "talent," that is within you.

Again, 1 Cor. xii. 4, Paul again speaks on the same subject and says, "Now there are diversities of gifts" (not calls) but the same spirit. But are all gifted as apostles, are all gifted as teachers, are all gifted as workers of miracles? Have all the gift (not call) of healing, do all speak with tongues, do all interpret? As it is not so, and all do not have the same gifts, Paul says, "Covet earnestly the best "gifts." Paul did not say earnestly covet the best and most profitable call, but earnestly desire the best gift that thereby ye may be better able to honor and glorify God.

In the parable of the talents we are taught that the servants were not called to some especial work, but God gave or endowed them with different talents, adaptability for certain duties and told them to occupy until I come. Some of them enlarged, added other talents, while some disregarded their privileges, went and buried the talent given them. Covet the best "gift" and go work in my vineyard. Use the powers I have given you both of body and mind. Use the powers I have planted in your nature. If it be the foot, the finger, or toe of the great body of Christ, remember that member is essential to the growth and welfare of the body, remembering when one member suffers all the members suffer with it, and when one member rejoiceth, all the members rejoice with it. Earnestly covet the best gift. All are gifts and not calls.

L. S. BRONSON.

The Man of Sin.

Paul informed the church of the Thessalonians that two events must transpire before the day of Christ. 1st, the falling away. 2nd, the Man of Sin must be revealed. 2 Thess. ii. 3.

Who? Who is this man of sin?

He is always spoken of as a person, a man. Paul spoke of him as one of whom his readers had heard, indeed he is well known in prophecy, he is "the enemy," Deut. xxxii. 27, "the king," Isa. xiv. 4-27; xxx. 27, "the proud man," Hab. ii. 1, "another shall come in his own name," John v. 42. Daniel saw him as a little horn in chapters vii. 8; viii. 9.

The apostle states two of his acts, each of which distinguishes him from every other human being. 1st, "who opposeth and extolleth himself above all that is called God or that is worshiped." Daniel, whom Paul is quoting and applying states it thus, "He shall exalt himself and magnify himself above every god." xi. 36.

No king, priest, or pope has ever done this, the worst have only claimed to be God's agents, acting for and under him, this man does not regard any god. John ii. 22.

2nd, "He as God sitteth in the temple of God showing himself that he is God." Daniel says "they shall pollute the sanctuary of strength, and shall place the abomination that maketh desolate." There has been no "daily sacrifice," "continual burnt offering," R. V. since the Jews discontinued it during the Roman seige, hence no one has since taken it away.

That the man of sin and the little horn of Dan. vii. 8; viii. 9, are one person is shown by Paul who quotes his character and crimes from Dan. xi. 36, but the end of this son of perdition, Paul quotes almost literally from Dan. vii. 11, 26. The identity of the little horn in each vision is farther shown by his having the same usurpation in each and the same time limit, 3½ times, vii. 25; xii. 7. In Daniel the great characters are repeated, thus Babylon twice ii. 32; vii. 5; viii. 4; ii. 32; vii. 6; viii. 5; ii. 38; vii. 7; ix. 26, little horn twice, vii. 8; viii. 9.

When? The apostacy and the man of sin not only precede the day of Christ, but seem to be signs of its coming. If this is so, then the falling away is when "some shall depart from the faith" 1 Tim. iv; the "perilous times," 2 Tim. iii. 1. When they "heap together treasures," Jas. v. 2, "scoffers," 2 Pet. iii. 3, "neither cold nor hot," Rev. iii. 16. All these conditions seem to belong to the last days.

The identity and epoch of the man of sin are landmarks so important that we are emphatically cautioned to "let no man deceive you," 2 Thess. ii. 6; Matt. xxiv. 4; especially in regard to the time of his appearance; for the man of sin has a time, "his time" before which he cannot be revealed.

The apostle no doubt refers to the period, "time, times and a half" which twice in Daniel and once in Revelation limits the career of this person, at the end of which period his successful war on the saints, Dan. vii. 21. viii. 11-12; xi. 31-36; Rev. xii. 14; xiii. 1-8, his blasphemies and his life will end, Dan. vii. 11, 26; 2 Thes. ii. 8; Rev. xix. 20, he is always connected with the final trial and triumph of Israel.

The vision in Dan. viii. is called "the vision of the evening and morning" "the vision concerning the days" "the vision concerning the continual burnt offerings." R. V.

In this vision, with its explanations the man of sin is described for he is the chief actor in "what shall befall thy people in the latter days." Least any one should be deceived in the application of this vision, it is three times in literal language and with great emphasis located at the time of the end. "Understand, O son of man, for the vision belongeth to the time of the end." "Behold, I will make thee know what shall be in the latter time of the indignation, for it belongeth to the time of the end." R. V.

This man of sin comes up among the ten horns, Dan. vii. 8, but he also comes out of the Grecian horns, "in the latter time of their kingdom when the transgressors have come to the full." John v. 43. The Grecian kingdom, the last remnant of which disappeared long before Christ's time,—must have a "latter time," for it is to be "broken in pieces together" with the iron, the clay, the silver and the gold.

It seems that the man of sin rises after the destruction of the beasts, for it is the ten horns, not seven or eight, who eat her flesh and burn her with fire, whereas the man of sin is destroyed "by the brightness of his coming" a difference in the destruction, destroyer and time.

Where? From Dan. viii. 9, we infer that the king of fierce countenance stands up in the northwest of the Grecian kingdom. He enters the pleasant land, takes away the daily sacrifices and treads the sanctuary and host under foot. "They shall pollute the sanctuary of strength and shall take away the daily sacrifice, and they shall place the abomination that maketh desolate." "When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place, whoso readeth let him understand, let them which be in Judea flee to the mountains, for then shall be great tribulation." A time of trouble, Jacob's trouble, Jer. xxx. 7-11; Gen. xxxii. Thus Christ directs men to escape the great tribulation by fleeing out of Judea. It will not do to apply these prophecies to the persecution of Christians in Western Europe, by a power who, with all its crimes, worshiped the true God, and did not deny the Father or the Son.

Hieremias (or "Iremiah").

CHAPTER 16.

1. And thou shalt not take a wife, saith the Lord God of Israeel.

2. And a son shall not have been begotten unto thee nor a daughter in this place.

3. Because thus saith the Lord concerning the sons and concerning the daughters of those who are begetting in this place, and concerning their mothers who have brought them forth and concerning their fathers who have begotten them in this land;

4. With an unwholesome death will they die; they will not be publicly mourned, and they will not be buried; for a public example on the face of the land will they be for the wild-beasts of the land will they be and for the flying-things of the heavens; with sword will they fall and with famine will they have been brought to an end.

5. Thus saith the Lord, Do not enter into a Baccanalian procession for them, and do not go thy way to publicly mourn for them, and do not sorrow for them, because I have stood my peace away from this laity.

6. They shall not make characteristic-inclsions in their flesh for them;

7. And bread shall not be broken in sorrow for them in the way of consolation for the dead; they shall not drink a cup in the way of consolation for one's father and mother;

8. Into a house of a drinking-feast thou shalt not have entered to sit along with them in their midst to eat and to drink.

9. Because thus saith the Lord God of Israeel; Lo, I am taking away from this place in the sight of your eyes and in your days a voice of joy and a voice of rejoicing, a voice of a bridegroom and a voice of a bride;

10. And it will be that whenever thou shalt announce unto his laity all these oracular words, and they shall say unto thee, Why hath the Lord talked all these calamities in respect to us? What is our iniquity? And what is our sin which we have sinned in the sight of the Lord our God?

11. Then shalt also say unto them, It is because your fathers utterly forsook me, saith the Lord, and went after other gods, and served them, and utterly forsook me, and my law they did not watch to guard;

12. And ye have done more wickedly than your fathers; and lo, ye are [illegible] your way each one after the [illegible]ressing to your wicked heart [illegible] obeying me.

13. And I shall cast you away from this land into a land which ye and your fathers have not known, and then will ye serve as bond servants other gods which will not show you mercy.

14. Therefore, lo, days are coming, saith the Lord, and they will not say any more, as the Lord liveth who led the sons of Israeel up out of a land of Aiguptos.

15. But as the Lord liveth who led up the house of Israel from the north and from all the countries where he thrust them out; and I shall restore them to their land which I gave to their fathers.

16. Lo, I am sending the many fishermen, saith the Lord, and they will fish for them; and after that I am sending the many hunters and they will hunt for them over every mountain and hill, and from out the holes in the rocks.

17. Because mine eyes are upon all their ways, and their iniquities have not been hid before mine eyes.

18. And I shall repay double their evil-doings and their sins in which they have desecrated my land with the dead bodies of their abominations and with their transegressions with which they have filled mine inheritance with discordant error.

19. (The prophet addresses God) O Lord, thou art my strength and my responsive-help and my refuge in days of evil doings; unto thee will nations come from a farthest of the earth, and they will say, How did our fathers acquire false idols, and there is not profit in them?

20. Will a man make for himself gods, and they are not gods? (God resumes his discourse).

21. Therefore, lo, I shall reveal unto them in that period my hand, and I shall make them to know my ability, and they will comprehend that my name is Lord.

COMMENT.

In the 1st verse there is no "The Word of the Lord came," etc. as in the R. V.

2nd verse, Also should be "begotten unto thee" instead of "have" R. V.

3rd verse "who are begetting" instead of "are born."

4th verse "unwholesome" instead of "grievous." Also should be "a public-example" instead of "dung."

5th verse says "Do not enter into a Baccanalian procession for them, etc," instead of "Enter not into a house of mourning, etc." R. V. and there is nothing said about "tender-mercies and loving-kindness" as in the R. V.

This kind of mourning here spoken of in the 5th, 6th and 7th verses was not Joudaic but heathen and Baalistic, making incision in their flesh and shaving their heads, breaking bread and giving a cup of consolation for the dead father or mother; but obscured in all these verses by the R. V. translation.

The same is true of the 8th verse though not to the same degree.

In 9th verse "the Lord of Hosts" not in the text, the rest near enough in R. V.

18th verse "Announce all these oracular words" instead of "show all these words"—the rest of the verse well enough.

11th verse somewhere near the thought but not exact.

12th verse the same—approximates the thought.

13th verse does not say, "For I will show you no favor," but does say "other gods which will not show you mercy."

14th and 15th verses near enough perhaps.

16th verse does not say "I will send for many fishers and hunters" but does say "I am sending fishers and hunters, etc." and "over every mountain and hill, etc."

17th verse well enough.

18th verse has no word for "first" —the rest near enough perhaps.

19th verse "stronghold" should be "responsive-help." The last two clauses are all wrong. Read and compare. Both are questions.

20th verse near enough.

21st verse all wrong. Read and compare and especially note that "Jehovah" R. V. should be "Lord." This is a common error. In the first place there was no "Jehovah" name. "Javah" was "the ineffable name" which they were not allowed to write under the old covenant restrictions, and means "the healing breath."

Brethren and Sisters:

I am stronger than ever I was in my life in the faith of the gospel of the kingdom; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes and obeys it; for the promise is sure to them that endureth to the end, for the Word says there will be no more death, nor sorrow, nor crying, neither will there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away. And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold I make all things new. Now who is this sitting on the throne? It is none other but the Lord Jesus, he is now come with the mansions all prepared; he now says with authority, Behold! I make all things new. He is not now a Man of Sorrows and acquainted with grief; but a King on his throne, which is none other but the throne of his Father David, for it was promised to him before he was born, by the angel Gabriel to Mary.

WHEN you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

ON TRIAL

Three Months for Twenty-Five Cents.

WILL YOU TRY IT?

A new [illegible] Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $1.95 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

Seventy-five More.

I receive enquiries as to when Pine Woods Bible Class Book will be printed?

In answer, I will say, when I receive seventy-five more subscriptions, the book can be printed, and sent forth on its mission, to teach the glad tidings. If all who really want it had said so, it could now be out sowing seed. When God's professed servants make his cause a secondary matter, and put it off to a "convenient time," his cause suffers. Now all who really want the book please sit down and write me, as soon as you have read this, and then things will move at once. Don't wait until a more convenient time. God's business demands prompt attention.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.
W. H. WILSON.

Evangelizing Notice.

I expect to make an evangelizing trip to Arizona in December and return late in the winter or early spring. Any brethren that may be reached on or near the Southern Pacific R. R. between Portland, Oregon and Phoenix, Arizona, may secure my service by corresponding with me at Scholls, Ore., or Phoenix, Ari. I have cut loose from my farm and desire to devote my whole time to the work. Help to the cause will be gratefully accepted.

Pine Woods Bible Class in Book Form.

I have several times been solicited to have the past lessons of the Class put in Book form.

I have decided to do this, if I can secure enough subscribers to the book to warrant the expense of publishing it.

The book if printed will contain over four hundred pages. How many copies will you take at $1.25 each?

Send your pledges but no money until I can see if sufficient is subscribed for to warrant the expense.

Send your pledges right away, so that the book can be put to press as soon as possible. Address W. H. Wilson, 420 N. Willow Ave., Austin Station Chicago, Ill.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in other of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Reserrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JANUARY 10, 1906. NUMBER 2.

Poetry.

At the Wailing Place.

"We come to the walls of our Zion,
"And weeping cast dust on our heads,
"For, in place of our beautiful temple
"The feet of the Edomite treads.

"No spot is there left for our worship,
"No way to get rid of our load,
"No altar, no priest, Mediator,
"To make intercession to God.

"We have heard, the rude jesting of scorn,
"The cursing, the lashing, the tears,
"Been pushed into corners by rabbins,
"Or banished to fight with our fears.

"Still hoping the promised Messiah,
"Our Temple and Land would restore,
"Our feasts would revive, and our services,
"Give back its pomp as before.

"But he comes not our hosts to deliver,
"Nor breaks the oppressor in twain,
"Why so long, O so long does he tarry?
"Is our trust in Jehovah in vain?

He has come! Poor Pilgrims! That Savior.
—The Manger-born child—was unknown
With no comeliness, glory or beauty,
He's despised, disdained by his own.

He has come! Your appointed Passover,
Was slain on the cross for your sin,
Accept him, and fly from your bondage
Your throne and your country to win.

For again will he come—the Messiah,
Your foes to destroy in his wrath;
None stand who he points in his arrows,
And kindleth his fires in their path!

The Hidden Gospel.

If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost. In whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine into them 2 Cor. iv:4. How true the above statement is, and yet how few there are now, who fully realize it. According to the apostle there are those who are lost and he makes it very plain. They are those who believe not. The gospel herein spoken of can be none other than the gospel Christ preached, which was the gospel of the kingdom of God. Gospel meaning "good news," glad tidings. When used in connection with the above quotation means glad tidings of the kingdom of God. Now what are the glad tidings concerning this kingdom? When this language was used we find that the government called the kingdom of God was in an overturned condition. Ezek. xxi. 26, 27. Thus saith the Lord God, Remove the diadem, and take off the crown, this shall not be the same; exalt him that is low, abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it (the kingdom in the hands of the profane and wicked prince of Israel). This was the kingdom of God or Israel which had been in the hands of Solomon. The same over which David had ruled. This Scripture states positively that God would overturn it, and history both sacred and profane adds testimony to this fact. Then why deny it? Our text tells why. The God of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not; lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ should shine unto them. Our heavenly Father hath done all that he can to provide us an eternal future home. If we permit the world to lead us astray we must suffer the result. The gospel that is preached by the churches is not the gospel which was preached by the Christ and his apostles. If you are good, that is if you obey the moral precepts God will give you a home in heaven. This is a part of the rubbish that hides the gospel of Christ.

If you ask an ordinary church member what he expects to do when he reaches heaven he will tell you he does not know. Some would say, I expect to sing praises to God for his goodness in saving me. This is all well enough if it were Scripture, but unfortunately there is no such a promise made between the two lids of the Bible. Paul calls it "our gospel and the glorious gospel of Christ." Now I insist that the gospel spoken of by the apostle was the gospel pertaining to the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. And as concerning that he raised him (Jesus) up from the dead, now no more to return to corruption, he said on this wise, I will give you the sure mercies of David. Acts xiii. 34. Note the marginal rendering of sure mercies of David, "ta osia," holy or just things. What were these "holy or just" things? Peter said on the day of Pentecost that Christ was raised from the dead to be seated on David's throne. Then the just things herein spoken of could not mean that this throne would never be restored. If Jesus ever sits in David's throne it must be on this earth.

Again the angel said to Mary, the mother of Jesus, that the Lord God would give unto him the throne of his father David, and that he should rule over the house (kingdom) of Jacob forever; and unto his kingdom there shall be no end. Again, Isaiah says. Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the mighty God (rather the might or power of God). The everlasting Father (the Father of the everlasting age), the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom to order it, with justice from henceforth even for ever. Listen to the next sentence. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform it.

My dear reader, if you are not a believer in the truths above stated please compare these evidences with what you hear preached by the churches, not one is human testimony, and to make it more emphatic we are told the that, the zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform it. The Lord of hosts will sent Jesus on David's throne. As a former article I think I proved that Jesus is not now sitting on his throne but in his Father's throne. When he comes with all his holy saints with him then will he sit on his throne. Don't let false teachers working in the interest of the god of this world blind your eyes. God is now calling for men and women to prepare themselves for future rulers in the age to come. Acts xv. 14, 16; Rev. v. 10. You may become one of these rulers, if you but open your eyes and unstop your ears. You are admonished to take heed what your hear and how you hear.

Jesus after his resurrection sent his apostles to preach the gospel and said, Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, etc. Mark xvi. 15, 16. They were to preach the gospel which means the kingdom of God. The phrases the gospel and the kingdom of God being the same in meaning. In Luke ix. 2, 3 we read, He sent them to preach the kingdom of God and to heal, and they departed and went through the town preaching the gospel and healing the sick. In this Scripture we find these terms used interchangably, one for the other. In Acts viii. Philip went preaching the Word. He preached Christ to the Samaritans and when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ they were baptized both men and women. The terms "the Word," "Christ" and the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ mean the same. The last is a complete statement and means what I have stated concerning Christ as a future ruler over this earth as King of kings and Lord of lords. If you take your Bible and study these terms you will find that to preach the gospel of Christ you must preach more than "good news" or "glad tidings." We have said that the Apostle calls it "our gospel" and "the glorious gospel of Christ." This makes it a definite gospel. There can be but one true gospel, as there is but one Father and one Son. Now Paul says to the Galatians, "Though we, or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before so say I now again, if any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received let him be accursed. I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man. For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it but by the revelation of Jesus Christ."

Again in this letter Paul says, "That God preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed." In the 16th verse of this chapter the apostle says, "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not and to seeds, as of many; but as of one and to thy seed, which is Christ." Do you know, my readers, that God promised to Abraham and his seed (Christ) the everlasting possession of "a land"? If not, you begin reading with the xii. of Gen. and read including the xxii. chapter.

Many assert that this promise was fulfilled under the law. Note the promise made to Abraham, Gen. xxii. 18, "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obayed my voice." In Exodus xix. God said, "Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people, for all the earth is mine." Now Abraham had been tried and found faithful. The other promise was a conditional one, "If ye will obey my voice indeed." We learn by searching the Scriptures that they did not obey, therefore they were deprived of the land.

In Gal. iii. 18 Paul says, "If the inheritance be of the law it is no more of promise; but God gave it to Abraham by promise. In Acts vii. 5, it says. "He (God) gave him none inheritance in it, no not so much as to set his foot on; yet he promised he would give it to him for a possession and to his seed after him when as yet he had no son. Stephen said it was the land wherein ye now dwell. The land of Canaan. If we ignore the promise of the land we reject the gospel of the kingdom of God. We dare not substitute an inheritance in heaven for God's promised inheritance on this earth. How often men pray, "Our Father who art in heaven. Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." And then preach that the kingdom has come and his will is being done in the earth. Let us take heed what we believe and what we pray, is the wish of your brother in Christ.

Hieremias (or "Jeremiah").

CHAPTER 17.

1st 4 verses not in the text.

5. Accursed is the man who hath his hope in a mere man, and who shall stay his arm of flesh upon him, and whose heart standeth away from the Lord;

6. And he will be like the wild-tamarisk in the wilderness; he will not see when the good things shall have come, and he will pitch his tent in salt-marshes in the wilderness, in a salt-land that is not inhabited.

7. And blessed is the man who trusteth in the Lord, and the Lord will be his hope.

8. And he will be like a tree that flourisheth beside waters and that casteth its root upon moisture; it will not have feared when a scorching heat shall have come, and the trunk thereupon will be leafy; in a year of a drouth it will not have feared, and will not leave off bearing fruit.

9. The heart is profound as compared with all things and it is man (the natural or generic man) and who will comprehend him?

10. I am the Lord who searcheth hearts and testeth secret-thoughts, that I may give to each one according to his ways and according to the fruits of his devices.

11. A partridge hath sounded a signal-call and led together offspring which she hath not brought forth; there is a man who maketh his wealth not in a judicial-way; in the half of his days will they utterly forsake him, and in his last days he will be wanting in good sense.

12. O thou our Sanctification, our exalted throne of glory.

13. Thou Patient-endurance of Israel, O Lord, may all those who forsake thee have been put to shame; may they have been written as having stood away, because they forsook the Lord, a fountain of life.

14. Heal me, O Lord, and I shall have been healed; save me and I shall have been saved, because my boast art thou.

15. Lo, they say unto me, where is the Word of the Lord? Let it come.

16. But I have not toiled wearily in following after thee, and a human day I have not longed for, thou knowest well; the things that go their way through my lips are before thy face.

17. Do not come to be in an alien way toward me; spare me in a day of wickedness.

18. May those who persecute me have been put to shame, and may I not have been put to shame; may they have been awe-struck and may I not have been awe-struck; lead upon them a wicked day, crush them with a two-fold crushing-blow.

19. Thus saith the Lord, Go on foot and stand in the gateways of the sons of thy laity whereby the kings of Jouda are accustomed to go their way in and out, and in all the gateways of Hierousaleem.

20. And thou shalt say unto them; May ye have hearkened unto thy Word of the Lord, all ye kings of Joudaia and all Hierousaleem, ye who are going your way in by these gateways;

21. Thus saith the Lord, Set a watch on your souls, and do not carry burdens on the day of the sabbatic-rites and do not go your way out by the gateways of Hierousaleem;

22. And do not carry out burdens out of your houses on the day of the sabbatic-rites and do secular work shall ye do; sanctify the day of the sabbatic-rites even as I commanded your fathers; and they did not hearken and did not incline their ear;

23. And they've hardened their neck more than their fathers in not hearkening to me, saith the Lord, and in not accepting chastening-instruction.

24. And it will be if ye hearken to me, saith the Lord, not to carry in burdens through the gateways of this city on the day of the sabbatic-rites, and sanctify the day of the sabbatic-rites, not to do any secular-work;

25. There will also come in through the gateways of this city kings and rulers seated upon David's throne, and riding upon their chariots and horses, they and their rulers, Jouda's men of mark and those who dwell in Hierousaleem, and this city will have been inhabited forever (or unto the animate-age).

26. And they will come from out the cities of Jouda and round about Hierousaleem and from out a land of Benjamin, and from out a land of the plain and from the mountain and from the land at the south bringing whole-burnt-offerings and sacrifices and incense-offerings and manna (a sweet gum of Arabia) and frankincense, bringing praise into the house of the Lord.

27. And it will be if ye do not hearken to me to sanctify the day of the sabbatic-rites, not to bear burdens and not to go your way in by the gateways of Hierousaleem on the day of the sabbatic-rites, I shall also kindle a fire in the gateways thereof and it will devour the highways round about Hierousaleem, and will not have been quenched.

COMMENT.

The first four verses are omitted in the best text as unauthorized although they harmonize in their general tenor with other Scripture.

In the 5th verse there is no "Thus saith the Lord" in the text and the R. V. does not distinguish in this place and many more places the difference between the generic and the specific man, instead of "maketh flesh his arm" it should read "who shall stay his arm of flesh upon him" (this mere man or generic-man). Also instead of "departeth from" should be "standeth away from" (or apostacises).

In the 6th verse "heath" should be "tamarisk" as in margin of R. V. There is no text for "parched-places." In the 7th verse "and" omitted in R. V. tense of the verb in next clause changed from the future to the present unwarrantably.

In the 8th verse "and" instead of "for" introducing the verse and "spreadeth out his roots by the river" should be "casteth its roots upon moisture." In next clause "heat" should be "scorching-heat." Next clause reads "and the trunk thereupon (not "leaf") shall be leafy (not "green"). In next clause "will not have feared" instead of "will not be careful."

The reader will do well to note carefully and compare the translation here given of the 9th verse word for word. For as rendered in the C. V. and R. V. it has been a noted proof-text and many theological battle over the natural depravity of man has been fought with this as one of the "Thus saith the Lord weapons."

Neither of these translations the C. V. or R. V. approach the true thought as the reader will see by comparison. A great ethical thought and principle however is stated in these first two clauses upon which fundamental teaching and much later Scriptural teaching is based. For instance "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." C. V. and R. V. "reins" an old obsolete English word should be "secret-thoughts" in the 10th verse. How the thought of these two verses could possibly be worse obscured I cannot see. Just enough of truth remains "to deceive (if it were possible) the very elect."

In the 11th verse there is no word for "fool" and the general rendering is somewhere near the thought in C. V. and R. V. compare though.

The 12th verse is nowhere near the thought of the text as it is address, and in the vocation case as in the first clause of the 13th verse. Last clause should begin, "May they, etc." as it is a prayer to the God he has been addressing.

The 14th verse is well enough except that "praise" should be "boast" correlating with "If you boast in the Lord, etc." as he does here. The 15th verse well enough.

The 16th verse nowhere near the thought. Compare and see where Paul got his figure of "a human day" in Cor.—he was not being tried nor did he try himself by "a human day." There is nothing about "hastening from being a shepherd after thee."

In the 17th verse "in an alien-way" is rendered by the word "terror" and "day of weakness" by "day of evil" in the R. V.

The 18th verse approximates the thought but is not accurate.

In the 19th verse "Go" should be "go on foot"—this not an important difference of teaching. "Gate" should be "gateways" and "children of thy people," "sons of thy laity" or "covenant people."

"20th verse well enough.

21st verse "Take heed to yourselves" should be "Set a watch on your souls"—a much stronger expression—and from this verse on to the close of the chapter wherever the C. V. and the R. V. have "sabbath-day" it should be "the day of the sabbatic-rites." This makes the instruction applicable not only to the "seventh-day" but any other "sabbatic-day" of convocation and observance like "the Pascha" and other feast-days of convocation.

In the 26th verse "burnt-offerings" should be "whole-burnt-offerings" and "oblations" should be "manna" (a sweet gum of Arabia) and not as in the marginal reference "meal-offerings"—and "thanksgiving" should be "into." In the 27th verse "palaces of Jerusalem" should be "the highways round about Hierousaleem" which of course meant a devastation of the whole province of Joudaia—an important difference I think.

CHAS. GARDNER.

"In trying to ruin a man's character you spoil your own."

"The restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Also a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings and the Ecclesial bodies as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Power of a Word.

The great scholar, Arago, acknowledged his indebtedness in mathematical studies to D'Alembert. Being questioned as to when he enjoyed the advantage of his instructions, he said that once when looking at a French book, the binding of which was broken, he caught a glimpse of this sentence of D'Alebert's: "Go on, sir; go on!" and these words, seen on a scrap of paper which the book-binder had used to bind the book, so stirred his heart and fired his courage, that he went on till he became one of the greatest astronomers of his time.

Augustine tells us the course of his life was changed by a voice which said, "Go read! go read!" And many persons can refer to some single sentence which has been to them a motto, and which has at some critical point turned the current of their existence in this world.

But, if the words of men are thus potent, lingering in the memory and shaping the life, what shall be said of the words of the Almighty God, which rouse and stir and change the hearts of men, and which, implanted within, spring up to life and immortality, renewing the will, changing the mind, and saving the soul? No man can tell what might or blessing will come to those who receive with meekness the engrafted Word of God. Let us keep our hearts open to receive his heavenly message, and pray that God may teach us His way, and reveal in us the power and glory of the gospel of his grace.—Armory.

Obituary.

Sister Nannie A. Wise, (Owen,) was born in Carrol, Co., Kentucky, Jan., 29, 1838, Died Dec. 28, 1905, aged 72 years, 11 months and [illegible]

The deceased came to [illegible] Ind. Nov. 1858, and the following year was united in marriage to William Wise. To this union were born three children, Sarah L; William Perry and Arthur Thomas, two of whom survive her. She also leaves one brother, Wm. Owen, and one sister, Sarah E. Legg, besides other relatives and friends to mourn her departure.

In her childhood, at the age of 12 years she united with the Christian Church, after which under ministry of Nathan Horneday she joined the Church of God and died in the faith.

The funeral was preached by Rev. Miller, at her brother's home, W. L. Owen.

How long shall death, the tyrant reign
And triumph o'er the just,
While the rich blood of martyrs slain
Lies mingled in the dust.

W. L. OWEN.

Mrs. Adelia Clem, wife of Bro. D. L. P. Clem, was born Aug. 12, 1849, and died at her home at South Bend, Ind., Jan. 1, 1906, at the age of 56 years, 4 months, and 20 days. She was united in marriage to her husband, Jan. 18, 1873. Besides her husband, she leaves one son, one daughter, one grand daughter, and two sisters. The deceased was a faithful member of the Church of God at South Bend, and although she was not enjoying good health for years, she was present at the church meeting whenever possible. Her death came somewhat suddenly. The writer spoke words of comfort from Psa. xvii. 15.

WHEN you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

The talk of war between Germany and France over the Moroccan question has caused the Berlin merchants to insert war clauses in contracts, and take out insurance against war losses. It is almost certain that England will be drawn into the trouble if it comes.

In Russia the policy of simply killing the revolutionists has resulted in quieting the disturbances in many places. Bands of the peasants roam the country, cutting railroads, burning and robbing estates, but these will be taken care of if the cities are settled down to business again.

A dispatch from Odessa to the London Standard says:—"A leading municipal counselor announces that he will not be surprised if there shall occur here within the next few months, a massacre of the Jews more appalling than any yet perpetrated. The same fears are expressed by many others who are neither anti-Semites, nor sensation mongers. Rabid anti-Semites openly describe the revolution as a God-sent opportunity of finally ridding the country of the all-devouring Jewish parasites.' The civil governor, who has been warned, replies that the Jews will be effectually safe-guarded but it is doubtful whether he could cope with any widely organized attack, and the alarming fact remains that anti-Jewish feeling here has never been more intense."

Were you ever placed in a position where an extra call was made urgently demanding that you raise a sum of money on a given day? Did you not then wish that those who were owing you would consider your strait, and send in early what they could, so you could rest easy at night and not have to worry through the day, as the exact time of settlement drew near? We are asking you kindly to consider us in this position. Some have responded, but not quite half enough. We [illegible] our friends will do all they [illegible] is the time to send.

"She Hath Done All She Could." Mark xiv. 8.

Dear ones all:

As the year 1905 is nearing its close would it not be well for each one to ballance accounts, both in worldly business and the great Master's cause? What does the Lord require of me? Certainly to be honest, for one thing; and he has demanded us to bear, not simply fruit, but much fruit. So shall ye be my disciples. The Master will not accept a few bunches of poor knearled, sour grapes, but he exacts an abundant harvest. Can he say of you and me, as of the poor woman, who gladly brought the costly ointment to anoint her blessed Christ. "They have done what they could." It is so easy for selfish purposes to spend the quarter, half dollar or dollars, but if the cause of Christ demands that much, would we not stop and calculate whether we could afford it or not? Truly we are living in an age of greed, when the masses are lovers of pleasure or money, more than lovers of God or anything pertaining to his cause. An object lesson is before us as every day trains stopping at our depot unloads its human freight, every one with arms loaded with packages—Christmas toys—gifts comparatively worthless, that the child will break or tire of in twenty-four hours—just worthless trash, while the poor child in yonder dimly lighted hovel is crying with hunger and cold. Perhaps the money for these gifts should have paid the long accumulating grocery bill or the religious paper, while the editor who has faithfully done his part is spending sleepless nights as he thinks of the notes past due and knows if you would honestly pay him, he could be honest with his friend who waits for his just dues. If you look to The Restitution you may be surprised to find you are back. One, two or three years, put your hand in your pocket, take the money that belongs to that other man, and send it immediately, do not wait, this year is most gone, meet the first smiles of 1906, clean from such a sin, for sour grapes, it is surely right down wickedness. It is not doing as we would like to be done by. I have always practiced one rule, and find it works well, never allow a debt to go by a single day after it is due. There is no excuse for any well man not paying in advance for his paper.

Do you love the truth? Prove it by letting your light shine everywhere, especially at home. How many times this year have your children heard your voice in prayer? How many mornings or evenings have you read the Word of life in their hearing? How often have you told them the need of believing the truth you say is "The power of God unto salvation"? Have you neglected these lessons so necessary to form their character? How do you expect they will understand this saving truth if they never hear it? You fathers and mothers are the ones to interest them. Are we so selfish that we do not care to see our children saved? Will we be comforted with these words, "She hath done what she could?" Or will you hear instead, Oh father, mother, why did you not teach me the way to be saved? O you left me to grope along alone in darkness, now death is my portion. Whose garments will be stained with their blood? Perhaps we are not doing all we might for our neighbors and their children. The light of the glorious gospel is not shining very bright in your heart, if you are letting others die without the truth, and you casting in your influence and money for that which is not gospel. Is that bearing fruit for him? Who said, "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you?" He commanded us to "Preach the Word." The true disciple's mission is to "earnestly contend for the faith." The Lord will accept no other fruit.

Dear ones, if you or I, or our neighbors are ever saved it will be because "Christ is formed in us—the hope of glory." He must be first, worldly considerations next. The Lord will require much fruit of us, nothing less will do. Well, Bro. Woodward, what would you have us do this incoming year of 1906? Let each one ask, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Then do not begin to shirk your duties, but act, work, pray with your family—work with your friends, get the work started in your neighborhood, encourage your preacher by giving him what belongs to him, not grudgingly but freely. If you think you are not paying him what you would want to work for, be honest and pay him more. Pay up for your Restitution just as you do for your daily and weekly papers, leave the costly furniture out of the house, and feed and furnish your souls by doing more for Christ's cause in every department of the Lord's vineyard. We will be happy when we witness the abundant fruitage which will be to the glory of God—selfishness and human greed will not count for salvation in the day of the Lord's coming. To every faithful soul a happy new year of Christ like deeds.

Yours ever struggling for the truth.

B. W. Woodward.

P. S. By the way brethren, how many of you have read Bro. Joblin's article in Dec. 20th number of Restitution? If you have not read it, do not wait, hunt it up and read it, then let us all try and practice it. The sentiment contained in that one article is worth the price of the paper for one year. The title is "The Temple of God."

"The New Thought" Religion.

"The New Thought" is what the new religion is called that is spreading so rapidly in our country. Ella Wheeler Wilcox, it is said, is the editress of a "New Thought" Journal, and many of her poems, especially those classed as "Poems of Power" show that she is a convert, and not only a convert but an apostle of this most blasphemous theory. She places our dear and adorable Savior on a level with Krishna and Bhudda; says "We lean no longer on a tortured Christ," that "she hopes sometime to reach her "Nirvana," and that "all is illusion" that "there are no people living or dead," etc.

These expressions sound very much like Bhuddism to me—not covert Bhuddism, but openly avowed, and gloried in, Bhuddism. She talks about God, but the God of the Bible does not lead us on to Nirvana, but to life eternal through a literal resurrection of the dead. Her God seems to be what some of the heathen called "the soul of the universe"—and this soul was only the blind, impersonal forces of Nature, and not a God at all. It was an "it" and not a personal being with all power in his hands, not a God with all-seeing eyes, with ears, with countenance, and able to save a lost and ruined world. We want no such a God. We want a God that speaks to us through his Word, a God who tells us who we are and where we are going, who can listen to us when we pray, and who has the means to answer our prayers. We want a God who can guide us in the way of right, who can protect us from our enemies, and who can promise the most wonderful things and bring them to pass.

We do not believe that a man, though he belong to no church, and "has never read a line of Scripture" is all right, "if he love his fellowmen." How long would love for humanity stay in the world if the Bible were not here, was not read, was not obeyed? We hardly dare think. But let Ella Wheeler Wilcox be transported to a spot where the Bible has never been and she will find out. Love is not there. The sick ones are taken outside the villages, fed a little, and left to die. The aged one is dressed in the skin of some wild animal and placed where he will be sure to be shot by the hunter. Child after child is murdered, captives are immolated and eaten.

Get away with the "New Thought." To me, there is nothing beautiful in it, it is all negation, not a straw to lay hold of, no one to hope in, no Christ to save. The atoning blood is taken away. God's dear Son is trampled under foot. Do we remember what is said about "counting the blood of the covenant—an unholy thing?" I could not sleep—my thoughts ran on and on, all through the slowly dragging hours of night, after I had read, "We lean no more on a tortured Christ." They had taken my Savior away and I knew not where they had laid him. But, O thank God! he lives! he lives! and stands on the right hand of God, ever more to make intercession for us, our sins can be forgiven. We can believe, we can obey, we can trust in him, who has been made a sin-offering for us, for he has risen from the dead, has ascended to heaven and is coming back to earth again to give eternal life to all them that are his, living or dead. "Thank God for the gift of Jesus!" We are not ready to turn from the living God to Bhuddism, but wait for God's Son from heaven.

The Character of Jesus.

Among the countless millions of human beings who have been born and reached the age of accountability not one, save Jesus, have been sinless. He is the solitary exception, towering far above even the best and noblest of men; and today unapproachable in point of character by those who have had the greatest advantages of faith, and religious training.

A religion headed by one possessing a perfect type of character, has in it the essence of a practical system. Christianity has such a leader in the person of Jesus, the Christ; and for this reason it stands recommended to the world. It is impossible at the present to set up a rival religion. Very few have dared to call in question his perfection of character. So nearly universal is the opinion that Jesus was sinless, that the few exceptions need not be taken into the account. The points in the charge are unimportant and doubtful. To single out a few points found in the brief evangelical records as showing that he was fallible, morally speaking, is not decisive. The things brought forward against the claim that he was without sin, can be explained without impeaching his character. Mr. Newman asserts that there were two imperfections in his character. The first is the exhibition of indignation against the hypocritical Pharisees; the second, the absence of mirth, and of laughter its natural and genial manifestation. This is all. Strauss also denies the sinlessness of Jesus; but not on the ground of any alleged facts. His argument is philanthropical, to wit, the impossibility of sinlessness in any created being. A French writer, F. Pecant likewise denies the sinlessness of Jesus. He refers to the following facts as evidence of imperfection; the conduct of Jesus toward his mother, in his twelfth year; his rebuke administered to her at the wedding feast of Cana; his expulsion of the traffickers from the temple; his cursing of the unfruitful figtree; the destruction of the herd of swine; his bitter invictives against the Pharisees; and his own rejection of the attribute "good" in the dialogue with the rich young man.

The testimony born by Inspiration touching the character of Jesus places him before us in the light of a sinless being and does this in two ways; by direct statement, and by a brief historical record of what he said and did on certain occasions, and under different circumstances. It may be observed, under this second point that if he had been like the best of other human beings as to his intellectual and moral constitution; endowed with no greater mastery over his passions and appetites than they, he would have said and done things so plainly wrong that no one could defend the claim of his perfect character. His case is entirely different. A few men on insufficient ground conclude that he was not quite perfect, yet they are willing to bestow on the Nazarene their meed of praise. Moral standards change. They are not the same among highly civilized nations and those less advanced; yet before the judgment of both his character stands unimpeached.

What says Inspiration by direct statement "For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." 2 Cor. v. 21.

"For such a high priest became us (who is) holy, guileless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens." Heb. vii. 26.

He had no sins to offer sacrifices for like the high priests who served under the law. So runs the inspired record. Again, "Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth; who when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously." 1 Pet. ii. 22, 23. He was put to the severest test and came off victor. I will give one more citation; For we have not a high priest who can not be touched with the feeling of our infirmities but was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin." Ja. iv. 15.

How close to the Christian heart this comes! how suited to our daily need!

Well might the great Teacher challenge his captious opponents. "Which of you convinceth (convicteth) me of sin?" That they did not was not for lack of purpose and adroitness. Any other than Jesus would have been entrapped.

Dear Restitution:

With deep anguish and sadness of heart I inform you of the death of my dear husband, J. K. Hoy, aged 86 years, and as I am 76 years old, very feeble, and financially depressed, am compelled to ask you to discontinue the beloved Restitution paper. I will greatly miss its weekly visits, but cannot pay for it now. My husband loved it next to his Bible, and subscribed for it nearly forty years ago. Oh, with what delight he welcomed its arrival, and with what pleasure and eagerness he hastened to peruse its interesting and loving pages! He was immersed into the all saving name of Christ about fifty years ago, and up to the day of his death nothing gave him greater pleasure than to proclaim the great and precious promises as taught in the Word of God; and he died in full assurance of Christ's speedy return to set up his kingdom, and reward the just. He is resting in the lap of earth, silently awaiting the spirit birth; that Christ will impart to all the just, when he reanimates their sacred dust.

Yes, in the cold, dark grave he's sleeping,
This wife and children sad and weeping;
Oh, how sad to see his vacant chair!
Oh, how we miss him everywhere!

I ask the prayers of all the loved ones in our sad bereavement. Yours in the one "hope."

Sarah Hoy.

Editor Restitution:

Please find in this my subscription. Oh how I long to see my Savior come and remove the curse from the earth and fill it with righteousness, where sorrow and sighing will turn into joy. When the saints will reign in righteousness with our Savior, Jesus Christ. Oh how I long for that blessed time when all will know him and learn war no more. Prophecy is fulfilling fast. Are we ready, watching, waiting for that blessed day? Cheer up, brothers and sisters, Jesus is coming soon.

S. R. Clinkenbeard.

Brethren, beloved in the Lord:

Fear not, little flock. We are all incapable of continued action without God's help. Let us all awake, gird on our armor of faith until sin and death shall pass away. Then the long sought kingdom will come; a home of righteousness, where saints will have dominion in a bright celestial home. Cheer up. We hope the resurrection morn and kingdom is near. I trust and pray we will all be ready for possession.

J. L. Caylor.

Editor Restitution:

We have sent [illegible] and earnestly two of your [illegible], and at the same time of our negligence that I desire pardon of you for delay, and to let you know I appreciate your labor and kindness in continuing The Restitution, and also renew for the same, and mention a few of the many articles that were so interesting to me.

I wish to begin with Dec. 13, 1905, "What the Coming of the Lord Jesus means to us." By studying this article we can see one Brother trying to contend earnestly for the faith. See Jude 3. 1 Cor. i. 10; Phil. i. 27.

In the same issue we have a "Letter to the Children," that is brimful of the truth, showing our need of holiness in the Word of the Lord, which is indeed "The Sword of the Spirit" and the Light to guide us through this present evil world. Psa. cxix. 105; Eph. vi. 17. This is represented by that "fire and hammer" spoken of by Jeremiah the prophet, Jer. xxiii. 29, and Heb. iv. 11, 12. In her next article, "Preaching the Bible," she gives us a clew to the perverters of the gospel of Christ, and we understand that they too are spoken of by Jeremiah the prophet, Jer. xxiii. 30, and are calling for help on all sides—to "hear the burden of the Lord." So let us try the teaching by "the sure Word of prophecy," 2 Peter i. 16, 19-21, on that all important aupject, "The Power and Coming of Christ."

Then we have "Sleep not Death," by Bro. Thomas, so full of solid comfort. Amen. And Brother A. C. Stephens shows his ability to rightly divide the Word of Truth. Amen. And we hope that he will take heed to the admonition of our dear Editor. And well may the parable of "Excuses" by Brother Wince, be put in front, as a signal, showing where so many fell. But we need help on 1 Tim. v. 8, as the good Lord has blessed our union with eight lovely children, from one to twelve years of age. See Psalm cxxvii. 3. And our mother with long life, Psa. xci. 14-16. She is now past 76 years of age, hence a child again. So Good-by.

Yours, in hope of Israel's King.

R. A. Humphreys.

Dear Restitution:

Enclosed please find my subscription for The Restitution and fifty cents to be given to the helping fund for those too poor to pay for it. My family are believers and we always enjoy the paper each week and though we are isolated we try to work for our Master, watching and waiting. I often wish I could attend there with all true believers. May the Lord bless and prosper you in your work. Pray for us, that we all may be faithful to the end.

Your Sister in Christ.

Mrs. B. Coleman.

Dear Ones Scattered Abroad:

I noticed in The Restitution a few months ago that there was a movement being agitated to start a child's paper, but have heard nothing about it of late. I have been thinking that it would be a good plan to devote a page or a half of the paper to that end. We must entice the young folks by something suited to their age and disposition. We can not put old heads upon young shoulders. Paul said that the "babes in Christ needed milk." The Restitution is full of meat suited to the older ones, especially those that are already interested in the cause of Christ; but it is dry meat for those outside of Christ, and especially the young. We must do something to entice the children to study the Word, get them interested and it would be the means of interesting older ones. I have often heard the saying, "salt the cow to catch the calf." If that plan is good in a courtship, why not salt the calf to catch the cow. My son takes the Thresherman's Magazine, and in it is a page for the children conducted by Aunt Jane, who receives letters from the children from 8 to 16 years old, and it appears from their letters that they are more eager to read the paper than the parents. Of course it would require time, space and means, but I think to devote a column or two of The Restitution to that end would be a good plan even if some of the long articles that now occupy so much space had to appear in a supplement, the supplement would be read by the older ones who would be interested and benefitted by it. I have been in the habit of giving The Restitution to my neighbors, and have come to the conclusion that in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred it is no less than casting pearls before swine, if they are a member of any church it does them no good, if they are not a mem- [illegible] they are not interested [illegible] to overhead them. We have [illegible] talent and means to arrange as to time and place there are those who could and would contribute sufficient to make it a success. I will give a sample of the way I would conduct it.

Question. What was Samson's Riddle, and where is it recorded?

Answer.

In a garden was laid a beautiful maid,
As fair as the dew of the morn.
The first day of her life, she became a wife,
And died before she was born.

What garden was it and what was her name? Whose wife was she?

The above questions are all of Bible subjects and the answers are all very plain to a Bible student but the ten year old child as a rule would have to search the Scriptures for the answer, and many a one would get their parents to help.

Again. How would a few pictures do to attract the attention of the children? For instance, the picture of Moses in the ark of rushes, with the question, Who or what does it portray? Or, Christ riding into Jerusalem on an ass, with proper questions?

If the above suggestions meet the views of the brothers and sisters please make it known.

There is another subject I will mention. I see by The Restitution that there are some delinquent subscribers and that Brother Underwood is perplexed as to how to meet his obligations. I would suggest that names of all delinquent ones be published in the paper, giving length of the arrearages, for the reason, 1st, there are some that are not able to pay, and those who know them could aid them knowing that they were worthy.

2nd. There are those who have had the paper sent them by a friend, and the party failed to renew but received the paper right along.

3rd. There are others who by negligence fail to respond as they should.

Submitted in love to the whole household of faith.

C. P. Graham.

Dear Restitution:

Enclosed please find $3.00 for subscription for 1906 and the helping fund.

Are there ten brothers of the Abrahamic Faith, readers of The Restitution, scattered about who would pledge $40 00 for the year 1906, to be paid quarterly, $10.00 per quarter, for the purpose of keeping Bro. W. B. Wilson in the field. I would undertake to be one if others could be found. In making the above proposition I am not presuming that $40.00 would of itself be sufficient but it would be only reasonable to expect that those receiving the benefit of his ministrations would contribute to his support.

J. T. Smith.

To those of like precious faith:

I take this opportunity of introducing to the brothers and sisters, Sister Maud Brown, of Woodward, Okla., who I baptized on December 11. Sister Maud is the daughter of Lottie Brown and grand-daughter of the late Isaac Miller. May this dear young sister take Jesus as her ideal, the Word of God as her instructor, and through diligence and perseverence in life win the crown that will be given when Jesus comes to make up his jewels.

A. W. Darby.

Dear Readers of the Restitution:

Permit me to call attention to a custom some of the brethren are following which I think the Master will not approve of when he comes to make up his jewels. Occasionally some one has read himself into the faith or have talked with some one of the one faith until he has been led to believe the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ and consequently a proper subject for baptism, but they do not know where there is any one to perform the ordinance of baptism and so this important step may never be taken and all because it was not sufficiently advertised. Let such be made known and the minister living nearest the candidate go and immerse him in the name of Jesus for the remission of sin.

H. M. Williams.

Life must be lived on the instalment plan. God gives and requires just so much at a time, no more, no less. Life is made up of many successive instalments of opportunity, of duty, and of grace. It is impossible, therefore, to live life in the future tense. All that men have and all they are asked to attend to is the present. And the present in its demands is vigorous enough. Take care of the now and the future will take care of itself. —Herald and Presbyter.

Poetry.

The Snow.

Floating, wavering, drifting,
Strange little specks come down,
Dainty, flaky crystals,
From a distant, wooden town:
Out of the dimmest spaces,
That seem so soft and gray;
Are they dust from almond blossoms,
That grow where storm-winds play?

I only know they are lovely,
And I wouldn't like to go
To the very best of countries
Where there's never any snow.
Just to think that tiny snowflakes
Shall fall, and fall, and fall,
The great old earth is covered,
Houses and trees and all!

The fences by the wayside
Are crusted o'er with pearls,
And around the grim, dead thistles,
The white snow clings and curls,
The mossy walls are powdered
With little sparkling stars,
And spangles of jewels are hanging
From the rough old pasture bars.

I learned a pretty lesson
From the little flying flakes;
One added to another
All in a worldfull makes.
They are the little minutes,
Easy to waste indeed;
But thousands put together
Will give us all we need.

Selections.

Africa Furnishes New War Threat.

In the days of ancient Rome, prior, even, to the Christian era, a saying was current among the people of the Eternal city which ran as follows: "Ex Africa semper aliquid novum" (From Africa there is always something new). And the new was usually something of a disagreeable character. The phrase has quite as much point and timeliness at the present moment as it had 2,000 years ago. There is always something new from Africa, and in nine cases out of ten it is sometimes disagreeable.

Thus, the world has just become aware that Great Britain and King Leopold in his capacity as sovereign of the Congo Free State are on the verge of war in the center of Africa, that is to say, near the sources of the Nile, and inasmuch as any armed conflict in the dark continent would undoubtedly involve troubles of grave character in Europe, into which other powers would probably be drawn, the matter deserves careful study, and something more than mere passing note.

Three months ago Mme. de Thebes, the Parisian seeress, who predicted the deaths of the marquis de Moreq, of Empress Elizabeth, and of King Humbert weeks before they occurred, and whose prognostications have been realized in so many other instances, prophesied that it was Belgium, or King Leopold, who would not only constitute the principal cause of international differences but even of war between European powers in the year 1900. At that time no one paid much attention to the forecast of Mme. de Thebes, as the only trouble in sight in connection with King Leopold was the controversary relating to the frightful atrocities perpetrated upon the natives in the Congo Free State, less, perhaps, by the officials of his government than by the agents of the various rubber companies to which he has farmed out numerous tracts of territory, and in which he is usually the principal share-holder. The latest news, however, from Africa imparts a totally different and much more serious meaning to the words of Mme. de Thebes, and it looks as if King Leopold were destined to develop into a disturbing element of the peace of the world in 1900.

The source of the tension between King Leopold and Great Britain is the possession of that particular portion of the former Egyptian province of Bahr-el-Ghazal, known as the Lado Enclave, on the western bank of the Nile, and before proceeding to briefly relate the history of the dispute I would call attention to the fact that the English government, or rather, I should say, the Anglo-Egyptian authorities, have just issued a proclamation forbidding any vessel or boat to ascend or descend the White Nile beyond Bor, a station on the river just below the Lado Enclave, and have at the same time adopted measures to prevent any communication by land between the Anglo-Egyptian Soudan and the Lado Enclave. This has the effect of cutting off the Belgians and the Congo Free State officials stationed at the various fortified posts and trading settlements in the Lado Enclave and in the Bahr-el-Ghazal province from all intercourse with Europe, and with the outer world in general, of the Nile, and will compel their mails, supplies, reinforcements, and merchandise to be sent via the Congo valley and through that terrible Central African forest which the late Sir Henry Stanley so graphically and powerfully portrayed in all its horror in his book relating his quest and relief of Emin Pasha.

Such a measure as this on the part of the Anglo-Egyptian authorities is equivalent to an act of war. It is certainly incompatible with the moral relations of two powers professedly friendly, and inasmuch as it has for its avowed object the rendering of the Lado Enclave and of the Bahr-el-Ghazal province untenable by King Leopold's representatives, it can only be construed in the light of an ultimatum.

For the latter King Leopold has been preparing for some time past. It is perfectly clear that he does not propose to permit himself to be ousted from the position which he has been allowed to assume on the western banks of the upper Nile, and, according to trustworthy advices received from the Anglo-Egyptian authorities in the Soudan and confirmed from Brussels, it would seem that in the Lado Enclave alone he had assembled a force of something like 10,000 seasoned troops, well provisioned and splendidly equipped, while scattered in every direction along the banks of the Nile and its important tributaries are strong hexagonal shaped forts, armed not alone with Maxims, but also with Nordenfeldt guns and ordnance of a character to admit of a stubborn defense.

That King Leopold does not expect to fight alone, and relies upon support, first of all moral and then material, from Germany, is shown by the concessions which he has made in connection with the rectification of the frontiers between the Teuton possessions in Africa and the Congo Free State, which are conterminous for a considerable distance. Whether or not these hopes of Leopold are destined to be realized remains to be seen. Germany's trade with Great Britain is of too colossal a character to admit of a war being lightly undertaken which would have the effect of bringing to a standstill the commerce between these two powerful nations, and ruining thousands of their respective industries. This is a fact which it is well always to bear in mind in connection with the Anglo-German war scares which have been so frequent during the last twelve months. But, still, King Leopold's African deals with the German government would furnish the latter with even a still stronger ground for making its voice heard in any armed conflict between Great Britain and the ruler of the Congo Free State than it could claim for intervening in Morocco.

It does not bode well altogether for the prospects of any peaceful settlement between Leopold and England on the subject of their differences in central Africa that Lord Lansdowne's younger brother, Lord Edmond Fitzmaurice, who has just been elevated to the peerage, should have become the under secretary of state for foreign affairs in the new liberal administration, and its representative in the house of lords, for he never has made any secret of his distrust of Leopold, and in his recently issued memoir of the late Lord Granville not only ridicules the Belgian monarch's pretensions to philanthropy in connection with his Congo Free State enterprise, but likewise describes the unscrupulous maneuvers by means of which the king obtained his investiture by the great powers of Europe with the sovereignty of the unhappy Congo valley, and claims to have been one of the most difficult obstacles to the success of Leopold's intrigues when formerly under secretary of state at the foreign office.

Lord Edmond therefore not only knows Leopold thoroughly, but is under no illusions concerning him, and is thoroughly equipped by past experience to deal with him. Under the circumstances, it may be assumed safely that there will be no concessions made by England to Leopold as Lord Edmond has anything to do with the foreign office.

In order to understand the point at issue between England and Leopold it is necessary to go back about a dozen years or so, to the time when Great Britain suddenly had become alive to the folly of the move which she had made in 1884, when she compelled Khedive Tewfik to abandon his central African provinces, then in a state of insurrection. In 1894 England made up her mind that the recovery of the Soudan was indispensible to her mastery of Egypt and to the prosperity and welfare of the latter. She had learned at length that to control the lower portions of the Nile it was necessary to command the upper reaches of that mighty river, and therefore became greatly alarmed when she became aware that France gradually was extending her influence eastward across the continent from her Congo colony, with a view of establishing herself permanently on the banks of the upper Nile, to the south of that portion thereof around Khartum which was held by the khalifa and his dervishes.

Before the insurrection had been suppressed it was difficult for England to secure effective control of that portion of the Upper Nile valley threatened by French occupation. For the Uganda Railroad was not then in existence. So the late Lord Kimberley, who was then English minister of foreign affairs, taking the ground that the Upper Nile valley was still an Egyptian dependency, undertook to lease a considerable portion of the province of Bahr-el-Ghazal to king Leopold, in his capacity as sovereign of the Congo Free State, the lease to lapse on the king's death.

The object of the lease was to constitute an effective barrier between French ambitions and the Upper Nile. The scheme, however, proved abortive. For less than four months after Lord Kimberley had signed this convention with Leopold, the latter, with the most cynical disregard of his obligations to Great Britain, negotiated an agreement with France by which in exchange for her recognition of certain frontier claims elsewhere, he ceded to her his rights of occupation of the banks of the Nile in that portion of the Bahr-el-Ghazal province outside the Lado Enclave. It was on the strength of this agreement between King Leopold and France, to which England was no party, that the Maj. Marchand expedition was dispatched, and which, reaching the Nile and establishing itself at Fashoda, almost brought England and France to war before it was withdrawn.

As matters stand now, therefore, King Leopold can have no claim to that portion of the Bahr-el-Ghazal province not included in the Lado Enclave, since not only did he fail to occupy it at the time when he pledged himself to do so, but, moreover, surrendered all his rights over it to France by his convention of Aug. 14, 1894, and if France subsequently withdrew therefrom by virtue of an agreement with England and in the latter's favor, it could not in any way have the effect of reestablishing the king's leasehold rights thereto. With regard to the Lado Enclave, which the Congo Free State forces eventually did occupy, the English take the ground that they are at liberty to treat its lease as null and void, owing to the failure of Leopold to give the consideration for which it was granted or to fulfill his engagements towards England in respect thereto.

About two years ago Leopold seemed to be on the point of yielding to the representations of the English government, and to have resolved to withdraw from the Nile. But all of a sudden something occurred to change his mind. There are people who ascribe it to German or Russian influences. But the fact remains that since that he has assumed an intractable, defiant attitude towards England, and, as stated above, has not only spent an enormous amount of money in strengthening his defenses in the Lado Enclave but likewise in establishing fortified posts at all sorts of points in that portion of the Bahr-el-Ghazal province of Egypt which he had surrendered to France in 1894, and from which France had subsequently withdrawn, after the Fashoda episode, by virtue of an agreement with England and in the favor of the latter.

It is this that has created the situation which the British government has now decided to settle once and for all time. The embargo which has been laid upon all intercourse, communications, and traffic between the Belgian and Congo Free State posts and settlements, in the Lado Enclave and elsewhere in the Bahr-el-Ghazal province, and the outer world will have the effect of rendering the situation there almost untenable, and it is likely to lead to reprisals by King Leopold's troops stationed there. And then, too, attempts to run Free State steamers down the river would assuredly be opposed, forcibly if necessary, by the Anglo-Egyptian gunboats which patrol the Nile.

If there is no clash provoked by King Leopold's troops in the Bahr-el-Ghazal province and no withdrawal, then it is extremely probable that the Anglo-Egyptian government, will adopt measures to compel them to retire. In that case there is certain to be bloodshed and a conflict, the effects of which will be felt in Europe, since it is difficult to conceive the idea of England being at war with King Leopold as sovereign of the Free State and on friendly terms with him as ruler of Belgium. In fact Africa, which is always furnishing something new, seems about to provide the world with another international imbroglio of quite as unpleasant a character as the unfortunate controversy about Morocco.—Ex-Attache in Chicago Tribune.

Teacher. The topic for our study tonight will be

THE SCIENTIFIC, BIOLOGICAL AND SCRIPTURAL VIEW OF DEATH.

Many thoughts and quotations which will be brought out, are gleaned from Drummond. "Death" wrote Faber, "is an unsurveyed land, an unarranged science."

Now, Albert, how long has death been a factor in the world?

Albert. From the time the dread sentence was pronounced in Paradise, "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."

Q. In a Biological sense, what is life?

A. A person who is said to be in correspondence with his environment."

Q. What is death?

A. "If from any cause such a person fails to adjust himself to the altered circumstances, his body which is thrown out of correspondence with his environment, his internal relations are no longer adjusted to his external relations, and his life must cease."

Q. Explain what is meant by correspondence and environment.

A. Different organisms require different environments and correspondences; take for example a whale. Its environment of water, suits its organism; it is built for the water. In the water it finds the kind of food which corresponds with the construction of its organism.

Now remove the whale from its watery environment, and it must die; it could have no power of locomotion on land, because its organism is not built for a land environment; neither could it have power to secure the kind of food which would correspond with its organism, and hence it must die. The organism of an elephant is not suited to the water environment, neither would the food found in that environment correspond with its organism, and hence it must also die.

A living man is said to be in correspondence with his environment. Suppose a famine should strike any given locality, those living in that locality would be in an environment where no correspondences exist, which would sustain life. He would have to move to another environment, where correspondece which would suit his organism could be found. Again, suppose a person's lungs should fail to correspond with the air, in his environment; then he is out of correspondence with his environment, and must either seek an environment where the air will correspond with his lungs, or, he must die.

Mr. Herbert Spencer says: "Death by natural decay occurs because of old age, the relations between assimilation, oxidation and genesis of force going on in the organism gradually fall out of correspondence with the relations between oxygen and food, and absorption of heat by the environment."

Death is a want of correspondence between the organism and environment.

"Suppose next the case of a man who is thrown out of correspondence with a part of his environment by some physical infirmity. Let it be, by disease or accident he has been deprived of the use of his ears. The deaf man, in virtue of his imperfection is thrown out of rapport with a large and well-defined part of his environment, namely, its sounds. With regard to that external relation, therefore, he is no longer living. Part of him may truly be held to be insensible or dead. A man who is also blind is thrown out of correspondence with another large part of his environment. He is still further dead.

Teacher. As a physiologist, Lud, how would you define death?

Lud. A living person, we all know, has the power to perform certain functions, while death is the absolute negation of all power to perform those functions. The living have knowledge, while "the dead know not anything." The living person thinks; but when death overtakes him, "in that very day his thoughts perish."

Q. What is Spencer's definition of life and death?

A. Life is "the definite combination of heterogeneous changes, both simultaneous and successive, in correspondence with external co-existence and and sequences, or "the continuous adjustment of internal relations to external relations."

Teacher. How does Drummond place these things, Carrie?

Carrie. "In biological language he is said thus to be in correspondence with his environment. He is, that is to say, in active and vital connection with them. Now it is in virtue of this correspondence, that he is entitled to be called alive. So long as he is in correspondence with any given point of his environment, he lives. To keep up this correspondence, is to keep up life. He continues living only as long as he succeeds in adjusting himself to the simultaneous and successive changes in his environment." Should "the lungs refuse to correspond with the air, the heart with the blood. There is now no correspondence whatever with environment—the thing, for it is now a thing, is dead."

"She that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth." 1 Tim. v. 6.

This brings to our notice another phase of death. In the above quotation she is dead while yet alive. In this case, she had, in all probability been begotten from above, but finally having become a lover of pleasure more than a lover of the things which pertain to the higher life, she was put out of correspondence with those things which will alone sustain the higher life, and that which was begotten from above, ceased to have life was dead; while at the same time she was in correspondence with those things which sustain the lower life. "To be carnally minded is death."

Teacher. I will ask Arlon to comment on the above text.

Arlon. There is no correspondence, no fellowship or communion between those whose mind is given up to carnal things, and those who walk according to the mind of the Spirit. While they remain carnal, they cannot become en rapporte with the Spirit, and until they are put in communion or correspondence with the Spirit, they cannot have the life of the Spirit. If they were at one time spiritual, and afterward became carnal, the life of the Spirit then ceased. They are dead, as far as it relates to the higher life. Those who think that they can be in communion with the spiritual and the carnal, at the same time are practicing self-deception. If the carnal has the ascendency, the spiritual will cease.

Teacher. The life of the Spirit is equivalent to another phrase—life eternal. Now, George, how can the natural man find that life?

George. "This is life eternal to know thee, the true God, and Jesus (the) Christ whom thou hast sent." To know God is to have knowledge concerning him. To know God, signifies an acquaintance with him. It also carries with it the thought of harmony, familiarity, communion, is in rapporte or correspondence with him. This the carnal mind cannot do.

Next, it requires a knowledge of Jesus as the Christ. Let me illustrate this point by referring to a plea made for uniting in worship with denominations (as "Christian brothers") who believe not "the record God gave of his Son." The question was: "Who is a liar, but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ? He is anti christ." "If God dwells with those who confess that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God, may we not find some common ground where we may worship together in unity with these our Christian brothers?" These socalled "Christian brothers" do not know what it means to confess Jesus as the Christ, in a Scriptural sense. They certainly can never confess him as such, until they know how to so confess him. Now, in order to get life eternal, we must not only "know God," but also "know Jesus as the Christ." To know Jesus as the Christ, is identical with the message, called "the gospel of the kingdom."

Q. Is Jesus Christ a personal name, like John Jones?

A. No. Call his name Jesus.

Q. How about the word "Christ?"

A. It is the official title of Jesus. Theodore Roosevelt is a personal name, President of the United States his official title.

Q. Who made Roosevelt President?

A. The people.

Q. Who made Jesus the Christ?

A. "God hath made that same Jesus whom you have crucified, both Lord and Christ." Acts ii. 36.

Q. When the wise men came from the East at the birth of Jesus, what did they ask for?

A. Where is he that is born King of the Jews?

Q. When Herod wished to find out the same thing what did he ask?

A. He demanded where the Christ should be born?

Q. What answer did he get?

A. "The governor that shall rule my people Israel shall be born in Bethlehem." Hence "King of the Jews," "Christ," "Governor that shall rule my people Israel," are all equivalent terms.

Q. Then to know Jesus as the "Christ," is to know him as the coming King of the "Jews," or "Israel?"

A. Those who don't know him as such, don't know Jesus as the Christ.

Q. Then this involves the "restoration of the kingdom again to Israel?

A. Certainly. An official title without the kingdom in fact, would be an empty farce.

Q. What did Nathaniel say?

A. "Rabbi, thou art the King of Israel," or "the Christ."

Q. What was Jesus accused of?

A. "We found this fellow perverting the nation * * * saying that he himself is Christ a King." Pilate asked him saying, Art thou the King of the Jews?

Q. What did the chief priests say when they mocked him?

A. "Let Christ the King of Israel descend now from the cross." These all show what the official appellation "Christ" means. When Philip preached Christ at Samaria, he preached the kingdom of God. Do these socalled "Christian brothers," preach Jesus as the Christ, after this fashion? If not, there is no "common ground" between us in preaching Jesus as the Christ.

Q. Will all who officiate with Jesus as the Christ—the King of Israel, be required to be invested with the life of the Spirit, before he can so officiate?

A. Certainly. "Of his kingdom there shall be no end," and those to whom the kingdom shall [illegible] must have a life commens[illegible] the duration of the kingdom.

The "carnal mind" and those who are "aliented from the life of God, through the ignorance that is in them" can never reach that exalted life. Jesus in John iii. unmistakably affirms that a birth from above must change both morally and physically all those who enter God's kingdom.

Bible Bones.

An old man once said: "For a long time I puzzled myself about the difficulties of the Scriptures, till at last I came to the resolution that reading the Bible was like eating fish. When I find a difficulty, I lay it aside and call it a bone. Why should I choke on a bone, when there is so much nutritious meat for me? Some day, perhaps, I may find that even the bones may afford me nourishment."

Would that there were less picking of bones, and more of feasting on the substantial food with which infinite love has spread the spiritual board!

"Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised in the city of our God in the mountain of his holiness. Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth is Mount Zion, on the north, the city of the great King." Psa. xlviii. 1, 2.

The Healing Symbol.—Num. xxi.

The Israelites lay dying in the desert. Along the gleaming sands fiery serpents went hither and thither; dead bodies lay scattered on every hand, and multitudes were writhing and groaning in mortal agony, or sitting sullen and silent in despair. The murmurings against God had been met with a terrible judgment, and at last, crushed and helpless, they turned again to the Lord, confessing and lamenting their fault. "Therefore the people came to Moses, and said, We have sinned, for we have spoken against the Lord, and against thee; pray unto the Lord, that he take away the serpents from us. And Moses prayed for the people."

The healing which they sought must come from God, and must be accomplished without the aid of human power; and yet some plan must be devised which should allow the Israelites on their part, opportunity to accept the proffered boon, and by a conscious assent to the divine arrangement, indicate their returning allegiance to their Maker. "And the Lord said unto Moses, Make thee a fiery serpent, and set it upon a pole: and it shall come to pass, that every one that is bitten, when he looketh upon it shall live. And Moses made a serpent of brass, and put it upon a pole, and it came to pass, that if a serpent had bitten any man, when he beheld the serpent of brass, he lived."

There was no healing virtue whatever in the brazen serpent; nor indeed was there anything in it which, in itself considered, should lend the mind to heavenly or holy thoughts. There was nothing impressive, nothing of the sensuous solemnity or grandeur which is so much esteemed among many as inspiring and preparing the mind for true devotion. It was simply a serpent of brass, which might have reminded them of the serpent worship in Egypt, whence they had so lately come; or it might have carried back their thoughts still further to that original deceiver who ruined the human race; and it certainly could not fail to remind them of those very reptiles that had inflicted the wounds from which they were suffering.

There was no apparent reason to be given for the adoption of this emblem. It was something that had neither innate value, visible loveliness, or sacred associations connected with it; and yet this was the emblem which God selected, this was the symbol through which He offered life to Israel. There was here no ground for argument, no opportunity for the exercise of human reason. No mortal man could tell why a glance at that brazen serpent would give health to the people. The only reason that could be assigned was, God has so appointed and ordained, and the dying Israelites had only to look and live. This might be said in favor of this symbol, it brought life within reach of all;—it required no wisdom, no learning, no skill, no ability; the rich, the poor, the weak, the strong, the sick, the dying, all could look and all could live.

There was every opportunity for skepticism to cavil, for intellect to investigate, and for incredulity to doubt; but while men cavilled, investigated and doubted they died. There was every opportunity for the helpless, and humble, and dying to look, and as they looked they lived.

It was a wondrous deliverance which God wrought for Israel that day. The strong man writhing in agony looked up to see the glittering symbol, and felt his pains were gone. The mother lifted her wailing babe to behold the brazen serpent, and when its eye caught the shining emblem, its agony was over. The bitten and poisoned Israelite who lay helpless and hopeless on the sands, heard the joyous shout, and looked up and was made whole; while the doubter, hesitating, inquiring what good it could do, and deriding the credulity of those who thought that a look at a brazen serpent could heal a deadly wound, turned his face away, and grovelled on the sands and died.

"As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life." John iii. 14, 15. Israel, bitten by serpents, was healed through a serpent of brass. The race of man, poisoned and ruined through the first Adam, have life and healing through the second. "Since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead." The Healer is in the image of the destroyer. The serpent that came is fashioned like the serpents that destroyed, and so Christ, the Redeemer "being found in fashion as a man," hath taken away the sting of death, and "brought life and immortality to light in the gospel." And the condition of this life and salvation is as simple and as easy as the conditions offered to Israel in the wilderness. It was, Look and live! in the desert, and it is still, Look unto Jesus and live! "Look unto me all ye ends of the earth, and be ye saved." The simplest act of faith, an act within the reach of the sick, the helpless, the poor, the ignorant, the outcast, the sinful, the dying, brings peace and pardon and immortal life.

Still men may doubt, and question, and hesitate and object; but when all is done, there stands the healing symbol, and thousands have proved its glorious power. "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." Christ has been lifted up, and the world has healing and salvation in his name. Men may believe, obey, and live; or may doubt, dispute, cavil, and die. They may seek explanations and offer objections, and perish in their unbelief; or they may accept the mercy that God has offered, and believing, have life through the crucified Redeemer. In the desert, argument was useless, dispute was vain. There was one condition, "Look and live." Talking about the serpent, arguing about its merit, investigating its history, saved nobody. Looking gave life. So we may argue and dispute with sinners and skeptics till they die before our eyes, but the only health and salvation there is for them is to look unto Jesus Christ.

Today the world needs a helper, and healer, and a Savior. We may be sure when Moses lifted up the serpent he did not stand in front of it so no one could see it; and he put it up so high that even he himself could not hide it. So he who truly preaches Christ will hide himself behind the cross, and will exalt Christ's name above every name in earth or heaven. What madness it would have been to have embellished that pole, and surrounded it with ornaments, and screens, and beautiful adornings, until the dim eyes of the dying could not have distinguished it at all. We may be sure that Moses did nothing of that kind. There, solitary and alone, uplifted upon a pole, gleaming in the sunshine, and marking its outline distinct and sharp against the sky, hung the brazen serpent to which they might look and live. So, O man of God, take heed and do not hide Christ from a lost world. Take heed that in the ceremonies of a pompous ritual, the splendor of costly architecture, and the magnificence of earthly ornamentation, you do not hide from the sinner's gaze that loving Christ who came to give life and health. The only thing that could save a dying Israelite was the serpent. The only thing that can save a dying sinner is Christ. It was not Moses with his rod, nor Aaron with his robes, nor the tabernacle with its sacred adornings, that could give health to the suffering Israelites. Nothing but the brazen serpent could meet their wants and relieve their woes. So it is not pomp nor architecture, nor forms nor ceremonies, nor sermons nor ordinances that can save lost sinners, but it is the living Christ uplifted on the cross for dying men, dead, buried, risen, ascended, glorified, interceding on our behalf, and coming again for our salvation.

Oh, that the servants of God might know their high calling, and putting away from them the devices and inventions of men, proclaim to the lost world their only Savior, a living, personal Christ, able to save even to the uttermost all who will come unto God by him.—The Christian.

The helpful life is a happy life. Bear one another's burdens, and joy will so fill your heart that you will be forced to share it with your fellows. This is Christ's law of happiness, and it is infallible. Bear burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ. He was the Burden-bearer of the world. It was the law of his own life, and upon the lives of his followers there lies the same obligation to sympathize, to serve.—J. S. Tillery.

WILL YOU TRY IT?

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this Book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $1.95 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

Seventy-five More.

I receive enquiries as to when Pine Woods Bible Class Book will be printed?

In answer, I will say, when I receive seventy-five more subscriptions, the book can be printed, and sent forth on its mission, to teach the glad tidings. If all who really want it had said so, it could now be out sowing seed. When God's professed servants make his cause a secondary matter, and put it off to a "convenient time," his cause suffers. Now all who really want the book please sit down and write me, as soon as you have read this, and then things will move at once. Don't wait until a more convenient time. God's business demands prompt attention.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Peace.

When winds are raging o'er the upper ocean,
And billows wild contend with angry roar,
'Tis said, far down beneath the wild commotion,
That peaceful stillness reigns forevermore.

Far, far beneath, the noise of tempest dieth,
And silver waves chime ever peacefully;
And no rude storm how fierce soever it bloweth,
Disturbs the Sabbath of that deep repose.

Be to the heart that knows the Saviour's Presence
There is a temple sacred evermore;
And all the babble of life's angry voices
Dies in hushed stillness at the peaceful door.

Far, far away, the roar of passion dieth,
And loving thoughts reside in peacefully;
And no rude storm, how fierce soever it bloweth,
Disturbs the soul, O Lord, that dwells in thee.

O Rest of rest! O Peace serene, eternal!
Thou ever livest, and that changest never;
And in the secret of thy presence dwelleth
Fulness of joy forever and forever.

"A Lost Cause."

These words have haunted me night and day, ever since reading Sister Boice's article in RESTITUTION of Dec. 5th, speaking of those who had left the Church of God, she says, I have heard its members say, I do not care to give any more to a lost cause, I have not given up my faith, I believe as I always did, but.....These people may have been members of the Church of God, but its true friends or trusty servants, never. Of course they have not given up their faith, they never could have had a Bible faith to give up; never could have understood the Abrahamic covenants or life through Christ, or they would not now be talking of "A lost cause." As though God's cause was ever lost. Was it a lost cause when they all forsook him and fled in his hour of deepest need? Was it a lost cause when Noah and his family, only eight souls left the ark of refuge to begin life anew? Out from trusting Noah has come the truth of God's Word, "As it was in the days of Noah so shall it be also in the days of the Son of Man." Noah was not disgusted with God's plan, patiently worked mid jeers, contempt of fellowmen, ridicule of all, but it did not change his trust in God or create a desire to seek another refuge, nothing was lost to him with God close by to "shut him in." Who was it crying "A lost cause" then, the enemies of God. Who is it echoing that cry now, the enemies of truth, the deserters from the ranks. And we are reminded of the truth of the Word. "In the last days some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils." Who seduced our first parents, what was the doctrine the devil taught, who is still teaching the same falsehood? These are not obtuse questions, or riddles unanswerable. We wonder with Paul, "That some are so soon moved away from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel, which is not another, but there be some that trouble you and would pervert the gospel of Christ. If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed." Paul must have been very much in earnest to have uttered such strong language, there must have been a great power in the gospel to save that could be found nowhere else, for he declares again, (1 Cor. xv. 1-2) this gospel unto them. By which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain." If we really believed this instead of crying "A lost cause," we would use our money more freely to get this truth before our fellows, instead of deserting the lines we would be using every effort to save our neighbors and friends. O beloved, it is unbelief we need to pray about and cry over. It is no real friend that will stand silently by while truth is being spoken against.

The worst enemies the truth ever had in any age were its pretended friends. It was not Pilate who betrayed Christ, but Judas a pretended friend, a disciple, a follower, the one who knew his hour and place of prayer, betrayed with a love token, a kiss. Will we do worse than Judas, when all around us are startling signs of his near coming? Will we prove our unworthiness of eternal life by saying, I do not care to pay any more money into a lost cause, or steadily refuse to bring the light before our children and friends? We know of several communities where there are enough believers to sustain regular meetings, but no effort is being made in that direction. Instead the fathers and mothers and children, and their money is all going to support something that is not gospel. The cause will be lost for all such do to defend and protect it. O beloved, there will be a fearful reckoning day, some one's blood will be upon your skirts. You will be to blame if they do not gain eternal life. It is not enough to believe, we must act. How my heart aches that these things exist. I would save you if I could. God is sifting us now, taking out the real, priceless jewels for his use in the near future. Instead of being discouraged we should be rejoicing that the call has come to us. He wants you if you can stand the polishing. God's plan may seem to many like a great tangled web, but he knows just how to wind off every thread.

Thank God for Sister Boice's awakening. But what can she do alone, who will come to the help, who will be aroused by her earnestness and enthusiasm? Other churches are being awakened to their especial work, but they are not helping to call out a people for his name by the gospel message, to be workers in the next age. They have not learned that beautiful part of God's plan. Have you no interest in helping them find it out? The waiting time will soon be over for many of us. What is done must be done quickly. There are several young men who would gladly give their life to the proclaiming of the gospel message, if some one would give as God has prospered them.

Brother, sister, the table for the marriage supper of the Lamb is being spread, will you be there, will you help others to be there? Not unless you work. We are his stewards, our stewardship will soon be called for, the books have been correctly kept. God will not say, "Well done," unless we have done well. Do not let your friends and neighbors perish for lack of knowledge, use the time, talents, and money God has given you, and you will never hear it said, A lost cause, A lost cause.

A World of Opportunities. No. 2.

In writing the articles under this heading I have in view to be helpful to young readers of THE RESTITUTION. I have been a teacher a number of years and I have the pleasure of knowing that more than a score of young men and women give me credit with helping them to make choice of the better part as far as this life is concerned

In my first article I spoke of opportunities embraced. The poet has said truly:

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest is,
It might have been."

We have this life to live and if we make a failure we certainly have nothing to commend us for a future life. Let our efforts be to crown our present life with success. This we cannot do without an effort upon our part. Your talent has been given you for improvement, and if you neglect it you will become an unprofitable servant. You will pardon me if I speak of a few things that have come up in my work as a teacher. While teaching in Missouri a number of years ago a young man was a pupil of mine and was very much interested in the study of physiology. I took the heart of a hog to school and exhibited the structure of the human heart, and said to the class, you can become better acquainted with the human organs and their function by dissecting animals. This led this young man to a careful study of this subject and upon several occasions he followed my advice and today is one of the first surgeons in the west, with his residence in Burlington, Iowa. I met him after he had become a graduate of two medical schools as good as we have in the United States, and then besides had spent three years in Europe studying his chosen profession. His first words were, I owe it to you. I took your advice and studied medicine and surgery. This young man saw his opportunity and did not let it pass.

Another young man whom I advised to attend school and prepare himself for something better than he was then doing took my advice. He is now filling an important position in the county in which he lives. These young men were both poor and were compelled to get their own education. Poverty is no bar to a good education. As I stated in my first article, 'If a young man wants an education you can not prevent him from getting it.' Every young man and woman should choose early in life the business that they can put their whole heart in. If you do this you will win. I know some say we are what our environments make us. That in a measure is true, but don't you know that you can create your own environments?

When Napoleon Boneparte concluded to take his army eastward his chief engineer said, "General, you cannot cross the Alps with your army." He answered with a wave of his hand, "Sir, there are no Alps." So it must be with you, if you succeed in this life. God wants the best of the human family. If you have chosen the better part you must have more of that "spirit that will help mortals up than that which will drag angels down." We should set our mark high and then do what we can to reach it. I am pleased to know that our young people are Bereans in truth. Let me urge them to continue in this good work.

I say to my school girls that part of your education consists in learning how to wash dishes and make bread, and in doing all kinds of housework. The boys should take delight in doing all kinds of farm work. Do you think that Lincoln or Garfield were ashamed that they had labored with their hands? What a beautiful lesson we have of a mother's influence over her boy. When Garfield took the oath of office as President of the United States, after kissing the Bible he turned to his mother who was standing by his side and impressed a kiss upon her brow. In this he remembered her who had borne him and by her advice directed his footsteps from the log cabin to the White House. When President McKinley received a dispatch that his aged mother lay dying at her old home, with all the duties of the Chief Executive to discharge, he wired back and said, "Tell mother I am coming." As soon as steam could carry him he went to her dying bedside and remained there until her death and burial. No obligation or duty could have kept these men from doing honor to their aged parents.

When I left home for the first time to do for myself my mother said, "My son, make your employer's business your own. Don't be afraid of work and above all things be honest, and you will succeed." I did so, and did please the man for whom I worked.

The Bible—Style of Composition.

Every reader of the Scriptures, who knows anything about difference in style of composition sees at a glance that these writings present a great variety of style. No two writers, it is observed, using the same style of composition. Here we see the individuality of the sacred penman profoundly stamped upon their respective books. Upon this fact some students of the Bible have based an objection to plenary inspiration; holding that the two things are irreconcilable.

If there were no titles to indicate the different books we would still know, in our reading, when we had passed from one to another; he cognizant of the fact that another personage had taken the pen. This diversity reveals itself even on comparing one prophet with another, and one apostle with another apostle. While maintaining that all Scripture is from God, we must not think that man goes for nothing; that he is no more than the pen he wields, or the parchment on which he writes. God did not see fit to sink the human writer out of sight. Each writer stands out prominently on the sacred page. His mental and moral peculiarities; his measure of education; his occupation; habits of life; his recollections; in short all the circumstances that acted upon him outwardly and inwardly, are made use of in giving us a revelation. Paul, writer of thirteen epistles, is the counterpart of the Paul brought up at the feet of Gamaliel. The style of his language natural and acquired went into what he wrote under inspiration. His indomitable energy, ardent zeal and conscientiousness are stamped upon his books. Paul is Paul and not John, nor Isaiah. If these men were standing before us we would see a great difference between them in facial expression; but this difference would be no greater than that which we discover impressed upon their respective books. We do not raise the question as to how God could give us his thoughts in words of his own choice, and at the same time reflect the personality of the writer. He did this. It is a matter of fact that forces itself upon our attention as we go through the Bible. This is so apparent that the common reader, unskilled in rhetoric according to the schools of learning, observes a difference in the style of composition; that more than one hand wielded the pen of the prophet; that more than one brain was wrought upon by the Spirit of God in giving to the world a revelation. It is in accord with the wisdom of the Great Creator who gave to man, primarially his mental constitution, that there should be a rich variety in the volume of inspiration. Like the many landscapes of earth the Bible presents a pleasing diversity of style that we might not be tired with monotony. On one page there is a plain statement of God's thoughts in language but sparingly embellished with figures of speech, like the first part of our Lord's sermon on the mount. Here we are attracted by the thoughts which appeal to the affections of our hearts; thoughts that come near to our nature and needs. We say "These are beautiful thoughts, and real practical." How different the style in a passage in the song of David celebrating deliverance from all his enemies. 2 Sam. 22. At the 8th verse begins the passage, which for sublimity can not be equaled in purely human literature. "Then the earth shook and trembled; the foundations of heaven moved and shook. There went up a smoke out of his nostrils, and fire out of his mouth devoured: coals were kindled by it. He bowed the heavens also, and came down; and darkness was under his feet. and he rode upon a cherub and did fly: and he was seen upon the wings of the wind. And he made darkness pavilions round about him." Will the reader please read the whole passage? This in bold figures and poetic strains describes Jehovah's interposition in David's behalf.

It is not alone the human writers which give diversity to the style of composition. The different subjects in hand required changes in the style of language. Nor must Jehovah, who made choice of the thoughts and the words suitable to express them, be excluded from the style of the language employed. He made choice of this as he did the others and thus gave to the church and world this unique volume of prose and poetry, of history and biography, of prophecy and promise. He it was who embellished and enriched the language with all the figures of speech that abound in the literature of the most enlightened nations of the earth. I mean by figures of speech the different kinds or classes as the Comparison, the Metaphor, the Synecdoche, the Metonymy, the Hyperbole, the Hypocatastasis, the Apostrophe, the personification, and the Allegory or Parable. All these abound here. If we turn our attention to the figures (not the kinds) as they occur in inspired usage, some of them may appear very extravagant to the reader and out of harmony with his notion of the author of a revelation designed to make man acquainted with his will with a view to the creatures salvation. In the passage, a part of which I cited, there are some examples of highly wrought figures which the infidel would ascribe to the wild fancy of a human author. Eastern thought, in literature outside the Bible has been accustomed to clothe itself in extravagant figures more than Western thought. The Bible is an Eastern book and must in part, as to its style, be studied from this standpoint.

While figures tend to enliven and illustrate the thought of the inspired writer, and to make more vivid impression on the mind of the reader and student, there are instances where they obscure the meaning of a passage. This is true of some portions of Paul's epistles touching which Peter says, there are some things hard to be understood, which they that are untaught, and unstable wrest, as they do also the other Scriptures, unto their own destruction. 2 Pet. iii. 16. It is the figures employed by the apostle, though writing according to the wisdom given him, that throws obscurity over the Scriptures to which Peter alludes. To base the theory of man's consciousness in the state between death and the resurrection on these confessedly obscure passages, is not going according to a rule laid by wise and scholarly men like the "judicious Hooker," that obscure passages should be interpred in the light of plain ones; a sound rule more observed in the breach than in the keeping.

The Bereans Column.

Dear Bereans:

Does it ever occur to you that through this column in the paper there is an opportunity offered for you to work for Christ?

This is indeed true and we as Bereans are failing short of doing our duty if we neglect this privilege. Since last September about thirty-five letters have been written by the Programme Committee requesting the members to supply an article for the paper. A few have done so, as you will observe by reading the paper. Several have sent excuses, but the greater number of letters are never heard from again.

This is certainly discouraging and shows a lack of interest among the members.

There is nothing of worth accomplished without causing some one labor. And this column can not be filled unless we are willing to do our part. A short letter upon what ever subject most closely appeals to the writer is all that is required. And no one can afford to miss this privilege of saying a word for our Savior. An invitation is intended to every Berean who has not yet done so to write an article and send to my address. A certain number of these letters being sent to THE RESTITUTION every month. So that all the space that is allowed us can be utilized. And the brethren will see that the young people are still awake and on the Lord's side. Yours in the work of the Master.

Address, Savanna, Ill.

ELIZABETH EATON.

Dear Bereans:

My faith is baptism in the one name while some it is to sprinkle some to pour some to dip or plunge some say it is not necessary to be baptized at all some believe to be baptised by the holy ghost or holy Spirit. But Christ said to Nicodemus except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

And again the Scriptures teach, he that believes and is baptized shall be saved. Yet Paul says baptism is not washing away the filth of the flesh but the answer of a good conscience toward God.

Peter said unto the congregation, Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of your sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. And let us follow God and keep his Commandments. Dear Bereans be ready and waiting for that glorious bright kingdom of God that soon shall appear. From your sister in Christ.

GERTHA BRANT.

PATIENCE.

Dear Bereans:

"Ye have need of patience, that after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise." Heb. x. 36.

This is a verse which can be applied to each and every one of us.

We are none of us quite patient enough when misfortune, sickness, and death comes upon us. We are so apt to grumble and think our lot is harder than any one else, instead of asking God to help us be patient and thank him for our many other blessings. Oh! and there are so many other things about which we need to be patient. "Now we exhort you brethren, be patient toward all men." Thess. v. 14. Now I think this means that no matter what a man does that seems wrong to us we must still help him when ever we can. And then how beautiful patience is, how we love a man or woman patient in all things. As I have had occasion to be in the hospital recently I there had an opportunity of seeing many admirable examples of patience. Some who tho' they must undergo much affliction and pain are always cheerful and thankful to God and to those who take care of them for every thing which is done for them. It seemed I learned there to nearly understand that, "And not only so, but we glory in tribulations also; knowing that tribulations worketh patience." Rom. v. 3. "Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord." Jas. v. 7.

MABEL A. EATON.

When the Son of Man cometh will he find faith on the earth? Has there ever been a time when the masses were so restless and dissatisfied as at present. $16,000,000 spent on State Street in the city of Chicago by Christian shoppers for Christmas 1905, shows a rampant spirit of commercialism rather than a spirit of reverence for that glad morn when angel hosts sang Peace on Earth good will toward men. The world has gone mad after revelry and are eating and drinking with the drunken. Traveling in this and foreign lands to see the sights, etc. Not so with the little flock looking for the return of the Nobleman who has gone into the far country. God's people are not taken account of by the godly throng. The followers of the Lamb are not concerned in worldly ways. They have for their consolation, To him that overcometh will I give to sit with Me on My throne even as I have overcome and am set down with My Father on his throne. He has no unrest because of not being able to see scenery of other lands, he has something better. What is it? Suppose you draw a mind picture something like this, a stretch of prairie clothed with green a beautiful forest scene. The falls of Niagara, the wonders of the Yellow Stone the petrified forests in Arizon and all the choice scenes of all lands and group all of these harmoniously together, how beautiful it would be. But it is written Eye has not seen nor Ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. Oh! we can well afford to wait. Let us all try to serve him more faithfully.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LV. Read PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JANUARY 17, 1906. NUMBER 3.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The international conference to debate the Morocco question met yesterday, and an effort will be made to avert war.

We trust our correspondents will recognize the necessity of avoiding personalities in their articles. Write your views without personal mention of some other brother. Give your readers credit for having discrimination sufficient to see any differences. Be courteous, and avoid harsh terms. This way you will keep the friends you have, and possibly make others. The other way you will be sure to keep all your enemies, and quite likely get more. It pays to be kind and gentle even to one who differs from you.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "The Restitution," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

In 1900 Dr. MacArthur said in the New York Journal: "Russia is moving on to the mastership of the world. Before another quarter of a century shall pass, either the Slav, as represented by Russia, or the Saxon, as represented by Great Britain and the United States, will rule the world. Russia is moving on as resistlessly as a glacier. She now owns one-sixth of all the land on the globe. She is earth hungry. She believes herself divinely appointed to be the mistress of the universe. Only the Saxon can restrain her world-wide ambitions." We all know how Russia has been thwarted in her designs in one direction. That she will press on so soon as her internal troubles are settled, is certain, as is shown by her activity in railroad building toward India.

The budget statement that has just been issued at St. Petersburg shows it will be necessary to raise the sum of $240,500,000 by credit, in order to balance the estimated receipts and expenditures. This will include the liquidation of the Russo-Japanese war, the payment of the troops in the far east, and reduction of the army to a peace footing. The total expense of the war with Japan is shown to be $1,050,000,000. The statement shows that if the prevailing conditions in Russia should continue, and the disorders in the interior keep up, that the estimated receipts in many branches will not come to their usual amounts, and will have to be scaled down. It is frankly stated that the gold reserve has been drawn on heavily, the last ten days having reduced it by $30,000,000, and the issue of paper currency has been increased by $20,000,000. Count DeWitte, in closing the budget makes the following address to the Emperor: "These facts and figures submitted to your majesty show that the present situation of Russian is none too favorable. This state of things is the result of the war and of the troubles which followed. These troubles are of a temporary character, and it is fair to assume that they will be ameliorated in the near future. Periods of economic depression, history proves, are ordinarily followed by periods of activity and prosperity. Economic agitation multiplies the energy of the ablest and most enterprising elements of the nation and arouses the laboring masses to preserve in their work, which cannot fail to better the industrial situation of the country, and likewise the finances of the state. Conditions favorable for the appearance of a period of fruitful work must be perceived even amidst the gloom of the present hour. With each day the popular conscience must be awakened more and more to a realization of the true material needs of the fatherland."

Russian Railways Moving Toward India.

London, January 12.—Col. C. E. de la Poer Beresford, late military attache in St. Petersburg, recently read a paper on "The Projected Railways from Russia Toward India," before a meeting of the Central Asian Society. In the course of his paper he said that the completion of the line from Orenburg to Tashkend give Russia direct rail communication from St. Petersburg to Kushk Post on the frontier of Afghanistan. The projected lines which he pointed out on a map were not yet begun. An exception to that statement must, however, be made as regarded the line from Charjui, on the Amu, to Termez, on the same river. Another line that was to be considered was the Batum-Tiflis-Erivan.

It was proposed to carry this eventually from the Russo-Persian frontier at Julfa, near Nakhitchevan, through the Persian provinces of Azerbidjan, Kasvin, Teheran and Khorassan; at the moment the railhead was some miles short of the Persian frontier. It has been said that a railroad was projected to run from Askhabad to Meshed via Firuze and the Gulistan hills, but he saw no sign of such a thing three years ago.

The line from Charjui to Termez forms part of the most direct projected line toward the frontier of India. It was worth noting that the lines of communication toward the Upper Amu or Oxus had a strategical importance. They led to Mazar-i-Sherif and Bainkshan. A large Russian force could in the event or an advance southward be brought into this country by these ways. Quartered on the line Mazar-i-Sherif-Kungrad Farzabad (in Badakshan) it could draw a certain amount of food from the country and be continually fed along its own communications.

There was a road that he was told was tolerable from this region to the Dora pass leading into the Chitral valley, but he did not think that the road was at present passable for troops of all arms; no doubt it could soon be made so. After giving a description of the Central Asian railway, Colonel Beresford alluded to its projected continuation and the alternative line through Persia. The former ran from Charjui along the left bank of the Amu or Oxus on Russian territory as far as Kerki. A few miles south of this it crossed the Afghan border, passed near Mazar-i-Sherif, almost in a direct line to the valley of the Kabul river, Jelalabad and Peshawar. To do this it must, after crossing the Ak-Serai stream, a left affluent of the upper Amu or Oxus, pass either through or over several small mountain masses and the huge main chain of the Hindu-Kush.

He confessed that for Russian engineers, little accustomed to tunneling, this seemed to him a very difficult as well as a very costly undertaking. As to the projected line through Persia, its projectors ignored the treaty that closed the dominions of the Shah alike to Russian or British railways. The physical obstacles to the laying of this line were not considerable. It was almost finished to the frontier at Julfa, on the Aras, or Arasces river. Thence it was to proceed past Tabriz to Teheran. At the capital a line was to branch south of Kum to Isfahan (Ispahan), Shiraz (where it might meet a line made by us), and thence to Bandar Abbas, in the Ormuz channel. The main line was to run eastward from Teheran through Khorassan almost on the old trade route to Meshed and Kushk Post. Thence it was to be continued to Herat and Farab, where it branched again, one line going toward Seistan and the other to Kandahar. According to the map, British lines were in the course of construction or projected to Kandahar and to Nushki, Kerman and Shiraz, with a branch to the north through the marshes of Seistan to Meshed. Of these projected lines to India, that from Kushk Post to Herat and Kandahar seemed to him easy and cheap to construct. It was the prolongation of the line Moscow-Orenburg-Tashkend-Merv Kushk Post, already constructed. The engineering difficulties in the way were inconsiderable. But there was the veto of the Ameer of Afghanistan to be considered. He then described the Russian military position in central Asia. The Russian troops quartered in central Asia consisted of two army corps, and the strength of each corps might be taken as in round numbers, 88,000 men and 124 guns available for service. The army list showed that the first Turkestan army corps had its headquarters at Tashkend and the second at Askhabad, on the Persian frontier.

Evangelizing Trip.

I left Portland, Oregon, Dec. 30th, on my contemplated trip to Phoenix, Arizona. In traveling south, 1700 miles, across the western part of the United States a great variety of scenery and climate is passed through in the few days necessary to the trip. The variation in altitude produces climatic changes more than differences in latitude. We of the Willamette Valley, in Oregon, have a great deal of rainfall while those of Southern California and Arizona get tired of sunshine. We of the north do not covet all sunshine; we like variety.

I stopped at Eugene—a pretty flourishing town—123 miles up the Willamette from Portland, and gave a discourse at Brother Palmer's house on Sunday and one at night at the Presbyterian Church.

I had a good visit with Brother and Sister Palmer, Brother and Sister Belshaw, and others. These brethren take a lively interest in the gospel and it's proclamation.

On New Years, with a mutual desire for a happy New Year, we parted and I started south on the S. P. train. We traversed the upper part of the beautiful green Willamette Valley and crossed the snow-laden mountains of southern Oregon and northern California, till we reached the immense expanse of the Sacramento Valley. We spent a day in passing over this extensive level plain, and reached Oakland in the evening. I do not like the yellow, dead grass of this valley; it is tiresome and hurtful to the eyes, but the green of our Willamette Valley is pleasant to look at.

Oakland has grown from a village to an immense city, since the writer saw it in coming to this coast thirty years ago. How many things we may note, through life, to mark the constant changes that we meet with, and experience. All things are changeful but God. All things move forward or retrograde. A night in Oakland waiting for the train, and at 11 A. M., we were moving south again, and soon entered the San Joaquin Valley. This and the Sacramento contain millions of acres of tillable plains, a great many immense farms. The stubble proves that more attention is given to grain than other farming, though the production of fruit is astonishing. We climbed the Tehachapi Mountains from this valley. A sudden stop on the heights was caused by a locomotive just in front of us jumping the track. Three hours of uneasiness but no accident and we were moving safely through the mountains again. We got out of the mountains into the beautiful region lying back of Los Angeles through a tunnel about one mile and a quarter long. Oh! what a beautiful paradise! No, not the paradise, for there is suffering and death here; but when we reach the paradise of God there will be no suffering and no death. How could one change the beautiful, and still beautiful earth, as a home, for a stretch of blue sky? Not I!

A stop in the noted Los Angeles, only long enough to change cars, and our course turned eastward, where for miles the eye could feast on the beautiful yellow-dotted green of orange and lemon groves.

Fruit ripening in January! I think of no combination of the beautiful and picturesque more grand than groves of oranges, with their deep green and bright yellow, and a background formed by a huge brown rock-ribbed mountain.

Most of the way of over four hundred miles from Los Angeles to Phoenix is over a level stretch of desert after leaving the orchards of Los Angeles, Pomona, and Riverside where you view the varieties of a changeful picture seventy-five miles in length.

Only one thing of marked wonder will arouse the traveler, and that is the growth of an inland sea in the vast salt basin of southern California known as Salton Sea. A great desert region a number of feet below sea level, is being filled with water, turned into this immense reservoir from the Colorado River, accidentally or because nature was stronger than man, and broke with its floods through the ditch intended to draw water from that river for irrigation. The Southern Pacific Co., have moved the railroad track three times to escape the growing sea. As we moved slowly along we could hear the splash of the water, by the wheels of the train.

This may prove a blessing in climatic changes. A sea restored to give place to this desert of millions of tons of salt would be a wonderful transformation.

I arrived at Brother J. M. Fike's, Phoenix, Arizona, early on the morning of the 5th of January and only await arrangements for meetings at different localities.

I will receive at this place any letters relating to meetings in the Territory or on my return trip.

Saul's Disobedience.

1 Sam. xv. 13-19.

And Samuel came to Saul and said unto him, Blessed be thou of the Lord; I have performed the commandments of the Lord, and Samuel said, What meaneth then this bleating of the sheep in mine ears, and the lowing of the oxen which I hear? And Saul said they have brought them from the Amelekites; for the people spared the best of the sheep and of the oxen, to sacrifice unto the Lord thy God; and the rest we have utterly destroyed. Then Samuel said unto Saul, Stay and I will tell thee what the Lord hath said to me this night. And he said unto him, say on. And Samuel said, When thou wast little in thine own sight, wast thou not made the head of the tribe of Israel, and the Lord anointed thee king over Israel. And the Lord sent thee on a journey and said, Go and utterly destroy the sinners, the Amelikites, and fight against them until they be consumed. Wherefore then didst thou not obey the voice of the Lord, but didst fly upon the spoil, and didst evil in the sight of the Lord?

Verse 22, And Samuel said, Hath the Lord as great delights in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold to obey is better than sacrifices, and to hearken than the fat of rams. Verse 26, And Samuel said unto Saul, I will not return with thee; for thou hast rejected the Word of the Lord, and the Lord hath rejected thee from being king over Israel.

1 Sam. xvi. 1-13, "And the Lord said unto Samuel, How long wilt thou mourn for Saul, seeing I have rejected him from reigning over Israel? Fill thine horn with oil, and go; I will send thee to Jesse the Bethlemite; for I have provided me a king among his sons. And Samuel said how can I go? If Saul hear it he will kill me. And the Lord said take an heifer with thee, and say, I am come to sacrifice to the Lord. And call Jesse to the sacrifice, and I will show thee what thou shalt do; and thou shalt anoint unto me him whom I name unto thee. And Samuel did that which the Lord spake unto him and came to Bethany and the elders of the town trembled at his coming, and said, Comest thou peaceably? And he said, Peaceably. I am come to sacrifice unto the Lord; sanctify yourselves and come with me to the sacrifice, and he sanctified Jesse and his sons, and called them to the sacrifice. And it came to pass, when they were come; that he looked on Eliab, and said, Surely the Lord's anointed is before him. But the Lord said unto Samuel, look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have refused him; for the Lord seeth not as man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart.

Then Jesse called Abinadab and made him pass before Samuel. And he said, Neither hath the Lord chosen this. Again Jesse made seven of his sons to pass before Samuel. And Samuel said unto Jesse, Are here all thy children? And he said, There remaineth yet the youngest, and behold he keepeth the sheep, and Samuel said unto Jesse, Send and fetch him; for we will not sit down until he come hither. And he sent and brought him in. Now he was ruddy and withal of a beautiful countenance, and goodly to look to. And the Lord said, Arise, anoint him; for this is he. Then Samuel took the horn of oil, and anointed him in the midst of his brethren; and the spirit of the Lord came upon David from that day forward.

Jonathan a son of David's friend. 1 Sam. xviii. 1-4, And it came to pass when he had made an end of speaking unto Saul, that the soul of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David; and Jonathan loved him as his own soul, and Saul took him that day, and would let him go no more to his father's house. Then Jonathan and David made a covenant, because he loved him as his own soul, and Jonathan stripped himself of his robe that was upon him, and gave it to David, and his garments, even to his sword, and to his bow, and to his girdle. 1 Sam. xix. 1, And Saul spake to Jonathan his son, and to all his servants that they should kill David, but Jonathan Saul's son delighted much in David, and Jonathan told David saying, Saul my father seeketh to kill thee. Now, therefore, I pray thee take heed to thyself until the morning, and hide thyself; and I will go out and stand beside my father in the field where thou art, and I will commune with my father of thee; and what I see that I will tell thee. And Jonathan spake good of David unto Saul his father, and said unto him, Let not the king sin against his servant, against David; because he hath not sinned against thee, and because his works have been to thee ward very good. For he did put his life in his hand, and slew the Philistine, and the Lord wrought a great salvation for all Israel, thou sawest it, and didst rejoice; wherefore then, wilt thou sin against innocent blood, to slay David without a cause? And Saul hearkened unto the voice of Jonathan; and Saul sware, as the Lord liveth, he shall not be slain. And Jonathan called David, and showed him all those things; and Jonathan brought David to Saul, and he was in his presence as in times past. David crowned king, 2 Sam. ii. 4, 11, And the men of Juda came, and there they anointed David king over the house of Judah. And they told David, saying, That the men of Jabesh Gilead were they that buried Saul. And the time that David was king in Hebron over the house of Judah, was seven years and six months. David king over Israel 2 Sam. v. 10, 12, And David went on and grew great; and the Lord God of hosts was with him. And Hiram king of Tyre sent messengers unto him (David) and cedar trees, and carpenters and masons; and they built David an house, and David perceived that the Lord had established him king over Israel, and that he had exalted his kingdom for his people Israel's sake.

He Had Backbone.

Not all boys would have done as did Harry Shepler, who was in the signal service. Harry was ordered one morning, by a sergeant, to report for duty at the canteen. He refused to do so, and the sergeant threatened to report him to the officer of the day. "All right," said Shepler, "go ahead. I did not enlist to be a bartender, but a soldier, and I will not report at the canteen." He was duly reported to the major, who sent for him. Shepler went with trembling knees, but with a steady heart, for he knew he was right. When he came before the major, that officer said to him:

"Are you the young man who disobeyed orders this morning?"

"Yes, sir; I am."

"Why did you do it?"

"Simply because I do not believe it is right to do what I was asked to do. I enlisted to be a soldier, and not a bartender."

The major arose quickly from his stool, and, extending his hand, said:

"Shepler, you are the kind of a man we want. I am glad to see a fellow who has the courage of his convictions. You are not obliged to report to the canteen."

We must not surrender the doctrine of the second coming. We must never cease to preach it as the grand consummation of the redemptive economy. As truly as he came the first time, will he come the second. He is not slack concerning his promise, yet Paul's exhortation to "patient waiting for Christ" is still in force. Heb. x. 35-37; 2 Thess. iii. 5. By holy lives and godly characters, let us show our love to the absent one; and by incessant toil in his service, let us express our faith in the coming of that day of days, when adoring millions shall hail "this same Jesus," descending in triumph to the earth, with the rapturous shout: "Lo, this is our God! We have waited for him, and he will save us."—S. F. Upham.

Christians are not watchful and careful enough about the little details of daily life. About courtesy, tender thoughtfulness, goodness, kindness and unselfishness; consideration for husband, for children and servants. Rowland Hill said that he did not think much of a man's religion if his horse and cat were not the better for it. The divine pattern is self-denial. God gave up his Son, and the Son laid down his life for others, a pattern for us to imitate. Eph. v. 1-12.—F. E. Grafton.

Trying Toward the Oneness. 1 John xvii.

Have been practically trying more than a century, and visibly about three-fourths of a century. The twenty-one leading denominations getting together in the Carnegie Hall Conferences into a working body is a very visible try; so is the union in Canada of the Presbyterian, Congregational and Methodist Episcopal bodies into the "Canada Church," adopting as much as needed, the Presbyterian Creed, the Congregational local organization, and the Methodist general government under presidents. In co-worship there will be free expression with charity, in speaking and hearing.

The oneness prayed for by our Lord is a oneness in love, such as exists between him and the Father. Brethren read John xvii. often, in a spirit of prayer. This general movement toward unity among Christians is the "cleansing of the sanctuary."

Matthew xiii 33.

The kingdom of heaven is likened unto leaven, which a woman hid in three measures of meal till the whole was leavened. The leaven was hid, that is it was not generally known that it was in the meal, the meal was three measures. Leaven is capable of permeating and changing the meal and making it like itself. The kingdom of heaven is the leaven in this instance. We find the first mention of it in the promise to Eve, the Seed of the woman, shall bruise the serpent's head, but the first definite promise was to Abraham, "In thee and thy seed shall all the earth be blessed," and in Christ's time he spent three and one-half years preaching the kingdom of God. He came to bring life and immortality to light through the gospel (good news of future life) this is the leaven. Three dispensations—the three measures, one would be the Mosaic, one the gospel and the millenium. During the Mosaic age they had a type of the future rest, which reached its highest state under David and Solomon, then it died out till Christ's time, but in his day they did not realize the future greatness of the kingdom (when the knowledge of the Lord shall fill the earth as the waters cover the sea) but expected a temporal kingdom such as David had and not an immortal King that will live forever. When Jesus comes and gathers out of his kingdom, all things that offend and do iniquity, then the meal will be leavened and not till then.

If You Are Ready.

If you are ready to help anybody, you are sure to help somebody. When you talk of making others happy, your thoughts are very likely to wander away from home. You fancy you would like to be the good angel of the hospital; you picture yourself going into poverty-stricken homes, and bringing cheer and comfort. But the chances are that your field is near, not distant, and your first opportunity is to comfort that small brother of yours because he has lost his jackknife, or to entertain that undeniably tiresome caller who finds it such a relief to confide to receptive ears the story of her ails, physical and mental. But true helpfulness never overlooks what is near, never passes by what seems commonplace. If the impulse to do good is within you, you will find lives to uplift and bless.

Poetry.

Mother'n Boys.

Yes, I know there are stains on my carpet,
The traces of small muddy boots;
And I see your fair tapestry glowing
All spotless with blossoms and fruits!

And I know that walls are disfigured
With prints of small fingers and hands,
And that your own household whiteness
All fresh in its purity stands.

And I know that my parlor is littered
With many old treasures and toys,
While your own is in daintiest order,
Unharmed by the presence of boys!

And I know that my room is invaded
Quite boldly all hours of the day;
While you sit in your own undisturbed,
And dream the soft quiet away.

Yes, I know there are four little bedsides
Where I must stand watchful each night,
While you may go out in your carriage,
And flash in your dresses so bright!

Now I think I'm a neat little woman,
I like my house orderly, too,
And I'm fond of all dainty belongings,
Yet I would not change places with you!

No! keep your nice home with its order,
Its freedom from bother and noise!
And keep your own tasteful belongings,
But give me my four splendid boys!

Communicated.

Dear Cousin:

There are three things in the study and teaching of God's Word which should be carefully observed. 1st, that no prophecy of Scripture is of any private interpretation. 2nd, that God calleth those things which be not as though they were. 3rd, the Word of truth must be rightly divided. 2 Pet. i. 20; Rom. vi. 17; 2 Tim. ii. 15. We learn from these Scriptures, first we must interpret Scripture by Scripture. Second, God speaks of things as if they were present, and yet future. Third, Scriptures belonging to certain subjects should always be applied to them, so with this view of the Scriptures I am now ready to investigate your claims by the Word of truth.

You say in your letter on page two that the Church of God is composed of branches, and the C. P. Church is one of the branches, and referred to Matt. viii. 31-32 to prove it. Now, dear cousin, the Church of God may be composed of branches and the C. P. Church one of them, but the Scripture referred to does not teach either. This is a kingdom parable, and teaches two lessons; at first the kingdom of God will be very small, and then takes a growth, and becomes a mighty and strong kingdom, and your scholarship will not allow you to see anything else, if you will only study it carefully. You say (on page 2) there is a visible and an invisible Church of God, and our bodies belong to the visible and our souls to the invisible, but did not refer to Scripture to prove it. This may be so, but I cannot accept it without Bible proof on it. You say (on page 2) I might belong to every church organization on earth, yet have no connection with God's spiritual church, and referred to Jno. iii. 3 to prove it, yet it falls far behind. But does teach this fact, that in order for a man (not a spirit) to see or enter into the kingdom of God he (the man) must be born again. No the fact that men calling the church they belong to the Church of God, neither makes their heart right, nor the church the Church of God. But, dear cousin, what about a man's heart who calls God's Church by any other name save that which the apostles called it. You say (on page 3) born of the spirit, regeneration, baptism of Spirit. All means the same thing, and referred to Jno. iii. 3; Titus iii. 5; 1 Cor. xii. 13, to prove it. So I examined these Scriptures and found that neither of them said so.

You said (on page 3) of course repentance must needs come in order to faith, but not a condition of salvation, and referred to Matt. xxi. 32 to prove it. Now according to this and your own argument no repentance no faith, no salvation, no salvation and faith is dependent on repentance. You say (on page 3) as a reason why so many reject the doctrine of regeneration they know nothing about it, and referred 1 Cor. ii. 14. This verse said nothing about regeneration, for the word regeneration does not appear in it. You say (on page 4) that man's only hope of heaven was through faith alone in the Lord Jesus Christ, and referred to Acts iv. 10-12; 1 Cor. iii. 11, and 1 John v. 11-12. So I examined these verses and to my surprise, neither one said any thing about heaven. You say heaven is the promised home for the righteous and the Scriptures taught it as clear as a noonday's sun, and referred to Jno. xiv. 1-3, and say that Jesus speaks of it as having mansions, and forever settles the question of a hope of the home, by saying that he himself will come after us. Dear cousin, you surely did not read your references carefully, because I am persuaded that you would not misrepresent anything if you knew it. Now in Jno. xiv. 2, Jesus said, "In my Father's house are many mansions," but did not say his Father's house was in heaven, neither did he say the saints would live in it. Also in verse 2 he says, "I go to prepare a place for you." Now, if the Father's house here referred to were heaven it was surely perfect and needed no preparing, therefore the place that he was a going to prepare could not have been heaven. In verse 3 he says, "I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also." So we see from this, that wherever Christ's eternal home is, there will be the saints, and where the saints everlasting home is that will be Christ's, for they are to be with him, and he with them.

Next you called my attention to Matt. xxv. 31-46; Luke xvi. 19-31, and says Jesus was evidently teaching the doctrine of rewards and punishment. Dear cousin, these Scriptures in Matthew and Luke have no connection with each other at all whatever. Those in Matthew who receive the reward, receive it because they had administered to the needs and wants of Christ's brethren, and those punished was because they had not administered to the wants and needs of his brethren. And verse 31 in same chapter tells just when this will occur.

Now, to Luke xvi. 19, 31, I believe this is a parable, and the rich man and his five brethren represent the Israelites, because they were the only people that had Moses and the prophets, as to who the beggar represents I cannot tell. They cannot represent the righteous nor the wicked. Because they were not said to be righteous nor wicked. Neither could they represent the immortal soul that you and your people talk so much about because you say it cannot die, for these men both died. You say (on page 6) if I would read 2 Cor. v. 1-10, I would find the idea of the home of the soul taught so clearly I could not mistake it. These verses say nothing about a soul nor a home. Verse 10 says, for we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, but does not locate the place. Verse 1 says, for we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Here Paul has reference to two lives, one mortal and one eternal, in possession of one, and the other in heaven, though he speaks of them as being two houses, and if you will carefully read to the end of 4th verse you will find that I am right.

You also said (on page 6) for me to read Rev. xxi. and I would find it (the home of the soul) so real that it is capable of measurement. Also the character and composition of the walls, streets and gates are given. Yes, I see here a beautiful city described, and its name is Jerusalem, and it has a wall great and high and twelve gates and they will not be shut at all, for there shall be no night there, and I see the kings of the earth will bring their glory and honor into it. Then, dear cousin, it will then surely be on earth, but what saith the Word? Paul said in Heb. xiii. 14, For here we have no continuing city, but we seek one to come. So Paul was looking for a city to come. Did Paul have the right view of it? Now let us read Rev. xxi. 2, And I John saw the holy city, New Jerusalem coming down from God out of heaven. So John was permitted to look far a head in the future and see the very thing that Paul was seeking for. Now let us read Rev. xx. 9, and let us see what we can learn, and they went upon the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about and the beloved city, and fire came down from God out of heaven and devoured them. So we see after the beloved city comes down on earth, the enemies of Christ and the saints will attract them and the city; but oh, they make no gain.

You say (on page 7) that Col. i. 5, shows that the Christian has a hope, and it is laid up in heaven. Yes, this is correct. But it does not say that the saints would go to it. Dear cousin, you must not infer so much, you think because the Scriptures say that the Christian's hope is in heaven, that they touch they will go up there, but they do not. You ought to hunt out the Scriptures that say the righteous will go up to heaven and introduce them.

You say (on page 7) that I may know what that hope is by reading Heb. vi. 17, 20. I see nothing said about a hope in these verses. Also you say read Col. i. 27, and I would learn from this that Christ is our hope of eternal life and heaven. This verse says nothing about eternal life or heaven.

You say you gather from my letter that I do not believe in the immortality of the soul, and say if I do not, you could show me that it is not a Bible doctrine, and referred to Jno. iii. 16. This verse does not say anything about an immortal soul, but it does show that in order for men and women to gain everlasting life, (for they are the world referred to in this verse) they must believe in the Son of God, and clearly shows that they are not in possession of it. You say (on page 8) all who really believe in Christ hath (now present tense) everlasting life, and referred to Jno. v. 24. John did not say that they were at that time in possession of everlasting life. Now, we must remember that God calleth those things which be not as though they were. Yes, the true believer hath everlasting life in some sense, but in what sense we will let God's Word settle the question. And this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life. 1 John ii. 25; also Titus i. 2, in hope of eternal life which God that cannot lie promised before the world began. So we see from these two verses, one from Paul and one from John, that the saints only hath eternal life in or by promise. Hence a matter of hope. Next you refer to Gal. ii. 20, and says that Christ liveth in us, but this it did not say, but Paul said, I am crucified with Christ. Nevertheless, I live yet not I, but Christ liveth in me. Now, if Christ was actually in Paul, he was not in heaven. You said for me to read Col. iii. 4. I do not see why you referred to this verse, because it shows plainly that the Christian's life is in Christ and they would have to wait till he comes before they could appear with him in glory.

You say (on page 8) I may say like some others, that everlasting does not mean eternal, and refer to 1 Jno. v. 11, 12, 13. The word everlasting does not appear in either of these verses. So this does not prove everlasting and eternal to mean the same thing. Now, dear cousin, if you will commence at the 10th verse and read carefully you will find that, John was talking about a record that God had given of his Son, and this record that he had given of his Son was eternal life, and that he had given it (the record) to his saints, and this life is in his Son. When Christ comes and gives to his saints eternal life, it can no longer be said that their life is in him. The fact that the Bible says the Christian's life is in Christ, shows that they are not in possession of it. You say (on page 9) that these bodies of ours are only the temples in which the immortal man lives. Dear cousin, if this is so, it is a Bible doctrine, and surely could be proven. Now, I think I have examined all of your references and treated them with all the fairness I knew how.

THOS. J. COLEMAN.

The Stars of Prophecy.

The Scriptures foretold Romanism; what was once prophecy, can now be read in Papal history. This foretold apostasy,—this paganized Christianity,—has appeared, has been headed by a "man of sin," who has been and is worshipped, just as images are worshipped. And in fact, he and his associates, who govern the Papal church, are the Image, that was made to the beast, or Pagan Rome.

The papacy rose in the manner and at the very time that prophecy said it would rise. It has worked for the extermination of the followers of Christ, just as God had said it would work. It has persecuted, it has hunted, it has slain them.

Belief of the gospel, was in its eyes a deadly heresy. It has shut up the Word of God, that it might not shine into the hearts of men. It has been "the man of sin" because it has given men license to sin, by selling them indulgences; by lifting into the Papal chair the vilest of men, by filling its sacradotal offices with individuals who were atheists at heart and immoral to the very core, by its teachings in the confessional, and by its wholesale murders, of innocent infants.

It has forbidden meats, it has forbidden marriage, as God said it would. It has lorded it over all nations; has stepped on the necks of kings and has made them kiss its feet. It has uttered "great swelling words of blasphemy against God," has seated itself in the temple of God—in what was once a pure church,—and its head has shown himself that he is god, by claiming as his due, the reverence, the worship, the veneration, the adoration, due only to the Creator. "Thou art another God on earth." Said Marcellus, "Our Lord God, the Pope, say others; seated on a throne, when adored by the canons and clergy of St. Peter's he "presides in the temple of the Lord." Say Romanists themselves.

He came with power and signs and lying wonders, "With all the deceivableness of unrighteousness,"—his false miracles, serving to confirm his pretentions, though the miracles and visions were but lies, performed, or made to appear by engines, slight of hand, strings, wires and ventriloquism.

He has stood the predicted number of years; the flesh of the harlot began to be eaten, and she began to be burned with fire by the kingdoms that had formerly upheld her. At the very hour when it was said such a thing would happen.

The stars of prophecy, pointed the early Fathers to Rome, as the fulfillment of the anti-christ.

Here was the man, who, while pretending to sit as Christ on earth, and to discover, and absolve sin, was yet at variance with the Bible on all the doctrines and ordinances that must be believed and obeyed to secure salvation.

They saw clearly that to be "anti," or against the doctrines of Christ was to be "anti," to him.

To them the ten-horned beasts of Daniel and John are the same, and history must interpret prophecy.

The stars of prophecy did not allow the fathers to hold "the futurist gap theory, the theory that the book of Revelation overleaps nearly eighteen centuries of Christian history, plunging at once into the distant future, and devoting itself entirely to predicting the events of the last few years of this dispensation."

Nor did these same stars of Holy Writ, permit any one until the 9th century to take any other view, then a spiritualizing class arose who imagined "that anti-christ would be an avowed infidel."

The Papacy was rising, while these interpreters were explaining away prophecy, and ere they were aware "the man of sin," had stolen a march upon them and was sitting in the temple of God full fledged, in the person of Boniface VIII.

Dante, the poet, painted the anti-christ, in these words, "My place he who usurps on earth hath made

A common server of puddle and of blood."

The Albigenses and the Vaudoirs saw, through the light given by the stars of Prophecy, that the Roman church, was the whore of Babylon. Rome could not bear to have the light throne upon her.

She turned her blood-hounds upon the candlesticks, that held the lighted candles, and overturned and slew them by the thousands, "flinging them from precipices and roasting them in the flames," and yet from these men, who held that the Papacy is "the anti-christ," dropped the seeds of truth, that were afterward to "roll over Europe the tremendous tide of the Reformation."

It was the testimony against Rome that wrought all this, it was the testimony against Rome that gave us civil and religious liberty. And that testimony came from the Word of God. The Lamb loosed the seals, and the once suffering church, rejoicing in an open Bible must give all the glory to Him.

Editor Restitution:

Will you kindly announce in the columns of THE RESTITUTION that R. A. Daniels, of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich, would like to hear from any brother, preferredly in Mich., who has a farm to rent on shares near to where the gospel is preached. If the owner can furnish everything and give one-third the first year so much the better. Will consider offers outside of State if advantageous. Have two boys, men-grown, and can handle good sized farm. All information will be appreciated and answered. The announcement will also be appreciated. Sincerely Yours.

R. A. DANIELS.

Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up till after your friends are dead. Fill their lives with sweetness. Speak kind, approving, cheering words while their ears can hear them. The things you mean to say after they are gone, say before they go. The encouragement thus given to them will prove a reflex benediction to you.

An Exhortation.

Dear friends suffer a few words of exhortation.

Said Paul to the Hebrew brethren, Take heed lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God, but exhort one another daily while it is called today lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin. For we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end. Yes, we must be doers of Christ's words in order to be like the wise man who built his house upon a rock. It is necessary to labor to enter into that rest that is promised to the saints, and which will be given to them when the Savior comes accompanied with all the holy angels and welcomes them into that kingdom which was prepared from the foundation of the world, there to enjoy that life which will last forever, where sickness, sorrow and death will not effect them, the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world will lead unto living fountains of water.

In order to obtain these great blessings, we must have pure hearts. Jesus said. "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God."

Again, said Jesus, "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." As followers of him who did no sin neither was guile found in his mouth, we ought to be careful in respect to our conversation. Jesus said, "By thy words thou shalt be justified and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." "For every idle word that men shall speak they shall give an account thereof in the day of judgment."

With these solemn thoughts before the apostle's minds we are not surprised at their putting forth so many exhortations in respect to the conversation of the followers of that meek and lowly Jesus. Said Paul, our conversation is in heaven from whence we expect the Savior. Said Peter, "Be ye holy in all manner of conversation" because it is written, "Be ye holy for I am holy." We are also told, "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord." Again said Paul, "Let your conversation be as becometh the gospel of Christ." Again he said, "Let your speech be alway with grace seasoned with salt." Again he said, "But fornication and all uncleanness or covetousness let it not once be named among you as becometh saints, neither filthiness nor foolish talking, nor jesting which are not convenient but rather giving of thanks. Let no man deceive you because of vain words, for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience. (Please read carefully Eph. v.) Paul exhorts to walk not as fools, but as wise redeeming the time because the days are evil. And again, he uttered a very important statement. He said, God is not mocked, whatsoever a man sows that shall he also reap. He that sows to the flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption, but he that sows to the spirit shall of the spirit reap everlasting life. Take heed brethren and sisters, watch and pray.

P. H. BOUK.

Dear Brother Underwood:

I see the dear old RESTITUTION wants to be renewed once more, so please find enclosed Express Order for one dollar and fifty cents. I was glad to meet you and form your acquaintance at the Cleveland Conference. If time continues hope to meet you both at Brush Creek next year. But as Bro. P. Neil says, we would prefer to be with our Lord, in his kingdom before the end of nineteen-hundred and six. I believe that would be the prayer of every true child of God but let us occupy the time to the glory of God until that great day and whether we be awake or sleeping may we have our names written in the Book of Life is my humble prayer. Yours in the faith.

JOHN C. VENABLE.

Dear Restitution.

An other year has gone with all its joys and sorrows, and the good we have done is written in the Book of Life; and the New Year is just to dawn upon us. May we each do more for the Master and be more faithful to tell every one we meet of Jesus' soon coming to reign on the earth in righteousness. Peace on earth and good will to men. We expect Bro. L. E. Conner here to preach for us Sunday 31. May God bless all the household of faith is the prayer of your Sister in Christ. MARY ALLARD.

Everybody blunders; it is the wise person that does not blunder in the same way twice.

Obituary.

It is with a sad heart we are called upon to announce the death of Sister Nancy E. Adams—(nee Bennett) who died Dec., the 30th 1905, aged 65 years 5 months and 18 days, was born in Tipton county Ind., July the 17th 1840, and was married to the late Thomas E. Adams, both of Tipton county Ind., on the 26th day of Nov., 1857. Our dear Bro. having fallen asleep in Jesus May the 22nd 1904. They moved from Indiana to Andrew Co., Missouri about the year 1867, and from there to Jefferson county Kansas in the spring of 1870, where they resided on the old homestead until the time of his death. Since that time Sister Adams has lived with her youngest son Frank and his wife near the old homestead, at the time of her death. She leaves nine children, six sons and three daughters to mourn the loss of a kind Christian mother. Telephone message was received by the writer, (who lives near a hundred miles away) on Sunday evening, Dec., the 31st, to come and hold funeral services. So I went and on Thursday afternoon Jan. the 4th, 1906 shortly after 12 o'clock noon, we held services in the German Baptist Church to a very large and attentive audience on the hope of the resurrection. Burial in Osawakie Cemetery, beside her husband. So we leave our dear Brother and Sister in the peaceful sleep of death to quietly rest until that welcome voice says come forth. Good by, may we all meet you in that happy day.

J. F. PIERSON.

The Big Man and His Mother.

We were at a railroad junction one night, waiting a few hours for a train in the waiting-room, trying to talk a brown-eyed boy to sleep. Presently a freight train arrived, and a beautiful little old woman came in, escorted by a German, and they talked in German, he giving her, evidently, a lot of information about the route she was going, and telling her about her tickets and baggage check, and occasionally patting her on the arm. At first our United States baby, who did not understand German, was tickled to hear them talk, and he "snickered" at the peculiar sound of the language that was being spoken. The big man put his hand to the old lady's cheek and said something encouraging, and a tear came to her eye and she looked as happy as a queen. The brown eyes of the boy opened pretty big and his face sobered down from his laugh, and he said:

"Papa, is it the mother?"

We knew it was, but how should a four-year-old sleepy baby that couldn't understand German, tell that the lady was his mother? We asked him how he knew, and he said:

"Oh, the big man was so kind to her."

The big man bustled out; we gave the little old mother the rocking chair, and presently the man came in with a baggage-man, and to him he spoke English. He said: "This is my mother; she is going to go to Iowa and I have to go back on the next train, but I want you to attend to her baggage and see her on the right car, the rear car, with a good seat near the centre, and tell the conductor she is my mother. And here is a dollar for you, and I'll do as much for your mother some time."

The baggage-man grasped the dollar with one hand, grasped the big man's hand with the other, and looked at the little German mother with an expression that showed that he had a mother, too; and we almost knew that the old lady would be well treated. Then we put the sleeping mind-reader on a bench, and went on the platform and got acquainted with the German. And he talked of horse-trading, buying and selling, and everything that showed he was a live man, ready for any speculation, from buying a yearling colt to a crop of hops or barley, and that his life was a very busy one: with at times disappointments and rough roads; but with all this hurry and excitement he was kind to his mother, and we loved him just a little; and when, after a few minutes' talk about business, he said: "You must excuse me; I must go to the depot and see if my mother wants anything," we felt like grasping his fat red hand and kissing it.—Our Dumb Animals.

There is no grief from which we should not bring out some new tenderness, some gift of sympathy; no place of peril where our "feet stood firm" that should not yield its memorial in trust and strength.—J. R. Miller.

Hieremias (or "Jeremiah").

CHAPTER 18.

1. The Word that occurred from the Lord unto Hieremias, which saith,

2. Arise and go down into the potter's house, and there wilt thou hear my words.

3. And I went down into the house of the potter, and lo, he was doing a work upon the stones.

4. And the earthen-vessel which he was making with his hands fell; and again he made it another earthen-vessel, even as was pleasing in his sight to do.

5. And a word of the Lord occurred unto me (not came unto me) saying; (or which saith) shall I not be able even as this potter to make you, O ye house of Israel? So as the potter's clay are ye in my hands.

7. I shall bespeak an end for a nation or a kingdom to take them away and to lose them;

8. And that nation shall turn from all its evil-doings, and I shall change my mind (repent R. V.) concerning the calamities which I had reasoned to do to them;

9. And I shall bespeak an end (an end in view) for a nation and a kingdom to build them up and plant them down;

10. And they shall do things wicked in my sight in not hearkening to my voice, and I shall change my mind concerning the good things which I said I was going to do to them.

11. And do thou say unto Joudas' men of mark and those who dwell in Hieronsaleem; lo, I am molding calamities (or evil-things) for you and I am reasoning a reasoning in respect to you. Let each one forsooth turn away from his wicked way, and do ye make your devices better (nobler).

12. And they have said, We are showing our manliness in that we are going to go one way after our apostrophes, and we are going to do each one of us the things pleasing to his own wicked heart.

13. Therefore thus saith the Lord, Ask forsooth, among nations, Who hath heard of such frightful things as a virgin of Israel hath done exceedingly?

14. Will breasts leave off from a rock? (two rocky hills so named in Arabia Petra) or snow from the Libanos? (the high peaks of the so-called Lebanon range of mountains) will water that is borne violently with a wind incline out?

15. Because my laity have ignored me; in vain have they burned incense, and they will weaken age-lasting measuring-lines with their ways by walking in paths that have no highway to journey in,

16. By arraying their land for desolation and an age-lasting hissing; all who go their way through it will be astounded and shake their head.

17. Like a scorching-wind shall I scatter them before the face of their enemies; I shall show them a day of their loss.

18. And they have said, Come and let us reason a reasoning against Hieremias, because law will not leave off from priest and counsel from an understanding-man and word from prophet; come and let us smite him a tongue and we shall hear all his words.

19. Mayest thou have hearkened to me, O Lord, and mayest thou have hearkened to the voice of my justification.

20. Are evil things accustomed to be returned for good things? Because they have talked words against my soul, and their way of checking me they have hid from me; Do thou remember my standing, before to talk good things for them, to turn away thine anger from them.

2. Therefore mayest thou have given their sons to famine, and mayest thou have mustered them into a swords hands; may their wives have become childless and widows and their husbands taken away by death and may their young men have fallen with a sword in war.

22. May there have become clamor in their houses, which letteth loose highwaymen upon them suddenly, because they have reckoned to seize me, and have hid snares for me.

23. And thou, O Lord, knowest all their counsel unto death against me; do not account their iniquities guiltless, and their sins do not wipe away from before thy face; Let weakness in thy sight become theirs; in a due-time of thine anger mayest thou have done unto them.

COMMENT.

In the 4th verse "fell" instead of "was marred" as in R. V.

In the 7th verse "bespeak an end" instead of "at what instant" R. V. and "change my mind" instead of "repent" R. V. Same criticism for the 9th verse and the 10th verse.

In the 11th "am moulding calamities" instead of "I frame" of course as a potter moulds, he doesn't frame; and "am reasoning a reasoning" instead of "devise a device" and "devices" instead of "doings" R. V.

In the 12th there is no text for "There is no hope" and no word for "devices" nor for "stubbornness," and R. V. omits "we are showing our manliness."

In the 13th verse R. V. omits the word "frightful" and "the virgin" should be "a virgin" namely one and that Jouda.

The 15th verse R. V. is all wrong—read and compare as it does not even approximate the thought.

In the 15th verse "ignored" instead of "forgotten," a much stronger word. "In vain" instead of "to vanity" also the whole of the last clause wrong—compare.

The 16th verse not accurate but well enough perhaps.

In the 17th verse "east wind" should be "a scorching wind" and there is no text for "I will look upon their back and not their face."

In the 18th verse no word for "then" and no text for "devise devices" and "let us not give heed to any of his words" should be "and we shall hear all his words."

In the 19th verse "to the voice of them that contend with me" should read "to the voice of my justification."

In the 20th verse "they have digged a pit for my soul" should read "they have talked words against my soul" and R. V. omits entirely the clause which reads "and their way of checking me they have concealed from me," and "fury" should read "anger."

The 21st not accurate—"children" should be "sons" and "men" should be "husband."

In the 22nd verse "cry" should be "clamor" and the clamor "in their house" not "from," and no word for "heard" and "which letteth loose highwaymen" instead of "when thou shalt bring a troop" and "reckoned to seize me" instead of "have digged a pit to take me" and no word for "feet" in text.

In the 23d verse "and" instead of "yet" and no word for "slay" "account not their iniquities guiltless" instead of "forgive not their iniquity" and "Let weakness in thy sight be theirs" instead of "Let them be overthrown before thee"—and "due-time" instead of "time."

CHAS. GARDNER.

The Dead in Christ.

And as he tarries a moment yonder in the skies there will be such an awakening as this earth has never known before. The silent cities of the dead, where for many years has reigned such stillness, and where though so thickly settled has lingered such loneliness, will suddenly become the liveliest places in the world. Potter's fields will be visited by the mighty God. Some who have fallen while in the very front of the battle and all alone sleep beneath the soil of Africa, or have become the prey of wild beasts in India, or been massacred by Turks, or cut to pieces by the Boxers; some who have been buried beneath the waves of the treacherous deep, "will hear his voice and come forth." "The dead in Christ," wherever their dust or ashes may lie, "shall rise first." "Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air." Hallelujah! "So shall we ever be with the Lord." "Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour when the Son of man cometh."

When a young collegian said to President Wayland that he did not think it required great wisdom to make such proverbs as those of Solomon, the old man replied, "Make a few, make a few!" A fair trial would surely be very convincing.

WE wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

WILL YOU TRY IT?

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $1.95 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

Seventy-five More.

I receive enquiries as to when Pine Woods Bible Class Book will be printed?

In answer, I will say, when I receive seventy-five more subscriptions, the book can be printed, and sent forth on its mission, to teach the glad tidings. If all who really want it had said so, it could now be out sowing seed. When God's professed servants make his cause a secondary matter, and put it off to a "convenient time," his cause suffers. Now all who really want the book please sit down and write me, as soon as you have read this, and then things will move at once. Don't wait until a more convenient time. God's business demands prompt attention.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Evangelizing Notice.

I expect to make an evangelizing trip to Arizona in December and return late in the winter or early spring. Any brethren that may be reached on or near the Southern Pacific R. R. between Portland, Oregon and Phoenix, Arizona, may secure my service by corresponding with me at Scholls, Ore., or Phoenix, Ari. I have cut loose from my farm and desire to devote my whole time to the work. Help to the cause will be gratefully accepted.

Pine Woods Bible Class in Book Form.

I have several times been solicited to have the past lessons of the Class put in Book form.

I have decided to do this, if I can secure enough subscribers to the book to warrant the expense of publishing it.

The book if printed will contain over four hundred pages. How many copies will you take at $1.25 each?

Send your pledges but no money until I can see if sufficient is subscribed for to warrant the expense.

Send your pledges right away, so that the book can be put to press as soon as possible. Address W. H. Wilson, 420 N. Willow Ave., Austin Station Chicago, Ill.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshal., Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

God Never Would-If.

"God never would have sent the darkness
Before you could see the light,
But you would not be ready to be guiding hand
In the way were always bright;
And so you see it was best to walk by faith,
God knew it was best to walk by sight."

Kingdom of God, What is it?

If Bible students would read the Book as they do others by themselves, and not be influenced by church doctrines and theological schools, there would be no need of a controversy on this all important subject. The sects are at variance with each other as to what the kingdom of God really is. One claiming it to be an influence that fills the heart. Another that it is the Church. If each of these would search the Scriptures for the truth on this subject they would find that neither have the truth.

Those who deny that the kingdom is yet future and is to be a literal kingdom ignore entirely the purpose of God in creating man. It shall be the purpose of this article to show his purpose in forming or molding man of the dust of the ground.

"And God said unto them, Be fruitful and multiply and replenish the earth and subdue it; and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowls of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth." Gen. i. 28. In this text we find that God gave dominion, that is, authority, to rule the earth. Man was then placed in the garden and given a law with the opportunity of gaining a better life. In this he failed when he was deprived of [illegible] and compelled to till the earth. We note further that God promised the seed of the woman who would be obedient and be given the power to bruise the serpent's head. It is admitted pretty generally that this seed spoken of was Christ.

In searching the Scriptures we find that there is a well defined line of prophecy in proof of this position. Nearly 2000 years after this promise Abraham was called out of his country and from his father's house to a country that God would show him. When he obeyed God gave him a promise of a land as an everlasting possession. This certainly meant an everlasting life.

In Gen. xxii. Abraham was promised a seed who should "possess the gates of his enemies." Paul says in Gal. iii. 16, that this seed was Christ, the unit seed of Abraham. In Micah iv. 8 we read, "And thou, O tower of the flock, the stronghold of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion; the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem." The dominion that was promised to Adam which he lost through disobedience will come to the "tower of the flock."

In Psa. lxxii., "His dominion shall be from sea to sea and from the river unto the ends of the earth." In other words his dominion is to be universal. In the second Psalm our minds are carried forward to a time when the nations will be troubled. "Why do the heathen rage and the people imagine (meditate) a vain thing. The kings of the earth set themselves and the rulers take counsel together against the Lord and against his anointed, saying, Let us break their bands asunder and cast away their cords from us. He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh; the Lord shall have them in derision. Then shall he speak to them in his wrath and vex them in his sore displeasure. Yet have I set my king upon my holy hill Zion. I will declare the decree; the Lord hath said unto me, Thou art my Son this day have I begotten thee." Paul in using the latter part of this Scripture applies it to Christ. The event herein narrated must follow Christ's resurrection. In this God is dealing with the nations and not with individuals. God first addressed Adam and his posterity as individuals. So he did to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. After that for a period he dealt with Israel as a nation until the seed should come who was Christ, since which time he has been calling out a people for his name. Those who are called out will be the rulers in the kingdom which God has promised. When Jesus shall come with all his holy angels (saints) with him then will he call before him all nations and judge (rule) them. Matt. xxv.

In Acts xvii. Paul says that "God hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge (rule) the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead."

The angel announced to Mary that she should become the mother of a Son. "He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest." "And the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke i. 32, 33.

Thus far we think that we have proven that God's purpose in creating man was to give him authority to rule over the earth and every living thing. Also that Adam lost that dominion and it was given to the woman's seed even the first dominion.

To rule implies a government and God chose to call this form of ruling a kingdom. His Son is to be that Ruler and those taken out of the Gentiles as a people for his name, associate rulers. Matt. xix. 28; Rev. iii. 21; v. 10.

In Dan. ii. 44, we read "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break to pieces and consume all of these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever."

In reading the account of the king's dream and Daniel's interpretation we learn that there were to be four universal kingdoms. The first was to give way to the second. The second to the third. The third to the fourth. The last was to be divided into two kingdoms and then into ten which were to remain until the God of heaven should set up a kingdom. This kingdom was not to be left to other people but to break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms and therefore become universal.

Wilson in his Historical Prophecies has this to say about a Fifth Universal Kingdom, "Thus, as marked out by prophecy, four times have the nations of the earth gathered themselves into mighty aggregates of power, denoted Universal Empires or Monarchies. None like went before, and none like have come after them; and it is upon the warrant of negative Scripture testimony that men believe no other temporal universal empire possible. But, still, the dream of Nebuchadnezzar, and the interpretation of the prophet point to a fifth monarchy greater than all the others, that shall arise when Christianity shall have swallowed up all other forms of religions, and the nations of the earth shall be gathered into one fold, under one all-conquering Shepherd—the Prince of Peace." I wish to add to this testimony Rev. xi. 15. "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ." Rev. xii. 10. "Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ." Salvation comes with the kingdom of our God and the power of his Christ when all opposing nations and people shall be broken to pieces. We leave it with our reader to study with care the second chapter of Daniel and see that as truly as there have been four universal empires so true will there be a fifth. The last differs from the others in that it is not to be left to other people but is to stand forever. We are asked what proof have that this kingdom is to be established upon the earth?

In Matt. v. 4, Jesus says, "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." 2 Pet. iii. 13, "Nevertheless, we, according to his promise, look for a new heaven and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." Rev. v. 10. "And has made us unto our God kings and priests and we shall reign on the earth." Here we have three witnesses who state that our inheritance is to be on the earth. In further proof I wish to quote from the Prophet Daniel iii. 23 and 27, "I beheld until the Ancient of Days came and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High, and the time came that they possessed the kingdom, and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all nations shall serve and obey him." The prophet here saw the kingdom given to the saints of the Most High. He also stated that this kingdom was universal and was under (not in) the whole heaven.

This kingdom is in an overturned condition today, but will be again restored to Israel and will become universal. See Ezek. xxi. 26, 27; Acts i. 6, 7; Luke xi. 11.

When Jesus preached the gospel of the kingdom of God it was relating to this overturned kingdom. The gospel became good news or glad tidings concerning it. This is the gospel that men and women were required to believe in order to salvation. The apostles were sent out to preach this gospel to every creature and were informed that whosoever believed this gospel and were baptized should be saved. This is the gospel that Paul declared was the power of God unto the salvation of all who would believe the gospel. All other gospels carry with them condemnation. See Gal. i. 6-12.

The above lines are submitted with the hope that some may see God's purpose in the creation of man, and his plan of salvation for the human family.

Yours in the truth.

Hieremias (or "Jeremiah").

CHAPTER 19.

1. Then said the Lord unto me, Go on foot and get a moulded earthen wine-jar, and thou shalt gather together from the elders of the laity and from the priests;

2. And thou shalt go out into the Polaiandrion (meaning a place for many men—a heathen assembly place) of sons of their offspring, which is before the front-doors of the Charseith gateway; and there do thou read all these words which I shall talk to thee,

3. And thou shalt say unto them, May ye have heard the Word of the Lord, ye kings of Jouda and prominent men of Jouda and ye men who dwell in Hierousaleem and ye who go your way in by these gateways; thus saith the Lord God of Israeel; Lo, I am leading calamities against this place, so that the ears of every one who heareth them there will ring,

4. Because they have utterly forsaken me and have alienated this place, and have burned incense in it to other gods whom they and their fathers have not known; and the kings of Jouda have filled this place with innocent blood;

5. And they have built high places to Baal to burn their sons with fire, things which I did not command nor apprehend with my heart.

6. Therefore days are coming, saith the Lord, and it will no longer have been called Diaptoosis (a term for grief) and a Blumdrion of a son of Emnom, but a Poluandrion of their slaughter;

7. And I shall slay the counsel of Jouda and the counsel of Hieremaleem in this place, and I shall cast them down with a sword in the presence of their enemies and with the hands of those who seek their souls; and I shall give their dead for food for the flying things of the heavens and the wild beasts of the land;

8. And I shall lead down this city into disappearance and a condition of decisive hissing; every one who goeth his way by it will look darkly at it and hiss derisively about its afflictions.

9. And they will eat the flesh of their sons and the flesh of their daughters, and each one the flesh of his neighbor will they eat in its environment and siege with which their enemies will besiege them.

10. And thou shalt crush the wine-jar before the eyes of the prominent men who go their way with thee;

11. And thou shalt say, Thus saith the Lord; even so shall I crush this laity and this city as an earthen vessel is being crushed, which cannot be healed any more;

12. Even so shall I do, saith the Lord, to this place and those who dwell in it, in giving this city to be like Diapiptousa (a ruin or a monument of mourning).

13. And houses of Hierousaleem and houses of kings of Jouda will be even as the Diapiptoon place, by reason of their acts of uncleanness in all the houses in which they burned incense upon their roofs unto all the army of the heavens and poured libations unto other gods.

14. And Hieremias went out of the Diaptoosis, where the Lord had sent him to prophesy, and he stood in the court of the house of the Lord, and said unto all the laity:

15. Thus saith the Lord, Lo, I am leading upon this city and upon all the cities thereof and upon the villages thereof all the calamities which I have talked in respect to it, because they have hardened their neck not to hearken to my commandments.

COMMENT.

In the 1st verse "earthen bottle" should be "earthen wine jar" also "elders of the priests" should be "priests" merely.

In the 2nd verse R. V. "valley of the son of Hinnom" should be "Poluandrion of sons of their offspring" as explained in the translation here given.

Also the "Charseith gateway is called the Harsith gate" in R. V. and a marginal note interprets it to mean "the gate of the potsherds." Should be if "Charseith" is the correct name of the gateway showing marks of a previous earthquake—evidences of a previous divine judgment executed and an appropriate place to pronounce another coming.

In the 3rd verse R. V. omits "and ye who go your way in by these gateways" and R. V. has "tingle" where it should be "ring" or "echo."

In the 4th verse "the kings of Jouda" is the subject of "have filled" and not of "have known" as in the R. V.

In the 5th verse there is nothing about "burnt-offerings" as in the R. V. "nor spake it" also not in the text.

In the 6th verse "no Topheth nor" "The valley of the son of Hinnom." Read and see what it does say.

In the 7th verse "make void" should be "slay"—the rest of the verse well enough.

In the 8th verse "astonishment" should be "disappearance" and "plagues" should be "affliction."

In the 9th verse "friend" should be "neighbor" and "straitness" should be "environment."

In the 10th verse "bottle" again should be "wine-jar."

In the 11th verse nothing about "burying in Topheth" etc.

Compare the 12th verse where "Diapeptoosis" occurs by way of significant illustration of the death and ruin predicted.

The same is true of the 13th verse—"army" instead of "host" and "libations" (a poured offering) instead of "drink offerings."

In the 14th "Diaptoosis" instead of "Topheth" and "laity" (church-people) instead of "people."

In the 15th verse "upon all the cities thereof and upon the villages thereof" instead of "upon all her towns."

I am showing these minute and particular differences for the readers who are scholars enough to look them up and verify them.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LV. Dear PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JANUARY 24, 1906. NUMBER 4.

To the Evangelists of the Church of God:

In my last letter to THE RESTITUTION, addressed to the Church of God, I tried to emphasize the matter of personal responsibility in our work for Christ and the Church for which Christ died. I make this appeal once more. Dear ones in Christ, if you have not yet yielded yourself to this matter of personal work, will you not do so at once? Pray over the matter until you are ready to say with all your heart, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" I believe, I know, God will give you the opportunity to be so busy with work that you will cry out, "Come over into Macedonia and help us." I am now sending this cry to our Evangelists, Help, send help quick. I am going to tell you now. I am going to represent an "evangelist," a writer, a Bible school leader, a critic and a humble child of God in a community where higher learning is the essential qualification for one to be a leader in these modern times. If I fail it will not be because I have not done all I could, but because the Church of God has not supported me. I have said, "the testing time will come sooner or later." It came to me much sooner than I expected and I am not prepared for the emergency, but I am trusting God and am not going to shirk and turn traitor. I believe a practical demonstration is all you need to make you see that what I have suggested in my work is both practical and effective. I have made suggestions, How the Church of God may become leaders among churches; how they may become leaders in "Bible schools;" how they may become leaders in Christian literature; and how they may become leaders by assuming personal responsibility. I have made suggestions to the church, to the Board of Directors of our paper, and to individual members of the church and to the evangelists of our church. I now say to you as a body and as individual members, I have done all I can. I have said all I should to put this matter clearly before you. I have said we have talked too much and done too little. I have said our methods and not God's blessed truth were at fault. I have come to you suggesting new methods and I am willing to make a practical demonstration. This is for your good and for the good of a sinful world. Now you will at once see that I have been made to realize that to be like Christ I must follow him closely. Now Jesus says to me, "Come unto me all ye that labor (look at this word long and prayerfully) and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you (was I right when I said we must bow our heads to receive the yoke) and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest to your souls." Could I tell you the rest that has come to my soul for having bowed my head to receive the yoke, you would not wait one moment longer.

Dear brothers and sisters of God's Church, the church for which Christ died, that he might present it to himself, a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, I plead with you, come close to Jesus. Let him whisper these beautiful restful words, "For my yoke is easy and my burden is light." Though I have labored hard and sat up into the night to do my duty as a mother and house wife and also to assume the responsibility of the work I have presented to you, I find that I have now one more duty to perform, and that is the local problem, Bible school work in a community where I am located, the University of the State of Illinois. I find I have been given strength for each day's work, and I am not worried and my heart is light with the songs of Zion on my lips, with the Sword of the Spirit in my hand, and with the love of God in my heart. I find Christ speaking to me from night till morning, from morning till night, in waking hours and in dreams by night. I see a vision, a united church, purged of every root of bitterness, leading out in a work that will do more to show to the world and to the Christian churches that we are not antagonizing their work, but we are like Ezra of old, have a work that is worthy of their attention. We can't come down to you but we invite you to come up and help us.

Now I leave this subject for you to consider, I have too much to do in my local work to use my time and means in telling you your faults and your duty. I have confessed my fault to the church and publicly confessed that I have, like many another, stumbled though blindly. I now see my fault. I have prayed God to forgive me. He has answered my petition and has shown me a better way. I have bowed my head to the yoke and have received the blessing, and I am following Jesus, trusting him fully. I have made known my need to a few whom I am depending on to help me in this work here. I have asked for those whose hearts have been touched by an awakening and cleansing fire—to do what seems best to you for the cause of Christ. Do not put it off, do it now. Jesus may come tomorrow and reckon with you and me. Am I ready to pray, "Come Lord Jesus and come quickly?" I have this to ask of our evangelists, please send me all the aid you can in chart work. I want to emphasize the essentials for which we stand. "Baptism for the remission of sins." "Life only through Christ." These two subjects I want first, others may follow as I proceed in the work. Take the responsibility of helping me in this way, and I will call on you if I need more assistance. I write through THE RESTITUTION because I don't know you personally.

Yours for truth.

HARRIET E. BOICE.

In Loving Memory of Brother A. J. Davis.

I do not think that in the Church of God in Southern Kansas any thing has so touched the hearts of the members, young and old, as the death of our beloved Brother in Christ, A. J. Davis. There were few who ever knew he was ailing, and his death was a shock to one and all.

The Church will miss him; the homes made better by his presence will miss him, and most of all the dear old mother, to whom he was a faithful son, will miss him. I shall never forget the last visit I ever had with him. He was on his way to Texas for his health, and stopped at Arkansas City after having conducted the singing at Sister Butcher's funeral at Blackwell. In the morning just before he started to the train, he seemed so depressed with sadness. He said to me, Oh who will be the next to sleep the long sleep? I have been thinking if it were me, what would mother do? I wonder what she would do. She has never done without me.

Then he said, This going away from home is the saddest I ever experienced. Were it not that I thought that rest, and a change for awhile would help me, even now I would not go.

The change seemed to do no good, and in two months from then he too fell asleep in Jesus, being the next one out of the Church here to sleep the long sleep.

As comes a storm at close of day,
Strewing wreck and ruin in its way,
So came the news that thou wert gone;
Life's book was closed, thy life's work done.
That we no more should see thy face,
Or hear thy voice in songs of praise;
Or hear thee speak of Jesus' love,
Showered in mercy from above.
That ne'er for thee the rose should bloom,
Or flowers shed their sweet perfume;
But seasons come and seasons go,
And round our hearts and firesides glow.
We ne'er should see thy smiling face,
That the enemy of all our race,
This bud of promise had effaced.
But while we weep that thou art gone,
We look to God in sorrow's hour,
For he has said he holds the power
To free us from our cruel foe,
As through his hands we all must go.
That where the river bright doth flow,
The tree of life forever grows.
In Canaan sweet, in Beaulah land
We'll meet again at God's right hand.
Farewell dear one, thy work is done,
And thou shalt sleep till Jesus comes.
Secure and sweet will be thy rest,
Thou shalt awaken with the blest.
A crown of righteousness to wear,
And praise God there as thou did'st here.
Among God's chosen thou shalt stand
With palms of victory in thy hand.

LYDIA CHAPLIN.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christian King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JAN. 23, 1906.

As there are five Wednesdays in this month, there will be no paper next week, this issue and the one of Feb. 7, being consecutive.

A NOTICE appears in this issue from Sister Lelia Whitehead, concerning a Berean Pin. This was to have been in the Berean Column, but came too late, so is given now. We trust those interested will act promptly.

BROTHER Zilmer arrived home from his meetings at Roll on last Saturday afternoon, and as he stepped off the car was handed a telegram summoning him to his mother's home in Wisconsin, as she had met with an accident, where he went on the first train that would get there.

LATER—Word came from Brother Zilmer stating his mother had fallen on the ice, breaking her hip, and that there were grave doubts of her recovery.

THE military progress of China is causing amazement in Europe. One million rifles of the latest patterns have been ordered, besides some hundreds of batteries of the latest types. Young Chinese who have attended the schools of Germany and the United States, and have been connected with the military service, will return home and superintend the organization of a new army of 1,250,000 men, modelled after the army of the German empire. This immense body of men, with officers educated in the best schools, and who have gained experience in the maneuvers of the armies of other nations, may well cause the world to look up. There has also been an awakening in the line of patriotism in the Chinese. For a long time they have doubted themselves—everything has tended to impress them that they were far inferior to the Europeans. Since Japan's victory over Russia, this has all changed, and the Chinaman now believes in himself, and urged on by Japan, will be a menace to any nation. A correspondent relating some maneuvering of the Chinese army that he witnessed recently, thus writes: There is not much to choose between a European and a Chinese regiment. Physique, equipment, and deportment impress one as much the same.

Danger in Asia, not in Morocco.

Under the above heading a correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, after showing that neither France, Germany nor England can afford to go to war over the Morocco affair, inasmuch as the commerce and industries of the nations would be of greater value to them than all that is at stake in Morocco, goes on to show that the real danger has shifted again to the far east. The correspondent says:

None of the powers represented at the Algeciras congress are ready just at present to go to the length of fighting to enforce their views; and when, in addition to this, the fact is taken into consideration that there is an enormous trade between Germany and France, and between Germany and England, which would be brought to a standstill in the event of a conflict, entailing the suspension of thousands of industries in all three countries, and the ruin of millions upon millions of people employed therein, it will be readily understood that capital and labor in Germany, France and England would do everything possible to obstruct any declaration of war about a subject so remote in their eyes as Morocco.

Far more serious is the condition of affairs in the far east, where the outlook is extremely grave—so much so, indeed, that extensive reinforcements are being sent out from here to the Philippines, not, as has been foolishly asserted, for the invasion of China, but purely for purposes of the defense of the Philippine archipelago. It is not alone the attitude of China that gives cause for alarm, but also that of Japan, and the animosity of the people of the Celestial empire, not merely to everything American but also to the British, and, in fact, to foreigners in general, is spreading throughout the land of the rising of the sun in an altogether remarkable degree. It is true that the governments at Peking and Tokio manifest a friendly disposition. But they are either unwilling or unable to control the people, and spellbinders are permitted, undisturbed by the police, to advocate in the principal streets of the Mikado's capital the expulsion of the United States from the Philippines.

They argue that the presence of America in the archipelago is not only an injury to the prestige of Japan but also a danger to her commerce, and they urge that war should be declared upon the United States and its expulsion from the Philippines accomplished before it has had time to establish itself too strongly in a military and naval sense in the archipelago. They add that in the event of their country becoming involved in complications with any foreign power Uncle Sam, by reason of his position at Manila, would be enabled to drive a hard bargain with Japan, and that it is out of the question for him to be allowed to remain in the Philippines.

These harangues are being delivered day after day, and night after night, to audiences of thousands upon thousands, not alone in the streets of Tokio but also throughout the various cities, towns, and villages of Japan, and the views thus expressed are being reflected with more or less directness by the press, the people being taught to believe that Japan had been led solely and entirely by sentiments of generosity to make a gift of peace to poor Russia, had liberated Corea from Muscovite thraldom, and had demonstrated to China that she need no longer be the football of the European powers.

Naturally all this is serving to inflame the masses of the people against America, and it may safely be asserted that at no time since the days of Commodore Perry has the United States held so small a place in the regard and good will of the Japanese people as at the present moment. It is difficult to say definitely just at what moment, or by what means, the change of sentiment was brought about. But there is no doubt that the popular impression to the effect that the peace of Portsmouth, without any war indemnity, had been virtually forced upon Japan by President Roosevelt, contributed to create a bitter feeling, of which evidence was given at the time of the Harriman visit to Tokio, and afterwards in connection with the stay there of William Jennings Bryan. It is curious that in most of these public utterances no mention is ever made of the friendly role played during the recent war by Japan's ally, England. Indeed, on the rare occasions when statesmen refer to the alliance, it is generally in the form of a contemptuous insinuation that England needs Japan's help to retain her hold upon India.

That the English are becoming alive to the feelings which the Japanese are beginning to entertain toward them is shown by the indignation displayed in the English newspapers over the part played by the Japanese in the anti-English and the anti-foreign disturbances at Shanghai and at other foreign ports in China. One of the leading organs of the London press calls upon the Tokio government to lose not a moment in warning Japanese residents in China to keep their friendliness for that empire within due bounds." The paper in question expresses surprise that "no step of the sort has yet been taken by the Mikado's government, all the more as it (the Japanese government) cannot fail to be fully acquainted with the secret springs of the anti-foreigner agitation in China." The latter has all along been fomented by Chinese newspapers owned and edited by Japanese, and it is well known to every American and European merchant throughout the far east that the boycott of American goods has been engineered by the Japanese for the purpose of substituting their own wares for those of this country in the Chinese markets.

The boycott has now got altogether beyond the control of the Chinese government. Carefully fostered by means of references to the American exclusion laws, it has been taken up by the masses, especially in the southern districts, which were formerly the principal American markets, and whence most of the coolie emigration to this country flows. How severe is the boycott may be seen by the fact that the Standard Oil business in China is absolutely at a standstill. Not a case of oil has been sold for several months, and in all the leading towns and cities the guilds have started public exhibitions of American goods, of American trade marks, and of American wrappers, etc., to show the people what to avoid to buy.

Lately the boycott has spread to other foreign goods, even to those of Japan's ally, England, and wares on which English trade marks and signs were substituted for American labels early in the boycott now receive the same treatment. Indeed, a movement is now being started for the purpose of extending the boycott to the imports of opium from India, which, if it proves successful, will constitute a serious blow not only to the Indian trade but also the revenues of the Indian government.

In all this Japan holds the key to the situation. By common consent, reluctantly accorded in some instances, the foreign powers have been willing to tolerate Japan's efforts to put the Chinese empire on a better footing. There are few white people in the orient who are not firmly convinced that Japan is using these advantages for the purpose of promoting her ideal of "Asia for Asiatics," politically, commercially, and in a military sense, but under the direction and for the benefit of Dai Nippon."

Fear Not.

Reading last evening the startling news that the Sennusi, or Prophet of Islamism, has after twenty years of preparation, succeeded at last in welding together the hundreds of millions of his disciples and that at any moment he can make the sign that will hurl their armies upon Christendom, an involuntary pang of fear ran through my heart; for the cruel Abdul Hamid, the Sultan of Turkey is the religious head of these hosts, and can do with them as he will, and so defy all the powers of Christendom to stay for a moment, his murderous hand. I thought at once of our own countrymen in Mohammedan countries as missionaries, of our soldiers and teachers in the Philippine Islands, of our merchants trading in Mohammedan ports, of our brother Anglo-Saxons in India and Africa, and trembled as I pictured their fate, if such a war should be brought about. But Jesus says, "Fear not," "I am he that liveth and was dead and behold I am alive forevermore." Jesus is alive, therefore, whatever may come there is no cause for fear. The preparations for the coming kingdom will go on. The gospel of the kingdom will continue to be preached as a witness to all nations. Senussi and Abdul Hamid may propose, but God will dispose. God has weapons that Islamism cannot stand against. He has the pestilence, the drouth, the locust, the famine, and his servants the Anglo-Saxons are supreme on the ocean. We leave the result with him.

S. ROXANA WINCE.

At the Breaking of Bread.

"To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven."

There is a season and a time. Yes, for God in the beginning divided the day and the night the years and the seasons. His creation was perfect and it is the same God today that made the times and seasons, for he never changes, and when he considered his handiwork and pronounced it perfect, it would have remained the same if man had continued as at the beginning, if he had not brought the curse on the earth by sin. Jeremiah, the prophet, Jer. v. 24, speaking of Israel says, "Neither say they in their hearts, Let us now fear the Lord our God that giveth rain, both the former or later rain in his seasons." Do we thank God for the rain and the seasons, or do we forget and complain of heat and cold? There is a season and a time for every purpose, and there will be a time when the curse will be removed. Ezek. xxxiv. 26. "I will cause the showers to come down in his season, and there shall be showers of blessings. The trees of the field shall yield her fruit and the earth shall yield her increase; the parched ground shall become a pool and the thirsty land springs of water." Isa. xxxv. Let us look ahead to the time when the showers of blessings will fill the earth when all will be perfect as at the beginning. Just now we are rejoicing because of the Holiday season and we should rejoice, for if we keep this time in honor of the birth of our King, we truly should rejoice as did the angels; "For unto us a Child is born which is Christ the Lord," Christ the anointed, our King, who will soon come to rule over the earth and bless the nations. Brothers and Sisters let us make the time to study God's Word the most important time; for there is a time for every purpose, and the more study and time we spend with his Word the grander the promises of the future glory of our King appears, and when the promises are fulfilled there will be no times of sorrow and trials and death and destruction; but one long season of peace and rejoicing.

Tomorrow we enter another New Year, and if we make any resolutions let us resolve to give more time to the study of God's Word; for that will be to his glory and our good. May God help us to love his Word and live by it and in the in-gathering time may we all be among the saints in the kingdom, is my prayer. Amen.

ELLA KNOWLES.

COMFORT ONE ANOTHER. I THES. IV. 18.

To comfort is to encourage, cheer, strengthen, solace. It is all of that. It is more than amusements or pleasure. Comfort one another. These are three words taken from the combination letter of Paul, Silvanus and Timotheus to the Church of God at Thessalonica. They had turned from idols to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven. They had thus become part of the little flock. But why did they need to comfort one another? Because they had become members of that sect, which the chief men of the Jews at Rome, told Paul was every where spoken against. That was why they needed comfort, and as they could not find comfort among men, they were advised to comfort one another with these words concerning the resurrection, of which Paul declared to the saints, bishops and deacons at Philippi, that his loss of all things, and his sufferings for Christ, he would and did, count as nothing or refuse, if by any such means he might attain to the resurrection of the dead in Christ. He assured the saints at Thessalonica that the Lord himself would descend from heaven with a shout with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God. That the dead in Christ should rise first, then those who are alive and remain should be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and thus be forever with the Lord. Then follows the exhortation, Wherefore comfort one another with these words. They had been worshiping idols—dead gods with many others, in the prosperous city of Thessalonica. Paul had preached to them, or preached there, the glad tidings of the Kingdom of God, under much affliction, because they not only believed and obeyed, but they sounded out the Word of the Lord, not only in Macedonia and Achaia but all around, and the comfort they had was to comfort one another with these words. The Lord is coming and we shall meet him in the air.

So brethren beloved, if we have believed, and from the heart obeyed, and are sounding out the Word of the Lord, publicly or privately, we are suffering in some way for Christ, and as we cannot get comfort from those who have no hope we will comfort one another with these words, "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope." Rom. xv. 4. He that prophesieth—expounds—speaks unto men to edification, and exhortation and comfort.

So brethren, when we are, under all circumstances, comforted by these words, "The Lord is coming," then we are able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted. 2 Cor. i. 4.

The talent of success is nothing more than doing what you can do well, without a thought of fame. If it comes at all, it will come because it is deserved, not because it is sought after. It is very indiscreet and troublesome ambition which cares so much about fame, about what the world says of us, as to be always looking in the face of others for approval, to be always shouting to hear the echoes of our own voices!—Longfellow.

Obituary.

Evan C. Poole fell asleep in Jesus on Dec. 31, 1905, in his 75th year. He was born in Edinburg, Scotland, came to this country when but a lad. He died firm in the faith of the near coming of the Lord, to raise the dead in Christ to a glorious resurrection.

Services were held in Newark, N. J. Brother Samuel Wilson of Jersey City officiated, and ably set forth the truth of the gospel, and life only in Jesus Christ.

MRS. E. C. POOLE.

John V. Dawson was born Oct. 14, 1819, in Beaver Co. Pennsylvania. He later lived in Warren, Ohio, where he united with the Methodist Church. He attended Sabbath school in company with President McKinley's two brothers.

In 1844 he came to Cedar Co. Iowa. In 1846 he enlisted and served in the war with Mexico. In 1849 he came back to Cedar Co., and was afterward baptised into the all saving name of Jesus, and remained a firm believer in the gospel of the kingdom as written in the Scriptures.

In 1852 he was united in marriage with Melinda E Wise, and to their union were born three sons and two daughters. In 1861 he moved to Clinton Co. Iowa, and while there he was elected drainage commissioner, although his principal business was farming.

In 1878 he moved to near Bedford, Iowa, where he has since resided, till he fell asleep in Jesus on Dec. 30, 1905. He leaves a wife, two daughters, two sons, 14 grand children and 4 great grand children to mourn the loss of a kind and loving husband and father. But we sorrow not as do those without hope.

Your Sister in hope of our soon coming Savior.

MRS. M. E. DAWSON.

Dear Restitution:

This leaves us all well at present, and rejoicing in hope, and patiently waiting for our Lord's return. We have just closed a series of meetings here which have encouraged us greatly. They were well attended and much interest manifested, and we were all edified and built up in our most holy faith.

I trust this will find you and dear Sister Underwood well, and fully determined to be an overcomer, and may it be the happy lot of each of us to hear the well done when Jesus comes.

I was glad to see an article from Brother Wince in the last one or two RESTITUTIONS. I was wondering if he were not going to write any more. I like his articles.

Your sister in the one Faith.

MRS. MATTIE NEILL.

Brethren, beloved in the Lord:

Looking Zionward is still a pleasure, and waiting and watching the return of the Lord a privilege. Blessed be the name of the Lord for his infinite mercy and love.

Grave affliction of many years has rendered me so near helpless that you my beloved will not wonder that the coming of the Lord is my most cherished thought, my fondest hope. Should I be called to yield to the inevitable decree. I have a fond hope of awakening in the likeness of my Lord. But to be lifted from the mortal to immortal is the boon I crave above all else. Then may we truly say, "Death is swallowed up in victory." Death has no sting. O Lord Jesus come quickly.

MRS. E. R. BOYER.

Notice.

There has been an inquiry as to the price of a gold Berean pin. I have ascertained that the cost of a single pin, 10 carat gold, is one dollar and thirty-five cents. If one dozen are ordered the price is one dollar and five cents. Thinking that others may desire a gold pin, the order will not be sent in till the 20th of February. If you wish one, send the money for a single pin plus postage to me at 5428 Ontario St., Austin Station, Chicago. If a dozen are ordered, the difference will be refunded. The pins will be ready in two or three weeks after the order is in.

If we work upon marble, it will perish; we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples they will crumble into dust; but if we work upon mortal minds, if we imbue them with principles, with the just fear of God and love for our fellow-men, we engrave on those tablets something which will brighten to all eternity.—Daniel Webster.

How Death Came into the World.

Adam and Eve were put in a garden. There were trees in the garden, and flowers, and ever so many kinds of fruit to eat. Adam was to take care of the garden. He named the fish of the sea and the fowls of the air; the horses and cattle and everything. There were several rivers.

Adam and Eve were to do right but they did wrong. There was a tree in the garden that they were told not to touch. Its fruit was pretty to look at. God had told Adam and Eve that they would die if they ate it. The serpent told Eve she wouldn't. Then she took some of it, and had Adam take some too. That is the way death came into the world. If they had minded they wouldn't have died. There was another tree in the garden. It had good fruit on it. They could have eaten that. God told them they might. Then they would have lived and not died. God put them out of the garden because they had done wrong. They couldn't get the fruit of the tree of life. So we all have to die. We can only live again by being raised from the dead. And to be raised from the dead, we must believe and be baptized, and do right. That is the way to be saved.

Our Helping Hand.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $1.95 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

A four-page tract in the German language, by Brother M. Joblin of Cleveland, O. Subject, "What Must I do to be Saved?" After getting the opinion of one who understands this language, we have no hesitation in recommending it as simply all right. Get some for your German friends. Send to M. Joblin, 626 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, O. Price 40 cts per 100.

Seventy-five More.

I receive enquiries as to when Pine Woods Bible Class Book will be printed?

In answer, I will say, when I receive seventy-five more subscriptions, the book can be printed, and sent forth on its mission, to teach the glad tidings. If all who really want it had said so, it could now be out sowing seed. When God's professed servants make his cause a secondary matter, and put it off to a "convenient time," his cause suffers. Now all who really want the book please sit down and write me, as soon as you have read this, and then things will move at once. Don't wait until a more convenient time. God's business demands prompt attention.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

I Never Knew.

I never knew, before, the world
So beautiful could be
As I have found it since I heard
All error to exist no more;
The scales have fallen from mine eyes,
And now the light I see.

I never knew how very dear
My fellow men could be,
Until I learned to help on earth
A weary sister-toiler;
The burdens of whose cross to know
A blessed ministry.

I never knew how sweet a word
As gentle sympathy;
When sorrow's lady-love was near
Why then's the time for tears;
But now with it comes one
May wear a smile.

Random Thoughts. No. 17.

Dear Restitution:

After a long [illegible] my Random Thoughts [illegible] thought I [illegible] ment and laws [illegible] seat of govern[illegible] Mount Zion, and though I [illegible] part of the testimony, yet it [illegible] because such is to satisfy any believer in God's Word, that "the Lord shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously." Isa. xxiv. 23. Yet one will be after their return [illegible] tivity, they will have a strong [illegible] "And the Lord shall reign over them in Mount Zion even henceforth [illegible] for ever." Micah iv. 7. As the [illegible] is so full of such testimony I [illegible] giving more of this time on [illegible] topic. But how about the laws [illegible] laws by which the people will be governed? Will they have civil laws? Criminal laws? All kinds of laws? Will law shall go forth from Mount Zion and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem, etc. Will it be written on tables of stone, in a book, or in what shape will it reach the people? Will the people elect their representatives? And will there be universal suffrage in those days? Will there be politicians and politicians? Primary meetings, caucus meetings, etc.? Will there be saloons and local option laws, etc.? Will there be capital punishment for murder, etc., and will the culprit be put to death by electrocution, by hanging, be stoned? Will the women vote in those days, and will all the vexing questions of today be settled then? How will lots of things be done? If they have elections, will there be ballot stuffing and graft and boodle, etc., or will the world be judged, ruled or governed in righteousness or righteously without those ward leaders? If so, what will become of all that class who today have so much to do? There is no end to the questions that might be asked, and I will not try to answer them all in detail. But in general I would say, in short, there will be no elections by the people in those days. They will not have to elect their rulers then, that is what God is doing now.

I have said before that the government will be a monarchy—absolute monarchy!! More so than even Russia is today! But the Monarch will be very different from the Czar of Russia. Though I do not think the Czar himself is a very bad man, if he could do as he wished, but the influence of others is too much for him, so that at present even he cannot do as he would, but must do as he can, but I very much doubt the wisdom of a change to universal suffrage. See what we have in our own country! Is it all peace and good will? Have we not plenty of graft and boodle, and fighting and quarrelling and often even rioting and murder, etc.? How many hundreds and thousands are there who vote and do not know what for? And see the innumerable number of laws we have! God gave to the nation of Israel a law, and that law was sufficient to govern that nation for hundreds of years without additions or revisions, and so long as the people were obedient to that law, they were well governed. But see the law or laws that have been made for any nation, our own country, or even one State today, say Ohio for instance—take all the laws, revisions, and those repealed, have them all printed, and see the number of books we would have. There would be books many times the size of the "book of the law" God gave to Israel, or the whole Bible even. And see the difference—God's law was perfect the day it was given, without change or revision. But in our State of Ohio (or any other State) we have our House of Representatives, our Senate, etc., who are elected to make new laws and repeal or revise old laws a large part of each year, and they never get through, often hundreds of bills never get acted upon and all these things cost hundreds and thousands of dollars [illegible] year. And yet after all the [illegible] Is anything [illegible]?

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. The lesson previously selected for tonight's study is,

THE ROCK FOUNDATION.

I will ask Ella to state to the class what structure has God designed should rest upon this rock, as its sure support.

Ella. The temple of God.

Q. What temple?

A. "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God." 1 Cor. iii. 16.

Q. Who are the "ye" referred to?

A. "Upon this rock I will build my church"—"ekklesia of the First Born."

Q. Will they find a sure support?

A. "The gates of hades (death and the grave) shall not prevail against it." Matt. xvi. 18.

Q. Who are proof against the power of hades?

A. Only the ekklesia of God who rest upon the rock. None others can resist its terrible power.

Q. This being the case, is it not very important that we should have unerring knowledge concerning this rock, that we may have no misgivings as to whether we are resting upon this "rock" or not?

A. There is nothing which can in any way equal its importance.

Teacher. Carrie, will you kindly describe the "rock."

Carrie. "Thou are the Christ, the Son of the living God." Matt. xvi. 17.

Q. In the above phrase, where do you locate the "rock?"

A. It is expressed in the words: "Thou art the Christ."

Q. How about the phrase, "The Son of the living God?"

A. That is a phrase describing the personality of "the Christ," that we may recognize him, and distinguish him from antichrists.

Q. Are there people who profess to accept the Christ, who don't believe that he is "the Son of the living God?"

A. Yes.

Q. Who are they?

A. Unitarians, and a people known as Josephites.

Q. Who do they recognize as the Christ?

A. The son of a dead man, called Joseph. There is a marked difference between "the Son of the living God," and "the son of a dead Joseph." Such people cannot be the ekklesia of God built upon the "rock," which is proof against hades.

Q. Then the true Christ must be "the Son of the living God?"

A. Yes.

Teacher. Now if the phrase "the Christ," is the solid rock upon which the ekklesia of God is built. Is it not exceedingly important to recognize the true teaching contained in the phrase, "The Christ?"

Lud. Yes. To fail in this, means to miss the foundation rock.

Q. Is this matter of "the Christ," the only foundation?

A. Yes. "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus (the) Christ," (1 Cor. iii. 11), and none other than "the Son of the living God," can be the true Christ, all other sons claiming to be "the Christ," are sure to be "antichrists."

Teacher. Let us refer again to the foundation rock, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." How many definite articles appear in the above rock declaration?

A. Three.

Q. What do these articles signify?

A. The one Christ, the one (only begotten Son, John iii. 16) of the one "living God," and these n of no other god or man, dead or alive.

Q. Have others arisen, who have been recognized as "the Lord's Anointed"?

A. Yes.

Q. Who were they?

A. Those whom God authorized to be anointed as King of Israel.

Q. Give a sample.

A. "The Lord hath sent me to anoint thee to be king over Israel." 1 Sam. xv. 1.

Q. Who anointed the kings of Israel with oil.

A. God's prophets and priests.

Q. Give a sample?

A. "And Zodok the priest and Nathan the prophet anointed him king in Gihon." 1 King i. 45.

Q. Was Jesus anointed by a man?

A. No.

Q. Then, by whom, and with what was he anointed?

A. "God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Spirit." Acts x. 38.

Q. Did God anoint Jesus as the king of Israel?

A. Yes.

Q. From what Scripture do you learn this?

A. From Acts iv. 26, 27: "The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against his Christ. For of a truth, against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together."

Q. Why did "the people of Israel gather together," "against the Lord and against his Christ," even "against thy holy child Jesus whom thou hast anointed?" "And the whole multitude of them, ('the people of Israel,') arose and led him unto Pilate. And they began to accuse him, saying, We found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute unto Cæsar, saying that he, himself, is Christ—a king."

Q. What did Pilate understand by his claim to be "the Christ?"

A. That is shown by the question he asked him.

Q. What was that?

A. "Art thou the King of the Jews?"

Q. As Herod, along with Pilate, is charged with being in conspiracy against the holy child Jesus, whom God had anointed, what did Herod understand by enquiry, "Where is he that is born King of the Jews?"

A. That is shown by his effort to ascertain the fact, "Where is he that is born king of the Jews?"

Q. What did he do in order to find that fact?

A. He came to the conclusion that the chief priests and the Scribes of the Jews, would know more about that than any one else, and so he called a council of "all the chief priests and scribes," and "demanded of them where the Christ should be born?"

Q. What did he expect to find out by asking, "Where the Christ should be born?"

A. He expected to find out where "the King of the Jews," should be born.

Q. Did he find out that fact by asking where "the Christ should be born?"

A. He did.

Q. Where is the fact recorded?

A. Matt. ii. 5, 6: "And they said unto him, in Bethlehem of Judea; for thus it is written by the prophet, and thou Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda; for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel." Hence, "the King of the Jews," "the Christ," "the Governor that shall rule my people Israel," are all synonmous phrases, meaning the same thing.

Q. When Nathaniel wanted to express his conviction that Jesus was the Christ, how did he express it?

A. "Rabbi, thou art the King of Israel?"

Q. What did those who crucified Jesus, understand by the word Christ?

A. "They reviled him, and said let Christ,—the King of Israel descend now from the cross, that we may see and believe."

Teacher. Will Lucy please quote again the foundation rock?

A. "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

Q. Then in order to rest upon the rock, which is proof against the power of hades we must confess "the Son of the living God," as "the Christ," the "Anointed King of Israel," "the King of the Jews."

A. Yes. Take from Jesus, the fact that "God hath made Jesus whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ" (Acts ii. 36) "whom thou hast anointed," and as the Anointed King of Israel, both Herod, Pilate, the Gentiles, and Israel, conspired (Acts iv. 26, 27), and you deny Jesus as being "the Christ," "the King of the Jews," "the Governor that shall rule my people Israel," and you cannot be upon the "rock" that is proof against the gates of hades. And to confess the "son of a dead Joseph," as being "the Christ," is to fail to confess him, as "the Son of the living God."

The confession of the Eunuch to Philip, was to the same effect: "I believe that Jesus (the) Christ is the Son of God." Acts viii. 37. In the same chapter, verse 5: "Philip went down to the city of Samaria and preached Christ unto them." Verse 12 shows what he preached when he preached Christ: "When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus (the) Christ, they were baptized both men and women."

Q. Would Philip require a different confession as a pre-requisite to baptism for the Eunuch, than he did at Samaria?

A. No. No one could Scripturally confess Jesus as the Christ—the King of Israel, and leave "the things concerning of God" (or Israel) out.

Q. What is the effect to us personally, to deny Jesus as the Christ?

A. "Who is a liar, but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ? He is antichrist."

Q. Can any one confess Jesus as the Christ, and be ignorant of its Biblical significance?

A. It is not possible. To simply repeat the confession "I believe Jesus is the Christ," and be ignorant of what it means. It is no confession at all. A poll parrot can be taught as much as that.

Q. Can we find a common ground whereby we can affiliate, and worship together in unity, as Christian brothers, and trust the religious training of our children to those who have not learned how to confess Jesus as the Christ?

A. No. It can never be done, and maintain our standing in the faith.

Q. What is the effect of confessing Jesus, as the Christ?

A. See John v. 1: "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born (begotten) of God, and every one that loveth him that begot, loveth him also that is begotten of him."

Q. To whom does this blessing come?

A. To "whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ."

Q. Can a person believe a message of which they have no knowledge, and are not instructed in?

A. No. Knowledge of a proposition must be had before conviction can be had, or a person can express either a belief or disbelief of the same.

Q. Then a person cannot properly confess, or believe Jesus is the Christ unless he is first instructed on that topic?

A. He cannot.

Q. Then what is the wise thing to do?

A. "Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith; prove your ownselves." 1 Cor. xiii. 5.

I wish those who contemplate subscribing for Pine Wood Bible Class Book would do so at once. I want to see what I can depend upon. I am only asking for pledges.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Evangelizing Notice.

I expect to make an evangelizing trip to Arizona in December and return late in the winter or early spring. Any brethren that may be reached on or near the Southern Pacific R. R. between Portland, Oregon and Phoenix, Arizona, may secure my service by corresponding with me at Scholls, Ore., or Phoenix, Ari. I have cut loose from my farm and desire to devote my whole time to the work. Help to the cause will be gratefully accepted.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall., Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When sending a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

"Straight from the mighty how this truth is driven,
They fail, and they alone who have not striven."

"Go work in my vineyard. I claim thee as mine,
With blood did I buy thee and all that is thine;
Thy time and thy talents, thy holiest powers,
Thy warmest affections, thy noblest hours.

"Savior, more than life to me:
I am clinging, clinging close to Thee.
Let thy precious blood applied,
Keep me ever near thy side:
Through this changing world below
Lead me gently, gently as I go;
Trusting thee I can not stray;
I am never, never lost my way."

"Naught from his love shall me sever—
Tumult, or trial, or strife;
Savior! I'll trust thee forever,
Bound in the bundle of life.
Deeps which I now cannot fathom,
Leave I, till over life's sea
Thou wilt make everything radiant,
Bound in the bundle with thee."

"Hold out! there comes an end of sorrow;
Hope from the dust shall conquering rise;
The storm fortells a Summer's morrow;
The cross points on to Paradise;
The Father reigneth! cease all doubt:
Hold on, my heart, hold on, hold out!

An Address to the Church at Salem, O.

"Lord what wilt thou have me to do?" Reading Acts ix.

Again I have the opportunity of addressing you, not only the opportunity but the honor and privilege. I realize this high position more than I did the first time. I have a good message for you today, as good as I had before, because God's truth is all good. I will talk to you about the question, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? I have found it almost unlimited in its scope, and so without further introduction I will come at once to the subject proper.

This is a question which should be continually in our thoughts, and on our lips, and in our actions, how important, nay, how absolutely essential it is to a believer, to us. Let us see this morning where others who have found favor with God in the past have asked this question. How God answered it, how they accepted the answer. How this question is necessary to an increase of our faith, to strengthen us in a singleness of purpose in the cause of God, to promptness and determination to obey his commandments, that we may have a ready will and a renewed and cheerful mind. This is the first experience of one awakening from the sleep of sin, and we find it a good example that we may make it the waking query of every day.

If we ask the Lord, what wilt thou have me to do, he will answer us and we will never mistake the answer, if in asking, we remember our high calling, if the dictates of flesh be silenced, if we diligently meditate on the Word of God, if we earnestly implore the teaching of the spirit.

Now let us look at this incident in the life of Paul in the chapter read this morning. Well it says, And Saul yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord went unto the high priest. At this time there was a universal persecution of the Church of God throughout the Roman empire, and it seems as though the one who could persecute them the most stood highest in the favor of the rulers. Now Saul was very active in his persecution of the faithful, and he has here asked the high priest for more power and begot it. While on the way to Damascus the Lord appeared to him. Now there is one thing about Paul that I like. When he was convinced that a thing was right, he was convinced, and he had the cobrage of his convictions. His actions prove that, for when shown the error of his way he straightway says, Lord what wilt thou have me to do. No hesitation here, no parleying, no excuses. Jesus said, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me, and the glory of the Lord shone around Paul convincing him, and he says, Lord what wilt thou have me to do? Now the Lord told him what to do as we have read, and what is the result? Listen, "And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues that he is the Son of God." Here we have the obedience of faith, and we find from this on his life was a perfect answer to this question.

Let us consider another whose life was an answer to this question. Gen. vi, says Noah was a just man and perfect in his generation: and Noah walked with God, and Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord. And God said unto Noah, Make thee an ark of gopher wood. You all know why the ark was built. It was because every one on the earth had grown so wicked except Noah, that God would not permit it any longer and he determined to clean the earth of all sin by drowning it out. And Noah did according to all that God had commanded him so did he, and God called Noah a just man.

Gen. xii., Now the Lord said unto Abram, get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house unto a land that I will show thee. So Abram departed. Lord what wilt thou have me to do? If we ask his advice, and he answers, he wants us to follow his advice. This was one of Abram's strong points, and just see the result. After these things the Word of the Lord came unto Abram in a vision saying, Fear not Abram, I am thy shield and thy exceeding great reward. And he, Abram, believed in the Lord and he, the Lord, accounted it to him for righteousness. And it came to pass after these things that God did try Abraham, and he said take now thy son, thine only son Isaac whom thou lovest, and get thee to the land of Moriah and offer him there for a burnt offering upon one of the mountains which I will tell thee of. Abraham's life was a continual, Lord what wilt thou have me to do, and the Lord says offer up thine only son whom thou lovest, and this sacrifice was to take place in the land of Moriah a three days journey, in which if he started he would have plenty of time to reflect and change his mind, yet what does the record say, And Abraham rose up early in the morning and saddled his ass, and took two of his young men with him and Isaac his son and clave the wood for the burnt offering, and rose up and went unto the place of which God had told him. Oh what an incentive this should be to us to try and follow the example of obedience of Abraham who believed God.

And so if time would permit I could go on and tell you of Job and his patience, David and his trust, of the faith of Lot, Moses, Ezekiel, Jeremiah, Elijah, Samuel, David, Joseph, Joshua, Caleb and all the rest of God's servants. We find these men all by word or deed, directly or indirectly asked, Lord what wilt thou have me to do, and we find where God distinctly tells them what to do, Now then what next? They did it. They did it. Let me say again, they did it. And that is why we find these names recorded in the 11th chapter of Hebrews, and of whom God says in the 16th verse he is not ashamed to be called their God, for he hath prepared for them a city.

Lord what wilt thou have me to do? We find the answer in Rom. xii. 1, I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. Now we know the custom of sacrifice was, whatever was sacrificed, was offered to God. You also know God wants a live offering, for what use would and could we be to God after we are dead. Now let us read that again a little different. I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye offer your services to God while alive, that your life day by day may be dedicated to God, used in his service, which in consideration of what he has done is only reasonable. Now we here this morning have done this, we have said, Lord what wilt thou have me to do? When one offers his services to another it is the other's privilege to use them as he so desired—this is what we have done to God, offered our services—this causes the living sacrifice, the self-denial on our part. Lord what wilt thou have me to do? Keep thyself unspotted from the world. Jas. ii. 27. Ah, brethren, we find this answer is about the hardest to obey of all, to keep unspotted from the world, to subdue the flesh, keepin subjection the carnal mind. We are individually responsible. We make our own decision, we each one of us, conquer his own flesh and desires, draw himself from the world, purify himself. We shape our destiny whether it be large or small, we work out our own salvation. This is what the Lord would have us to do.

GEORGE NEILL.

A World of Opportunities. No. 3.

It is sometimes a difficult task for us to make choice of a profession. But you must be discreet and use your judgment in the matter. It is not best for a parent to do this. They can only help. My only brother had his mind on the law and followed that profession and made a success of it. I chose teaching. To me no profession equaled it. I still think so, but would not make choice of it for others. "Choose this day whom you will serve God or mammon." To make choice of a vocation in this life is in itself a discipline. The soldiers in the Civil War wondered why they were required to drill and march so much. Armies do not often march while fighting. We found out that it was to discipline us, so while fighting we could be humbled. The best disciplined army is always the best fighting army. A young man who had graduated from one of the eastern colleges applied for a position to a superintendent of one of our railroads. He was told that there were two courses—a kid glove course and a coal oil course. The kid glove course was a chair and desk in an office with little chance of advancement. The coal oil course was to go into the shop and start at the bottom. The superintendent said: "Young man you will have dirty hands and face, but you can make them clean with soap and water. If you are apt and industrious, in the end you can get to the top. The young man chose the coal oil course and early in life became one of our most successful railroad superintendents with a good salary.

Let me say to the young people that there is more room at the top than at the bottom. However, you must remember that in climbing the heights you must exert yourself and overcome the difficulties in your way. It was a little thing to Abraham to be called out of his own country and his father's house and to go into a country that God would show him. In the end it made him great and God said, "In thee and thy seed shall all nations of the earth be blessed." God is calling the good of this earth to leave their father's house and become his sons and daughters. We are the only people that I know of who would reject an applicant for church membership who did not know and believe the gospel of the kingdom of God. We are not counting on numbers but intelligence and good judgment. How many have lost the opportunity to inherit eternal life and a place in the kingdom of God by rejecting the gospel because it is not popular. I shudder when I think how nearly I came to losing it myself. Surely our heavenly Father has been merciful to me.

I relate these incidents to show what is lost by our negligence. The young man who came to Christ and asked what must I do to inherit eternal life, was told, and went away sorrowing for he was rich.

I urged a young lady who was a pupil of mine to get a certificate and teach. She said to me, "Why do you take such an interest in me?" I said I am interested in what you may be able to do for your parents. You know that they are growing old and have but little of this world's goods. Do you want them to become a public charge? She answerd, with tears in her eyes, no indeed. Then I said you can teach and if it comes to the worst you can care for them. This young lady embraced the opportunity and the worst did come. She was able and did provide for her parents. She cared for them in their sickness and buried them decently. She did her part and was made better and stronger by doing it.

I do not urge our young people to seek for worldly honor. It is dross, but in doing deeds of kindness to others we are imitating our Savior who though Lord and Master did humble himself and did the work of a servant by washing his apostles' feet. I could have had an official position which would have brought me a larger salary. I chose to serve as a teacher as I could do more good even if my salary was poor. In this world's goods I am poor but thank God I am rich in faith and an heir of the kingdom of God. Longfellow says,

"Be not like dumb driven cattle,
Be a hero in the strife."

"Ye are the salt of the earth, ye are the light of the world." Do you realize what this means? If we do, let us so shape our lives that when the Master shall come we will hear and live. We must remember that it is a great privilege to live in things. We should remember that our advantages are great so our responsibilities are multiplied. Jesus said in John xvii. 11, 15, I have given them thy Word, and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world. I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that thou shouldst keep them from the evil (of the world).

I close this article trusting that some things have been written that will be helpful to those who are seeking a better life.

D. C. ROBISON.

Hieremias (or "Jeremiah").

CHAPTER 20.

1. And Paschoor the son of Emmeer the priest heard—and he was an established leader in the house of the Lord—heard Hieremias prophesying these words;

2. And he smote him and cast him into the trap-door-dungeon (katarakee) which was in a gateway of a house set off from the upper-room which was in the house of the Lord;

3. And Paschoor led Hieremias out of the trap-door-dungeon; and Hieremias said unto him; no, no, Thy name hath not been called Paschoor but rather Metoikon;

4. Because thus saith the Lord, Lo, I am giving thee unto a change of dwelling-place along with all thy friends; and they will fall with a sword of their enemies, and thine eyes will see it; and thou and all Jouda shall I give into the hands of a king Babuloon, and they will transport them and cut them down with swords;

5. And I shall give all the strength of this city and all the results of its painstaking care and all the treasures of the king of Jouda into the hands of his enemies and they will lead them into Babuloon.

6. And thou and all those who dwell in thy house will go your way in captivity; and thou wilt die in Babuloon, and there wilt thou be buried, thou and all thy friends unto whom thou hast prophesied lies.

7. Thou hast deceived me, O Lord, and I have deceived myself; thou hast asserted control and thou hast not shown thy ability; I have become an object of laughter, mocked at, every day have I come to its end.

8. Because I shall laugh at myself for my bitter word, I shall invoke revolt and wretchedness, because the Word of the Lord hath become a reproach unto me and a topic of trifling remark every day of mine.

9. And I have said I will not name the name of the Lord and I will not talk any more in his name; and it became a fire that burned with a flame in my bones; and I am shunned on every side, and I am not able to bear it;

10. Because I have heard the censure of many who assemble from round about, who say, Unite and let us conspire against him all ye men of influence, ye his friends; watch his thought and see if he may not be beguiled, and we be able against him; and take our requital of him.

11. But the Lord is with me even as a strong fighting man; therefore have they pursued and have not been able to apprehend; they have been put to shame exceedingly, because they have not apprehended their own dishonor, which will not have been ignored during an animate age.

12. O Lord, thou who dost test the right of things, thou who dost understand secret-thoughts and hearts, may I have seen requital from thee on them, because unto thee have I made known my defensive-pleas.

13. Sing unto the Lord, sing praise unto him, because he hath delivered the soul of the needy out of the hand of those who are doing wickedly.

14. Accursed be the day on which I was born, the day in which my mother brought me forth; let it not be a day to be longed for-

15. Accursed be the man, who announced as good tidings to my father saying, A male child hath been born unto thee; as a rejoicer,

16. Let that man be like the cities that the Lord overthrew in anger and will not regret; may ye have heard clamor at dawn and a shout of victory at midday,

17. Because he did not slay me in womb and the womb become my grave, and the womb of an eternal conception.

18. Why did I come forth from a womb to look at labor and pains, and have my days end in shame?

COMMENT.

In 1st verse "Pashur son of Immer" R. V. should be "Paschoor son of Emmeer" (Paschoor meaning "a dweller in perpetuity"—the prophet plays upon the presumption that his official-name had given him to suppose that his official-place could and would not be changed, and "Metoikon" in the 3rd verse which is rendered in the R. V. by "Magor—missabib" and a marginal note meaning as "Terror on every side," means "dwelling-place changed."

In the 2nd verse "stocks" should be "trap-door dungeon." No "Benjamin" in this verse.

In the 5th verse no "precious things" and "riches" should be "strength" and "kings" and there is no text for "take them and spoil them."

In 6th verse "lies" instead of "falsely."

In 7th verse "was deceived" should be "deceived myself" being middle voice and not passion. 2nd clause all wrong. Compare—no "every one" the "every" modifies "day."

8th verse all wrong.

9th verse approximates the meaning but not correct.

10th verse approximates the meaning but not correct.

11th verse worse yet. Read and compare.

12th about the same.

13th verse should read, "Sing unto the Lord, sing praise unto him" in opening clause.

14th verse "to be blessed" should read "to be longed for" and "making him very glad" should read "as a rejoicer" and this clause should be connected with the next verse.

In the 16th verse this man compared to the cities overthrown, etc. and "shouting" should be "the shout of victory."

In the 17th verse "the womb always great" should be "an eternal conception," the rest of the verse approximates the thought.

The 18th verse well enough though not accurate.

Think on These Things.

Paul writing to the Philippians says, Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things, those things which ye have both learned and received, and heard and seen in me, do; and the God of peace shall be with you.

Paul says of himself, that he was made a minister that he should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ, that he was made a minister of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, ministering the gospel of God, he was set for the defense of the gospel, that he preached two whole years in his own hired house the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ. Those things then which they had learned and received, were the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, but quite as important are the works which must follow the obedience of the faith of the gospel.

Again Paul says of himself to the Thessalonians, ye are my witnesses and God also, how holily, and justly and unblamably we behaved ourselves among you that believed, and ye know how we exhorted and comforted and charged every one of you, as a father doth his children, that ye would walk worthy of God, who hath called you to his kingdom and glory. The incentive to live a godly life, to do justly, to be honest, and true and pure, to be blameless and harmless, to be forbearing, and forgiving, to be kind and patient and long-suffering, is that you have been called by the gospel to share in the future glorious kingdom of God. Should we not think of these things, can we expect any one to believe the glad message of life in the kingdom of God with power and honor and glory, if they cannot see that the belief of it has transformed our lives? Do we think on these things enough, so that whatsoever we do in word or deed is done in the name of the Lord Jesus, are we thinking about them so constantly that it keeps us from bringing reproach on the name we have taken? Oh, how much there is in Paul's epistles exhorting that the old man with his deeds be put off, that all bitterness and wrath and anger and corrupt communication be put away, and that the new man be put on which is created in righteousness and true holiness. Does the belief of the glad news change our lives as it should, does the thought of the exceeding and eternal weight of glory encourage us to lay aside every weight, that we run the race so as to win. Be not deceived, God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he reap, for he that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption, but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting, let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not. God is true, and his promises are exceeding great and precious, and are yea and amen in Christ Jesus, and now it is for us to think of these and adorn the doctrine we profess, and the God of peace will indeed be with all such, for ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people, that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light. May we all so live that when Jesus shall be revealed from heaven we may be among that number who shall be forever with him.

WHEN you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LV. Read PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, FEBRUARY 7, 1906. NUMBER 5.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Nations of Earth.

It is always interesting to the student of prophecy to note the changes among the nations. We are moving rapidly toward the end of this dispensation, but the end will not come till the affairs of the nations are ready for that change to be brought about. So the one who is keeping watch must not fail to note the various shiftings of the powers, as they are combining under the heads or leaders of the opposing forces.

Some years ago Russia and France were close friends and allies. It seemed improbable at that time that Germany could be brought to be friendly with Russia, as too much bad blood existed between her and France. It was necessary for Germany to start out and make for herself a name and a place. Her army was reorganized, and made the model fighting force of the world. This was not enough—her navy must be brought to a like footing, and large sums were spent on this branch of service. Besides Germany made strenuous effort to "Germanize" various parts of the world. She became a "colonizing power" in a larger and broader sense than before. She was quite successful, and magazine writers have spoken of "Germanizing the world," as if all that was necessary to accomplish that was for Germany to "go after" any desired point and it was as good as gained.

Russia had been pursuing a like plan, only instead of reaching after places far remote from her home territory as Germany did, she was quietly absorbing what lay next to her. By this means there was just as much danger of "Russianizing" the world as there was of "Germanizing" it by the other plan.

We all know how Japan came "out of the woods" and gave Russia a set back. No one need flatter himself, however, that the Czar will not retain the same plan of extending his territory. Though crippled a little for a time he will take a fresh hold and start again. He is wiley and sharp. While he was at war with Japan, nominally he was allied with France, and yet France gave him poor support, even at last repudiating his calls for money. Meanwhile Japan was virtually backed by Great Britain, and on most friendly terms with the United States. When she needed money it was forthcoming, and she came out of the conflict with her natural resources badly crippled, but with an abundant financial credit.

Russia quite naturally was somewhat dissatisfied with France, and feeling the necessity of taking in another partner, saw the most available and congenial would be her neighbor, Germany. A fitting time came on Jan. 29, when at a banquet in honor of the German Emperor's birthday, in response to a toast "To the Emperor of Germany, the Czar "lifted his glass and said slowly and distinctly, as if weighing every word, I drink to the health of the Emperor of Germany and the King of Prussia, my brother and very dear friend."

The report of this gathering further says that the Czar in other years has responded to the same toast, but without the qualifying expression of brotherhood and friendship. But on this occasion Herr von Schoen, the German ambassador was standing at his right, and the Czar grasped his hand saying "Brother, that's more than ally." At this meeting besides the members of the German embassy, were many high dignitaries of the court, also generals and admirals, Count de Witte and Count Lamdorf, the foreign minister.

This is plainly a blow at the alliance between Russia and France which is not yet officially broken off, but enough is known to warrant the prophecy that it soon will be, and that Germany and Russia with Austria will be linked together—whether with the Czar or the German Emperor as the leader does not now matter.

This has called for a new estimate showing the strength of the new lineup of powers, as France will have to look to England if she continues to exist. The combined armies of Russia, Germany and Austria on a peace footing amount to 2,101,670, and on the war footing 10,180,000. England, France and Japan can muster on a peace footing 1,522,483, and on a war footing 4,884,026. The navy however, shows a preponderance on the other side, as the Russian lineup can show but 899 vessels with a tonnage of 790,282, including 52 battleships, and 45 first class cruisers, while the English lineup counts 913 vessels, with a tonnage of 2,452,253, with 118 battleships and 101 first class cruisers.

The recent war between Russia and Japan has shown what a large figure the navy cuts in a conflict, and while the number of men is largely with the Czar and his party, yet the navy of the other side will have to be reckoned with in case of a combat.

We give this that our readers may know what the nations are doing as they are being shaped naturally as their selfish interests dictate, and yet by the guidance of a Higher Power, which will in due time be made manifest. When God is ready—when the nations and mankind are in the ripe condition—then will he send his Son to take control and bring all those hostile to him to his feet. As we see this time hastening on, let us make ourselves and our neighbors ready to receive him when he comes, and lest we faint and fall by the way, our cry is "Come quickly, Lord hasten."

King Christian IX, the ruler of Denmark, died Jan. 29, after but an hour of sickness. He was called the Dean of European Royalty, being the father of King George of Greece, of Queen Alexandra of England, and the Dowager Empress Maria Feodorovna of Russia, grand father of the Czar of Russia, and of King Haakon of Norway, and related by blood or marriage to most of the rulers of Europe. He was 88 years old, and had reigned for 43 years. His eldest son will take the throne, and he known as Frederick VIII.

It has become a custom with some of our correspondents, to write eight to ten pages of manuscript on large letter size paper, or fourteen to twenty sheets of the smaller size, and perhaps a letter besides, put them in an envelop, and mail to us, forgetting to put on more than a single 2-cent stamp. Of course it costs us the usual penalty in such cases to get the mail delivered to us, besides the annoyance to postal clerks and other officials. It will be well if you do not know how much postage to put on, to ask your post master, and put on what he directs.

Dear Restitution:

Judging from the past I believe it may still be interesting to those of like precious faith, to know that the gospel, the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, is still being listened to with seemingly much interest, which may lead to obedience on the part of some.

We, the Salem, Ohio Church, lately closed a series of the most interesting meetings, the attendance was good, the attention, on the part of the majority, was sometimes almost intense, the greater part of the audience would linger after the close of the service, some ask questions, some discuss points presented by the speakers. With the exception of two or three no one strongly objected to the grand truths read from the Scriptures, those who did object, were satisfied with tradition, and the light of the gospel found no place with them. On the other hand there were those who had not heard the glad tidings, and who did seem to get the idea, that what they heard was read from the book—the Bible, and therefore ought not to be contradicted. Lastly there were a few attended all the meetings, quietly and earnestly drinking in as much as they could and wished the meetings would continue, they are still at all regular services, and "What will the harvest be," remains to be seen. May God find some hearts to their eternal good and his own glory, through Jesus Christ our Lord. It is due to the neighborhood and to the church, to state that the Church of God in Salem has a "good report from those that are without." The regular services are Sunday School 9:30, preaching 10:30, Breaking of Bread 11:30 at which each member in turn leads with an exhortation, the exhortations, when written out are published in The Restitution. Evening service at 6:30 or 7:00 according to season, at which is presented some phase of the gospel of the kingdom of God. On Thursday evenings Bible study, which as a rule is well attended, and much interest manifested. We pray that there soon may be joy in heaven, and our hearts also gladened by some repenting and asking, "What hinders me to be immersed?" Tonight we expect to begin a series of meetings in Alliance, O., and pray that God may bless the effort.

P. Neal.

The name of the first man was Adam. God formed him of the dust of the ground, breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and he became a living soul (not an immortal soul). The Lord God planted a garden which contained every tree pleasant to the sight and good for food, also the tree of life, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil. In this beautiful garden Adam was placed to dress and keep it, with permission to eat of every tree of the garden, except one—the tree of knowledge of good and evil. The Lord seeing it was not good for Adam to be alone, he caused him to fall into a deep sleep, and took a rib from his side, and made a woman, and brought her to Adam, and he said she shall be called woman, because she was taken out of man. After a time the serpent-tempted Eve to eat of the forbidden fruit, she partook of it and shared with Adam. When God called them to account for their disobedience, Adam laid the blame upon Eve, and she laid it upon the serpent. The woman being the first to sin received a heavy penalty, that of multiplied sorrow and conception, and to be ruled over by her husband. On account of Adam's disobedience the ground was cursed for his sake, and made to bring forth thorns and thistles. Thenceforth he had to toil for bread the rest of his life, and at his death he returned to the ground from whence he was taken, (instead of being wafted to heaven on snowy wings).

After their fall God sent them from the garden, lest they should take of the tree of life, and eat and live forever. There were Cherubims and a flaming sword placed at the east of the garden, to keep the way of the tree of life. Then Adam and Eve's toil and sorrow commenced, they had two sons, Cain and Abel, Cain slew Abel; and the Lord sent him forth a fugitive and vagabond in the earth, and he dwelt in the land of Nod on the east of Eden. Cain's first son was named Enoch, and Cain built a city and named it after him. Jubal, the great grandson of Cain was the father of musicians, and Tubal Cain an instructor of artificers in brass and iron.

Dear Restitution:

We have had the pleasure of having Brother S. J. Lindsay visit us again, Jan. 3rd. Gave 21 discourses in all, and baptized two into the all-saving name, Mrs. Mauvine Green and Miss Verna Woods. When he was here last fall, by his earnest endeavor we were constrained to organize a Berean Society of which Mrs. Green and Miss Woods were members. We are very much encouraged to go on in the good work. All of his discourses were good, especially two. I wish they were in tract form and scattered as autumn leaves. He went to Cooperstown about seven miles from here, (Ripley, Ill.,) where there are a few isolated ones, and preached five discourses in the Christian Church to attentive audiences. He also received a call from Mrs. M. DeCounter an isolated Sister, about 15 miles north of here to preach a few discourses. He went through a slush of snow and mud. I trust there will be much good done. I know there will be if they will heed his good advice to study the Bible. My prayer is that all that have taken the name of Christ will daily study God's Word and learn every duty enjoined and lovingly obey.

Yours, for truth and righteousness.

Jennie Cox.

Dear brothers and sisters:

Permit me to ask, Is it right for Christians to adorn themselves by wearing of gold in pins, or any other way, when Paul and Peter both forbid it. Read 1 Tim. ii. 9; 1 Pet. iii. 3. A word to the wise should be sufficient for them. Remember whatsoever we sow we shall also reap.

Yours for the truth as it is in Jesus.

P. H. Bouk.

Everything inherited from Adam must perish, for if man inherited an immortal soul through Adam, his relationship to Adam cannot cease, and if man retains his relationship to the first Adam (who was of the earth, earthy,) how can Jesus become the last Adam, the Head of the new creation, the resurrection and the life?—Emily Hawken.

Evangelizing Trip.

It was over a week after landing in Arizona before plans could be completed and a congregation gathered to make a beginning on the object of my journey, then the congregation numbered about 25 or 30. It struck me forcibly that a distance of 1700 miles was a long distance to go to talk a few times to congregations of a few. But with the valuation that the Master placed on a soul, a life, if one can be saved it will be many times more value than the time and expense. So without discouragement I enter on my work. There are but few brethren here at Tempe. I have stopped with and formed the acquaintance of Brother Saylor. I find him a brother much interested in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the proclamation of the glad tidings of the kingdom of God.

While spending much of my time in viewing and admiring this wonderful country, enjoying and drinking in the semi-tropical climate, I felt glad that this brother could own a beautiful half section, which, like 150,000 acres of this country could be wholly flooded with water, as needed from the irrigation ditches. These ditches, on account of the smooth, level surface of the valley usually follow the section lines. A thing that adds beauty to the country is the rows of trees, usually cottonwood, that lines the ditches, and as the roads follow the section lines they usually have from one to four rows of trees, for beauty, shade and the usefulness that the owners gain in raising their fire-wood.

Now dont think I am booming this country. I am writing as it appears on first impressions. I am told that the heat of summer makes it disagreeable to some. I have no interest here but to save the perishing.

I am stopping at present in the pleasant home of Brother Corbell, one mile from Tempe. This brother placed value on the paradise beyond, or the Eden to be restored, and obeyed the requirements some years ago.

Brother Kinsey resided in this community for several years. Brother John Foore sojourned here two years. Both proclaimed the Word as opportunity could be secured. Brother Kinsey has gone to his rest, while Brother Foore is still battling away, though he has reached the age when most people like rest. Some were gained to the truth, more rejected it, as is always the case, no difference how ably presented. So I learn of only eight or ten in this community that may be classed as believers, but there are other neighborhoods where a few scattered ones reside that I hope to meet while in Arizona.

W. L. Skeels.

I closed my first meeting last night in this Territory. I spoke 16 times to rather small congregations. The meetings were held in an adobe school house, about three miles from Tempe, Arizona. These houses, as my readers are doubtless aware, are made of mud brick dried in the sun but not burnt. Some of these houses are quite comfortable; about the suburbs of Tempe they are quite common, and are generally the homes of Mexicans or Mexican Indians. On account of the proportion of this kind of homes Tempe is not nearly as pretty a town as Phoenix, which on account of its many brick buildings (burnt brick) is one of the prettiest places for its population that I have seen. I find the people very friendly and sociable here and the believers are showing hospitality and brotherly love. Our Brother Saylor was ready at any time to hitch up his buggy and take me to town or over the country at my wish.

Among the curiosities, for one of a northern home, is the hundreds of ostriches that are reared with evident profit in Arizona. What do you think of selling birds at from $250.00 to $500.00 a piece? You had better keep out of the fields where they are kept fenced in like cattle, for you would better be kicked by an ox than to be kicked or struck by one of these. You feel respect for them as they strut around with their heads two feet or more above your own, even if you carry yours six feet above your feet. You are impressed with the idea that they need more dress than their gaudy feathers, as you look at their long bare necks, and equally bare long legs and thighs. The industry of ostrich rearing is rapidly increasing in this Territory. And the number of fattened cattle—numbered by the tens of thousands that are scattered over these level fields, fattening on alfalfa, and growing grain, and no trouble in furnishing them water, with their abundant feed, for every field has an irrigation ditch and almost every ditch its row or rows of trees that afterwhile will furnish them shade if the poor brutes are not sold to the slaughter before the trees are in full foliage. These cattle are raised and grazed in the hills and mountains and brought into the valley in the winter to fatten if we can call these perfect days winter.

But I started to tell you about my meetings. The congregations were not large, but the attention a great deal. An interest was awakened, that is likely never to die out, in the hearts of some, but result in obedience. I expect to return to Tempe and give a series of talks in the town, and I shall be disappointed, if some are not "willing doers of the Word," as well as willing hearers. Tomorrow night I begin a series, 7 or 8 miles southwest of Phoenix. After completing my work in this country I hope to visit Bros. Bwiggins, Steffa and Hatch, all in towns, not far from Los Angeles, and hope that they may, between them, arrange at least one place for meeting in southern California. I also hope to be able, on my return trip, to call on Bro. and Sister Cook, at Wolf, Cal., in the region of Sacramento, and hold meetings as they may appoint, as by a late communication, from them, I learn that is their wish. Then when I reach Oregon again I have Central Point, Eugene, and Corvallis on my list, before I reach Portland. Will the brethren remember these places in their order? I cannot give the time yet.

W. L. Skeels.

Melchizedek.

Something about Melchizedek as found on the clay tablets of Tel-el-Amarna. Consisting of letters and dispatches to the Egyptian monarchs from the kings of Babylon, Assyria, Syria and Aram-naharaim. Amenophis IV. was called the heretic king, on account of having discarded the religion of his fathers, and became a convert to the Semitic worship of Baal, as represented by the solar disk. The ruins of Tel-el-Amarna furnished the clay tablets translated by Prof. Sayce of Oxford, England, and which contains part of the Royal Archives. They consist of letters and dispatches sent to the Egyptian court by the kings of Babylon, Assyria, Syria and Palestine. The Egyptian court had become thoroughly Semitic, and the country was as much governed by Semitic foreigners as it is at the present time by European foreigners. The result of deciphering these clay tablets is the discovery among them of dispatches to the Egyptian monarchs from Jerusalem. And these are what I have been preparing to introduce to the reader. Our interest is particularly directed to that which the narrator (Eben. Tob.) goes on to describe. [Narii—Salim] Crus, the morning sun and Salim, peace (Heb. Shalem). This prince claimed to have a different position from that of all other governors. In one of his letters he writes, "Neither my father nor my mother has exalted me into this place. It was the prophecy of the mighty King, that has caused me to enter the house of my father." Again, "I am not a governor appointed by the king (of Egypt) my lord; I say, I am the ally of the king, and I have paid the tribute due to the king and neither my father nor my mother, but the oracle of the mighty king establishes me in the house of my father."

The narrator goes on, The mighty king from whom or from whose oracle (prophecy) Eben-tob states that he derived his authority, was the title given to the Deity who was worshipped on Mount Moriah and which he calls, The "mountain of Jerusalem." The city of the God Uras, whose name is Shalem. The God of peace, Uru-Shalem is equal to Jerusalem. In the letters, Urit means city. The whole meaning, "The city of the God Shalem."

In this connection, this governor claims to have received his authority, not from heredity but from the oracular word of the Mighty King. So then as far as office was concerned he was "fatherless" and "motherless;" Melchizedek was not only "King of Salem," but also "Priest of the Most High God." And it may also be noticed that he was king of Shalem, that is, "King of"—belonging to Shalem. Belonging to the mighty king Shalem, from whom he derived his authority, his royal as well as his priestly rank. Not king of the city of Jerusalem per se, city of, or belonging to Salem, and in this relation, he was literally without father, without mother, without genealogy. There was no need of mentioning his parents, since it was not by right of inheritance that he had been exalted to the position or portion which he officially held.

The description given of Melchizedek in Genesis is precisely that which this governor of Jerusalem gives of himself in writing to his lord the king of Egypt, to whom he was tributary, and paid all dues to the king. In this last particular there seems to be somewhat of a divergence.

One would infer from the foregoing statements concerning paying tribute to the king of Egypt, that Melchizedek was not an independent sovereign. Yet at the same time, it was common in old times for kings to levy tribute on under or local kings; and hence the title "King of kings." And the fact of the "king priest" of Salem coming forth to welcome the conqueror of the Babylonian invaders would imply that southwest Palestine was not entirely free from the oppression of Babylonia. "Blessed of the Most High God," was the salutation of Melchizedek on meeting Abraham. This Most High God, whose priest Melchizedek was, was no invention of local vanity. No myth, he had been worshiped on Mount Moriah centuries before Moses was born, and that too by a cultured and literary people. The narrator goes on again. A comparison of Gen. xiv. with the contents of the letters of Eben-Tob has shown us that they actually did consult the clay tablets for the information they contained, and the description of Melchizedek, king of Salem, turns out to be in strict accordance with facts, proving that the ancient records of Jerusalem and a knowledge of their contents had not perished when the book of Genesis was written.—Selected from S. S. Times by C. H. Tomkins.

Are Great Fortunes Great Dangers?

One of the most important and interesting discussions of the time appears in the February number of the Cosmopolitan Magazine under the general caption "Are Great Fortunes Great Dangers?" Both the conservative and the radical view is maintained by such men as President Eliot, of Harvard; John Wanamaker, the Philadelphia millionaire; Edward Atkinson, the venerable and distinguished social reformer, who died while his contribution was being printed; Dr. E. Benjamin Andrews, the eminent economist; Ernest Crosby, who is in the difficult position of being a millionaire and yet a radical; Henry Clews, the great banker; Dr. David Starr Jordan, the President of Stanford University, California; Dr. Washington Gladden, the well-known divine, whose recent arraignment of the Standard Oil Company attracted national attention; Jack London, novelist and revolutionist, and Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of the Supreme Court. The whole discussion was arranged, conducted and edited with comments by Frederick Upham Adams, the novelist and writer on social conditions.

A Ragged Bible.

What kind of a looking Bible would we have, if we were to take a pair of sheep scissors, and cut out every passage in the New Testament Scriptures referring to the coming of the Lord? "A very ragged book indeed," answers one, who knows just how much there is on the subject in Holy Writ. And I should think so, when in turning from Galatians to the letter to the Hebrews, not a leaf can be found on which some allusion to the blessed hope is not made. Paul loved to talk about it better than anything else. It is in every chapter of his Thessalonian letters, and in these and his other epistles, he speaks of it no less than fifty times. It was the constant theme of Peter and James and John. They had been called of Jesus, to be associated with him in intimate friendship while he was here on earth, and now that he was absent, their all absorbing hope, was in his coming again.

Jesus taught it in sermon, in parable and in prophecy. He pictured its glories in his transfiguration. He warned men to forsake their wickedness, and seek safety in him because he was coming again to judge the world in righteousness. He instituted the forget-me-not Supper that it might point us as a pole-star to his coming. He comforted his disciples with the angel-given assurance, that he would return again in clouds, just as he had been seen going into heaven. And years after the message that closed the Revelation of God to men was sent to John on the Isle of Patmos, and it was this, "Behold, I come quickly!" "Surely, I come quickly!"

The One promised to Eve as the Bruiser of Satan's head, or governmental power, in the opening pages of the Bible story declares on its closing pages, that he is coming quickly, to turn that promise into fact. The "heavens" or present systems of tyrannic power will be rolled up as a scroll "the mountains," or kingdoms, that have supported the Roman harlot and the Grecian harlot, will not be found. The dragon rule of China and Japan will flee away. The false prophet's reign will end in a battle that will be a perfect lake of fire. A new political earth and heavens will take the place of the old, for Christ, when he sits on the great white throne, is to "overthrow the throne of kingdoms," and to "destroy the strength of the kingdom of the heathen," is to "break them with a rod of iron and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel."

Two hundred and sixty chapters in the New Testament, and in these chapters the Lord's second coming is referred to three hundred and eighteen times, and yet how barren, how empty of it, are the thousands of sermons that are every Sunday delivered in the country and city pulpits of our land. An alien might sit under the ministry of one of these pulpits for a year without learning that Jesus was ever to come back, or if he was taught anything about it, it would be in a way that would cause him to think it a matter of very small importance, not worth looking into. It would be pushed off a thousand, two thousand, or a million years. "My Lord delayeth his coming," that would be the text, and being the text, it would be the key to the inner chambers of the daily life of that minister. He would be found smiting with keen sarcasm, his fellow-servants, whose upward gaze, showed them to be looking for the Master's immediate advent. The doors of his church would be open to feasting and revelry. And there would he sit, eating and drinking with the drunken men of the world!

And yet the Lord's advent is of such paramount importance that the faithful and wise servants, who give in due season the truth to the household, will be the only ones among the rulers over his household who will be ready for his account: the only ones who will be blessed at his coming in being made rulers over all his goods.

It is of such paramount importance that the rulers of the household, who do not teach it as an impending event, but who on the contrary push it off into the remote future, as a hated and distasteful subject, too full of fear and dread to contemplate, are called "evil servants," on whom the advent will burst in an unlooked for hour, and whose doom will be to be cut asunder, with all other hypocrites.

"A ragged Bible"—would we have to cut out the passages in the New Testament that refer to the coming of the Lord, but what about the Old Testament? Is there nothing in its pages that refers to a coming and glorious reign when the whole earth shall become like the garden of the Lord? Indeed there is, Restitution of all things through a divine Savior breathes in and animates every page. The Restorer, the Redeemer is talked of by every prophet and is directly or inferentially in every promise, every type, every sacrifice. He was the seed through whom all nations were to be blessed. He was the one through whom alone the land of Canaan could be made an everlasting inheritance, the one to whom Abel looked forward in faith when offering to God "a more excellent sacrifice than Cain," the one through whom Enoch, and Noah, and Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, Joseph and Moses, and all the ancient worthies expected to receive the fulfilment the promises of the "better country," the "prepared city," "the better resurrection." They suffered reproach for the sake of Christ, they were tortured, were mocked, were scourged, were imprisoned, were stoned, were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword, were made to wander in sheep skin and goat skin clothing, utterly destitute as to earthly possessions, because of their hope in a coming Messiah, who would make all the kingdoms of earth his own.

Through this Christ "the throne of the kingdom of David" was to be established forever before the Lord; to him was to be "given the necks of his enemies that he might destroy them." He it is that is "to beat them as small as the dust of the earth," and to "stamp upon them as the mire of the street, and spread them abroad."

Delivered from the strivings of the people, he was to be kept to be the head of the heathen; to have those whom he knew not serve him; strangers submit themselves unto him and be obedient, and lifted of the Lord, he was to be set up on high above all of them that had risen up against him. 2 Sam. xxii. 40-50.

Job saw him as his Redeemer, "standing in the latter days upon the earth." While to the Psalmist he appeared in vision as the Anointed—the begotten Son of God, who seated as king on the holy hill of Zion was to have the heathen for his inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession, was to judge the people with righteousness and the poor with judgment, save the children of the needy and break in pieces the oppressor, whose throne would endure forever as the sun, and be established forever as the moon.

But we dare not stop to look at all the Messianic Psalms, that leaping past the first advent, describe things as they will be when Christ shall come in his glory and all the holy angels with him, nor dare we tarry with Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel and Daniel to look at the new heaven and the new earth, when Jesus, the Son of David, shall be here.

Cut out all that refers to the coming of Christ the second time? Why, we could never do it. We would have to cut out the Melchisedek priesthood. All that is said about Israel as the chosen race. Cut out all references to Judah, destroy the whole ritual of Israelitish worship, with its sacred tabernacle, glorious temple, its wave sheaf, lamb of the first year, passover and day of atonement, for all are in the plan of God that look forward to a Messiah who is to come and reign over the kingdom of gospel story. Cut it all out and what would we have left? No Bible, no God, no hope!

The first advent was but one of the steps toward the accomplishment of our salvation. Let Christ stay away and what would his ministry, his sufferings, his death, his resurrection, his ascension, mean to his church, and to his groaning creation? Would evil ever be put down? The tares be ever gathered out of the kingdom? Would pain and sorrow and crying and death ever have an end? Would the tabernacle of God ever be pitched with men, and he be with them and be their God? No, Christ must come, if these things are ever to be brought about. He must come if the dead are to be raised and rewarded; he must come if we are ever to have eternal life. He must come to have the dominion that rightfully belongs to him as the second Adam. And this being the case we must look for his coming and for all that lies beyond it. We must make the nearness of that coming the strong incentive to the performance of duty. Just as sure as we let our hope in his coming decline, just so sure will we forget our high and heavenly calling, lose our zeal for evangelization, grow cold in our devotions, miserly in our giving, careless in our manner of life, and be taken unawares when the Master returns.

There is no excuse for coldness. The lines of prophecy are running out in our times, and are marking certain events that were to precede the advent by a scarce noticeable pause. The Armageddon hosts are preparing for the final battle.

At any moment now the Bride may be snatched away. Are we ready? Are we "turning the world upside down" by filling every town and city and country hamlet with this doctrine? Is our zeal such as to bring upon us the fury and hatred of a godless world? Will nothing but death stop the proclamation of this glorious message? Does this hope banish from our hearts the fear of man, and even of martyrdom? Are we ready to go with Jesus to prison and to death for the truth's sake? If so, then we are ready for his coming.

"Thou art coming! Jesus Savior,
Nothing else seems worth a thought.
O how marvelous the glory,
And the bliss thy pain hath bought.

Thou art coming! we are waiting
With a hope that cannot fail,
Asking not the day nor hour,
Anchored safe within the veil."

"Pay Me That Thou Owest."

After carefully studying Sister Boice's proposition in regard to the "Home and Bible School," I have made up my mind it is just what the cause of truth needs, and I believe it is the duty of all to do all we can by our influence and in a financial way to encourage her in her noble effort to forward the glorious work. It will require an united effort to accomplish this; but it can easily be done if all will work in earnest; and my prayer is, it may be said of us all, as expressed by good old Nehemiah, "The people had a mind to work," but, dear brethren, please let me call your attention to a principle that underlies all business success. Business to be successful must be done on business principles. There can be no certainty or warrant of success while every thing is done in a haphazard way—when our feelings are moved upon we will act, but as soon as our impulses run down to the low-water mark, our enthusiasm is gone and we do nothing and the low-water mark is the general condition too many are in.

Brethren, God has made his own assessment, and it is just to all, under all circumstances, that is, one-tenth of our income. "O" but says some one, "that was an old Jewish rule." Please let me correct you. The tithing system was in practice away back in the patriarchial age about four hundred years before the law was given to Israel. The practice of paying tithes is very ancient. Abraham gave tithes to Melchizedek, king of Salem, Gen. xiv. 20. Jacob, the grandson of Abraham imitated the piety of his grandfather when he vowed to the Lord to give a tenth of his substance to him. Gen. xxviii. 22. Remember, Abraham had the gospel, and if we are in Christ we have become the seed of Abraham. Gal. iii. 8-29. Are we not then obliged to practice what Abraham did in order to become an heir to the same promise, and if we as a people would adopt Abraham's rule which was God's rule from the beginning, then our beloved Sister Boice's propositions, and dear old faithful Brother Poore's anxious problem of a home for the aged workers, besides the many other needs of the church work could be carried out without any friction, or worry, as God's financial system has always and ever proved a success in all ages, by whatever church or sect practicing it, Sabbath Advents and Mormons not excepted.

Let me give you a few examples of the results of a haphazard financial system. One time in my life I rode by railroad eight miles out of my way, spent two days, preached two evenings, a collection was taken which amounted to $1. 60 which was handed me for my services, and out of that I paid 50 cents railroad fare which left me $1. 10 for two days work. Again, I traveled 30 miles and preached for a congregation several months, the brethren were very particular to learn just what my fare was and then hand me the exact amount. On one occasion they paid me three cents over my fare, and I had the presumption to keep it. I had spent three days, was paying a man $18.00 per month at the time. Some will say, Why did you do it? Because I loved the truth and wished to tell others the glad story. I think the brethren loved it too, but they had no church order, no financial system, so left the Lord to pay me when I reached the kingdom, as they often said, You will get your pay in the kingdom, Bro. Woodward, but that did not pay present expenses, and had I not by close economy and hard work accummulated a little means in my younger days, I would long ago have been obliged to leave the field, but my experience is undoubtedly about the same as our old pioneer ministers.

What was, and is yet the trouble? Had God's own order been observed in the tithing system all would have been able to have lived and continued to work, while many now have to leave the field and seek other employ, for want of proper support. O what a prospect for a young man who would like to devote his time to the work. All he sees in the future is poverty for himself and family, with no prospect of a home in their old age, just he turned out to die like an old horse. No wonder the valiant old veterans shrink and tremble at the future, and their minds weaken at the last at their hopeless condition. O brethren, these things ought not to be, deed not be if this tithing rule be faithfully carried out; then there would always be money in the treasuries, a home or houses could easily be had and a fund provided for our superannuated ministers. Bible Schools and Sunday Schools would grow and thrive with plenty of money to support them without trying to exist on a little, lean, half-starved, ungodly collection.

Now, brethren, is the golden opportunity, (that is if we have not sinned away the day of grace already.) It is easy to do the Lord's work in his way when we become accustomed to it. Brother and Sister West, Brother and Sister Lake of Millbrook, Brother and Sister Wince and several others testify to the satisfaction of this practice. They are never bothered for money for the Lord's work. It is always in the Lord's treasury. How true the old Scotch adage, "Many littles make a muckle," and if we would all throw in our littles, we would be surprised how fast the dollars accummulated.

We, in Michigan, are learning what systematic giving means when we see the work done by our Sisters who have been practicing the tithing system for several years in their care of the poor, sending The Restitution to several every year, helping to defray other church expenses. I believe they are doing more than all the men in the state. May God bless them in their sacrificing work.

Now, brethren, adopt this God-given rule and there will be no trouble about finance, and do not think for a moment it is Jewish and not for this age; for Abraham had the gospel preached to him and he practiced this divine rule, and if we are his children we will follow in his footsteps Yes; some one says; but the gospel plan is to give us the Lord has prospered us. Yes; but what is the rule, what better way to find out how much you have been prospered than to count your substance and take out a tenth, if not more than ten cents. No chance now to begin with excuses and say; but I have not been prospered, the Lord demands no more than his right. We can cheat the Lord out of his portion now, be it little or much, and when the reckoning day comes he will exact his own with usury. Remember, the man in the garden had free access to every tree but one, That is mine, you must not touch it, that tenth is the Lords, and if he receives his own the cause will be abundantly provided for.

Please do not throw the paper down while a current of selfishness creeps through your brains, but read, reflect, act. What was the trouble with Israel? "Ye have robbed me, this whole nation has robbed me. How have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings."

O may we all be aroused to our duty as never before; for "God delights in a cheerful giver."

B. W. Woodward.

About Darkness.

"Light cannot dwell with darkness.
They cannot be agreed."

Dark, little folks, dark? Well, suppose it is as dark as Egypt, can't God see in the dark, even darkness that can be felt, see right through every nook and corner of your heart? To be sure he can, there is not a thought escapes his omniscient eye. He knows your inmost soul. What—sin in the dark, because it is dark? Dare you, little folks or great folks? You may escape the eye of man, but God's eye never. His eyes go to and fro every where with lightning flash!

Sin anywhere, on your bed, in the secret chamber,—sin where you will,—little sins or great sins, sins of the flesh or the spirit, thought, word or deed; be sure they find you out. Some little folks, and some great folks, sin in the dark, under cover of night, "loving darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil." "The murderer rising with the light, killeth the poor and needy, and in the night is as the thief."

Hark again: "The eye also of the adulterer waiteth for the twilight, saying, no eye shall see me—and disguiseth his face." "In darkness they dig through houses which they have marked for themselves, in the day-time; they know not the light." "Woe unto them that seek to hide their council from the Lord, and their works are in the dark.....for they say, the Lord seeth us not." Remember, friends, there is not a word in our tongue but that the Lord knows it altogether. Says the Psalmist: Whither shall I go from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there. If I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me. If I say, surely the darkness shall cover me; even the night shall be light about me. Yea, the darkness hideth not from thee, but the night shineth as day: the darkness and the light are both alike to thee." See Psalm cxxx. Oh! what a fearful thing to sin against such a God.

Furthermore remember, aside from the shame, guilt, and wretchedness here, on account of our sins, there's a fearful judgment awaiting every sinner. Every one, great and small, must soon stand before the judgment seat of Christ; where every one must give account to God for the deeds done in the body, whether good or evil. There, at the great day, all our secret sins,—sins of the deepest dye, even the works of darkness of which it is a shame to speak,—will be spread out to the open gaze of an assembled universe.—F. D. Newton.

Obituary.

Helen M. Merritt was born July 28, 1847. Married to S. J. Keever Feb. 14, 1867. To this union five children were born, of whom three died and two are living.

Sister Keever became a member of the Church of God in 1877. She died at her home at Scircleville, Ind., Jan. 6, 1906, at the age of 58 years, five months and 14 days. She was laid to rest at the cemetery four miles north of Scircleville, on January 8th, 1906, to await the morning of the resurrection. The writer spoke words of comfort from Psa. xvii. 15.

A. H. Zilmer.

C. K. Schmeltzer died at his home in Hillsboro, Oregon, Jan. 3, 1906, after a lingering illness, aged 74 years, 11 months, and one day.

He leaves an aged wife and six children to mourn his loss. The church at Scholls, Oregon, of which he was an active member for twenty years, will sadly miss his cheerful presence, and his words of cheer.

Words of comfort were spoken by the writer from the language of Christ to his disciples—"Our friend Lazarus sleepeth."

W. A. Prosser.

Eliza A. Pauley was born July 6, 1840, and died Jan. 8, 1906.

She was married July 4, 1865 to Fred W. Chapin, to which union three sons and one daughter were born, all of whom are still living. Her husband died in 1885, since which time she lived in widowhood until the time of her death, which occurred very suddenly, caused by the disease commonly called heart failure, at her home in Clarksville, Iowa, where she had resided ever since 1885.

For many years Sister Chapin had lived a firm and consistent believer of the gospel of the kingdom, her children sharing with her in that precious faith. The large and sympathetic audience that assembled at her late residence, where funeral services were held, and the beautiful floral offerings from neighbors and friends, gave silent yet very impressive evidence of the high esteem in which she was held in life by those who knew her well.

She was firmly established in the faith of the gospel, being sincerely devoted to the Master's service, and possessed an exceptionally cheerful disposition, which was sweetened by pure love for mankind for whom Christ died.

She fell asleep in full assurance of having walked in right paths, and thus exemplified the Christian life in the presence of her family and neighbors, all of whom, while they feel the loss of so noble a character, now rise up and call her blessed.

She sleeps in Jesus, while her loved ones left in life mourn their great loss, and yet rejoice in memory of her noble life and example which she left to them as their richest heritage.

The funeral service was conducted by the writer.

Dear Brother Underwood:

As I have lived to see eighty-eight years, I thought I would write a little piece of poetry on my birthday, and send it to you and if you think it proper I would like to have you put it in The Restitution, as there are many brothers and sisters that I got acquainted with at the conference. If you have room please print it.

Your loving brother, in the faith of Christ.

John Causadale.

December 21, 1905.

Eighty-eight years have come and gone,
No more to be seen by me.
Now I will praise my blessed Lord,
For all he's done for me.

Now eighty-nine has entered in,
And health I'm spared to see.
Help me to live near to my Lord,
While here on earth I be.

So when my days are ended,
And I'm silently laid away,
May my dust be precious in God's sight,
'Till the resurrection day.

Then I can say, O come, dear Lord,
In thy presence I wish to be,
Then I will praise thy blessed name
Through all eternity.

That looked-for day is drawing near,
Our blessed Lord will soon appear
To call his ransomed from the tomb,
To their eternal, blessed home.

Dear friends, I bid you all adieu,
There is a place prepared for you,
A place where you may happy be
Through time and all eternity.

"Let the winds and the waves of adversity blow and dash around you if they will; but keep on the path of rectitude, and you will be as firm as a rock. Plant yourself upon principle, and bid defiance to misfortune.

The Man of Sin.

Editor Restitution:

I wish to make a few remarks on the above subject. A certain writer says, "He is always spoken of as a person, a man." If we admit this statement to be true, it does not prove that the "man of sin" does not represent a system called by Paul, "the mystery of iniquity;" or that the "little horn" of Dan. vii. 8, is not a civil or ecclesiastical power. The prophet Ezekiel was a person, a man; a sign man to the house of Israel, as we see by chapter iv. 3, and that he in laying siege to the city was the representative of the army that was to besiege the city. So also the man of sin represents a system of iniquity, an ecclesiastical power who claims also civil authority. The angel that comes down from heaven, Rev. xx. is represented as an individual messenger, who lays hold of the dragon and binds him for a thousand years; then John sees "thrones and they sat upon them;" now what is the antecedant to the pronoun they, evidently the descending angel of verse 1, so that the angel is a multitudinous angel; but it is very doubtful if there are as many saints contained in the angel, as there are sinners in "the man of sin."

Again it is stated, "Daniel saw him as a little horn," in chapters vii. 8; and viii. 9. The little horn of chapter viii. 9 comes out of one of the four divisions of the Grecian empire, long before the Roman empire had its beginning by Romulus, on the banks of the river Tiber, some seven hundred years before the Christian era. The little horn of chapter vii. 8 comes up among the ten, on the head of the fourth beast, namely Rome, in the last part of the fifth century, or the forepart of the sixth; so that the chronology of the rise of these two horns are more than a thousand years apart. If we examine the work assigned to these two horns we shall find it as different as is the time of their appearance on the stage of action. Now the only position that is tenable in relation to the "little horn" of chapter viii. 9, is that it represents Rome, Daniel's "fourth beast." This position is intrenched by the fact that in the metalic image, Rome comes next after Greece. The same is true in the vision of the four beasts, and by the law of analogy, it must do the same in the vision of chapter 8. Now what are the characteristics of the fourth beast chapter vii. 7? "Dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth;" Rome was the iron of the metalic image. Now, is there any likeness between Rome dreadful and terrible with great iron teeth to devour its enemies, and this horn of chapter viii. 9? It "waxed exceeding great towards the south—and towards the east—and towards the pleasant land, and it waxed great against the host of heaven.....yea, he magnified himself to the prince of the host—and by him the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his sanctuary was cast down." Without the exceeding strength and the iron teeth of the fourth beast—this horn could not wax strong in the different directions as stated, but the fact that settles the question is, that he took away the daily sacrifice, and cast down the place of the sanctuary. This work was accomplished in the destruction of Jerusalem A. D. 70 hundreds of years before Rome was divided into ten divisions preparatory to the horn of chapter vii. 8, coming up among the ten. The work assigned to the "little horn" of chapter vii. 8, is entirely different, his first work is to pluck up three of the ten roots, and here we may ask, why did he do this? The answer is because they were Arians and opposed to his pretentions, and especially to the doctrine of a triune Deity. "He shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws; and they shall be given into his hand until a time, and times, and the dividing of time." There is not one act of either of the two little horns that are alike, and further the time is not alike on the principle of a day for a year, the one is 2800 years the other 1260 years. To prove the position that antichrist must be a future manifestation, Dan. xi. 36 is quoted, "He shall exalt himself and magnify himself above every God." It is said, "No king, priest, nor man has done this." One quotation from history will prove that a man claiming to be king and priest, will disprove the above assertion. The following is from Fox's "Acts and Monuments," by H. G. Guinness, an English writer of note. "I am all in all, and above all, so that God himself, and I the vicar of God, have one consistory, and I am able by law to dispense above the law, and of wrong to make justice in correcting laws and changing them. Wherefore, if those things that I do be said not to be done of man, but of God—What can you make me but God? Again, if prelates of the church be called and counted of Constantine for gods, I then being above all prelates, seem by this reason to be above all gods. Wherefore no marvel if it be in my power to change time and times, to alter and abrogate laws, to dispense with all things; yea, with the precepts of Christ; for where Christ biddeth Peter to put up his sword, and admonishes his disciples not to use any outward force in revenging themselves, do not I Pope Nicholas, writing to the bishops of France, exhort them to draw out their swords." The fact that the popes have claimed the right to change the laws of God and have changed them, for instance Protestants claim divine authority for the change of the Sabbath from the seventh to the first day of the week, Roman Catholics claim that they changed it and that they had a right to do so. A more serious violation is in the worship of images, and of the virgin Mary and a host of saints. Any power claiming the right to change the law of another power places himself above the party whose laws he changes. The precepts of Christ are the precepts of God through Christ. Pope Nicholas gives an instance where he dispenses with the precepts of Christ. It is further said, "The identity of the little horn in each vision is further shown by his having the same name in each and the same time, 3½ times. vii. 25 and xii. 7. The force of this time limit is broken when we learn that vii. 25 and xii. 7, refer to the little horn of chapter vii. 25. Some hold and with seeming reason that God is the one who accomplishes the scattering in chapter xii. 7. It is obvious that the 3½ times does not apply to the horn of chapter vii. 9 because the time in that vision is 2300 days or 2400. That the Grecian kingdom is to have a "latter time" is too visionary to be seriously considered. Babylon. Medo-Persia and Greece are in the past, Rome absorbed their people and territory. Therefore Rome's symbol Rev. xiii. 2 has the feet of a bear—Medo-Persia. Mouth of a lion—Babylon. Like a leopard—Grecia. Seven heads and ten horns Rome. When he is destroyed all are in him.

Again it is said, "It seems that the man of sin rises after the destruction of the harlot." This divides things that are the same. Paul's man of sin and John's harlot are identical, the same party exactly. Harlot, this word was formerly applied to men as well as to women—Webster. In Scripture one who forsakes the true God and worships idols.—Webster.

In Ezekiel xvi. 28 we read of Jerusalem, "Thou hast played the harlot with the Assyrians." "How is the faithful city become a harlot." Isa. i. 21. An apostate church is symbolized by a harlot. The true by a chaste virgin. Males and females are her communicants, males the most guilty because they are the governing class.

If these lines cause investigation and more light is the result, my object will be thereby attained.

Seventy-five More.

I receive enquiries as to when Pine Woods Bible Class Book will be printed?

In answer, I will say, when I receive seventy-five more subscriptions, the book can be printed, and sent forth on its mission, to teach the glad tidings. If all who really want it had said so, it could now be out sowing seed. When God's professed servants make his cause a secondary matter, and put it off to a "convenient time," his cause suffers. Now all who really want the book please sit down and write me, as soon as you have read this, and then things will move at once. Don't wait until a more convenient time. God's business demands prompt attention.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.
W. H. WILSON.

Evangelizing Notice.

I expect to make an evangelizing trip to Arizona in December and return late in the winter or early spring. Any brethren that may be reached on or near the Southern Pacific R. R. between Portland, Oregon and Phoenix, Arizona, may secure my service by corresponding with me at Scholls, Ore., or Phoenix, Ari. I have cut loose from my farm and desire to devote my whole time to the work. Help to the cause will be gratefully accepted.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

A. R. UNDERWOOD.

One Year $1.60. Six Months 75 Cents. Three Months 40 Cents.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

All the Year Long.

All the year long have my steps been attended
Surely by one who regarded my ways;
Tenderly watched over, sweetly befriended,
Blessings have followed my nights and my days.
Tears have been quenched in the sunshine of gladness,
Anthems of sorrow been turned into song,
Angels have guarded the gateways of sadness,
Summer and winter—yea, all the year long!

All in the dark, would I be, and never complain
Whither to go, but for One at my side
Who from the future removes the dim curtain,
Seeing the glory to mortals denied.
No other friend could so patiently lead me,
No other friend prove so faithful and strong;
With angel's food he has promised to feed me,
Who has befriended me all the year long.

He will not weary—Oh, blessed assurance!
Infinite love will the finite control!
But for my Heavenly Father's endurance,
Into the depths of despair I were cast.
This is my star in a midnight of sorrow,
This is my refuge, my strength, and my song,
Earth is today but there's heaven for tomorrow,
And Jesus to be with me all my life long.

A World of Opportunities. No. 4.

There are many, very many good things in this world to choose from. "Life is real! Life is earnest!" Let us be optomistic and not go through life with our head bowed as if we were in a great trouble. I do not wish to be understood that all is gold that glitters. By no means. But let us accept Paul's admonition, "Prove all things and hold fast to that which is good." In this we strengthen our judgment. "Know ye not that ye shall judge angels?" says the apostle. Judgment selected from those of immature minds. During the Roman Republic candidates for office were required to wear a white garment to indicate that they were of a pure mind. From this we have our word candid which means pure and honest. Your inner garment or adornment should be of such a character that those with whom you associate will see that you are walking in the strait and narrow way. How inspiring are the words of the poet Longfellow.

"Lives of great men all remind us,
We can make our lives sublime,
And, departing leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time;
Footprints, that perhaps another,
Sailing o'er life's solemn main,
A forlorn and shipwrecked brother,
Seeing shall take heart again.
Let us then be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait."

A story is told of a king who sent his two sons out and bade them not return until they had gathered some precious things. They both were to travel together. One was very fortunate and gathered many precious stones, etc. The other failed to get any of these things. When they seemed ready for him to grasp they fell into the hands of his brother. Both in time appeared before the king, the one exhibited what he had gathered of the precious things. The other could only present torn and bleeding hands. The king said, My son, true treasure is not lightly won. Your brother's hands, wherein you see only these scars, show more to me than if a kingdom's price I found, in place of these forgotten wounds." Effort, effort and not results is required by our heavenly Father. Paul said, I have planted, Apollos watered but God gave the increase. If we but do our duty God will care for the results. The opportunity will come to all to do some work. See that you do not neglect it. A story was written of a young man who was a clerk in a store with a fair salary, but there was no prospect of his advancing. He conferred with his parents and applied for a position in a wholesale dry goods house at a less salary, but there was an opportunity for advancement. This firm received invoices from foreign countries in their language. There was but one man, the junior member, who could translate and mark the goods coming from the foreign countries. This young man observed this and took special lessons in the languages, and in a year was able to translate and mark these goods. When he announced this to his employer he was astonished. When it was found out that this young man had been industrious and painstaking he was rewarded with a better position and an increase in his salary. In this house there were a score or more young men who had the same opportunity but failed to embrace it.

I have always commanded the best salary for teaching and yet have never been anxious about what I was to get but have been very anxious as to how I should teach. My efforts have brought forth good results.

A very beautiful incident is recorded as happening last Christmas. Miss Helen Gould the possessor of millions, has a farm near her residence where boys from the slums of New York City are taken and put to work. Certain hours of the day they are taught the common branches. On the farm they are taught useful lessons of horticulture and agriculture. All kinds of grain, fruit and garden vegetables are raised for the use of the school. On last Christmas a dinner was prepared, selecting for the table those things raised on the farm. Miss Gould was an invited guest of these boys and gave an hour of her busy life to those for whom she had provided so bountifully. It is certainly commendable when one who has such a fortune and uses it to lift mortals up. It is said that many of these young men go from this farm to colleges and graduate and make useful citizens.

Paul says in the Roman letter, "Do that which is good and thou shalt have praise of the same." Rom. xiii. 3. Again we are admonished; as we therefore have the opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith. Gal. vi. 10. There is one eternal principle and our young people should remember it, Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." Gal. vi. 7, 8.

Miss Gould could spend her time in the society of the "Four Hundred" but she wishes to do good as the opportunity is afforded. Let us seek an opportunity to do good to all men. Our heavenly Father will not let us go unrewarded.

Your brother in the faith.
D. C. ROUNDS.

Baptism not Sprinkling.

Recently a minister who believes that immersion in water, of a believer of the gospel, is Christian-baptism, offered a farm to any one who would prove by the Scriptures that sprinkling is baptism. In opposition to this and as a kind of bluff another learned man (?) believing in sprinkling offers a farm to any one who will prove that sprinkling is not baptism. This is getting the question into a curious shape, and as the matter thus stands it shows the latter gentleman in a bad light. It shows that he has no faith in his own proposition that sprinkling a little water on a person is baptism. Were he honest he would set about proving that sprinkling is baptism in the meaning of the Scriptures, that it accords with apostolic practice and is in harmony with the usage of the Greek word as found in the Greek classical writers back when the language was a living tongue, instead of asking an opponent to prove the negative without knowing what he would consider as proof. This defender of rantism might ask for a text stating that "sprinkling is not baptism," before he would be willing to convey the farm.

The character of Judas is sufficiently well described in the New Testament for every reader to conclude that he was a devil. Now I will offer the modest sum of $5.00 for proof that he was a saint! Here comes a man who will not try to prove that, although he believes he is a saint, who says I will give any man $5.00 who will prove that Judas was not a saint. There is no text that says, "he was not a saint." This is about equal to the other case only in that the advocate of rantism chuckles over his supposed victory. A practice so prevalent as that of sprinkling for baptism demands something else in the way of proof or argument than mere shifting of the proposition in order to throw the burden of proof, as is supposed on the other side. If rantism is baptism in the meaning of the Scriptures, then the proof of the practice must be, and can be found in the Scriptures; and proof outside of the Bible such as the definition of the words by Greek standard lexicons; the use of the two words by classic writers who understood well their meaning; the practice of the early church subsequent to the days of the apostles, and the rule followed by eminent translators in rendering the two words into English, all would go to confirm the fact, and sprinkling then, with immersion would claim divine sanction. But how stands the cases of the two practices in the light of Revelation, and in the light of the proof afforded by Greek lexicons, usage as found on the pages of Greek classical writers; the practice of the early church, and the rule followed by translators? Before these several courts the practice of sprinkling for baptism stands condemned. Inspiration sometimes defines its own terms, or describes the thing in such a way that the meaning becomes plain. Baptism is such a thing, so to speak. Rom. vi. 3, 4, is in point and proof of my statement. Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? "Therefore we are (R. V. were) buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised from the dead, * * * so we also should walk in newness of life." In the 5th verse another figure, that of planting, is used bringing plainly before us the typical character of baptism. "Planted in the likeness of his death." "Buried with him." These figures are not applicable to sprinkling. This act does not entomb the persons. Baptism does. Typically it buries and plants. The completed action puts the person, who was before prostrate, on his feet, "to walk in newness of life,"—a new course of conduct, the "yielding of his members servants of righteousness unto holiness." Christ's resurrection to life is the ground of the figure "to walk in newness of life," and this new life follows the resurrection from the tomb of water as Christ's new life followed his resurrection from the rock-hewn tomb of Joseph of Arimathea. Sprinkling in this connection would be entirely out of place.

There is still another figure in this chapter verse 17, "God be thanked that though you were the servants of sin, you have obeyed from the heart that mold of doctrine whereto you were delivered." The doctrine or teaching in reference to Christ's burial and resurrection is shadowed forth in a form or mold, and with this mold is connected the first overt act of obedience, and the assurances of pardon on condition of this obedience. The death and resurrection of the great Head of the Church was deemed so important in the plan of salvation that a form or mold was appointed which would picture to the believer who obeys, and all who witness the act, these two facts. Sprinkling a little water on the head bears no analogy to burial and resurrection. "Having been buried with him by baptism or (immersion Diaglott) in which also you were raised with him, through the belief of the energy of that God who raised him from the dead." The believer is buried with his Lord,—not in the same tomb but in another, one of water. This is all he can do, and this is as near as he can come to identifying himself with the buried Christ. For this privilege he is thankful. Immersion in water does the thing fittingly, beautifully, by type. Buried, he must be raised to complete the type. Here, it is said, he is raised with his risen Lord—not from a real tomb but from one of water, where he was buried the moment before. There is faith connected with the operation. The intelligent believer, believes according to this text, that by the energy of God Jesus was raised from the dead. He approaches the watery tomb with this belief and so expects to be raised from it as Christ was raised from the dead. Passively and subjectively he is raised by the baptizer, who has the like faith in all the facts involved. Nor does the well instructed convert stop with his baptism, for from thence he walks in newness of life. He died to sin but is now alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. How many in the Roman and Colossian churches were buried with Christ? Can we come to any other conclusion than that the entire membership had been buried by immersion? They all believed the facts as to Christ's death, burial and resurrection; so believing, they doubtless were anxious to be buried and planted in the likeness of his death, and raised in the likeness of his resurrection. There are churches today of large membership, concerning which it cannot in truth be affirmed that the members were buried with Christ by baptism. The plain fact is that Paul in writing to the Roman and Colossian brethren in reference to a past act on their part used a Greek word which both he and they understood to mean immersion, dip, plunge, submerge; that this word was embodied in a command to be obeyed by simple-minded, artless persons, therefore it is unreasonable to think that when they were commanded to be baptized they were enjoined to obey in one or the other of two very different acts as are immersion and sprinkling; and that they could have their choice between the two. If it was a matter of choice as to modes it seems passing strange that no apostle, or evangelist ever put it in that shape. Ministers of today who think it a matter of choice to be settled by the candidate ask which is preferred, immersion or sprinkling, himself of course, preferring the latter as more convenient. Again, I say it is passing strange that in all the recorded instances of apostolic practice these inspired men never once used either of the two Greek words, proschusis or rantizo as interchangable terms with baptizo. If to baptize, in one breath, means to sprinkle, and to sprinkle means to baptize why did they use a word which to Greek ears (shall I say) uniformly bore the meaning of to immerse? Surely some explanation was absolutely required in order that believers of the gospel might know that they were at liberty to choose between being put under water or having a little water put on them. If the apostles acting under our Lord's commission given just prior to his ascension buried the Roman and Collossian believers of the gospel, then the buried all others, or ordered it to be done. Water was the element in which they were buried. They were buried with Christ and raised with him in type, showing to the world faith in the fact of a risen Lord.

"Israel." Gal. iii. 23.

But before faith came, we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which should afterwards be revealed. Wherefore the law was our school master to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under the schoolmaster. For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise, (also heirs to the trouble that sinful people inflict upon God's people). The Jewish nation gave us our Jesus, the Christ, the prophets, the fathers. What have they not given us? by turning to Romans xi. 11, we will see, "I say then, Have they (Israel) stumbled that they should fall? God forbid: but rather through their fall salvation is come to the Gentiles, for to provoke them (Israel) to jealousy. Now if the fall of them be the riches of the world, and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles; how much more their (Israel) fulness?

Then in this same chapter Christ through Paul warns the Gentiles, see the verses from and including 15 to 25, and in fact read the whole chapter. "Not too wise in their own conceits," etc.

How long will this persecution of the Jewish people last? See verse 25, "For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits, that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. 26th verse, "And so all Israel shall be saved; as it is written, There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob.

What other reason did God have for casting away his people, (Israel)? See Ezekiel ii. 3, And he said unto me, Son of Man, I send thee to the children of Israel, to a rebellious nation that hath rebelled against me; they and their fathers have transgressed against me, even unto this very day.

What was one of the things or verdicts against Israel for her transgressions? Amos ix. 9, "For, lo, I will command, and I will sift the house of Israel among all nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth. Verse 10, All the sinners of my people shall die by the sword, which say, The evil shall not overtake nor prevent us." Continuing the reading of the same chapter we find some great blessings in store for Israel, yet in the future, verse 11, "In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close upon the breaches thereof; and I will raise up his ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old. That they may possess the remnant of Edom, and of all the heathen, which are called by my name, saith the Lord that doeth this. Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt. And I will bring again the captivity of my people of Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them. And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord thy God.

Is that day dawning nigh for the children of Israel? Is the end of the Gentiles drawing to a close? Can we see the streaks of dawn, breaking in the east, of the morning of that much desired day? When the faithful of God's people will say, "Blessed is he who cometh in the name of the Lord," when they will say, "What are these wounds in thy hands," and he will answer "these are the wounds I received in the house of my friends," and what will his friends do? those who say "blessed is he who cometh in the name of the Lord," they will weep as for the death of an only son."

To the best of my understanding from studying God's Word I must say that the days of Gentile times are very, very few, the end is as Matthew says, "even at the door." We can see the Jew coming into prominence. I point to the leaders of music. Was not Beethoven a Jew? Was not the man who virtually placed the good queen Victoria upon the throne of England, who in his first speech before the House of Commons was laughed at and who said, "the day will come when you will hear me," did it come? Yes, for later he was no less a person than Lord Beaconsfield of England, and Lord Beaconsfield was Benjamin Disreali, a Jew. Take our own country, yes, our own city of Chicago, when the best lawyers are desired, who but Mr. Levi Mayer and Moritz Rosenthal are employed. When the nation is warned, regarding its currency system, who does it? Why Mr. Schiff, a Jewish banker in the city of New York. Then we have a Mr. Schiff here in Chicago, who can make his bank pay in a quarter of our city where other bankers would hesitate to try, and when a run is made upon his bank, he with his daughters and employees give every person their money just as fast as one can pick up his amount and give his place to the next in line, and the bank is still doing business and is one of the safest, if not the safest in Chicago.

May be this is and I believe it is the lull before the storm, the greatest storm trouble that the world ever knew. Matt. xxiv. 21 and 22. "For there shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be. And except those days be shortened, there should no flesh be saved; but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened."

The trusts will make their supreme and final effort; final because the hand of God is now dealing sharply with the inhabitants of the earth, the same as he has done in the time past; the drowning man's final, supreme effort is just before he sinks the third time, so with the agents of sin, those who have not harkened to God's warning, I "will bless them that bless you, and curse them that curse you." God was speaking to all people of the Jews.

The "Man of sin" or as Daniel xi, 21, etc. calls him a vile person; is about to come to public notice. Read also Dan. viii. 20 to end of chapter. Keep your eyes on Russia and Catholicism, the present king is for peace, but is "king irresolute," lacks will power, soon will lose the throne, the ruler of taxes spoken of in Daniel xi. 20 I believe is no other than Count Witte of Russia the "Man of sin" will be the coming ruler of Russia sustained in power of sinfulness by the national Church of Russia and I look for the Roman Catholic to swallow up the Greek church and become the church of Russia, why? Because it is nearly time for the wound to heal, that deadly wound upon the beast, or the beast that was, is not and yet shall be. See Rev. xiii. 12 also xvii. 8, there you find why the beast is yet to come or "yet shall be" so that it might go into perdition. The popery is like the trusts, and sin is about to make its last final stand, the Pope is today a prisoner in the Vatican, has been ever since France withdrew her assistance and Garabaldi made him the prisoner, but the pope combining his shattered power with Russia or the "king of the north," shattered power and then add to these two shattered powers deceitfulness, cunningness and craftiness, which the coming ruler of Russia and the Pope will be expert at. All the host of sin will follow after them, because Christ says, "if you love me you will obey me," that means "Thy will not my will be done," and the Pope and his colleague will permit their followers to do their own wills, have all the sinful pleasures they desire, but oh! the end thereof is death. And if the main body of the Jews were not stiff-necked they would not be visited by such terrible persecutions, but God must deal with them as they deserve, and the day is not far distant when the Jews will say, "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." But nevertheless they have this time of trouble "such as never has been or never will be unto this time," so as to be brought back from their proud, haughty ways, and thank God there are some now that are looking and praying for the soon return of our Master, Jesus, the Christ, the Prince of Peace. Amen.

Love is not getting, but giving; not a wild dream of pleasure and a madness of desire—Oh no, love is not that. It is goodness and honor, and peace, and pure living—yes, love is that—and it is the best thing in the world, and the thing that lives longest.—Henry VanDyke.

THE trouble among the delegates to the Morocco conference is not yet settled. France insists that she be given the job of policing the country, while Germany insists that it be international. This with the threatened danger of another Boxer uprising in China is causing the nations no little anxiety.

MRS. Gabriel Rohrbach, a sister living at Stillwater, Okla., wishes to know if there are any brethren living near there. It is some 50 miles north of Guthrie. She has recently purchased property there, and wishes to do some work for the Master. Papers and tracts sent to her will be distributed.

"HAPPENINGS" is the title of a small four-page paper issued by the young people of the Church of God at Cleveland, O. Brother George Neill is the Editor, and Brother Buell W. Nutt Manager. Besides giving matter that will be instructive to all, the reports of meetings will be given, and a general report of the "Happenings" of the young peoples society. We wish all the young people of our church were as faithful and energetic in the work as the Cleveland people are; and we wish where they are doing work they would let the brotherhood know of it, as it encourages the older ones to know the younger ones are active in the good cause.

WHEN you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

Random Thoughts. No. 18.

Dear Restitution:

In closing my last paper I called attention to capital punishment, that that will be the law of the kingdom of God, the wicked will be "cut off," "burned up," destroyed," "consumed," etc., and referred to the question as at the present time, agitating the minds of the people of Ohio. There is a bill now before the legislature seeking the repeal of the present law in favor of the death penalty for murder. I am not surprised to hear and read what infidels and sceptics may say about it, but when I hear or see what people who profess to believe in God and the Bible say I am surprised. They speak of the law as barbarous, cruel, etc. Language seems to fail them in finding words to express their disgust and abhorence of the doctrine. They call the hanging of a murderer murder, and seem to look upon the judge who passed the sentence of the death penalty, and the sheriff who executes the sentence with greater horror than upon the culprit who wilfully murdered a whole family of innocent people! They fear that perhaps sometimes an innocent person may be put to death! Well, there is a possibility perhaps that an innocent person may suffer, but I venture to say that it is more probable that one hundred guilty persons go free! The judges usually instruct the jury, if they have a reasonable doubt in the case to give the prisoner the benefit of the doubt. But I have said all human governments are a failure. This confirms it. But in the kingdom of God there will be no such mistakes. But the soul (person) that sins shall die, will be the law! I have said before, it always has, and always will be God's law. It was God's law with Adam, and all his posterity, and with Noah and all his posterity, both of which includes us today, but with Noah it says something more than with Adam. With Adam, to bring about the death penalty, God drove him and his wife out of the garden and placed a guard to keep him from eating of the tree of life. And also cursed the ground so it should bring forth thorns, weeds, etc., so he would have to dig and labor to obtain his living, all the days of his life till he should return to the dust out of which he was made, etc. But with Noah God said, "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood beshed," adding, "for in the image of God made he man." Gen. ix. 6. As we all came from Adam so we all came from Noah. God's covenant with Noah includes all his descendants, also the whole animal world. But God's covenant with Israel also includes the same law of capital punishment, but that covenant embraced only Israel! We are not under that. I mean we who are Gentiles. The Jews are still under that covenant, unless they become Christians. If they believe in and obey the gospel of Christ they become dead to that law and are members of Christ's body, the church (the new man). But even then the same doctrine will prevail, "the wages of sin is death," etc. Rom. vi. 23. And under Christ the law will be more strict than under previous ages, for before the law and under the law no man would be condemned for murder till he had killed some one, but under the law of Christ, "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer; and you know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him." 1 John iii. 15.

So also Jesus teaches in what people call the sermon on the Mount (it is not so called in the Bible—we never read of a sermon there) that for a man only to look on a woman to lust after her is adultery! Matt. v. 28. And no adulterer hath eternal life in him any more than a murderer. The best we can do is to judge according to what we see or hear; but in the kingdom of God the rulers will not judge in that way. Let us read a little what is said of the Lord including all the members of his body, the church. Isa. xi. 1, "And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a branch shall grow out of his roots; and the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord; and shall make him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord; and he shall not judge upon the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears; but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth; and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked. And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins. The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the sucking child shall play on the whole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the adder's den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea," etc.

Now what is said of the Lord must not be confined to him as the man Christ Jesus, but to the Christ, God's Anointed, including all his members, the church of which he is the head. Paul says, "we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones." Eph. v. 30. When the Lord was on earth then in the flesh, even then he did not need to be told, for "he knew what was in man." But he is no longer in the flesh—he was put to death in the flesh, but quickened, that is made alive in the Spirit. So now his body is spirit, as are the angels, and as will be all his saints when, if living when the Lord comes they will be changed in a moment, from mortal to immortal, natural (soulical) to spiritual, or if sleeping, sown a natural body, raised a spiritual body, sown in corruption, raised in incorruption, just as the Lord was, and will be like him, all having glorious bodies like his, and these will be caught up to meet the Lord in the air. Then another Scripture comes in, "Behold! the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds," etc. Jude 14, 15. Then what do we see? The Lord come to judge, rule and govern the world! In one sense the Lord is one person, and each saint would be a person, so many persons. But in another sense (shall I say a spiritual sense?) there is but one. The Lord the head, all forming one body. I may say one spirit. All will be spirit. Individually many persons collectively one body, one Christ or Anointed. Many individuals but one Lord. But one King over all, and yet each is king. Such will be the King who will reign on Mount Zion! Then "let Israel rejoice in him that made him; let the children of Zion be joyful in their King! Let them praise his name in the dance; let them sing praises unto him with the timbrel and harp, for the Lord taketh pleasure in his people (Israel) he will beautify the meek with salvation. Let the saints exult in glory; let them sing for joy upon their beds. Let the high praises of God be in their mouth, and a two-edged sword in their hand; to execute vengeance upon the nations and punishments upon the people; to bind their kings with chains and their nobles with fetters of iron; to execute upon them the judgment written; this honor have all his saints." Psa. cxlix.

Now let my readers again read the 11th chapter of Isaiah and apply it to the time after the Lord comes with his saints, and there will be no difficulty in explaining how things will be done. It will be seen that the government or ministry or the administration will be spirit, "that the Lord" with his body, the church, "is that Spirit" and where that Spirit is there is liberty." 2 Cor. iii. 17, but read the chapter.

Even the things connected with the old covenant from Sinai was grand and glorious, but the ministration or administration of the Spirit will so far exceed that in glory that the old ceases to be glorious. In the old the law was written on stone, but the new will be written on or in the heart of the people by the Spirit, and the Lord (including his whole body the church) is that Spirit. The work or employment of the saints in the kingdom of God will be to judge, rule or govern the people in righteousness, to teach them the will of God, to so impress the law of God on the hearts of the people that it will be written and not forgotten. But the soul that sinneth shall die. And these rulers will need no judge, jury, lawyers or witnesses to inquire into a case, for the hearts of all the people will be open to him, the Lord, (or the saints) who will be the judge. He can't be deceived. He will not have to judge according to hearing or seeing what others may say for he knows what is in man, and the wicked will be cut off, but the righteous shall inherit the land and dwell therein forever. The Lord will make all things new, and remove the curse from all the earth. Then there will be new heavens and new earth in which dwelleth righteousness. More anon.

GEO. ELTON.

At the Breaking of Bread.

The 115th Psalm was read by Sister E. V. Baker in expressive and impressive manner after which appropriate and edifying remarks were made by several of the members, especially on the idols, the work of men's hands and feet, but they neither speak, see, hear, smell, handle nor walk. Therefore of no account for salvation. They that make them are like unto them; so is everyone that trusteth in them.

Visible idols, having mouths, eyes, ears, noses, hands and feet are not worshiped now among or by civilized nations. An invisible God has been created, who came in human form, and offered his body a sacrifice for sin, after a few hours in the tomb he resumed his body and ascended to heaven, from whence he comes when a good man, woman, or child dies, and takes them to heaven. This is the idol that has taken the place of those made of silver and gold, the works of men's hands. But our God is in the heavens, "The heaven are his, but the earth hath he given to the children of men." He has been mindful of us, and he will bless us. He will bless them that fear him, both great and small. Nay, more, they are blessed of the Lord which made heaven and earth. To those who have from the heart believed and obeyed the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, he says, "Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, whose sins are covered." And again, "Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin."

Our God sent his only begotten and well beloved Son, to proclaim the gospel of the kingdom, and through the gospel to bring life and immortality to light. The Son preached his Father's message and taught others, he showed the love and power of his message, he died for our sins, he rose again for our justification, according to the good will of his Father,—our God, and by invitation of our God he sits on his Father's throne, from whence we look for him to come again to raise the dead saints, and change the living saints, take them up to meet him in the air, and bring them back again to Mt Zion, to judge the world, and we will bless the Lord from this time forth and forevermore. Therefore, "Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory, for thy mercy, and for thy truth's sake." Praise the Lord.

P. NEILL.

BE YE ALWAYS MINDFUL OF HIS COVENANT.

Our lesson for to-day is found in 1 Chron. xvi. 15, and the occasion is the bringing of the ark and placing it in the tent which David had pitched for it. He then appointed certain of the Levites to minister before the ark of the Lord, and to thank and praise the Lord God of Israel, then on that day David delivered this psalm, to thank the Lord, into the hand of Asaph and his brethren. They were to "Give thanks unto the Lord, call upon his name, make known his deeds among the people. Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him, talk ye of all his wondrous works.—Remember his marvelous works that he has done, his wonders, and the judgments of his mouth. O ye seed of Israel his servant, ye children of Jacob his chosen ones, he is the Lord our God—be ye mindful always of his covenant; the word which he commanded to a thousand generations." And then he goes on to tell them just what the covenant was that they were to be always mindful of, even the covenant which he made with Abraham and of his oath unto Isaac, and hath confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant, saying, Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan the lot of your inheritance.

We turn back to the 17th of Genesis and there we read that God did make an everlasting covenant with Abraham, saying, I will give unto thee and to thy seed after thee, all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession. Then in the 26th chapter we read the Lord appeared to Isaac and said, Sojourn in this land, for unto thee and thy seed I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy Father, and turning to the 35th chapter we find that the Lord also appeared to Jacob and said, The land which I gave to Abraham and Isaac to thee will I give it and to thy seed after thee will I give the land. As God promised and sware by himself that it should be theirs for an everlasting possession, it included the promise of everlasting life in order to possess it forever, it surely was worth being always mindful of. God had done marvelous things for them, when he brought them out of Egypt with signs and wonders, and established them in their own land, and it is no wonder David tells them to be ever mindful of this covenant, the covenant made to their fathers.

But then, is it necessary that we also be mindful of it? Do we need to know and remember God's covenant with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob?

Writing to the Ephesians, Paul says "To be aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise is to have no hope, and without God in the world." Thus we see we should know what the covenants of promise are, and should believe them and have faith in them, and Paul says in Galatians, "Know ye therefore that they which are of faith the same are the children of Abraham, for to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not unto seeds as of many, but as of one, and to thy seed which is Christ;—for as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.—and if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise.

O yes; it is very important that we be mindful of his covenant, for it is part of the gospel of Christ of which Paul says he was not ashamed because it was the power of God unto salvation.....and the Scripture foreseeing that God would justify the heathen (or Gentiles) preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. Oh brothers and sisters, let us cease not to give thanks to God that the eyes of our understanding have been opened, that we know what is the hope of our calling, and what the exceeding greatness of his power to usward who believe. Let us continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, but let the Word of Christ dwell in us richly in all wisdom, exhorting and building ourselves up in our most holy faith, and so much the more as we see the day approaching, that day when God will send Jesus Christ to set up his kingdom, and thus fulfill his covenant that in Abraham and his seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. Amen.

MRS. MATTIE NEILL.

Evangelizing Trip.

I have said so frequently since I have been in Arizona, "This is a beautiful morning," that the words are getting threadbare. I have been here over a month, and there has been two slight rains,—perhaps a quarter of an inch each time; and a few slight frosts, and it the midst of winter. It almost breaks my reckoning of the time of year. The birds are singing noisily; the fields of grain and alfalfa are a carpet of dark green; the trees are budding, and thousands of cattle have been fattening on the fields all winter, if we can call any part of the year winter.

But this country has its drawback, its curse. The water is horrid to the taste on account of salt, alkali or other unpleasant ingredients, and they say the summers are so hot for about three months that the people sleep out of doors. I have been sleeping in a cross between a tent and a house. How would you enjoy that in Indiana or even in Oregon, in February? Its all right here.

I have spoken seven times at the Cartwright School House. Will close tomorrow night, and start a series on the next night, (Feb. 10th,) in Glendale, nine miles from Phoenix.

Four instructed, willing candidates were immersed yesterday in an irrigation canal, not far from the School House. The men are brothers and the women are sisters. They are Frank and Hattie Asher, and Arthur and Nora Asher.

The minister at this place was informed that I desired to preach last evening, but he kindly? placed their prayer-meeting a half hour later than their custom.

When I learned this I withdrew my appointment, in favor of the prayer meeting. We concluded, that instead of taking needed rest, we would go to prayer meeting. The usual hour of 7 o'clock passed, a few of the Methodist members had come, expecting meeting to begin at that hour; 7:30 was reached, and the minister was not present to lead. They became uneasy, finally one of the members, who chanced to have some of the spirit of liberality asked me if I would not give a discourse. I went into the stand, and called for a song, when I heard in the congregation, "There he is now." I stepped down from the stand, met him; introduced myself, told him that the congregation had asked me to preach, but tendered him the hour. Under the circumstance, he did not have the courage to stop farther progress of our meeting. So by this means a Methodist congregation heard all I could tell them in an hour about the "coming kingdom."

Symbols.

The Bible being largely an Oriental book, it is important that we have an understanding of its symbols, and figures of speech.

A circle is a symbol of eternity, having no beginning or ending.

An eye—wisdom, sagacity. Daniel vii. 8.

A lion—courage, strength. Rev. v. 5.

A lamb—meekness. Isa. liii. 7.

A beast—an empire, kingdom. Dan. vii. 23.

Horns—strength, kings. Dan. vii. 24; viii. 21.

Horses—the spirit of the heavens, (government) Zech. vi. 5; Rev. vi. 2-8.

Wings—loftiness, rapid motion. Dan. vii. 4-6.

Winds—strife, commotion. Dan. ii. 35; Hos. viii. 8.

Trees—men. Judges ix. 8-16; Rev. vii. 1.

A mountain—a government. Isa. ii. 2; Jer. li. 25.

Hills and islands—smaller governments. Rev. vi. 14; Psa. lxxii. 8.

Sea—mass of mankind, armies. Jer. li. 42; Rev. xvi. 3; Hab. iii. 14.

Rivers—nations. Isa. viii. 7; xix. 5; Zech. x. 11; Rev. xvi. 4.

Gold—purity. Job xxiii. 10; Lam. iv. 1; Rev. iii. 18.

Heavens—those in authority, royalty. Deut. xxxii. 1; Isa. i. 2; Hos. ii. 21; 2 Pet. iii. 7-13.

Earth—the common people. Deut. xxxii. 1; Hos. ii. 21; Rev. xii. 16; and xiii. 11.

Fire—wrath, destruction. Rev. x. 1; xx. 14.

Sun, moon and stars—civil or ecclesiastical rulers. Gen. xxxvii. 9; xliii. 6; Isa. xiii. 10; Micah iii. 6; Amos viii. 9; Hab. iii. 11; Matt. xxiv. 20; Rev. vi. 12, 13.

An earthquake—a revolution. Rev. vi. 12; xi. 13; xvi. 18.

The greatest symbol in the book is the "four living creatures," and the "wheels" of Ezek: i. Symbols of God's government. Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome was symbolized by one beast each, but the providential government of God by four "living creatures" and the "wheels" and why? because there is so much more to be represented. Each one had "four faces." They see in all directions, and each had "four wings."

Our Common Version represents these symbols as saying "thou hast redeemed us to God by thy blood." Rev. v. 9. Thus implying that they represent the redeemed. But the reading of the R. V. is "Thou wast slain, and didst purchase unto God with thy blood men of every tribe, and tongue, and people, and nation," thus removing the only objection to the view that they represent God's government.

Of course it is only in certain cases that the term sun, moon, stars, earth, mountains, rivers, etc are used symbolically. In Rev. xii. 16, it is written "and the earth helped the woman." In fulfillment of this statement we find in Gibbon v. 2, p. 70, the following. "Yet notwithstanding the severity of this law, the virtuous courage of many of the pagans, in concealing their friends or relations, affords an honorable proof that the rage of superstition had not extinguished in their minds the sentiments of nature and humanity."

Editor Restitution:

Dear brother, as our time was out some weeks will now renew. We still thank the Lord for his loving kindness and fearing we are too ungrateful for the blessings we receive at his hand, knowing the suffering of our dear Savior that we might obtain eternal life, as Christ was made perfect through suffering. May we learn to bear tribulation in the spirit of meekness and all kindness, hoping for the soon return of our King. Yours in love of the truth.

God's Care of His Son.

From the moment he was removed from the cross God took possession of his dead Son and would not permit an enemy to touch him. He had provided a new tomb, made for the rich, and he allowed two of the most honorable and wealthy of the Jewish nation to buy spices and linen worthy of the sepulchre of rank and to lay him down with reverent care, while women watched and mourned. The tomb was closed and the garden left as private right. But to attest his waking, with the distinction of a Prince the stone was sealed and a guard of soldiers placed on duty; but they could not touch or even see that royal body, so precious was it now. Human hands might place him there but only angels were permitted to roll back the stone, lay aside the grave clothes and bid him an honored welcome to a higher life.—Emily Hawken, Selected by S. R. White.

If you are ready to help anybody, you are sure to help somebody. When you talk of making others happy, your thoughts are very likely to wander away from home. You fancy you would like to be the good angel of the hospital; you picture yourself going into poverty-stricken homes, bringing comfort. But the chances are that your field is near, not distant; and your first opportunity is to comfort that small brother who has lost his knife, or to entertain that tiresome caller. True helpfulness never overlooks what is near, never passes by what looks commonplace. If the impulse to do good is within you, you will find lives to uplift and bless.

Still in God, heroically patient in quietude before him. Undisturbed amid the noise and clattering of the machinery of life, in the midst of the whirl and hum of business in this world of care and confusion; still, in a hush of repose; perfect in peace, our mind stayed on him. Walking, as the just walk, by faith; and that faith becoming deeper and wider as it looks on things seen, but the rather, on things unseen, until our landscape widens and broadens, and we take in the things of God, and are enabled to comprehend the length and depth and height and breadth, and know God and his love. This stillness is not idleness by any means. It is the activity of quietness, not doubt nor distress, but a stillness of faith and trust in him, an assurance that he knows, he doeth, he guides not only us, but the destinies of the opening world, and we are to stand still and see the salvation of our God.—Stephen Merritt.

Poetry.

There's Only One.

"Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth that I desire beside thee." Psa. lxxiii. 25.

There's only One on whose dear arm
We safely lay our thoughts to rest;
There's only One who knows the depth
Of sorrow in each stricken breast.

There's only One whose pity falls
Like dew upon the wounded heart;
There's only One who never stirs,
Though enemy and friend depart.

There's only One, when none are by,
To wipe away the falling tear:
There's only One to heal the wound,
And stay the weak one's timid fear.

There's only One who ends or mends
And enters into all we feel;
There's only One who views each spring,
And each perplexing wheel in wheel.

There's only One who can support
And who sufficient grace can give
To bear up under every grief,
And soothes in this world to live.

Blessed Jesus, Friend of friends!
Come, hide us, 'neath thy sheltering arm;
And while amid this evil world,
Keep us from all its guilt and harm.

Thou art the One, the only One,
For whom no love too warm can flow;
Thou art the One, the only One,
In whom there's perfect rest below.

Well Done.

Well done, good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord. Matt. xxv. 21.

Very much comfort and encouragement comes from these two short words, Well done, when spoken from the heart. They give strength to childhood. They animate and cheer the heart of the student. They give peace to the aged and the dying. They are alike precious to the king and the peasant, to the ruler as well as the ruled, and yet how little these words enter into our vocabulary of spoken words. How very careful and sparing we are of their use as we mingle with one another in this life! Why is it so?

In speaking of his followers Christ has commanded his church to love one another, as I have loved you. John xv. 12, As I have loved you. How much did Christ love us? That he was willing to lay down his life for us. Do we love one another to that extent? Did we ever tell each other of such strong love and friendship as that? What value would such love be to us if we never express that love by word or deed? When Paul was about to go up to Jerusalem and give his life for the cause of Christ, he said to his brethren that gathered about him as he was about to depart, "What mean you to weep and to break my heart," by these demonstrations of love and appreciation. Oh, how well Paul must have remembered that last parting hour? How the thought of that scene must have strengthened him in his last moments of life. Did those brethren think it was weak and unmanly to shed tears because of his departure? To my mind it was a glorious exhibition of primitive Christianity which we must feel and exhibit if we assist in its return to earth. Oh, the cold heartless reserve we manifest for one another while our friends are living. If the minister preaches a good sermon tell him so. Don't go from the church in a such a cold, heartless manner as to leave him in doubt whether you were pleased or feel like kicking him across the street for his effort. Perhaps it was a subject on which he had put especial pains. He had sought for the right text and then did his best to put the old thoughts into some new shape. He had prayed that it might go to the hearts of the people. He had delivered all with a power that left him exhausted. Five hundred people may have been blessed by it and resolved upon a higher and a better life. Yet all he hears after the congregation is dismissed is the rustle of silk and the shuffle of feet in the aisle as the people pass out. Oh, why did not some man come up and say, Well done. You have done me good. Why did not some woman come up and say, "I shall go home and take up the burdens of life more cheerfully. Why did not some professional man come up and say, "Thank you, for that splendid sermon." Why did they not tell him all this? How little it would have cost them and yet how much of cheer it would have been to that preacher, and yet it is but seldom done. The individual that will practice these things will be an oddity in the world. But to make up for this awful lack of out-spoken praise there needs to be and will be a great day when amid the solemnities and grandeur of a listening universe God will say, Well done. No statistics can state how many mothers have rocked cradles, and hovered over infantile sickness and brought up their families to man and womanhood, and launched them upon useful and successful lives, and yet never received by any one the heart-spoken words, "Well done." I have sat in church and witnessed the efforts of the young and grown, and oft times when a word of cheer and approval was truly merited, and should have been given, but no it must not be because it was in a church building. If the effort was in place a word of approval and appreciation could not have been out of place.

If Christ could say, Well done, would it be wrong for us to utter the same cheering words to those toiling upward? Oh, how much good it would do the human heart in life could it only receive at least a small portion of the love and respect that at last is so generously lavished upon our tombs. Why is it so many people keep all their pleasant thoughts and words about a man bottled up and sealed until he is dead, when they break the flagon over his coffin and bathe his shroud in fragrance.

Many a man goes through life without receiving scarcely one bright, cheerful, encouraging word to cheer him on over the rough steeps of time. He toils on in lowly obscurity. He gives out his life freely for others. Yet no one says "Well done" to him. Oh, I remember such a man. He had many things to discourage him. Trouble thickened about him. No one ever took any pains to encourage him, to strengthen his feeble knees, to lighten his heavy burdens, or to lift up his heart by gentle deeds of love. He was neglected, unkind things were spoken of him. At last I stood by his coffin and then there were many tongues to speak his praise. Men spoke of his self denial, of his work among the poor, of his quietness, his pure heart, his faith in God. There were many who spoke indignantly of the treatment he had received in life. Oh, there were enough kind things said during the two or three days he lay in his coffin and while the company stood around his open grave to have blessed him through many a dark storm in life, and made him happy all his 70 years, and to have thrown sweetness and joy about his soul during all his painful and weary journey of life. There was enough sunshine wasted about his black coffin and dark grave to have made his whole life bright as the clearest day. But his ears were closed then and could not hear a word that was said. He cared nothing then for the sweet flowers that were piled upon his coffin or fell upon his open grave. They blossomed out to late. Their kindness came when the life could not receive and enjoy its blessing. Tell your good words of cheer, love and appreciation to the living, and not speak them so often to the dead, that cannot hear or appreciate them.

If your children have done well encourage them onward by a hearty "Well done." Do not lead them to feel you are a walking grave yard because of the cold indifference you manifest towards their every effort.

In Col. iii. 19 there is this command, "Husbands love your wives." Perhaps it has been years since you have told her so. I venture to say she would not forget those words in all the long day should you again repeat them in her ear. Try it and see.

The merited words "well done," come not without a struggle or effort on our part. "Well done, good and faithful servant." Good because faithful to the trust given into our hands. How long must we continue faithful? While the revival is on and it appears as though every one is being enlisted in the work? While the tide is high and is sweeping all before it, and then when the waters abate and nothing but the smooth still current of every day life return drop out of the ranks and disappear forever? Or until another flood returns to bear us on drift to the ball room and the card table? No, not that. Hear it, "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. ii. 10. Be faithful until death closes the scene. What does the devil care for our Sunday piety if he has our sympathy and service the remaining six days of the week? I read from the Ram's Horn not long ago these words, "It is impossible to tread on the devil's toes very hard when you are carrying him on your back." Remember God is not mocked. "Whatsoever a man sows, that shall he also reap." "Well done, good and faithful servant." Faithfulness has ever been one of the crowning virtues of the human heart. These two short words are not borne of drift wood along the dark shores of time. The heroes of earth did not drift to their glory and renown. Christ did not drift to Calvary's cross. Paul did not drift to his death, neither will he reach his crown of reward by such an uncertain path. John the Revelator as he stood on the lone sea-girt isle of Patmos, surrounded by the ocean's waves that chanted a mournful refrain to his lonely solitude as they dashed against the rocky walls of his prison home did not drift there as a martyr for God. It is the faithful that become God's heroes and that receive the cheering words, "Well done, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." Faithful over a few things, not many things. It is only a few things God asks us to look after and care for. Three things, loyalty, sincerity, and faithfulness. When God comes to gather his faithful ones where does he go to find them? To the ball room? the card table? or the theatre? I will tell you. Hear it, "They that fear the Lord spake often one to another, and the Lord hearkened and heard it and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts in that day when I make up my jewels." Mal. iii. 16. Only a few things is God asking us to care for. While perhaps we are looking after many and great things to perform. Do not wait for great things to come along. Perhaps they will never appear. Great things of life are usually the product of little acts along life's journey. It has been said that the victory of Santiago was won by small guns. The great 13 inch shells hit the mark only twice. God has thought that one Niagara with its mighty cataract will do for a continent. But he has need for 10,000 rills and rivulets to beautify and make fruitful this great land of ours.

A nation is great and strong not because it produces a few great men, but because the multitude is enabled. When Naaman appeared before the Prophet to be healed he was wroth because Elisha said, Go and wash seven times in the river Jordan. But the little Jewish maid remarked to him saying, If the Prophet had commanded thee to do some great thing wouldst thou not have done it? Oh, let us be more careful and look after the little things of life, performing our duty in that direction nobly and well, letting God look after the great and wonderful. Well done. Thou hast been faithful over a few things, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord. Here the scene changes. The time for God to gather his jewels unto himself and to say unto them, "Well done," has come. His earthly temple is no longer needed by his faithful children. The bell rope hangs idly in the belfry. The faithful sexton is called before his God and I hear the Father say, My son, for many long and weary years thou hast trod the beaten path to my earthly sanctuary. Faithfully and well has been thy service in my house. Through winter's blast and summer's heat thou hast ever been true to thy mission. Many times the fuel has been poor and meagre, yet in thy love and devotion to me thou hast overcome all difficulties. "Well done, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things. Enter into the joy of thy Lord." Come up higher, come to my heavenly temple that has no need of furnace heat nor candle light. There you will find your crown.

Again, I see the shut in ones of earth coming before their God. Oh, how sad and care-worn they look. Their limbs distorted and drawn into shapeless conditions, almost beyond recognition even by themselves. Pain and suffering has been their portion for many, many years. But little known by the world in which they lived and suffered. Will God know these jewels? I hear him say, Daughters, your years of suffering have been many and long. Patiently you have borne your sorrow and affliction. Long you have carried your heavy cross. Your toils and suffering are now forever ended. "Well done," come up higher, come to this land where there shall be no pain, sorrow, tears or death. This is thy home and here is your crown.

Again, I see the sad toiling widows of earth come bending before their God, and one in her rapture of delight as she beholds the glories of the coming day exclaim, Oh, how beautiful this land of fadeless flowers. If I could only dwell here for but an hour." God remembering her earthly life, her humble home in the dark forests of earth and says to the lone widow, Mother Garfield, I have not forgotten your lonely widowhood or the old log cabin in which you lived and trained your boy James. Year by year I watched his growth to manhood, I saw your guiding hand that pointed him to the little church round the corner. He is here, come sit ye down by his side to go no more out forever.

Friends, we miss the chief ideas of the last judgment. We put into the picture the fire, the smoke, the earthquake that goes marching by the descending angel, the uprising dead, and the cries of the damned, but we forget to put into the picture that which makes the last day a grand opportunity. We forget the fact that it is to be a day of gladness and a day of glorious explanation and commendation. The first justice that millions of unrewarded and unappreciated men and women yet will be on that day. That will be the day of enthronement for those the world has called "nobodies." Moses, Joshua, Berrick and many others need no last judgment to get justice and praise done them, for thousands of years and generations have already clapped their applause. But the wives who in all ages have encouraged their husbands in the fierce battle of life, women whose names were hardly known beyond the next street or the next farm house must have God say to them "Well done." You did gloriously. I saw you down in the dairy, I saw you in the old farm house mending those children's clothing. I heard what you said in the way of cheer when the breadwinner was in dispair. I saw all the sick cradles you have sung to. I remember the backaches, the headaches and the heartaches. I know all your past sorrows and many trials. I know the story of your knitting needles as well as I know the story of a queen's sceptre. Your castle on the heavenly hill side is ready for you. Go up and forever dwell there. You have done what you could. Well done, my child, well done.

Again I look, I see two lone widows, aged and bent, approaching the throne. I hear the great Father of all say unto them, Daughters, well done, thy days of sorrow and want are forever ended. I have a heavenly feast prepared for you. Although centuries have rolled away since from thy humble home and small store house, thou didst feed my wandering Prophet Elijah; and since the day when you too my daughter entered the treasury, giving your all while others from their abundance gave their gifts, yet thou too hast ever been remembered by me. All the way down through the long centuries of time while you have been sleeping in your graves and forgotten by man I have watched your sleeping dust. And although no earthly marble has ever marked your tombs yet my eye has ever known the place of thy long last sleep of rest. And with each returning season and at budding spring time I have decked your graves with holly and daisies white, and each year sending the robin and wren to build their nest, rear their young and sing their spring time morning songs above your tombs. But now the eternal morn has come. Want, death and the grave are no longer your portion. Thy years of self-sacrifice and toil are no longer yours. Come now to thy reward. Well done, my daughters, enter thy eternal home and forever sing, "The Glory Song." May we too so live that God will say unto us at that day, Well done, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord.

The New Creation.

In Col. i. 15, we read of Christ, "Who is the image of the invisible God, the first born of every creature." "Who is the likeness of the God of that unseen." Diaglott.

He is the first born of the new creation, having been raised from the dead to incorruptability, and declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead. Not that he was not the Son of God before, but he is now declared with power, by the resurrection from the dead. Christ is the first born among many brethren, who are now being taken out for his name. Acts xv. 14.

That excellent name obtained by inheritance. Heb. i. 4. That name superior to angels. To which of the angels did he say sit thou on my right hand till I make thy foes thy footstool. Heb. 13, Diag.

"I will make my first born (first born from the dead) higher than the kings of the earth." Psa. lxxxix. 27. "Unto the Son he saith, Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever; a scepter of righteousness is the scepter of thy kingdom." Heb i. 8.

Jesus is the symbol of the memorial name, Ex. iii. 14, 15; vi. 2, 3, and signifies "the powerful one." See footnote Diaglott Mat. i. 21. The name signifies "I shall be the powerful."

Christ became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name. That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow. Phil. ii. 9, 10.

As the Father hath life in himself he hath given to the Son to have life in himself.

When one has the seal (baptism) of God affixed to the faith that cometh by hearing, and understanding the word of the kingdom, they are a part of the Christ body. Are in the Name. "As many as have been baptised into Christ have put on Christ." Gal. iii. 27. They are a part of the numerical name. It is through him we obtain a like inheritance. There is no other name given among men whereby we must be saved.

"In whom we also obtain an inheritance. . . . That we should be to the praise of his glory who first trusted in Christ." Eph. i. 11, 12. "The eyes of your understanding being enlightened, that ye may know what is the hope of his calling, what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in his saints." Verse 18.

This inheritance in his saints is the great Name, the numerical body chosen for his name. That we may know the riches of the glory.

Brothers and sisters, do we consider what a depth of meaning in this sentence, "The riches of the glory of his inheritance in his saints," and "the exceeding greatness of his power to us-ward, who believe in the working of his mighty power which he wrought in Christ when he raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principality and power, and might and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come." He is the first fruits of them that slept, a sample of all who are name-bearers. When he shall introduce the firstborn into the habitable, he says, and let all God's angels worship him. It is then we who are name-bearers will be changed, our bodies fashioned like his own glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able to subdue all things unto himself.

We will share the exalted name. "Let the saints be joyful in glory. Let the high praises of God be in their mouth, and a two edged sword in their hand, to execute vengeance upon the heathen, and punishments upon the people; to bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron. To execute upon them the judgments written. This honor have all the saints." Psa. cxix. 6, 9.

These are some of the blessings of the New Creation of which Christ is the beginning. "Praise ye the Lord. Sing unto the Lord a new song (a song belonging to the new creation), and his praise in the congregation of saints. Let Israel rejoice in him, let the children of Zion be joyful in their King. Let them praise his name." Verse 1-3.

"And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred and tongue and people, and hast made us unto our God, kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth." Rev. v. 9, 10.

Wonderful creation. Then will Zion awake and put on her strength, and Jerusalem her beautiful garments. It is then the name-bearers, the Bride, the Lamb's wife, the New Jerusalem, will be established at Jerusalem, the City of the Great King.

Be glad and rejoice forever in that which I create, for behold I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy. Isa. lxv. 17, 18.

Nancy Barber.

If there is any doctrine in which saints should have confidence, it is the assurance given in John v. 24, that the saints will not come into judgment. There will be a judgment, but not for saints, it will be when the saints sit in judgment. If we judge ourselves we shall not be condemned (or judged) with the world. For whatsoever is begotten of God overcometh the world. 1 John v. 4. Know ye not, that the saints shall judge the world. 1 Cor. vi.

There is no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus. Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God. Now are ye the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but when he shall appear we shall be like him, and every one that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure. Of course there are many who teach that a person does not know that one is actually saved, but John teaches that "we know that we have passed from death unto life." As long as a man has to depend upon a mortal priest for doctrine, and depends upon home-made gospel he will be in doubt of his own salvation. What good can come of living in doubt, that the salvation promised will be sure, whether its possessor is alive or asleep when death once takes him. One ought to know that God has promised to keep us, that he is able to complete the work begun in us. And our rewards come from the service we render, after we have entered into covenant relations with God through faith in the death and resurrection of Christ. It gives us peace to know that nothing can separate us from the love of God.

Obituary.

On Feb. 7, 1900, Mary J. Perkins, wife of Levi S. Hatch, laid down her life at his home in Crowley, La. She had been suffering for years from a complication of diseases, and has been gradually failing for the last few weeks, though the end was not looked for so soon. Death had no terrors for her. With perfect faith and hope in the promises of the Bible, she longed to rest from her labors and pains, to sleep the few or many years to the morning of the resurrection as a day, and then to live a new, immortal life in peace and joy.

Mary Perkins was born in Indiana, in Feb. 1846, and lacked but a few weeks of being 60 years of age. Twenty years later she was married to Levi S. Hatch, who then had but little more than returned from honorable service in the long war. The following year she was baptized into Christ, and has borne His name and lived a helpful charitable life ever since. She became a member of the Church of God, a body of believers that seeks to have the faith and do the works of Jesus and the early disciples closely, and to the last she remained firmly attached to this body of Christ.

Her loving husband, six children and six grand children survive her. There are also four brothers and one sister.

The funeral service was held at the residence, on Feb. 10, conducted by Bro. J. G. Haupt.—Crowley, La., Signal.

Hieremias (or "Jeremiah").

CHAPTER 21.

1. The Word that came to be from the Lord unto Hieremias, when the king, Sedekias sent Paschoor, son of Melkias and Sophonias, son of Basalos, the priest unto him, saying,

2. Ask the Lord for us, because a king of Babuloon hath withstood us, ask whether the Lord will do according to all his wondrous acts, and he will depart from us.

3. And Hieremias said unto them, In this wise shall ye say unto Sedekias king of Jouda.

4. Thus saith the Lord, Lo, I am reversing the weapons of war with which ye are warring against the Chaldeans who have shut you in from outside the wall; and I am going to lead them into the midst of this city;

5. And I am going to war you with a stretched out hand and a controlling arm with anger and great wrath.

6. And I am going to smite all who dwell in this city, the men and the domestic-animals with a great death, and they will die;

7. And after these events, in this wise saith the Lord, I am going to give Sedekias to be left behind in this city from the death and from the famine and from the sword in the hands of their enemies who seek their souls, and they will cut them down with the mouth of a sword; I shall not be sparing of them, and I shall not pity them.

8. Unto this laity thou shalt say, Thus saith the Lord; Lo, I have given before your face the way of life and the way of death;

9. The one who stayeth in this city will die with sword and with famine, and the one who goeth his way out to yield to the Chaldeans who have shut you in will live, and his soul will be for spoils and he will live.

10. Because I have set my face against this city for evil and not for good things; into the hands of a king of Babuloon will it have been delivered and he will burn it down with fire.

11. O ye household of Jouda's king, may ye have hearkened unto a word of the Lord.

12. O house of David, Thus saith the Lord, may ye have rendered judgment in the morning and have restored to uprightness, and may ye have taken him who hath been robbed out of the hand of the one who is wronging him, that my wrath may not have been kindled like fire and have burned to a flame and there be no one to quench it.

13. Lo, I am against thee, O thou who dost inhabit the valley of Sor, the plain country namely, you who say, who will strike us with awe, or who will come into our habitation?

14. And I am going to kindle a fire in the forest thereof, and it will devour all the parts round about it.

COMMENT.

The reader will observe that the Paschoor named in this chapter is not the person mentioned in the preceding chapter.

In the 2nd verse "a king of Babuloon" instead of "Nebuchadnezzar king of Babuloon" as in R. V.

4th verse, no "in your hands" in the text and "lead" instead of "gather."

5th verse "a controling arm" instead of "a strong arm" and no word for "fiery" in the text.

6th verse "death" instead of "pestilence."

7th verse no "Nebuchadnezzar king of Babuloon" in the text and "he shall not spare them," etc. should be "I shall not," etc.

8th verse "laity" instead of "people"—the rest near enough.

9th verse no word for "pestilence" and "falleth away" should be "yieldeth" or "surrender."

10th verse "upon" should be "against."

11th verse well enough.

12th "fury" should be "wrath"—no text for last clause "because of the evil of your doings."

13th "valley of Sor" instead of "valley" and "plain" is in apposition with "valley" instead of "and of the rock of the plain" "who" instead of "which" and "who will strike us with awe" instead of "who shall come down against." And habitation is singular instead of plural.

14th verse—no text for the first clause "and I will punish," etc.

CHAS. GARDNER.

We wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

Notice.

There has been an inquiry as to the price of a gold Berean pin. I have ascertained that the cost of a single pin, 10 carat gold, is one dollar and thirty-five cents. If one dozen are ordered the price is one dollar and five cents. Thinking that others may desire a gold pin, the order will not be sent in till the 20th of February. If you wish one, send the money for a single pin plus postage to me at 5428 Ontario St., Austin Station, Chicago. If a dozen are ordered, the differences will be refunded. The pins will be ready in two or three weeks after the order is in.

Pine Woods Bible Class in Book Form.

I have several times been solicited to have the past lessons of the Class put in Book form.

I have decided to do this, if I can secure enough subscribers to the book to warrant the expense of publishing it.

The book if printed will contain over four hundred pages. How many copies will you take at $1.25 each?

Send your pledges but no money until I can see if sufficient is subscribed for to warrant the expense.

Send your pledges right away, so that the book can be put to press as soon as possible. Address W. H. Wilson, 420 N. Willow Ave., Austin Station Chicago, Ill.

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $1.05 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

Seventy-five More.

I receive enquiries as to when Pine Woods Bible Class Book will be printed?

In answer, I will say, when I receive seventy-five more subscriptions, the book can be printed, and sent forth on its mission, to teach the glad tidings. If all who really want it had said so, it could now be out sowing seed. When God's professed servants make his cause a secondary matter, and put it off to a "convenient time," his cause suffers. Now all who really want the book please sit down and write me, as soon as you have read this, and then things will move at once. Don't wait until a more convenient time. God's business demands prompt attention.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and State, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is safest to think that you can hold him in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again," "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

"... of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

Read PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, FEBRUARY 21, 1906. NUMBER 7.

A World of Opportunities. No. 5.

How few parents realize the fact that the teacher has more to do in ... the life of the child than any one with whom he comes in contact. The parent may not be able to ... the boy as to his work in the future, but the teacher can and does. It is said: That a parent once upon a time ... to choose a profession for ... So he placed in a room a ... dollar and an apple. He then sent his boy into the room of trial and said, when I go in if I find him interested in reading the Bible I will make a minister out of him. If interested in the dollar I will make a banker out of him. If interested in the apple I will make him for the farm. When he went in the room the boy was seated on the Bible with the dollar in his pocket and eating the apple. Here was a puzzle, but the father was equal to the occasion and said, I will make a politician out of him. A very sensible conclusion I would say. Too often the parent attempts to make a lawyer or doctor out of the boy when he would make a good farmer and be of use to the world.

We have been giving a wrong interpretation to Solomon's words: "Train up the child in the way he should go; and when he is old he will not depart from it." Prov. xxii. 6. The margin rendering is, Train up the child in his way and when he is old he will not depart from it. His way does not mean that he should be left without a guiding hand, but that the child should be observed and helped to choose some profession in which he can put his energies. Sometimes the merest incident ... the life of a young man or woman. There seems to be a "dead point" in the life of many, and if helped over this place will succeed in after life. Every boy who has turned the grind stone has realized that there is a point where it requires an extra effort on his part to get it over. A few efforts and the weight of the stone will carry it around. So it is in battling with this life. This "dead point" must be overcome if success follows.

One of my pupils came to me one day and stated that he was compelled to quit school as he had no means to continue. I advised him to make an extra effort to continue his studies until the close of the year. I pointed out how he might do this, and he followed my advice and is today a successful teacher and a good citizen. When we meet I have the satisfaction of knowing that he appreciates what I did for him. Very many cases of this kind come in the life of the true teacher.

I can look back and thank a good friend for the interest he took in my future. My life might have taken a different course had he not pointed out the results of certain practices. I call to mind a bright young man who had been reared in a saloon until he was 16 years old. His teacher pointed out to him the end of the way in which he was then traveling. On the other hand he showed him what he might do for himself and the world. He gave up the saloon business, devoted his time to getting an education and today is one of our best lawyers and has represented our senatorial district. Last fall was nominated on one of the State tickets for lieutenant governor and proved that he was very strong throughout the State. He is now secretary to our governor. He embraced the opportunity and I think there is a bright future before him as he is yet a young man. Besides this he has a very beautiful home in our city with a very devoted wife and an interesting son. If a young man reared under such influences can make this life a success why not those who have been placed under different environments?

I do not speak of these things that you may follow in every particular, but choose the best out of this world and use it in strengthening yourself for what is really good. With your minds stored with the best you will reach out for what is in the future. "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness." Give us the rich things with which our heavenly Father has strewn his blessed Word. The Bereans were commended for their industry. They searched to see if these things be true or not. I wish in this connection to say a few words to the Bereans everywhere. You should embrace the opportunity of writing for the Berean column. Don't think your efforts are not appreciated. Among the first articles that I read are those in your column. I find them brief and to the point. The more you study your subject the more pointed you will make your article. Let there be an understanding among you and let no week pass without your work being done. It may be irksome for a while but it will soon be a pleasure. I wish that I could personally thank every writer for THE RESTITUTION for the many good articles they furnish from week to week. "The New Thought" religion by Auntie Wince in the last week's paper was well worth the year's subscription. I gave this article to a friend who read it and said I call that good. An article in the last RESTITUTION written to a cousin by Bro. Coleman is well worth a place in our very excellent paper. He certainly used "soft words and hard arguments." Let our motto be I will do what I can to make THE RESTITUTION a success in the future as it has been in the past.

D. C. ROBISON.

[While Brother Robison is telling of the good he gets from the writings of others we state for his encouragement that a Brother in Iowa, when renewing for his paper last week, said that one article in a late issue, written by Brother Robison, was worth to him more than the price of THE RESTITUTION for a year.—ED.]

The Bereans Column.

Dear Bereans:

In our column for January, I read an appeal to the Bereans to do our duty. Now if each one of us, (including myself) will send something to help our Literary Committee along and ease their responsibility, if we put our ourselves in their places we would feel more willing. I trust that all who have received letters will respond. I am sure our committee would be much pleased.

I have been very much impressed with a book I have been reading. Its subject is the 23rd Psalm. If we read the 22nd and the 24th Psalms we notice it is not because of the order of the numbers, but because the 22nd is the Psalm of the cross and that is past, and the 24th is the Psalm of the glory and that is future. Thus these two Psalms rise before us like two mountains leaving the 23rd a fruitful, restful, refreshing valley between for us to take comfort in along life's journey. These are beautiful thoughts when we take notice how this psalm was fulfilled in Christ.

We read, I shall not want rest, he maketh me to lie down in green pastures. Christ says, Come unto me, all ye that labor and I will give you rest. I shall not want drink. He leadeth me beside still waters. Christ says, If any man thirst let him come to me and drink. I shall not want forgiveness. He restoreth my soul. Christ says, The Son of Man hath power to forgive sins. I shall not want guidance. He leadeth me in the paths of righteousnes for his name's sake. Christ says, I am the way, the truth, and the life. I shall not want companionship. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me. Christ says, I am with you all the days. I shall not want comfort. Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. Christ says. The Father shall give you another comforter. I shall not want food. Thou preparest a table before me. Christ says, I am the Bread of Life. I shall not want joy. Thou anointest my head with oil. Christ says, That my joy may be in you, and that your joy may be filled full. I shall not want any thing in this life. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life. Christ says, Seek ye first his kingdom and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you. I shall not want any thing in eternity. For I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever. Christ says, I go to prepare a place for you that where I am there ye may be also. These are comforting words and may we build our faith so steadfast on these comforting truths that we will find our place in his presence. I will close with a verse.

Make me patient, kind and gentle, day by day,
Teach me how to live more nearly as I pray.

Submitted in love.

SELMA SAMUELS.

Dear Bereans:

I have been requested to write a short article for your column, and will take "Charity" for my subject.

Paul says in 1 Cor. xiii. "Charity suffereth long, is kind, envieth not, is not rash, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil, endureth all things patiently, rejoiceth in the truth. Charity never faileth. And now abideth faith, hope, charity, but the greatest of these is charity."

Dear Bereans, if you follow this rule through life, it will bring you an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled and that fadeth not away, reserved in the heavens for you. Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober and hope to the end, for as much as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a Lamb without blemish and without spot. Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit, unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently. Do not render evil for evil, but contrariwise blessing, that ye receive a blessing. They that love life, let them refrain their tongues from evil, and their lips from speaking guile. Let them seek peace and ensue it. For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous and his ears are open unto their prayers; but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil.

Therefore, dear Bereans, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord.

MARY M. RENNER.

Dear Bereans:

I have been asked to write an article for the Berean Column, and I have chosen for my topic "The Childhood of Jesus."

We find in the second chapter of Luke beginning with the 42nd verse, when he was twelve years old his parents went up to Jerusalem to attend the feast. When the feast was over they started home, and their child Jesus stayed behind in Jerusalem. His father and mother did not know it. They supposed he was with the company and went a days journey farther; then they looked for him among the people following them, but they did not find him, so they turned back again to Jerusalem. After they had hunted with sad hearts for three long days they found him in the temple sitting in the midst of the doctors, teaching them and asking questions. All that heard him were surprised at his answers. When his parents saw him they were also surprised, and his mother asked him why he had kept them worrying, and he said, Dont you know that I must be about my Father's business? They did not understand what he meant. Then he went back with his father and mother on the journey towards home. The reason he could teach the wise men was because God helped him.

A young Berean.

Editor Restitution:

Will you say through THE RESTITUTION that I would like some able writer to write an article on Baptism for the benefit of those who have been baptized in other denominations, and have believed the true gospel since, and and do not know the importance of being baptized again.

A SISTER IN CHRIST.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

In the world of nations there is little to note more than the usual juggling and sparing that attends bargaining.

In response to the request made by a Sister elsewhere in this paper, Bro. J. L. Wines has promised to write on the question of Baptism touching the point mentioned.

Brother J. H. Willey was with the Chicago Church last Sunday, and addressed the meeting. While in the city he met with Brother Alexander and Sister Boice, and had a conference regarding the work she proposes. He will give a report soon as possible to prepare it.

The Plymouth Church has had the pleasure of hearing Brother A. H. Zilmer give a series of Bible Lectures that will be remembered always. He commenced Tuesday evening, Jan. 30, and continued till Friday evening, Feb. 16. The lectures were illustrated by a series of large wall charts and maps, and were made doubly plain by hearing and sight. Brother Zilmer began with "The Bible: What it is, and how it should be interpreted," and followed on down step by step, showing what the earth was made for, why man was placed on it, what he is, who God the Creator is, and what he intended man to be; how man fell, sinned, the penalty for the fall, how through Christ's coming and the resurrection man may be saved from its consequences; what is awaiting the impenitent, the extent and duration of the punishment that such will receive; the blessings in store for the faithful followers of the commands of God. He showed how we can become the brethren of Christ, and what it means to be so related; what we must do after being adopted into this relationship—how our lives must be conformed to his life if we at the end attain the glories promised. Taken all through, the series was most complete and exhaustive, and full of just such instructive lessons as the people need to hear. The attendance throughout the meetings was fair—no great rush, but steady and regular. While numbers were not added to the church the work of instruction was so plain and clear that it cannot but be beneficial to each one who listened to the addresses. It is ours to sow the seed, to water, to till the ground—the increase is with God, and we cannot doubt that he will take proper care of his part.

The Covenants of Promise.

The truth about the covenants is that which is recorded in the Scriptures concerning them. They are ranked with the permanent things of the heavens and the earth in the realm of nature. And therefore the oracular word from the Lord to Jeremiah xxxiii. 19-22 and 25; compare with Gen. viii. 22 and Eccl. i. 4. And Jer. xxxi. 35, 36, 37. The heavens and the earth are so constituted by the command or Word of God, that their permanency and perpetuity are assured. And therefore it is vain to look for any impairment, change or dissolution in the material solar system. In faith we understand that the ages were so constituted that the visible things existing were not produced from things obvious to the senses. The most powerful and forceful agencies in the world are the invisibles:—gravitation, magnetism, electricity, Spirit-law, all-pervading and all penetrating and formative within the domain of law. "By his Spirit he garnishes the heavens," and "renews the face of the earth."

Accordingly it is written Psa. civ. 5, (Douay) "Who hath founded the earth upon its own basis. It shall not be moved forever and beyond" to a period hidden in the far distant future. One more testimony as to the perpetuity of the earth with its population. Gen. ix. 9-17, and emphasize verse 12, and compare Isa. liv. 9, 10. With these testimonies believed, a sure foundation is laid, with a view to the fulfilment of the promises. Moreover, this stipulation in the covenant is unconditional. And made the basis of future covenants and the perpetuity of the human race upon the earth. And as related to individuals, arranged and provided strictly conditional according to the divine purpose. It may be noted also that this covenant of which the rainbow is the sign, is a covenant of ages, and passes along to times of restoration on to the "dispensation of the fulness of times," when predictions of the holy prophets will be fulfilled in, and after the epoch of the "regeneration."

Pre-requisites to the Abrahamic covenant continued: Terah lived 70 years and begat Abram, Nahor and Haran. Gen. xi. 26. Terah did not beget these three when he was 70, before he begat any one of the three. The family moved out of Ur, with the intention of going into Canaan, but stopped at Haran and abode there till Terah's death, aged 205 years. Abram at this time was 75 (chap. xii. 4) and 205 less 75 leaves 130, Terah's age when Abram was born. A. M. 2008. Promise to Abram chap. xii. 2, 3; promise of land, verse 7; promise renewed chapter xiii. 17.

Melchizedek introduced soon after the invasion of south-west Palestine. See Gen. xiv. 7, Abram followed up the invaders and recovered the captured goods and persons. And at his return met Melchizedek in "the king's vale." Verses 18, 19, 20, who brought forth bread and wine. He being the Priest of the Most High God. He blest Abram, and blest the Most High God, for the deliverance from the enemy. Abram without an heir, and previous promises fruitless apart from Abram's seed. Hence renewal of promise with special reference to the seed. Gen. xv. 4, 5. Abram believed God, and was justified by faith. He being about 100 years old and his wife about 90. "Who against hope believed hopefully that God would intervene and he did. Concerning the land Abram asks, "How shall I know that I shall inherit it?" (8) Answered verse 17 and covenanted verse 18, with a description in outline of Abram's inheritance: "From the river (Nile) of Egypt unto the great river, the Euphrates," The "Promised land." From the Nile longitude 30 degrees 2 min. west, to the Euphrates longitude 48 degrees, 26 min., that is more than 1100 miles. Latitude 29 degrees, 31 min., to latitude 37 degrees, upwards of 500 miles; or 550,000 square miles of territory.

This territory at the present time, and for centuries prior to the present, under the domination of the Ottoman rulers, usurpers, tyrants. But the messengers of Matt. xiii. 41, 42 will settle this account and settle it right. Abram's name changed in harmony with the unfolding of the divine purpose to Abraham, that is father of a multitude of nations, to be blest in the age. Gen. xvii. Covenant, an age-enduring one in the regeneration and beyond. (7) Circumcision (10) a sign of the covenant relation entered into on the part of Abraham's household. But to himself it was a seal of the righteousness of his faith in God's promises. See Rom. iv. 11 and compare verse 14. A further unfolding of the "plan of the ages" is associated with Sarah—royal princes, and it was said of her, she shall be mother of nations—a royal people shall be from her (xvii. 15, 16) through Isaac, son of the promise, and "to the manor born." "In Isaac shall thy seed be called" xxi. 12. Compare Gal. iv. 23, 24, 25 and onward. The two women represented two covenants, Hagar that from Sinai, and Sarah the Abrahamic. Two Jerusalems too applied to the two women, one a bond woman, the other of royal rank. Compare Rom. iv. 12, 13, 10 and ix. 4, 7, 8, 9, Isaac's every one of them, and heirs of the promises.

Abraham put to the proof Gen. xxii. 7, 8 and 16-18 emphasize verse 18, as giving the reason for divine approval, "Because thou hast obeyed my voice;" harmonizing with chapter xxvi. 3, 4, 5. A repetition of the same promise, unconditional, and for the same reason namely: "Because Abraham obeyed my voice." Something already done on the part of Abraham assured the fulfilment. God Almighty commanded Abraham to walk before him in perfect obedience. Chapter xvii. 1. And Abraham did obey as affirmed, chapter xxvi. 5, and compare chapter xxviii. 13, 14, 15 and Psa. cv. 8-11. And numerous references. The covenant from Sinai was added to the Abrahamic for a period and purpose. Gal. iii. 19. More anon. The title deed to the land makes all covenants and promises of fulfilment possible—sure, in every detail. Cannot have population or government, political or sacred out apart from land, and the land described above is in the nature of things ample for the purpose intended. Why the Abrahamic covenant is called the new covenant? Because the new things of the ages to come are involved in the covenants of promise. Christ being Mediator of a new covenant ratified by his precious blood, and became by divine appointment a propitiatory or mercy-seat, through faith in his blood for the remission of past sins, as it is written. Heb. ix. 14, 15 and Rom. iii. 24, 25. And the Head of the new creation, chief of the family of first-borns. Because, in him were created all the things—thrones, lordships, authorities and official powers, and by him all the things are firmly placed together. Col. i. 16-18 and Rev. iii. 14 and compare Eph. i. 10 and references. The "fathers" did not look for the fulfilment of the covenants of promise in their day. But acknowledged that they were strangers and merely sojourners in the promised land. Although made 430 years before the law covenant from Sinai, yet, in view of the matters involved, pertaining to the new creation, regeneration. They are the new things to be realized in the new order of things. Old things will pass away, and all the things mentioned by the prophets become new—a new creation, a new song of the redeemed, and "as it were a new song of the 144,000 out of the 12 tribes of Israel's sons. "Sing unto him a new song." Psa. xxxiii. 3 and xl. 3 and xcvi. 1 and ix. 8-1. And references. The New Jerusalem, the Upper Jerusalem—free, and mother of all the heirs of promise—Isaac's every one of them. The new name—new heavens and earth, "Behold I make all things new." Rev. xxi. 5. The Abrahamic covenant then is appropriately styled the new one in view of the reference to the world to come in its fullage season. Abraham himself looked for the New Jerusalem with 12 foundation courses, and in them the names of the 12 apostles of the Lamb...And 12 gates inscribed with the names of the 12 tribes of Israel. Entrance ways into the holy corporation, the governing power of the world to come.

Covenant concerning the throne: the blessing of Judah on the part of father Jacob is suggestive of the hope of Israel as a nation, and that also of the aspirants to partnership in the honors of the royalties of "David's house." Gen. xlix. 8-12. Emphasize verse 10. The scepter shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet forever; because Shiloh will come and unto him shall the peoples be gathered." The sceptre did depart from Judah in the 11th year of king Zedekiah, since that time others than Judah has managed and mismanaged the affairs of Israel's land to the present day. Consult Ezek. xxi. 25-27. A three-fold overturning so as to make it doubly emphatic, and it shall not be, until he come whose right it is, and I will give it him. So then no gathering of peoples to his standard until the coming of the Son of Man, when there shall be given to him dominion, glory and the kingdom".....Dan. vii. 14 and compare Isa. xi. 10, 12. He shall set up an ensign for the Gentile nations and assemble his dispersed people from alien lands. "The Lion of the tribe of Judah," destined to reveal the secrets of the sealed scroll. Rev. v. 5. Covenant with David. 2 Sam. vii. A "thus saith the Lord." Verse 8, "He will make thee a house," in the sense of royal family or dynasty. See Psalm cxxii. 5. "The thrones of the house of David"...in Jerusalem. Concerning Solomon's throne and kingdom, the testimony is "Will stablish the throne of his kingdom forever" (13) "He shall build a house for my name" (12) namely the temple for Israelitish worship.

"If he commit iniquity"—which he did, and was "chastized by the rod of men—promise to Solomon personally, conditional, 1 King ix. 4-8. Solomon's "iniquities." 1 Kings xi. 1-14. The rejection of Solomon personally, does not affect the covenant with David concerning the eternal perpetuity of his throne and kingdom. The sceptre did depart from Judah—2 Chron. xxxvi. 11, as before mentioned. David said to the Lord, "Who am I and what is my house, that thou hast brought me to this?" And even this present, a small affair. "Thou hast spoken of thy servant's house for a great while to come." A long time away in the future regeneration period. Verses 19 and 20. Compare with 1 Chron. xvii.—The variation in the wording of verses 11-15 demands different interpretation from that of 2 Sam. vii. 12-14. The testimony recorded 1 Chron. xvii. 13, 14, is unconditional as far as this context is concerned. The terminology does not fit Solomon—I will settle him in my house, and in my kingdom forever, and his throne shall be established for evermore." "And this throne shall be most firm forever." Douay. Our affair is to collate the recorded testimony, not to undertake interpretation.

Turn now to Psa. lxxxix. 3, 4, "I have made a covenant with my chosen (2 Sam. vii.) confirmed the same with an oath (verses 35, 36) "I have found David my servant; with my holy oil I have anointed him." (20) He was then the Lord's Anointed—he shall cry my Father, my God and the Rock of my salvation." (26) Note the promise of verse 28, "My mercy I will keep for him, for evermore," into the age—and my covenant will stand firm with him" personally. Notice Hos. iii. 5 and Ez xxxiv. 23, 24 and chapter xxxvii. 24, 25 Emphasize Psa. lxxxix. 29. His seed also I will make to endure forever, and his throne as the days of heaven." Note verse 30. If his children (David's children) forsake my law. They did forsake God's law, they did break his statutes. (31) "Then I will visit their transgressions with the rod." And the correction is going on up to the present (1906). Emphasize xxxiii. 37. Nothing can possibly hinder the fulfillment of God's covenant with David. Jer. xxxiii. 15, 17 and emphasize verse 21. Comment here would be, in comparison with the testimony itself, as a flickering lamp in the blaze of the noon day sun Hos. iii. 4, 5, from the lxx. version; for the children of Israel shall abide many days without a king and without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an altar, and without a priesthood, and without manifestations (Urim and Thummim) and afterwards (after the many days 2400) the children of Israel shall return, and shall seek the Lord their God, and David their king; and shall be amazed at the Lord and at his goodness in the latter days." Zech. vi. 13, and Isa. ix. 7, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom from henceforth even forever.

Consult Psa. cxxxii. 11 and compare Acts ii. 30. "An oath for confirmation ends all disputes," and therefore the testimony recorded. Psa. cx. 4. A perpetual or unchangeable priesthood according to the order of Melchizedek, who was a priest all his life, and king of Salem as well. Zech. vi. 13 and Heb. vii. 1. David being a prophet and knowing that the oath of God was at stake, affirmed the resurrection of Christ as a necessity to meet the terms of the covenant. As it is written Acts ii. 30, and iv. 10 12 and v. 30-32, and compare Acts xiii. 32, 34, 38.

As to the claim of Jesus of Nazareth to the throne of David, we have the testimony of the angel by a special messenger from the presence of God who announced to the mother of our Lord—that her Son should be great, that he should be called (verse 35) the Son of the Most High—and that the Lord God should give him the throne of his father David, and that he should reign over the house of Jacob for ever and beyond, and of his kingdom there should be no end. Luke i. 32, 33 38. This Jesus became a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God to confirm the promises made unto the fathers" of the Hebrew nation which we have been considering. Compare with Gal. iii. 15-17. Covenant concerning Christ confirmed with the oath of God. Compare Psa. cxxxii. 11 with Acts ii. 30. And besides a covenant is firm when the blood of the appointed victim has been produced for ratification, so as to bring into force the covenant arrangement in the case; and hence the phrase, "Blood of the covenant," and "Blood of the everlasting covenant." Heb. ix. 20, and xiii. 20.

Paul could say that Christ our Passover has been sacrificed in our behalf. But God raised him from the dead, because it was impossible for death to hold, because "It is written, Thou wilt not leave me (myself) in the unseen, nor wilt thou permit the holy One of thyself to see corruption." Acts ii. 27. Therefore his fitness to become Mediator of a new covenant so that by means of death for a redemption of transgressions under the first covenant, the called might receive the promise of the inheritance of the age." Heb. ix. 15. Compare verses 12 and 24 with 26, 28 and 1 Peter i. 19, 20.

Note what the president of the council said to the convention, John xi. 47-49 52, concerning a plot to make away with Jesus without arousing the indignation of the people. "You know nothing at all," said Caiaphas, who was high priest that year. Nor do you consider that it is expedient for us that One Man should die in behalf of the people, and that the whole nation perish not. But this he said, not from himself, but being high priest that year, he prophesied that Jesus should die in behalf of the nation and not for that nation only, but that he should also gather together into one (body) the children of God scattered abroad. The terms of the covenant with Abraham, and that with David demanded the perpetuity of the nation of Israel as well as the throne of David, the holy priesthood of the Haronic order "For a perpetual anointing of priesthood,"—Aaron Eleazar, Phinehas and the Sons of Zadoc. Consult Ex. xl. 15; Num. xxv. 12, 13; Jer. xxxiii. 8; Mal. iii. 3, 4; Ezek. xliv. 15, 16 This it will be noted belongs to the Department of Worship for the nation of Israel under the new covenant. Jer. xxxi. 31-34.

According to the ceremonial of the day of atonement, Lev. xvi. the blood of animals put away sin typically from year to year, but at the end of the Mosaic ages the Christ appeared to put away sin permanently by the sacrifice of himself, so that by One offering he perfected the sanctified for the age, Heb x. 12-14, with a view to the rulership in the age to come; and at the same time purchased the nation of Israel to himself. Not simply "forever," but "All the days," so that the ruling powers of the world to come and the Israelitish nation as a nation, are to become interdependent upon each other, Rulers and ruled, kingdom and subjects. The one cannot be apart from the other. No subjects no kings. The reciprocal relations affects not the rank. The highest rank, the royal priesthood, according to the order of Melchizedek. 2nd, The local kings according to ability and fitness. 3rd, The Israelitish local rulers with David at the head, and then the department of worship according to the order prevailing within the first fruits land of offering, or that called the holy oblation.

Respectfully submitted.
C. W. Tomkins.

Editor Restitution:

I have been carefully reading Sister Boice's articles, and I think her plan a good one. I have also read Brother Woodward's article in a late issue of The Restitution, and endorse it most heartily. We have practiced tithing for some years; with profit and pleasure, and it seems to me if our brethren believe as they say, that the Lord's coming is right at hand, they would all be willing to give that much, if not more to the Master's cause.

If we knew that Christ would come for his saints inside of five years would we still sit here idle? Yet the signs proclaim him nigh, even at the door. We need organization, and how is it to be brought about? Cannot some one make a move in that direction, and then perhaps others will fall into line.

Your Sister in Christ,
Mrs. A. M. Boice.

Conference Report.

The Central Washington Conference was held at Wenatchee, Washington, on Jan. 5, 6, 7, 1906. The programme was as follows:

Friday, 7:30 pm, Sermon,
N. D Titchenal
Saturday 10:30 am, Business meeting
6:30 pm, Social meeting
7:30 pm, Sermon,
Myrtle Titchenal
Sunday, 10:00 am, Sunday School
11:00 am, Sermon,
Walker Perrine
6:30 pm,
Young People's meeting
7:30 pm, Sermon,
N. D. Titchenal
9:30 pm, Lord's Supper.

At the business meeting on Saturday it was decided to hold the next quarterly session at Cashmere, Wash. March 30 to April 1, 1906.

Let us make it a point to be present at these meetings. In Heb. x. 25, we read "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching."

A. L. Corbaley, Pres.
Myrtle Titchenal, Sec.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "The Restitution," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

Obituary.

John Wesley Booth was born in Orange County, eastern Indiana, April 18, 1825, and died Feb. 15, 1906, being 80 years, 10 months and 7 days old.

When but a small boy his parents moved to western Indiana, near to Terre Haute, where he grew to manhood. June 6, 1848 he was united in marriage to Harriett Watts, to which union there were born seven children, three of whom survive him—Lyman, of Ashton, Ill. William, of Lake City, Iowa, and Mrs. Olive Wood, of Austin, Illinois.

In 1853 he moved to Ogle County, Ill., in which he has resided almost continuously ever since. July 7, 1860 his companion died, leaving him with five children, the youngest being but two months and 12 days old.

Nov. 6 1861 he was united in marriage to Fay Collins of Carroll Co. Ill. To them were born eight children, five of whom are living: Mrs. Alice Williams of Antioch; Mrs. Nellie Cross of Chana; Mrs. Maggie Judd, George and Glenn of Sugar Grove.

His wife and eight children remain to mourn his death. He was one of a family of fifteen children, all of whom are now dead except one sister, Mrs. R. S. Kite of Tama City, Iowa. For a few years past he has been troubled with kidney disease. An attack of la grippe a few weeks ago left him somewhat reduced in strength, but he kept around as usual until Sunday, Feb'y 12, when his kidney trouble became much worse and on Thursday, the 15, at 9:15 a. m., almost without warning, he expired from heart failure.

Early in life he united with the M. E. church, and lived in strict conformity to their creed till June, 1859, when with his former companion, by the aid of Henry Collins, took upon themselves the name of the anointed by immersion, and became obedient to the faith of the gospel as taught by the Master and his apostles. Ever after he was a fearless defender of the doctrine of the "Restitution of all things spoken of by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began;" of the establishment of the kingdom of God upon the earth, with Christ as King, and the saints as joint rulers over the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous and eternal life only through Christ; a belief in the gospel; repentance, and immersion in the name of Christ for the remission of sins. These with other kindred truths were the chief topics of his conversation, and his greatest delight was to tell others the story of redemption from sin and death to a life of perpetual joy and gladness in that world where the "inhabitants shall never say I am sick," where the eyes shall never dim with age, but where the tears shall be wiped from off all faces; where sorrow, sickness, sin and death will never be known.

Funeral services were conducted by the undersigned, and he was laid to rest in the Chapple Hill Cemetery beside his former companion, there to await the call from the tomb to the blessings and joys of that life which shall never end.

S. J. Lindsay.

"Inasmuch as Ye Did it Not."

"Master, I have this day broken no law of the Ten—have hurt no one. Is it enough?"

"Child, there stood one by thy side burdened with heavy tasks of lowly earthly labor. For a little help, a little easing of the burden, he looked to thee. Thou hast time and strength."

"Master, I did not see."

"Thine eyes were turned within. There was an ignorant one crying from out his darkness: 'Will none teach me?' I have given thee knowledge."

"Master, I did not hear."

"Thine ear was dull. There came a guest to seek thy converse, a human friend in quest of fellowship. I marked thy sigh, thy frown. Why was thy heart not glad?"

"I was reading. I hate to be disturbed, to be called from great thoughts to trifling talk."

"The children would have thee some few moments in their play. Without thee they went wrong—how far wrong thou wilt not know. It is too late."

"Child's play? But I was searching for a hidden truth of spiritual import."

"Thou didst not turn aside to lift that lame one who had fallen by the way."

"I was in haste to do what I had planned. I meant to help him when I should return."

"Another lifted him. And shall I question further?"

Cross-Wearing.

I am crucified with Christ,
With Him nailed upon a tree,
Not the cross, then, do I bear
But the cross it bears on me.
Solemn cross on which I died—
One with him, the Crucified.

Shall I take that blood-stained cross—
Cross of agony and shame?
Cross of him who fought my fight?
Cross of him who overcame?
Shall I deck myself with thee—
Awful cross of Calvary?

Shall I drag thee through the crowd
'Mid the laughter that is there?
Wear thee through the giddy waltz,
Bound upon my neck or hair?
Awful cross of Calvary—
Shall I deck myself with thee?

Shall I make that lowly cross
Minister of woman's pride?
Drawing eyes to me that should Fix upon the Crucified?
Awful cross of Calvary—
Shall I deck myself with thee?

Shall I call this glittering gem
Made for show and vanity—
Shall I call this gaud a cross—
Cross of him who died for me?
Shall I deck myself with thee,
Awful cross of Calvary?

Christ's Second Coming.

Very much has been said and written on the second coming of Christ. Dates have been figured out, the time has been set for that great event to occur, and yet the Lord has not appeared as many have expected. I have heard it remarked that the prophecies relating to the Lord's return have all been fulfilled, and now we may look for his return at any moment. But is that statement true? We think there are great events yet to transpire before that much desired moment can come for our world. I expect to show by the Scriptures that the Jewish people must be gathered back to their own land in sufficient numbers, and with wealth enough about them to attract the attention of the King of the North—Russia—causing him to go forth to that land and people to take a "spoil and to take a prey," and at that time the Lord will make his appearance, and all his saints with him. This regathering of God's people to their own land, and the effort of the northern power to rob and plunder them once more must take place before our Lord's return.

These two events, to my mind, mark the nearest point to that day of any found in the Bible, and they stand out so plainly and are so definitely given we need make no mistake, and we have only to watch the development and position of these two powers in order to learn the near approach of that eventful day.

In order to prove my position I have only to establish my second proposition, namely, the attitude of the northern power toward the Jewish people after their return to their own land again.

Ezek. xxxviii. 1-18, "And the word of the Lord came unto me saying Son of man set thy face against Gog. . . and say, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold I am against thee, O Gog, (the king), the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal. Verse 7, Be thou (the same power as spoken of in the first part of the chapter) prepared, and prepare for thyself, thou and all thy company, that are assembled unto thee, and be thou a guard unto them. After many days thou shalt be visited in the latter years (the last times), thou shalt come into the land that is brought back (what land? the land of Israel) from the sword, and is gathered out of many people, against the mountains of Israel which have been always waste, but it is brought forth out of the nations (for the last time), and they shall dwell safely, all of them. Thou shalt ascend and come like a cloud to cover the land, thou and all thy bands, and many people with thee. Thus saith the Lord God, It shall also come to pass that at that same time (latter years) shall things come into thy mind, and thou shalt think an evil thought. Now mark the outcome of that evil thought. And thou shalt say, I will go up to the land of unwalled villages. When? In the latter years. I will go to them that are at rest. Oh yes, at rest. For two thousand years the poor Jew has been tossed and driven hither and you; but now at rest. That dwell safely; yes safely now under God's eye and protecting hand. All of them dwelling without walls, and having neither bars nor gates. What trust and confidence now.

What is the object for which this northern power makes this visit upon this trusting and defenceless city and people? "To take a spoil (rob) and to take a prey; to turn thine hand upon the (once) desolate places that are now inhabited, and upon the people that are gathered out of the nations, (any doubt as to who this people is) which have gotten cattle and goods (riches), that dwell in the midst of the land. Sheba and Dedan and the merchants of Tarshish, with all the young lions thereof, shall say unto thee, Art thou come to take a spoil? Hast thou gathered thy company to take a prey, to carry away silver and gold? to take away cattle and goods, and to take a great spoil? Therefore son of man, prophesy and say unto Gog (the king), Thus saith the Lord God, in that day (latter years) when my people of Israel (here they are plainly named) dwelleth safely, shalt thou not know it? And thou (in ignorance of God's watch care over his chosen people) shall come up from thy place (from where) out of the north part, and many people with thee, etc. And thou shalt come up against my people of Israel as a cloud to cover the land. When? It shall be in the latter days; and I will bring thee against my land, that the heathen may know me, when I shall be sanctified in thee, O Gog, before their eyes. Thus saith the Lord God, Art thou he of whom I have spoken in old time by my servants the prophets of Israel which prophesied in those days many years that I would bring thee against them? And it shall come to pass at that same time (latter days or years) when God shall come against the land of Israel, saith the Lord God, that my fury shall come up in my face. . . And I will call for a sword against him throughout all my mountain, saith the Lord God. Every man's sword shall be against his brother. And I will plead against him (Gog) with pestilence and with blood, and I will rain upon him and upon his band (armies), and upon the many people that are with him, an overflowing rain, and great hailstones, fire and brimstone.

Thus will I manifest myself, and sanctify myself, and I will be known in the eyes of many nations, and they shall know that I am the Lord.

This 38th chapter of Ezekiel definitely reveals to our mind the time when the northern power invades Palestine—latter days. The object of his visit—to take a spoil and a prey. The purpose of God in bringing him into that land—that the heathen may know me.

Now let us turn to Zach. xiv. and learn the result of Gog's visit to that land with his mighty army. "Behold the day of the Lord (or the Lord's day) cometh, etc. For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle. . . . Then shall the Lord go forth and fight against those nations as when he fought in the day of battle. And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives (his return) which is before Jerusalem. . . And the Lord my God shall come and all the saints with him. . . And the Lord shall be King over all the earth. In that day there shall be one Lord and his name one."

Thus we see when Gog enters the land of Israel to take a spoil, Christ appears with all his saints—delivers his chosen people; overthrows Gog and all his army, and takes his great power and reigns, and is then "King over all the earth."

If we watch the movements of God's people and note carefully the war steppings of Gog, we may understand almost definitely the approach of the day of the Lord, and the time of the full deliverance of his chosen people.

Higher Education.

Can you suppose the higher education a necessary qualification for one who would proclaim the gospel of the meek and lowly Jesus to this advanced generation? "At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes." "Even so Father for so it seemed good in thy sight." If the meek and lowly One thanked God for the blessed revelation to the simple and humble, I thank him for the same conditions today. If man's wisdom has advanced until he has outgrown the conditions, thanks be to God, he changeth not. "Where is the wise, where is the scribe, where is the disputer of this world; hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?" The world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." "For the Jews require a sign and the Greeks seek after wisdom. But we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling block and unto the Greeks foolishness. But unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God. Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men and the weakness of God is stronger than men. For ye see not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called. But God has chosen the foolish things of this world to confound the mighty."

Paul was an educated man of his day but he left off enticing words of men's wisdom and excellency of speech when he preached the gospel. He says, "I determined not to know any thing among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified. That your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men but in the power of God." Solomon after speaking of the making of many books says, "Much study is a weariness of the flesh," and comes to the final conclusion, "To fear God and keep his commandments is the whole duty of man." The same light set in the old brass candlestick shines just as brightly as the one set in graven silver and gold. The Lord chose the poor unlearned fishermen as light-bearers, while the lawyers, doctors and learned men were amazed and confounded by the wisdom from above. We have no fears of our cause being lost for lack of the wisdom of this world. God's cause will never be lost because the wise and prudent scorn his choice of humble proclaimers. God says, "So shall my Word be that goeth forth out of my mouth, it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing where-to I sent it." God's ways are not man's ways; man would not have chosen one of the poorest and most humble men of Judea to be the future King over all the earth to whom kings and nobles should do honor.

Let the church keep the old log school house graduates from whose tongues the gospel message flows like silvery streams of living water in a desert land, clothed, fed and in the field (we will surely reap if we faint not). Then if a surplus remains, educate the young man if it seems good. He may choose to leave off the enticing words and excellency of speech and preach the simple gospel, and he may not, but let us hope for Christ's sake he will.

This blessed old class who were called from their nets, the carpenter's bench, the forge and the plow will never be forgotten, though their names may not be lifted high on marble shaft or carved in granite or stone. Yet there is a book of remembrance in the treasures of the store house of heaven, where the names of the faithful are written in letters of light. Is that all? No; their names are carved deep in the hearts of the living stones of "The temple of the living God, whose temple ye are." They shall rest from their labors and their works do follow them. May your name dear reader and mine be written there in letters of love.

"Saved Now."

Can we say truthfully now, I am saved? Matt. i. 21, says, "And she shall bring forth a Son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins." 1 Jon. iii. 3-5, "And ye know that he was manifested to take away our sins." Tim. ii. 14, "Who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people." That is now, isn't it, for what purifying we have must be done in this life, not in the next, and this verse says, "Redeem us from and (in so doing) purify unto himself a peculiar people; then if we are redeemed from iniquity, are we not saved from sin now? Heb. ix. 26, "But now once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." If sin is put away from us, if he has, in consequence of our faith and obedience, "Taken away our sins," are we not saved now from our sins? Matt. xii. 26, Jesus speaks of Satan having a kingdom. "If Satan cast out Satan he is divided against himself; how then shall his kingdom stand?" While we were in sin, before we put on Christ, and became his followers, we are dead in trespasses and sins." Eph. ii. 2, 3. "Where in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience." Among whom also we all had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others, and consequently in the kingdom of Satan, were we not?

The next verses say, "But God who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened together with Christ. And hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." What for? Why does he do it? Let the next verse answer, "That in the ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his grace, in his kindness toward us, through Christ Jesus." Then as has done all these things, hasn't he? He has loved us. He has quickened us; he has raised us up—(from being dead in sins) and has made us set in heavenly places in Christ. Cannot we truthfully say then, we are saved from the kingdom of Satan? Read Col. i. 13, "Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son. Not the kingdom in the ages to come, when he shall sit on the throne of his glory, may that time soon come, but something, some condition, the opposite of the kingdom of Satan. Out of the world and in Christ. Titus iii. 3-7 reads, "For we ourselves also were sometimes foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful and hating one another. But after the kindness and love of God our Savior toward man appeared, not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us by the washing of regeneration, and the renewing of the Holy Ghost, which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Lord, that being justified by his grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life." He "saved us" from what? From being disobedient; from serving the lusts and pleasures of life; saved us from malice and envy; from being hateful and jealous; saved us that we should be heirs of eternal life. That must be now, and it is very evident that we must be saved from those things, if we are members of his everlasting kingdom. And it is not by "works of righteousness," but by his mercy that he saves us. Eph. ii. 8, 9 read, "For by grace ye are saved through faith. Not of works lest any man should boast;" lest any should be self-righteous and have the "I am better (stronger) than thou" spirit, "see what I have attained to." Lest we should forget that "Without me ye can do nothing." Yes, we must work out our own salvation, by working out what God "works in."

The next verse Phil. ii. 13, reads, "For it is God that worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure." Our inclinations to do right, each desire, each determination to do God's will, comes from God. He is moving us to do his good pleasure, and we are to stand fast, resisting evil, willing to do what he incites us to, and fearing lest we grieve his loving heart by not being steadfast and trusting, "Taking the shield of faith, whereby you may be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked." May God bless us richly and keep us from falling, and present us faultless at his coming.

Brethren and Sisters:

I will try to write a few lines for the love feast. I hope it wont be too late; but you know that Jesus says, he that cometh in last shall be first.

Dear brothers and sisters, let us stand firm and steadfast in the Abrahamic faith, for you know we can look on the right hand and on the left and see that his words are being fulfilled very fast. They slaughter and murder; husbands kill their wives and children; their whole family even where there as many as five in the family. Christ says when ye see these things coming upon the earth this is the beginning of sorrow. Yes, dear brothers and sisters, how awful it would be for us to slay our little ones; for Jesus says, Suffer the little ones to come unto me and forbid them not for of such is the kingdom of heaven. Dear brothers and sisters, let us strive more earnest and faithful for the faith that Abraham had. Just see what faith he had when he offered up his son Isaac for a sacrifice. Our faith must be just as strong if we ever expect to wear the crown that is promised to the faithful.

Now dear ones, I want to reply to P-o. Woodward's letter that appeared some time ago in The Restitution. I want to reply in Christian love that I am sorry that so many are delinquent on The Restitution. He asked, Are you teaching your children to pray? also, are you telling your neighbor of the good promises that Christ has promised to the faithful? Yes, dear brothers and sisters, when my children were small I never tried to teach them anything wrong. I I was always telling them of our heavenly Father, also I delighted in talking to my neighbors about heavenly things, and I have bought tracts and given them, and I have also paid several subscriptions to the paper and sent them to my neighbors and friends. Although I am poor in this world's goods I am rich in the Abrahamic faith. I don't think that any of the brothers and sisters have done any more for the cause of Christ than I have according to my means. I have bought tracts and distributed them among my neighbors and friends. I will mention one certain minister that I bought tracts and sent to him, for some folks thought it might be he could be brought to the truth if he had some of the tracts, so I sent them to him and he told in the pulpit that some one had sent him a bunch of papers; but he said they would do to wipe razors on Now dear brothers and sisters, you can see how far the truth goes with some people. We can not make them believe and obey.

I will close by asking the prayers of all the faithful ones that I may hold out faithful until the end. If we never meet in this sinful world, I hope we will meet in a better world where there are no good bye's.

Your Sister in Christ.

Mrs. R. C. Elliott.

Funeral of Mrs. Hatch.

Because of her many years of infirmity few had opportunity to really know Mrs. Hatch at her best She was recognized as a kind, sympathetic neighbor, one who was ever ready to help to the full expect of her ability. She is also known as a woman of strong Christian faith, who did not fear death, but dwelt upon the resurrection hope, trusting that Jesus would come the second time to establish his kingdom under the whole heavens.

Eighteen years ago L. S. Hatch and family came to Crowley, being among the pioneers who came to reconstruct this land into the Rice Belt. The wife took upon her shoulders a full share of the pioneering difficulties, the two enjoying or suffering together the ups and downs so common to life. They came here from Nebraska, where they had pioneered for sixteen years in summer, in sand, in winter, long and dreary, in snow and ice, and never have they regretted their move southward. One year had they spent in Illinois on their way westward from Indiana, where they had been born, brought up and married. Here Martha J. Perkins was born February 21, 1846, and married in 1866. She died at her home in Crowley, Louisiana, February 8, 1906, aged 59 years, 11 months, and 18 days, and was buried in the Crowley cemetery, Saturday, February 10, 1906.

For about forty years Mrs. Hatch was a member of the Church of God, and the funeral services were conducted by a minister of that church. What do they teach? what was her faith? has been asked by more than one, and a synopsis of the main points of doctrine is proper here for a better understanding and appreciation of the deceased. They use the name according to the usage of the period of the apostles and early church, as shown in Acts xx. 28; 1 Cor. i. 2; x. 32; xi. 16, 22; xv. 9; 2 Cor. i. 1; Gal. i. 13; 2 Thes. i. 4; 1 Tim. iii. 5, 15, or more fully as the church of God in Christ Jesus, in 1 Thes. ii. 14. They consider this to be Christ's church and that all that are in Christ Jesus are members of this church. Hence they do not take in members but hold that men and women put themselves into it by the grace of God through a true faith and repentance and a baptism into the name of Christ for the remission of sins. In this way the Church of God has no sectarian or denominational connection, and members of other organizations that come under this description are recognized as members of this body of Christ, whether they themselves recognize it or not. As members they know each other as Christians, disciples, or brethren and sisters.

In faith they hold firmly to both the Old and the New Testaments, the former as a schoolmaster leading to the Messiah and often prophetic of him, the latter as a history of Jesus in his first sojourn upon the earth and a description of the faith and practice of the early church, and both prophetic in many places of the "Age to Come," which will not begin until the "First Resurrection" and will not be perfected until after the judgment period, when all wickedness shall have been cast into the second death and utterly destroyed. They believe in the Bible term "Hell" as gehenna, but not in the sense in which it is frequently held. They hold that hades, which is sometimes rendered as hell by some of the old translators, is merely the place of deposition of the dead and has no life in it. In a parable sense, as in the rich man and the beggar, popularly Dives and Lazarus, life is incidental only to secondary considerations, but the "Old Dispensation," represented by the rich man, dressed in purple and fine linen, ceases to be, is cast into hades; while the Gentile, begging for crumbs of God's truth, becomes the child and heir of Abraham through faith enters into the great bosom of Abraham, and carries the message of salvation In the hades state the house of Judah has often endured and is today in many places enduring the agonies of torment, while the ten tribes of Israel, the five brethren, seemed to have escaped.

The Church of God does not believe in an immortal soul, or immortal spirit, or ghost, inside of man and asserts that no such expression is ever found in the Bible; but no people feel more fully that every believer should be filled with the spirit of God and should love the truth with his whole soul. They hold that the Bible term for soul sometimes signifies the whole man and even animal, sometimes the mental functions, sometimes definitely the power of love. The word soul is often translated from one that means life and the word spirit from one that means breath. They say that when a few poor translations are removed there is no difficulty in understanding the Bible and all parts of it become harmonious. They hold emphatically that when they die they do not expect to go to heaven or to hell, but that they really die to be made alive again by the Word of God, by the call of Christ and the angels, at the resurrection.

This faith was strong in Sister Hatch for forty years. In it she gave up her last breath. Her life is hid with God. He has a way to keep in remembrance all her intentions. Whatever the "Book of Life" may be, in some way there is a record. She is asleep in Jesus and from this sleep she shall awake nevermore to weep. Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly. Amen.—J. U. Haupt in Crowley, La., Signal.

Life is not the work of one year, but of many. It is not a link, but a chain. It is a book of many chapters, but it is a continuous story, and each chapter is related to all the others. The excellencies and the unfoldings of life are but the developments of the plots in the easy chapters. The last is dependent on the first. If there is to be a climax of goodness in the closing chapters there must be goodness in the preface and the introduction.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

Evangelizing Notice.

I expect to make an evangelising trip to Arizona in December and return late in the winter or early spring. Any brethren that may be reached on or near the Southern Pacific R. R. between Portland, Oregon and Phoenix, Arizona, may secure my service by corresponding with me at Scholls, Ore., or Phoenix, Ari. I have cut loose from my farm and desire to devote my whole time to the work. Help to the cause will be gratefully accepted.

Teacher. The topic for our study tonight as previously selected, will be

THE ROOT OF TRUE CHRISTIANITY.

This lesson I apprehend you will find in the thirteenth chapter of first Corinthians. You have observed in reading the aforesaid chapter, that we find there an under-lying principle, which gives vitality to the whole Christian system, like as a tree derives its vital force from its roots. Now, what does the aforesaid chapter reveal?

Bessie. It shows this, that although a person may be gifted with the combined oratory of both men and angels, and it may hold its auditors spell-bound, as he portrays with an eloquent tongue all of the glories of the good time coming, which is so vividly given in the grand old gospel of the kingdom, and if divine love is not the inspiration of his tongue, it cannot amount to more than the sounding brass of a trumpet, or the clanging cymbal, which for the time being, may please the ear by a harmony of sound.

Q. Suppose then that men may become gifted students of prophecy, and be able to solve its deep mysteries, and besides all this, have faith sufficient to pluck up the everlasting mountains, and then lack the vital principle of love, what will it amount to, as far as the eternal inheritance is concerned?

A. The sacred Book replies: "Nothing."

Q. Well, suppose again, that a person should use his entire substance in the relief of the poor, and a motive foreign to that of love be the inspiration which inspires the charity, how will that affect his future inheritance?

A. The good Book says: "It profiteth me nothing."

Q. Well, then, suppose we propose a severe test, and suffer death by fire, on account of preaching God's message of life, and should a spirit of fleshly bravado, in place of a sincere love be the motive, which inspire the act, what will be the future reward of all such?

A. It is written: "It profiteth me nothing."

Q. Well, can you give some rule by which those who really have the root of the matter in them, can be known as having such?

A. Yes, we can.

Q. Please give the distinguishing characteristics?

A. We may know them, because love will lead them to "suffer long," and be kind, the spirit of "envy" will not be in their heart; they will not allow the flesh to be vainly exalted—"puffed up." Next, they will be orderly, they will not "behave" in an unseeming manner, they will not be always "seeking" their own personal benefit; they take no pleasure in seeing "evil" in others; they don't like to even "think" evil of any one.

Q. Is this the principle which tends to develop a character as above described which is as eternal as the great Creator himself?

A. It is. The chapter we are considering names three things which "abide," after the miraculous gifts of the spirit cease; but one of the three is as eternal as the Creator, and cannot cease.

Q. Please name it.

A. "Love never faileth; but whether they be (gifts) of prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be (gifts) of tongues, they shall cease; whether there be (gifts) of knowledge, it shall vanish away." "And now abideth (after the gifts cease) faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love."

We then have faith, which in the sweet by and by will be lost in sight, and hope, which has faith for its parent, will also be lost in fruition, but love will be intensified, and abide through the endless cycles of eternity.

Q. Why will this abide?

A. Because "God is love," and this divine attribute of his being permeates, and is manifested in all the works of his hands, and is the controlling principle of his dealings with men. It is his divine purpose to people the new earth only with inhabitants, in whose hearts this divine principle has found an abiding home.

Q. When should this divine principle begin to find a congenial home in us?

A. Right now. It is only the possessor of a pure heart, even the meek and humble followers of the blessed Jesus, that has the promise of seeing God, and having an inheritance in the new earth. Unless this blessed principle shall find an home in us now, it never will hereafter.

Q. How does this principle manifest itself in its possessor?

A. In adversity it is a stay and solace. It is even like to the vine with its graceful foliage which entines itself about the sturdy oak, and climbs up into the sunshine. So likewise, love with its caressing tendrils entwines itself about the heart, and lifts its possessor far above the dark and dismal swamp, into the cheering sunshine of God's blessed favor; and it also enables one to look far beyond the present, and by faith take an enrapturing view of the beautiful evergreen shore. I want this love in my heart, don't you my dear classmates?

Q. Does this love principle find a congenial response with the divine?

A. Nothing can equal it. Responsive melodies, break forth in transports of adoration and praise, which fills us with sweetness and harmony divine.

Q. Is its influence far-reaching?

A. It is. Even as the aroma of the sweet scented flower is not always confined to the garden whence it grows, but is taken up by the passing breeze and made to regale the senses of others, so evenso ,love is not a confined principle, but emits an influence which is felt by others, who come in contact with it.

Q. Then, this must be a valuable gem to possess?

A. It is even so. It is the priceless gem which sparkles in the crown of him whose god-like temples once bore in derision a circlet of thorns.

Q. Are those who sacrifice their money and time in the proclamation of this peaceful message considered blessed?

A. Yes, indeed. "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation, that saith unto Zion, thy God reigneth!" Isa. liii. 7.

Q. Is the gospel of the kingdom filled with the love spirit?

A. It certainly is. The grand old gospel of the kingdom (God's sole message of life) thrills the heart of believers as no other message can. It is a message of love and peace, it kindles music in the heart which shouts for joy. It lets the sunshine of God's love in. It makes believers love the brotherhood, who are of the like precious faith, and creates in them an anxiety to publish the glad tidings of good to others.

Q. Can this beautiful message of life carry the believer's mind beyond the storm-cloud?

A. There is nothing like it. Should clouds of inky blackness temporarily obscure our vision, it is then this glorious message—the sun of hope, emerges from behind the cloud, and laughs at the passing storm.

Q. Is it not a message of peace to the believer, whether in cloud or sunshine?

A. Yes, even now it calms the troubled sea, when raging billows would overwhelm us. And as far as the future is concerned, "thy watchmen shall lift up the voice; with the voice together shall they sing; for they shall see eye to eye when the Lord shall bring again Zion. Break forth into joy, sing together ye waste places of Jerusalem; for the Lord hath comforted his people, he hath redeemed Jerusalem." This blessedness is proclaimed only in the good news of the kingdom.

Q. What should be the attitude in life, of all those whose lives are now based on a higher plane, by and through the inspired love-message contained in the glad tidings of the kingdom?

A. The attitude should be a prudent righteous life in this age. Alas what else is there worth tying to in this life? Everything is changing and passing away. Did not proud Babylon, Palmyra, Thebes, Greece, Persia, Rome, Egypt, and other great empires arise, spread themselves in grandure, and are now gone, with scarcely a ruin left behind them, to tell of their former greatness. The face of the world is on the change. The tree falls and decays, even the rocks crumble and change.

Q. Speaking of universal change, what did Greenfield observe?

A. He said: "The firmest works of man are giving way,—the ivy clings to the mouldering tower—the briar hangs out from the shattered window. In the spacious domes which once held our fathers, the serpent hisses, and the wild bird screams. The hills which were once crowded with all that taste, science and labor could procure—which resounded with melody, and were lighted up with beauty, are buried by their own ruins, mocked by their own desolation. The voice of merriment or of wailing, the steps of the busy or the idle, have ceased in the deserted courts."

Q. With regard to the things of this present order, do we not find that everything, both animate and inanimate, are passing away?

A. We find that every thing animate advances in age, and passes off the stage of action. We are also conscious, that if the coming of the King of glory is delayed, in a few short years the measured strokes of the solemn funeral bell will announce our decease, to await the coming of him who is the resurrection and the life.

Q. Can any one arrest this onward march of change?

A. No one, except the King eternal. None can stop the onward march of the dread chariot of death. One by one we fall beneath its ponderous wheels. He blanches the ruddy cheeks, and quenches the fire of the eye, and commands the proud heart to cease its beats.

Q. Well, what is there that cannot be shaken, or pass away?

A. The gospel of the kingdom alone reveals that.

Q. Where can that be found?

A. In Heb. xii. 25-28.

Q. Please quote it.

A. "Wherefore we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably, with reverence and godly fear." This can never experience either removal or change. It is as enduring as the years of the Eternal.

Q. Who will be granted a home in this beautiful kingdom?

A. Obedient believers of the gospel of the kingdom, who are successful in developing the magnificent character of an overcomer. The character of an overcomer is to be admired, a writer once said, such a one is "a beautiful character, which reflects our Lord's pure, sweet image, and is the truest wealth. Moth and rust cannot corrupt it; thieves cannot steal it. It is the only possession that will stand the crucial test of trial and sorrow, and the fires of affliction and come forth as silver seven times refined; it is the only treasure which we can carry with us through the gates of the eternal city, into the pure sunlight of the eternal age. They are the messengers of mercy, who have the root of the matter in them. They are sunbeams which warm and cheer us, they melt the heart of stone. They are flowers full of odors; they leave only fragrant memories behind them.

I wish to say, that five hundred pages of copy of Pine Woods Bible Class book has now been revised, and is ready for the printer, as soon as I receive pledges to pay the expense. The sooner the responses come, the sooner it will be sent forth to proclaim the glad message of life. Please let me hear from you.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

Seventy-five More.

I receive enquiries as to when Pine Woods Bible Class Book will be printed?

In answer, I will say, when I receive seventy-five more subscriptions, the book can be printed, and sent forth on its mission, to teach the glad tidings. If all who really want it had said so, it could now be out sowing seed. When God's professed servants make his cause a secondary matter, and put it off to a "convenient time," his cause suffers. Now all who really want the book please sit down and write me, as soon as you have read this, and then things will move at once. Don't wait until a more convenient time. God's business demands prompt attention.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

All in the Past.

"These vexing things will soon be all in the past."—An old friend's Proverb.

"All in the past"—what matters it
That out of our reach some toy is tossed?
The vase knocked down from the mantel shelf,
The new dress ruined, the money lost?

"All in the past"—the cruel [illegible],
The slain ambition of youthful heart,
The friend estranged, the broken truth,
The slight that pierced like a cruel dart

All the troubles that vex us so
Soon move off to the misty past,
Though we feel to-day that our hearts must break
And cuddle our worries and hold them fast.

That dear friend's proverb—it helps and cheers
When the rain pours down and we cannot go,
When the child is sick and hands are tied,
And we miss so much that we want to know!

For time in truth with a tender skill,
Can lay her plasters on wounds like these;
'Till going off in a restful sleep,
We wake surprised at the wondrous ease.

And whether the snow or the rain may fall,
Ever and ever our days move on;
They wrap our woes in a winding sheet;
They bid us climb till the heights are won.

Random Thoughts. No. 19.

Dear Restitution:

We often hear people talk about religion and politics, that we should keep politics out of our religion, etc., that one has nothing to do with the other, but are entirely distinct. Now that depends on what politics you mean. If you mean human politics, you are right, but if you mean divine politics, you are wrong. Bible religion is a political religion. It relates to the government of the world. Shall God by his Son Jesus govern the world, or shall the adversary continue to do it for ever? God made the earth to be inhabited as we read. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him, male and female created he them. And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply and replenish the earth, and subdue it; and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth," etc. Gen. i. 27, 28. There was a man at the head of creation with dominion over all, subject only to his creator! Just one restriction, that was all, other than that he was lord of all. But it would seem that Adam and Eve were the same then as are his descendants now. If there is any one thing we must not have or do, that is the very thing we must do or have. Our parents did the very thing forbidden, and we see the result yet. But how about the dominion? By losing his life Adam lost his dominion, and from that time till now, God has put different men over different portions of the earth, till the time shall come for his Son to come and be King over all the earth.

God gave a part to the Israelites, made them a nation, gave them laws by Moses by which they should be governed. He himself being their King. Thus they were a kingdom. God appointed other officers for the different purposes of government under him. Their religion was a political religion, with their civil laws, criminal laws, sanitary laws, etc., all good laws. And the nations today are the best governed who draw most from the laws given to Israel. The officers God appointed to enforce his laws, who took pains to do as appointed were politicians! But the politics were divine politics. So today a Christian is a politician—he is seeking an office in the kingdom of God! I would not say then that religion and politics are diverse from each other, for the faith of the Christian is a political faith, it related to the government of a kingdom even the kingdom of God! Then there is no war between religion and politics, but the war is between human politics and divine politics; or between man's politics or government, and God's politics or government. Now let not my reader be shocked when I say our Lord Jesus was a politician! He proclaimed the gospel of the kingdom of God, and did many wonderful things to convince the people that he was God's Anointed (Christ) to be the King of that kingdom, and his disciples believed the gospel (good news) he preached and that he was the Christ (Anointed) and would be the King.

So two of them with their mother wanted a special favor of him, namely, that they should have two of the highest offices in the kingdom—one to sit on his right hand, the other on his left! In this they were a little previous. Such offices would be given to those best fitted or qualified for them, and they had not yet run the race, but were only just starting. But as they believed he would be the King, and they would have positions in the government, he taught them many things about his kingdom and laws.

Will my readers turn to what is improperly called the "Sermon on the Mount," which is neither a sermon nor was it preaching—we read nothing about sermons in the Bible—the word is not there, nor did Jesus or his apostles preach to disciples, but to others, and when they did preach they preached the gospel. But they taught the disciples, and so Jesus "seeing the multitudes ascended the mountain, and when he was seated his disciples came to him, and he opened his mouth and taught them, saying," etc. Matt. v. 1, 2. Then follows his discourse. He tells them of some differences between the old law, and the law by which he would rule the people in his kingdom, and as they were expecting to share with him in the government then, they must themselves be governed by these rules now. As they expect to enforce these laws in the kingdom of God, it is only reasonable, just and proper, that they should have had experience in the keeping of them themselves. As most of my readers are hoping and expecting to share with our Lord and his disciples in the government, let us all study well the lessons there taught and practice the same, lest we are like the man who built his house on the sand. God was quite particular that his law given through Moses should be obeyed, and every transgression and disobedience received a just retribution, then how much sorer punishment shall we deserve if we transgress or only neglect the law as given by his Son? And this both by the members of his body, the church during the present order of things, and by the people who will be subjects in his kingdom. After the Lord comes and with his saints shall reign over them, I feel pretty sure that the government will be a strong government and every law will be enforced. But what do we see today? How often do we see the laws, ordinances and commandments given by the Lord disregarded, and how many new ones substituted in their stead? The very names of many of the churches cannot be found in the Bible, and in addition to the unauthorized names of the churches, they also have other societies such as Christian Endeavor, Epworth League, Y. M. C. A., and a host of others of which the Bible says nothing—were Jesus and the apostles all behind the times? Neither of them could arise and come amongst us now would he recognize any one of the many as being the church he left when he fell asleep nearly two thousand years ago? Who changed the laws or customs? Jesus and his apostles preached the gospel of the kingdom, and baptized only those who believed, for the remission of sins, but now they baptize little infants or rather sprinkle a few drops of water on them, and call that Christian baptism?

In other cases they disregard the ordinance altogether and pray to the Lord to disregard his own law and forgive the sins of a very wicked sinner who had committed a most cruel murder. They labor with and pray for him, that the Lord would forgive him and save his never-dying soul from dying, and take him from the gallows to heaven! Thus they disregard God's plan or way of salvation altogether and substitute their own way. Our Lord has never promised to save, or forgive any man who did not believe the gospel and obey it. And this is done by most of the churches. But I have noticed that it is more often Catholic priests, for the reason, I presume that the murderer was a Catholic, or inclined that way, but even Protestants do the same. Once I remember it was a Protestant who did administer the ordinance of baptism. But in my opinion the murderer was a hypocrite and submitted to it, hoping to be let off, for when he found there was no reprieve for him, he on the gallows, repudiated all his penitance, and died a murderer on the gallows, as he was. I have very little faith in death bed repentance any way, and though many do, I cannot go to the death bed of any wicked man, and pray to God to save him without his believing the gospel and obeying it. If he is too far gone for that, I think it is too late. Besides, it is very seldom, if ever, that when a sick man or person repents on what he supposed was his death bed, but turned out not to be, but he recovered and got well, that he does not return to his former life or manner of living. I say, so far as my observation goes it is almost invariably so, and hence, as I said, I have very little faith in death bed repentance. The kingdom of God is the great thing in the whole Bible. Take all that is said relating to it out of the Bible, we would have scarcely a skeleton left. It is the first thing to seek, to preach, to believe, to obey, to pray for, to live for, and if need be, to die for.

In these Random Thoughts I have shown that that kingdom will be on the earth, beginning in Palestine and extending over the whole earth in time. That Jesus will be the great King, assisted in the government by his saints, who will then be like him. That the people then living will be the subjects in that kingdom, beginning with Israel, but extending till it included all nations. That the seat of government will be Mount Zion in Jerusalem, the capital city of the world. That the law or laws by which the people will be governed will go forth from that city. These are six of the seven items I started out with—1. Locality or place for the kingdom—the earth; 2. The King; 3. Officers or rulers; 4. The subjects; 5. Seat of government; 6. Laws; the other I have not yet given, namely, 7th, the time when the kingdom will be set up. When will that be? As this paper is sufficiently long I say at this time only, When the Lord comes with his saints. More anon.

GEO. ELTON.

Baptism not Sprinkling.—No. 3.

To believe a proposition without proof to sustain it is, to say the least, unreasonable. To believe a proposition when the strongest kind of proof is against it is surely worse. To believe that immersion of a believer of the gospel in water is Christian baptism, is the meaning of New Testament teaching, and in the light of the meaning of the word baptizo, as given by every Greek lexicographer of any note is accepting a proposition on the most rational grounds. A properly constituted mind must yield assent,—logically speaking. On the other hand to believe that rantizo or sprinkling a little water on the person is Christian baptism is most irrational because the term baptizo has no such meaning attached to it, and it is the term employed by the Spirit to enjoin the overt act of obedience to the gospel. A law commanding obedience must be plain, and not ambiguous as it would be, if it enjoined two forms entirely different.

In all subsequent references to the ordinance as practiced under divine direction this term is used—two exceptions occurring, one in Heb. x. 22, the other in Titus iii. 5. The allusion in these passages by the words "washed" and "washing" is to Christian baptism. The second text is to be understood in the light of the first. "The body washed in pure water" accords with immersion in water but does not accord with sprinkling. "Washing of regeneration" is the birth of or out of water. Neither of these texts furnishes any proof of sprinkling. The first is strong proof of immersion without using baptizo—another Greek term occurring here; but it is not rantizo. To believe and practice sprinkling is most unreasonable because the word rantizo does not occur in the commission as recorded by Matthew and Mark; nor does it occur anywhere, where it could be construed as having the same meaning as baptizo. In usage it no where refers to the act called baptism. It occurs but four times in the Greek New Testament, and refers to ashes and blood as sprinkled on persons and things as prescribed by the law; and once to the antitypical blood of Christ sprinkling the heart of the believer from a consciousness of evil.

To claim that John sprinkled his converts is the barest assertion, and in the face of proof of immersion. For hundreds of years the prevailing practice was immersion. So history records. Mosheim writing for the first century says: "The sacrament of baptism was administered in this century, in places appointed and prepared for that purpose, and was performed by an immersion of the whole body in the baptismal font." Church History Vol. I. p. 46. In his history of the practice of the church in the second century he gives proof to the same effect. Sprinkling had not yet been introduced. Joseph Mede remarking on Titus iii. 5, washing of regeneration—says: "There was no such thing as sprinkling of unbaptism in the apostles' days, nor long after."

These testimonies are confirmed by [illegible] to the observance of the ordinance in the writings belonging to the early centuries. Barnabas wrote, "We descend into the water laden with sins and corruption, and ascend bearing fruit, and having in our hearts the fear and hope that is in Jesus." That immersion in water continued to be practiced as the rite of Christian baptism till times far remote from the apostolic period, is so well established that there can be no disputing the fact. Calvin and Stuart, both sprinklers in practice, but well acquainted with the history of immersion of the early centuries, made no effort to prove that sprinkling was the prevailing form of administering the rite from John the Baptist and onward, nor did they boldly assert it as some others have done as though it needed no proof; but on the contrary made confession as to its origin. The former remarking on the baptism of the Eunuch (Acts viii. 38, 39) says: "We see from this instance what was the baptismal rite among the ancients; for they plunged the whole body in water. Now it is the custom for the minister to sprinkle only the body or head." The learned gentleman accounted for this deviation from the original practice by affirming that: "The church did from the beginning grant unto herself the liberty to change the ordinances somewhat." So we see how sprinkling came into practice on purely human authority. No one is able to trace it to apostolic authority. We may pertinently raise the question, How did Calvin learn that the liberty to change the ordinances dates back to the beginning? This would take in the apostolic period. No such grant can be found on the pages of the New Testament history. The fact is that the churches after they had in a large measure apostatized from the primitive faith assumed this liberty, and finally settled the question by discussion and vote. Prior to 1311, but long after the apostolic period, sprinkling was occasionally resorted to, yet it was not until the above date that the churches in council declared immersion and sprinkling to be indifferent; and not until 1648 that the question as to which was to be adopted immersion or sprinkling was decided. In the assembly of divines held at Westminster that year the question was keenly debated and voted on. The result was a majority of one in favor of the adoption of sprinkling, and even that small majority was acquired at the earnest request of Dr. Lightfoot, who had gained great influence in the assembly, (Edinburgh Cyclopedia). Think of this procedure, lover of truth! By a majority of one the appointment of the Son of God was set aside and sprinkling adopted in its stead.

This discussion was not with a view to ascertaining the meaning of the two words baptizo and rantizo, nor to learn from the history of the early church the prevailing practice. No, no. It was the question of the church's authority in the matter of making the change. These divines knew how sprinkling started from one clinical case, for which at the time no claim of apostolic authority and precedent were urged in favor of the substitution of sprinkling for immersion. The only reason assigned was the subject was sick and immersion might prove dangerous. Sprinkling came into practice slyly, cautiously and sparingly.

JOHN L. WINES.

At the Breaking of Bread.

After reading the 149th and the 150th Psalms.

The Lord is good to all and his tender mercies are over all his works. Gracious and full of compassion, slow to anger and of great mercy. Sing unto the Lord, O ye saints, and give thanks at the remembrance of his holiness. O love the Lord all ye his saints; for the Lord preserveth the faithful, he of good courage and he shall strengthen your heart. All ye that hope in the Lord, be glad in the Lord and rejoice ye righteous and shout for joy all ye that are upright in heart. O fear the Lord ye his saints for there is [illegible] him, for our hearts shall rejoice because we have trusted in his holy name. Thy saints shall bless thee; they shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power, giving thanks unto the Father which hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light, for we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, who are the called according to his purpose, because he maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God.

The saints in all this glorious war
Shall conquer though they die,
They see the triumph from afar
By faith they bring it nigh.

MRS. S. A. CRAWFORD.

"I WILL NOT FEAR". PSA. CXVIII. 6.

"The Lord is on my side; I will not fear; what can man do unto me?"

"The Lord is on my side." This phrase without any more comment is a great comfort. Whom could we want more than to know the Lord, All in all is on my side. But we are not contented until we tell the glad news to others. In any battle, how anxious the soldiers are to fight for the side that is right, and would be victorious. May we all strive to be on the right side, and the side we know will in the end be victorious. May we serve the One whose wishes will be done on all the earth. "I will not fear," what need of fear when we are on the right side? Psa. xxvii. 1.

"The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom will I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?" Psa. lvi. 4-11.

"In God I will praise his word, in God I have put my trust; I will not fear what flesh can do unto me. Every day they rest my words; all their thoughts are against me for evil. They gather themselves together, they hide themselves, they mark my steps, when they wait for my soul. Shall they escape by iniquity? In thine anger cast down thy people O Lord. Thou tellest my wanderings, put thou my tears into thy bottle, are they not in thy Book? When I say unto thee, then shall thine enemies turn back, this I know; for God is for me. In God will I praise his word. In God have I put my trust: I will not be afraid what man can do unto me." Psa. cxlvi. 5. Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God. If we have the God of Jacob for our help, he is sufficient for all our needs. Isa. lvi. 12. "I even I, am he that comforteth you, who art thou, that thou shouldst be afraid of a man that shall die, and of the Son of man which shall be made as grass. How very true it is it all our earthly friends forsake us, or turn from us, we have One who is ever willing to help and comfort us, so what need we fear? Heb. xiii. 6. "So that we may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man can do unto me." We may often be ridiculed by strangers from the covenants of promise, but we can tell the truth boldly and not fear.

My prayer is that we may rightly divide the Word, and scatter the seeds of truth for the honor and glory of our Lord and Savior.

Your sister in the one Faith.

ORA COLE.

"IN HOPE OF ETERNAL LIFE." TITUS i. 2.

In the first verse of our lesson we find that Paul is a servant of God, according to the faith of God's elect, and the acknowledging of the truth which is after godliness. Paul was not a servant according to a faith, or just any faith, but according to the faith. If it required the faith, a certain definite faith, to constitute Paul a servant of God, be assured it will require the same for any who become servants. Faith cometh by hearing the Word. Rom. x. 17. Then we can not be too careful about the Word, since hearing the Word is the means of justification. Rom. v. 1. Also the basis of our hope. Heb. ii. 1. Hence, we see how Paul is a servant of God according to the faith. Acknowledging the truth is to know [illegible] abideth forever. I [illegible] his own will begat he us, by the Word of truth." The same Word which Christ in Matthew xiii. 19, says plainly is the Word of the kingdom. The power of God unto salvation. Hence the acknowledging of the same in faith is the basis of hope. Paul, a servant of God, and an apostle of Jesus Christ according to the faith of God's elect, and the acknowledging of the truth which is after godliness. In hope of eternal life. Acknowledging the truth, the Word of the kingdom according to the faith, is the reason we have hope of eternal life. Notice the last sentence of the 1st verse, acknowledging the truth which is after godliness. Paul is a servant according to the faith which is after godliness. Acknowledging the truth will avail us nothing unless it is after godliness. Then let us be careful that the acknowledging of the truth is after godliness, that we may have hope of eternal life. Let us stand fast in one spirit with one mind, striving together for the faith of the gospel. This acknowledging the truth after godliness will not be accomplished without persistent effort on our part by exercising ourselves unto godliness."

"Holding fast the profession of our faith without wavering. . . . Considering one another to provoke unto love and good works." The night is far spent, the day is at hand. Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light, that we may have hope of eternal life.

WHEN you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana;" Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

The Restitution.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, FEBRUARY 28, 1906. NUMBER 8.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

More disturbances are reported in Russia. Also the Chinese are thought to be playing a double game, and that trouble will yet come from that quarter.

The difficulties in the way of agreement in Morocco matters grow rather than diminish. It looks at times as if Germany was determined to force a conflict with France. If this is done France will be supported by England. Germany is also accused of endeavoring to make trouble between the Sultan and England over African matters.

A World of Opportunities. No. 6.

There is no question of more real interest to the young people today than that of reading. What shall we read is the question? I read with much interest a magazine article written for the Woman's Home Companion by Jerome K. Jerome. In that article he says a great many good things. Mr. Jerome suggests that, "We read to get rid of our brains; not to think but to save ourselves the trouble of thinking." "The truth is that books, to be of any use—to be of any enjoyment even—must demand thought." "Literature is essentially an appeal to the intellect, not to the emotions. Books are the speaking of mind to mind." "A book either does good or it does harm. You cannot divorce literature from life."

In my boyhood days I was much interested in the short articles written Fanny Fern and those written by James Parton. I cared but little for romance. Our State (Ohio) at that time furnished a school library. It consisted mainly of histories, biographies and books of travel. I read many [illegible] profit. What [illegible] we can spend hours with them when they are at their best if we read and digest their works. What an honor and pleasure to have spent a leisure hour with Longfellow, Whittier or Holmes. Yet we may do still better than that by reading their works.

In these days of books, magazines and libraries we are compelled to choose the best from the rubbish. I am compelled to say, from observation, that light reading prevails among both old and young. We sometimes condemn publishers for furnishing such books, but they would cease publishing if the public would stop reading. Too many "read not to think but to save themselves the trouble of thinking." I met a young man about a year ago who had been a pupil of mine in a high school where I taught. "Do you know," said he, "that you changed my whole life by getting me to read a book of your choice and talking with me about it? When I first met you as a teacher I was reading the poorest of literature. You advised and insisted that I should read Ben Hur. I did it and it changed my whole life." I well remember this school. It was well advanced in mathematics but had no class in literature or civil government. Many had never read the Declaration of Independence or the Constitution of the United States, or State of Ohio. I taught there five years and have the satisfaction of knowing that I left a reading and thinking school. The most of our rural schools have libraries containing from one hundred to three hundred volumes. I notice that histories and biographies are among the books that have been read the least. While attending our Conference at Cleveland, O., last August I had the pleasure of meeting with Bro. W. H. Wilson of Chicago. He spoke very highly of "Drummond's Natural Law in the Spiritual World." When I returned home I secured this book and have read it carefully, and can recommend it to those who love good books. I was inspired to write two articles from thoughts gleaned from this author. "He that hath the Son hath life," and "Work out your Own Salvation." I may glean further from this source. Get it readers of The Restitution and read, and as far as you can digest it. To read without thinking is doing yourself harm. The mind should not be used as a rubbish room, but a place where we store away the most precious thoughts. A book should be read for the precious things in it.

Many young people do not like to read the Bible. They say I cannot understand it. Read Bible characters as you would other characters. Get interested in the life of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. What is more touching than Abraham's offering Isaac? Go with him on this journey. Write out as far as you can his thoughts during the time he spent while going to the place of sacrifice. Can you not imagine that while others slept that Abraham prayed and wept? Read the story of Joseph. Go with him on his journey to his brethren and be with him. Study the characters of the brothers. Study them carefully and I think you will say that it is interesting reading. Go with Joseph down into Egypt. Stop and think who sent him there and why. How did he behave himself while there? Did he not embrace the opportunity to do good? Read of his brethren coming to Egypt for bread. How he charged them with being spies. Get interested in the story. Read the speech of Reuben to Joseph asking for the relief of Benjamin. Imagine their thoughts when Joseph made himself known to his brethren. Can you not make the story of the life of Moses an interesting one? Paul says, Heb. xi., By faith Moses when he was born, was hid three months of his parents, because they saw that he was a proper child; and they were not afraid of the king's command. By faith Moses when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. Esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt, for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward. By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king; for he endured as seeing him who is invisible. Study the lives of the ancient worthies. The Bible contains more beautiful stories than any other book that you can read. Read the story of Esther and you will find it charming. Don't just scan it, but read and think. How hateful the plot to destroy the Jews, and how Esther [illegible] to save her people. "I will go in unto the king, which is not according to the law; and if I perish I perish," was a noble resolve. Our lives are made stronger and better by coming in contact with such characters. If the articles on "A World of Opportunities" shall cause our young people to think and act I shall be satisfied.

Question Found in Heb. x. 9.

"Then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first that he may establish the second."

I understand the question was: what is referred to as the first, that was taken away, and the second that was established? The principle object of Paul's letter was to give instruction to the Hebrews who were believers in the gospel, in order that they might not turn back and again place their confidence in the law, as there were many of their race who continued to teach the law of Moses as necessary to salvation; and Paul explains each part of their law by comparing it with the everlasting covenants of promise; he takes up the priesthood, the covenants, and the atonement, each separately; in this chapter the sacrifice is explained; in the first part of it Paul quotes from what David says in prophecy for the Lord; Psalms xl. 6, (quoted Heb x. 5, 6). "Sacrifice and offering thou didst not desire; mine eyes hast thou opened; burnt offering and sin offering hast thou not required." And then in the first part of the ninth chapter of Hebrews, after enumerating what the sanctuary for divine service contained, he says, verses 6, 7 and 8: "Now when these things were thus ordained, the priests went always into the first tabernacle, accomplishing the service of God. But into the second went the high priest alone once every year, not without blood, which he offered for himself, and for the errors of the people. Which was a figure for the time then present, in which were offered both gifts and sacrifices, that could not make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience." The reason for this is shown by Heb. x. 1 and 3 to 6, "For the law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually make the comers thereunto perfect. But in those sacrifices there is a remembrance again made of sins every year. For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and goats should take away sins." Then Paul quotes the following verse of David's Psalm what is spoken for Jesus in relation to himself, Psa. xl. 7 and 8 (quoted Heb. x. 7). "Then said I, Lo, I come, in the volumes of the book it is written of me, I delight to do thy will, O my God; yea, thy law is within my heart." Then he again refers to and repeats these two quotations, and tells what the result of their fulfilment will be in this way, Heb. x. 8, "Above (as he had already quoted) when he (Jesus) said, Sacrifice and offering and burnt offerings and offering for sin thou wouldst not, neither hadst pleasure therein; which are offered by the law;" and, "Then said he (Jesus) Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first;" or the ordinances of the divine service in the worldly sanctuary by which the priests offered sacrifices for themselves and for the people; already quoted Heb. ix. "That he may establish the second." "A new and living way, which he has consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh." Heb. x. 20. "For by one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified." Heb. x. 14. When Jesus came as David had spoken for him, to do his Father's will, he well understood that his Father did not desire ordinances of only an outward form, which but represented the true and higher moral law of a pure character. "Yea, thy law is within my heart." The life of him who lived not under the law, but above the law, was a living sacrifice of his own will or mind in subject to the divine will of God, as well as being an acceptable sacrifice in death. In the fifteenth chapter of Romans Paul says "he pleased not himself." And John v. 30 Jesus says: "I seek not my own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me." And the following verse to the one under discussion, Heb. x. 10, says: "By the which will we are sanctified, through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all." So when he said, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God, he took away the sacrifices and services which were representations to establish the higher moral law, i. e., to do God's will, and to offer one sacrifice acceptable to God which would bring satisfaction and redemption for his people, for he said I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil the law. Matt. v. 17. "For if the blood of bulls and goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh; how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God? Heb. ix. 13, 14.

From these Scriptures I conclude that Jesus took away the ordinances which gave the people of Israel access to God by a continual offering of sacrifice for sins by the priest; and established for not only the house of Israel, but for the household of the seed of Abraham by faith, Jew or Gentile, a means of access to God by the offering of himself without spot, or the marginal reading without fault, or faultless, to God; and was made a high priest forever, who instead of entering into the sanctuary once a year, entered into heaven itself there to appear in the presence of God for us. "Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them. For such an high priest became us who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens; "Who needeth not daily, as those high priests, to offer up sacrifices first for his own sins, and then for the peoples; for this he did once, when he offered up himself. For the law maketh men high priests which have infirmity; but the word of the oath, which was since the law, maketh the Son, who is consecrated forevermore." Heb. vii. 25 to 28.

Whatever burden or care we take to Jesus, if we would get the peace promised, we must leave it with him as entirely as a child leaves his school troubles with his mother. We must come away and treat it as a finality. We must say Christ has taken this, Christ will see about it, and then we must stop worrying and thinking about it.—H. B. Stone.

The Watchers.

It is often remarked by those who scoff at the doctrine of the near advent of Christ, that "it cannot be true, because there are so few that believe it." But this is no argument at all. The watchers set at end of changing dispensations have always been few. There was but one lone man at the end of the antediluvian age to warn a whole world of approaching judgment.

There may have been quite a little band when he first started, but if there was, they one by one dropped away when the looked for catastrophe had apparently failed to fall, on the predicted day. Ridicule and sneers, made them ashamed to be found in the company of the good Noah. Was he not alone? The great crowd believed the other way. Such a miracle as the fall of the firmamental ring, could not possibly happen; they would go back with the crowd." They went back and perished.

And so it was at the first advent. But few watchers were posted on the hill-tops by the great Jehovah. But they were faithful. They knew the time of their visitation. Like Noah they believed God, and escaped at the destruction of their nation, going out of Jerusalem before its fall. The faithless ones perished in the Roman flood.

So it is now—a faithful few are warning men of coming judgment. It needs not many, but they are God's watchers. Let the world heed or perish.

Who Was Melchisedec?

Paul says "Melchisedec king of Salem. Priest of the Most High God." First, being by interpretation king of righteousness and after that also king of Salem, which is king of peace."

"Without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days nor end of life, but made like unto the Son of God, abideth a priest continually." Heb. vii. 1.

Ben Ofiel, a learned Jew from Jerusalem says, that in excavating in Egypt a library of Pharaoh, who was king at the time Abraham lived, was found, from which it was learned, from a message sent by Pharaoh to Abraham and his reply thereto, that Melchisedec was appointed by God, king and priest, and did not therefore inherit these offices from his father or mother, or any one else, hence without father or mother, so far as these offices were concerned.

The library consisted in writings on brick, which were hardened by fire. It has also been learned from writings found in this library, that Salem is the same as Jerusalem.

Watchfulness.

"Who can be always on the watch?" say some, keeping away from known transgression, from unreasonable connection and intercourse with the ungodly, and from all those objects which most easily induce men into sin, is a part of watchfulness, and a part which every Christian must perform. Another part is being continually employed in something good, or agreeable to the will of God, as this is also within human reach. A third part of watchfulness is laying in a store of reason, religion and the word of God. He who is thus careful will leave but few opportunities for temptation. A mind well stored with the promises, threatenings, and warnings of God, will not easily be surprised into temptation or drawn into sin; but with the sword of the Spirit, that is, the Word of God, the Christian shall become more than a conqueror.

Editor Restitution:

While at Rush, Mo., last October, the advisability of building a new church house was talked about, as the longer meetings were held the larger the congregations became. It was not urged very strongly, as the brethren are all poor. However I have received a letter stating that the house is completed, and they have fixed the day when the dedication is to be as March 10th, and they want me to come and preach.

It just took these brethren four months to build a nice cosy church to worship in. Though poor people, and in the winter time, they have accomplished this labor. They are indeed rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which is promised to them that love God.

This church is six miles west of Fredericktown, near the gravel road, meeting is to begin at 11 o'clock a.m. March 10th, and a cordial invitation is extended to all interested to attend.

The Pope a Failure.

In an instructive article in The Christian, Dr. Alex Robertson, of Venice, discusses the question, "The Pope a Failure." He tells us that this idea is "taking more and more shape in the minds of the Curia, is being uttered in bitterness of heart by many of the more outspoken of the Cardinals, is being lament by the Jesuits, is common talk in Rome, and is known and acknowledged in many courts in Europe." Sarto is "low-born, uneducated, uncultured, untraveled." "He was brought up in a back cabbage yard, and lived in it all his life till he became Pope. Then, when he was elected to the post, he was suddenly called to take the reins of a world-wide political organization—the Roman Catholic church. He was expected to grasp the policy of that church. That is as varied as the characters of its subjects are of different races and lands. He was called on to arise to the apprehension of interests that affect nations and continents. He whose mind (naturally good though it is) had been occupied all his life with petty village gossip and intrigue, and matters that affected a handful of peasant peasants and shopkeepers, was suddenly called on to raise his eyes from the clods of the fields and look abroad on the peoples of the earth. The change for him was bewildering, was stupefying. He could not rise to it. And the result is, what anyone could foresee, that his foreign policy if he has one, is a failure. France is lost to the Papacy; Austria and Hungary are up in arms, and are forsaking it; South America is discontented; Spain and Portugal have their grievances; the intelligence of Italy is more hostile than ever. Of course, in Italy, the Pope is working harder than ever. He is working exclusively in Italy. The village policy he adopted when a priest, and a canon, and a bishop, and afterwards when Patriarch in Venice, he is trying to extend to the whole country. But that policy is a very short-sighted one."—Bible Standard.

The Most Expensive Saw in the World.

What are probably the most expensive saws anywhere, says a writer in the Philadelphia Ledger, are those in use in the factories of Pennsylvania where various articles are manufactured from slate. In one of these factories there are three hundred horizontal saws, twelve feet in length, each of which is furnished with seventy-five cutting diamonds, each saw being worth five thousand two hundred dollars. The slate used for roofing is split and turned by special machinery; but when the slate is cut up for use in other ways the procedure differs. The huge horizontal saw with its scores of diamonds, is called into play; it is lowered upon a block of slate by a ratchet at the rate of a quarter of an inch a minute. The saw would cut through iron or steel at the same rate.

The workman plays a stream of water upon the slate to keep it cool and wash the dust from the cut. After the sawing the block is pinned by being moved back and forth, under a firmly fixed chisel. It is afterward polished much as blocks of marble and granite are.

Two Good Hands.

When I was a boy, I once became interested in the subject of inheritances. I was particularly anxious to know what my father's inheritance was, so one day, after thinking about the matter a good while very seriously, I ventured to ask him, and this was his reply:

"My inheritance! I will tell you what it was. Two good hands, and an honest purpose to make the best use in my power of my hands, and of the time God gave me."

Though it is now many years since, I can remember distinctly the tones of my father's voice as he spoke, with both of his hands uplifted to give emphasis to his words.

Many a boy does not receive a large inheritance of money or lands; but every one has a pair of good hands, which are better than thousands of money. And the good purpose to make the best use of them is in every boy's power. Remember this wise injunction, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might."—Life and Light.

Editor Restitution:

In support of Brother Winco's contention, in his excellent article on Baptism in last issue of The Restitution, as regards the translation of Matt. iii. 11, I quote us follows: "I, for my part, baptize you in water to teach repentance." Twentieth Century New Testament.

"I indeed am immersing you in water unto repentance." Rotherham's Emphasized N. T.

"I indeed immerse you in water unto repentance." American Bible Union N. T.

I will also quote Rotherham's translation of Luke xxiii. 43, as it probably would be of interest to many of your readers: "And he said unto him, Verily I say unto thee this day; with me shalt thou be in Paradise."

I might also mention the fact that Dean Alford in his revision of the A. V. of the N. T. makes a foot note on the word "soul" in Matt. x. 28, which reads "Or life; see verse 39." In verse 39 of this chapter the same original word is twice translated "life" that is rendered "soul" in Matt. x. 28, A. V.

A. Robinson.

"Don't be saving. Can I do this, and can I do that?" or "Is it any harm?" Christianity is not a no harm religion. When you face a question, don't stop to ask, 'Is it any harm? but ask, 'Is it any good?' If you study your Bibles carefully and pray faithfully, trying to be a winner of souls constantly, you will neither be barren nor unfruitful. Keep away from the danger line. The devil has practiced on this old world for over six thousand years now, and he is pretty skillful at his trade. His joints never get stiff; he never has the rheumatism, the asthma or neuralgia. I never heard of his being short of breath, and if you get over his dooryard playing tag, sooner or later he will beat you and get your tag. But work for the Lord Jesus, and the devil will have no power over you."

There is no failure wherever the gospel is preached. I don't say that results are everywhere visible. God never promises that he will put results of gospel preaching into a multiplication table. But this is certain, that wherever God sends the man and opens his mouth with his message, there is no failure.—J. Robertson.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

A World of Little Things.

A little trill of laughter, a chord in nature's song;
A little deed of righteousness to stand against the wrong;
A little duty heeded; a little honor won;
A little hill surmounted, and a little kindness done;
A little labor daily; a little prayer and praise;
A little act of kindness to gladden weary days;
And so the whole creation to its ceaseless lesson sings,
For little man is living in a world of little things.

A little hope to cheer us, although it waiteth still;
A little fire for comfort when winter nights are chill;
A little dream, God-given, to bless us on the way,
A little welcome waiting us at ending of the day;
A little purpose shining through every dear web-woof;
A little love for sweetness, to spend the rue;
A little peace surpassing to which the spirit clings,
For little man is living in a world of little things.

A little hope, a little love, a little toil and test;
A little glimpse beyond the veil, a little problem guessed;
A little faith, a little doubt, a little blinded trust,
A little halting journey, and a little crust;
A little knowledge merely of little ways we wend;
A little dream of home awaiting at the end;
A little struggling upward although on broken wings,
For little man is living in a world of little things.

Difficulties of any Theory of Unbelief.

I know the objections raised, the suspicion surmised, the prejudices appealed to; but I also know that there are difficulties in unbelief as well as in belief. It is often supposed that there are no difficulties trailing after denial: that some belief is not professed or implied when another is rejected.

But he who denies the antiquity of the Pentateuch will be required by that denial to believe some things which stagger reason and forbid faith. The very denial will compel him to adopt a positive opinion respecting the origin of the Pentateuch, which will draw after it difficulties more insoluble and facts more incredible, than the plagues of Egypt or the refluent waves of the Red Sea. For he must believe that an unbroken chain of writer from the days of Josephus to the time of David, including philosophers, historians, poets, prophets have quoted different books under the same title, and containing the same laws expressed in the same words; that between the translation of the Septuagint in the golden reign of Philadelphus, and the time of the prophet Malachi, about a century, this "Book of the Law of Moses" was mostly written and palmed off upon the Jewish Scribes as of Mosaic origin and gravely translated by them into Greek, at the command, or that between the time of Malachi and the time of Ezra about half a century more, some one or more of the returned exiles constructed a work, which received the approbation of both prophets and rulers, people and priests, by whose laws their fathers had been guided; or that Ezra himself codified and published the national laws under the title of the "Laws of Moses," or invented nearly all of them, and succeeded in making the people receive them as such, either by gross fraud or because they really were of Mosaic origin, and yet his history makes no mention of such a wonderful work in narrating the invaluable services rendered to the people by this efficient ruler; or that a century before Hiskiah and Shaphan imposed a code under the name of "The Book of the Law of the Lord by Moses," upon King Josiah and all the nation, and that Hezekiah had no such "Book of the Law of Moses," as the historian affirms, and that Amaziah did not quote from it when he said "as it is written in the Book of the Law of Moses," and that Jehoshaphat did not send out scribes to teach that book when they "took the Book of the Law of the Lord with them," and that Jehoash had some other book under the name of "The Law" given him when he was anointed king, and that David did not refer to it when he charged Solomon to have regard to what "is written in the Law of Moses."

He must believe moreover, that different books and different codifications of the laws of the people from time to time are thus referred to, when not one lisp in the whole history or poetry or prophecy of the nation can be found to that effect. He must believe that the nation was so stupid as to permit it, and its historians so careless as not to mention it either to the honor or the disgrace of any scribe or king. He must believe that in the time of Ezra or Josiah a writer succeeded in imitating the ancient style of the Mosaic age so perfectly that all the scribes and priests were deceived into the belief that it was the work of Moses, even when there was no evidence that he ever wrote such a book, or that such a book had ever existed in the nation.

Nay more, that all its complicated and burdensome laws were received at once and adopted as the code of the nation, because they believed them to be of Mosaic origin, and submitted to the severe discipline which these laws imposed: without once questioning the authenticity of the book or the authority of the law-giver. He must believe that the writer not only invented the accounts of the building of the tabernacle and wearisomely repeated them, and also introduced the repetitious descriptions of the offerings and the consecration of the sacred things but he must believe that he could luckily hit upon or skillfully invent those numerous undesigned coincidences which are scattered all along through the book, so evidently unobserved by the writer himself. He must believe that the writer—guilty of one of the grossest impositions ever practiced upon a people—was never suspected, much less accused of fraud; but that his spurious work was received and adopted without a word of complaint, suspicion, or hesitation by a whole nation.

He must believe that no "Book of the Law" was in existence during the reign of David, and that all the historians, prophets and poets who have referred to it in an unbroken series, from his time down to the time of Nehemiah and Malachi, Siruch and Philo were mistaken, or else he must believe that a gross corruption of the old copy was made, and made in so skillful a manner that no one detected it then, or can now tell with any certainty the new portions that were added to the old book.

The learned men of Jehoshaphat, the scholarly priest and scribe of Josiah, the noble Ezra, the skillful Nehemiah, never suspected the fraud, never discovered the cheat. Nor did the prophets Joel and Hosea, Isaiah and Jeremiah, Haggai and Malachi, have a suspicion that "the Law," "the Laws of Moses," "the Law of the Lord," on which they based all their predictions and to which they appealed in confirmation of all their threatenings and promises, was a mere collection made from age to age of the laws of the Nation, and attributed, by a pious fraud or illiterate mistake, to their great deliverer, Moses, to give them sanctity and power over the people. Surely a louder curse would have leaped from the fiery lips of Isaiah upon the head of such a deceiver than he ever uttered against the hypocritical priests who "trampled the courts of the Lord," yet such must be his belief who disbelieves.

Adopting the Canon of Hume, that of two miracles we should believe that which is the less marvellous and incredible, I accept the miracle, if it be one, of the Mosaic origin of the Pentateuch, rather than the theory which makes it either the growth of centuries or the work of a modern Jew of the time of Ezra. The difficulties attending the last theory are vastly greater than those which surround the first. As easily could I believe that the basaltic pillars which compose th. Giant Causeway were the work of the fabulous race whose name they bear, and not the production of the earth's central fires.

I believe, then, that the Pentateuch is a work of the Mosaic age, and largely the work of Moses himself; that it has come down to us with few, very few dislocations, interpolations and corruptions; and that it will be handed down to coming ages as an admired monument of the wisdom, learning, and arts of that remote age—as a monument of an early revelation of the divine will, to restore and elevate the race. I believe that the more thorough the investigations are which are directed to the examination of this book, the more profound and searching the scholarship which is devoted to the inquiry of its age and authorship, the more successful the endeavors of the explorers of the ancient monuments on the Nile and the Tigris in exhuming sculptured tablets and opening tombs whose walls are pictured history, the more brilliant the success of the Rawlinsons, the Layards, and the Hinckses, the Smiths and the Sayces, in deciphering the cuneiform inscriptions on the walls of the palaces of the successors of Ninus, and of Wilkinson and the Lepsiuses and the Mariettes in interpreting the painted symbols and hieroglyphic histories in the tombs of the Pharaohs contemporary with Abraham and Joseph and Moses, the more certainty will be given to the conclusions which I have reached, or, at least, to which I have pointed the way: that the Pentateuch is substantially of the Mosaic age, and largely either directly or indirectly of Mosaic origin.—Rufus P. Stebbins in Higher Critics Criticised.

The Bricks of Babylon.

When you are going to and from school and pass a pile of bricks in the street, or see them rising in the walls of a new building, you probably never stop to think that the shape and material of them had its origin in the brains of men at least ten thousand years ago.

Truly, did you ever stop to ask yourself, "What gave a brick its form, and why was it first made?"

Professor E. J. Banks, of the University of Chicago, and field director of the recent expeditions to Babylon, has answered the questions in a very interesting manner. I give you herewith some of his statements, taken from a very lengthy interview on the brick and its origin. He says:

There is a Hebrew tradition that, when the early people of the world were in the plain of Shinar, which, in later years, became known as Babylonia, they wished to build a tower, but in the soil, which was much like that of our western farms, they could find no stones.

Still the idea of putting up this tower kept constantly in their minds, and some bright person among them suggested that they take the clay by the river banks and shape it like stones, and then let the sun bake it. This same bright person also found pitch in hot springs of the land and mixed this with the clay, and that made it hold together better and bake harder.

The excavations which the University of Chicago has been conducting in Central Babylonia, where the most ancient ruins known to the world exist, show the origin and development of this first brick, and, therefore, of bricks in general. The temple hill at Bismya is a mound of ruins standing very high above the surface of the desert level. The highest layer of this heap of ruins contains bricks bearing the name of Dungi, a king who lived 2,750 years before Christ. A short distance below this layer of bricks are the bricks of the famous Sargon, who, a few years ago, was regarded as the oldest king known to history. He ruled 2,800 years B. C. But below these bricks are still other walls, which, it is quite evident, were constructed out of bricks manufactured 4,500 B. C.

Then, below all these, are the remains of bricks of a still earlier civilization, and the ruins of the lowest layer I can only estimate to represent a period not far from 10,000 B. C. In this vast accumulation of ruins we have discovered nearly fifty varieties of brick, illustrating clearly their evolution from the beginning to the brick which is now employed by the modern building.

In the several lower layers of this temple, the walls which appeared were of unbaked and unmolded clay. Similar walls are still employed in the huts of the modern desert Arab. At a higher level, representing the period of about 6,000 B. C., were found small blocks of white limestone, the only durable building material which was known. Although from the earliest times the Babylonians were acquainted with the burning of pottery, it seems that it was not until the beginning of 5,000 B. C. that it occurred to them that bricks could be burned, and it was probably the difficulty of transporting stones from a distance which brought the idea to their minds.

The first bricks were mere chunks of clay, roughly formed by the hands without a mold, and laid upon the ground to dry before being baked. Thus they were flat upon the bottom with low edges, rounded corners and a high, convex upper face. Later, a wooden mold was adopted, and then the makers began to mix the clay with straws. The convex bricks were usually laid upon edge and set in mud of bitumen. Lime from the hills from the east of Bagdad was employed as mortar at a later date.

The brick inscription, or mark, seems to be as early as the brick itself, and it kept pace with it in its development. In ancient Babylonia it was not the manufacturer who stamped the brick, as in modern times, with his name to advertise his business; it was the king who would perpetuate his name, or distinguish his work from others by adding to it a special mark. The first marks upon the bricks came from the workman's fingers, probably accidentally, as he drew his hands over the clay to smooth it. The finger marks gave the suggestion, and soon a large, deep imprint of the thumb appeared regularly upon the rounded surfaces of the early bricks.

Other builders varied the marks by punching in the upper surface one, two or three holes with the tip of the finger or with the end of a small, round stick. It was only when the mold was adopted that a systematic marking appeared. The royal builder who originated the system, distinguished his bricks by having his workmen draw a finger lengthwise along the upper surface. The next builder to distinguish his work from his predecessor drew the groove diagonally instead of lengthwise. The third one drew two diagonal grooves intersecting each other and forming a St. Andrew's cross.

So the changes continued through the ages. It was during the reign of the great builder, Sargon, that the long, grooved brick developed into the immense square brick. It was also in his time that the groove gave way to the more satisfactory inscription containing the name and title of the king, and the name of the building in which the brick was employed. The inscription was sometimes written, but more frequently it was imprinted with a terra cotta stamp.

The square shape given to the brick Sargon was adopted by all of his successors, but the size rapidly diminished. When it became quite small, its shape was adopted by the Persians and continued by Haroun-al-Raschid, the hero of the Arabian Nights, and today it is the only shape used in Mesopotamia.

Placing inscriptions upon bricks continued to the end of the Babylonian Empire, and was adopted by the Persians, and even by the exiled Jews, who built cities in Babylonia. Of the interesting discoveries which have been made in the old city of Bismya, that of the evolution of the brick is not the least important.

One of the ancient bricks discovered contains this inscription from a king who lived 3,800 B. C.:

"Ur- Engur,
King of Ur,
King of Kengi,
Who the Temple
Of Bel
Has built."

It is valuable to know in this connection that the brick-making methods of the ancient Indian tribes of South America, of Central America, and of the southwestern portion of the United States, were practically those of the old dwellers by the rivers of Babylon. In fact the processes were so similar that the common origin of these widely separated races has often been suspected; but a more unexplainable thing is the fact that the aboriginal residents of the northern part of the United States and Canada never were brickmakers, never knew how to make brick, and to this day, although partially civilized, show no aptitude for the work.—H. I. Cleveland.

Red Sea and the Nile Joined by a Railroad.

The new railway between Port Soudan and Berber, connecting the Red sea and the Nile, has been opened by Lord Cromer.

His lordship in his opening speech said that order and tranquility had been brought about in the Soudan in recent years, and schools and law courts had been established, but it was no less true that the serious development of the country began from that day.

So long as the country was separated from the rest of the world by a waste of burning desert, and so long as communication could only be kept up by a line of railway and river steamers over a distance of 1,200 miles—for that was the distance from the mouth of Athara to Alexandria—any very rapid progress was out of the question.

The distance from Berber to the sea would now be shortened by nearly 900 miles. The new railway, which was 325 miles long, had been finished in fourteen months at a cost of more than $7,000,000, an accomplishment which did great credit to Colonel Macauley and the engineers who had been engaged on it.

It would create a trade which without it could never exist, and would open out the Soudan to the world, and there would be no differential rates or duties to favor the trade of any one nation. Moreover, it brought within easy reach the upper regions of the Nile valley, upon which the material guarantee of Egypt rested.

The railway was the first step in the gradual execution of a large scheme for the construction of works of public utility, among which were the railway from Kareima to Abu Hamed, which would shortly be completed, irrigation on a great scale in the Kassala country, the opening up of Kordofan, and the establishment of communication between El Obeid and Omdurman.

The new port, and the railway which was that day opened, would be open on equal terms to the trade of the whole world. Undesirable elements might come into the country with it, but he trusted to Sir Reginald Wingate to counteract their influence by careful and wise measures.

Sound agricultural banks might compete with the usurer. Wise legislation might put some check upon the excessive sale of drink. Care and judgment in the disposal of government lands might do a great deal to nullify any harm done by the more company-monger. He did not doubt that all those subjects would receive the full attention of Sir Reginald Wingate, of whose past services to the Soudan he could not speak in terms of too high praise.

Lord Cromer concluded by declaring the railway open in the names of King Edward and the Khedive.

College Men's Ideas of God are Varied.

College boys have peculiar ideas about God, as was found out recently by a professor of psychology at Bryn Mawr college, who is making a study of religious psychology. He has been using as subjects of experiment only persons who can give in any way a clear expression of their ideas of the Supreme Being, and the professor's latest attempt for information was made at Columbia University. He requested the Columbia Faculty who were most intimate with psychological matters to put the following questions to the boys in their elementary courses:

"Do you conceive of God as an impersonal being or a personal being?"

"What differ[illegible] tween a personal and an impersonal being?"

"Under what image or images do you think of God?"

"What difference would the non-existence of God make in your daily life?"

Prof. Herbert G. Lord, of the Columbia faculty, placed the questions on the board in the lecture room and devoted a regular period to getting the answers in writing. Forty-two of the forty-five students who received papers gave replies.

Of those who did answer the questions twenty-two said that their conception was impersonal. Four of the students expressed doubt as to the personality or impersonality of God, giving their ideas in a very general sort of way. Limitations of all varieties were added to the various opinions.

Probably the most striking results were obtained in the answers to the last of the four questions, the one relating to the possible non-existence of God. Thirteen of the college boys said that it would not make the least bit of difference in their daily actions if they did not know of the existence of a Deity. The others admitted that there would be a difference, but were not all agreed as to what sort of a difference it would be. The replies ranged all the way from the man who did not think it necessary to say his prayers to that of the more devout person who conceived a total destruction of life if God did not exist.

Most of the students attempted to sum up their ideas in a very few words. The longest answer was that of a senior, twenty years old, who said:—"I imagine God is impersonal so far as bodily form is concerned, but as personal in regard to quality and character. I think of God as the embodiment of ideal human qualities combined with superhuman ones, such as omnipotence and omniscience. The corporality of God is for me an image, for I cannot conceive of anything without a body, but the qualities seem real to me. If God did not exist this would not affect the results of our actions. It would, however affect my ideas. I should think of the universe as a humdrum unsupervised thing. All the charm of life would be gone."

A more religiously inclined student, who said that at the end of the present year he would enter a theological seminary, said:—"I think of God as a personal being, but my conception of a personal being does not involve the possession of any physical characteristics. I do not image God at all. If I did not believe in the existence of God I should not say my daily prayers and think I should be a little bit looser in my conduct."

The necessity of something to believe in apparently impressed a sophomore of nineteen years more than anything else. He said:—"I think that if I did not believe in God I would probably believe in something or some one else. If it were not an ideal spirit it would probably be an idol or a person or a superstition. Hence, as I would still be guided by some belief, it would not make any material difference in my actions."

Conception of God that bear the imprint of childhood's teachings are the following given by juniors:—"I think of God as an old man with white and flowing beard. The thought of his non-existence would be accompanied by a terrible feeling of loneliness. It would make no difference in my course of conduct. As a small boy I thought of God as being a large man and always dressed in white, that is, a sort of white robe flung over his shoulders. Now that I am older I am not sure how I think of God. I feel that he is not simply a man, but I think of him as some sort of an all-provident being."

Still another personal conception is as follows:—"I think of God as a person under two images, first as Christ, the perfect man, the shepherd of mankind as I have seen him in some painting. The other image is less definite, it is rather of a being sitting at the top of an enormous arc and looking over the universe."

A Jewish student of the junior class said:—"God is an impersonal being who exists in nature—is nature itself. I cannot conceive of him as an image. His non-existence would make no difference to me as I believe in the Golden Rule, and it is not a fear of the hereafter that keeps me from doing evil."

Students who show traces of rather complete study of some of the philosophers rendered the following opinions:—"God is decidedly impersonal. I think of God under no image. I dislike the term as it has become [illegible] built for myself a system of morals which I have gotten from experience in my environment. This system is sufficient to keep me a respectable member of society. My conception of the unknown something which seems to be the controlling force of nature is impersonal. I seriously object to calling that something 'God,' because that name is connected with religious worship. If I could conceive of a personal God I should become devoutly religious."—Selected by P. Neill, in Cleveland Press.

The Natural Man.

Some men are lazy and hard to get along with. When you try to arouse their energies they become angry, as they do not care for themselves, and do not wish to see others become anything. If they would only devote their time to the welfare of their fellowmen in the belief of the gospel, they would make all about them far more pleasant.

My mother takes THE RESTITUTION, and this is my first attempt at writing for the press. I am a true believer of the gospel of the kingdom and the promises made to Abraham, and will be baptized as soon as some brother comes along who can perform the ceremony. My whole desire is to be in the service of the Master.

Evangelizing Notice.

I expect to make an evangelizing trip to Arizona in December and return late in the winter or early spring. Any brethren that may be reached on or near the Southern Pacific R. R. between Portland, Oregon and Phoenix, Arizona, may secure my service by corresponding with me at Scholls, Ore., or Phoenix, Ari. I have cut loose from my farm and desire to devote my whole time to the work. Help to the cause will be gratefully accepted.

CHAPTER 22.

1. Thus saith the Lord, Go thy way and go down into the house of the king of Jouda, and thou shalt talk there this word;

2. And thou shalt say, Hear a word of the Lord, thou king of Jouda who art seated upon David's throne, thou and thy house, and thy laity and those who go their way in by these gateways.

3. Thus saith the Lord, Do judgment and righteousness, and take the one who is being robbed out of the hand of the one who is wronging him, and not oppress an orphan and widow, and do not be irreverent and do not shed innocent blood in this place.

4. Because if ye shall do this word kings seated upon David's throne and riding upon chariots and horses, they and their courtiers and their laity will also go in by the gateways of this house.

5. But if they do not hearken to these words I have sworn by myself, saith the Lord, that this house shall be in desolation.

6. Because thus saith the Lord against the house of the king of Jouda: O Galaad, thou my sovereign head of the Libanos, I shall make thee a desolation, cities that will not have been inhabited;

7. And I shall lead upon thee a destroyer, a man and his battle-axe, and they will cut off thy cedars and cast them into the fire.

8. And nations will go through this city, and they will say each one unto his neighbor, Why did the Lord do in this wise to this great city?

9. And they will say, Because they forsook the covenant of the Lord their God, and worshipped other gods and did bond-service to them.

10. Lament not for the dead nor threne for him; lament for the one who is going his way out, because he will not return any more nor see the land of his father's native place.

11 Because thus saith the Lord in respect to Selleem, son of Joosias, who is reigning as king in the place of Joosias his father, and who hath gone out of this place; he will not return any more here;

[redacted] have

[redacted] who buildeth not his house with righteousness and his upper-rooms not with judgment rendered, is in the estimation of his neighbor working for nought, and he will not pay him his wages.

14. Though thou hast built for thyself a symetric house, upper-rooms fanned with bellows, made open with windows and finished in cedar and stained with ochre,

15. Reign not as king, because thou hast been provoking in Achaz thy father; they shall not eat and they shall not drink; it were better for thee to be doing judgment and righteousness.

16. They have not comprehended, and they have not done judicially to the lowly nor in a judicial way for the needy. Is this not your not knowing me, saith the Lord?

17. Lo, there are no eyes of thine nor is thy heart good; but unto thy selfishness and unto innocent blood to shed it, and unto iniquities and unto n order to do them.

18. Therefore thus saith the Lord in respect to Jooakeim son of Joosias king of Jouda and in respect to this man; they shall not publicly mourn for him with "O brother," nor shall they lament with "Alas, O lord."

19. With the burial of an ass will they bury him; scraped together he will be cast out beyond the gateway of Hierousaleem.

20. Go up into the Lebanon-range and shout, and in the Basanitis give thy voice and call for help unto the limit of the sea, because all thy lovers have been crushed.

21. I talked to thee in thy slipping way of error, and thou didst say, I will not hearken; This was thy way from thy youth up; thou didst not hearken to my voice.

22. A wind will shepherd all thy shepherds and thy lovers will go out in captivity, because then wilt thou have been put to shame and dishonored by all thy friends.

23. Dwelling in the Libanon range nesting in the cedars, thou wilt be full of sighing when woes (birth pangs) come upon thee like as of a woman bringing forth.

24. As I live saith the Lord though Jekonias son of Jooakeim king of Jouda should have become an impress of a seal upon my right hand, from there shall I pull thee off: (off from the throne of David there in the Libanon-range).

25. And give thee unto the hands of those who seek thy soul, from before whose face thou dost show respectful fear, into the hands of the Chaldeans namely.

26. And I shall cast thee away and thy mother who brought thee forth into a land where thou wast not brought forth, and there will ye die.

27. And into the land, for which they vow by their souls, they shall not return.

28. Jekonias hath been dishonored like a utensil for which there is no further use, because he hath been rejected and cast out into a land which he hath not known.

29. O land, O land, Hear thou a word of the Lord;

30. Write this man of mark a mere man heralded out, because there shall not grow from his seed a man to sit upon David's throne, a ruler any more in Jouda.

COMMENT.

In 2nd verse "laity" instead of "servants" R. V. and "those who" instead of "thy people."

In 3rd verse near enough, but not exact.

4th verse instead of "he and his servants and his people" "they and their courtiers and their laity."

5th verse "but if they do not," etc. instead of "but if ye do not," etc. and "in desolation" instead of "become a desolation."

6th verse "against" instead of "concerning," "O Galaad," etc. instead of "thou art Gilead," etc. This is address not a statement, obviating the insertion of and "yet" by the R. V. Also "sovereign Head" instead of "head" merely.

7th verse "a destroyer, a man" instead of "destroyer," "and his battle-ax" instead of "every one with his weapons"—no word for "choice" in the text and "lead" instead of "prepare."

8th verse no word for "many" and "through" instead of "by."

9th verse "did bond-service" instead of "served" merely.

10th verse "lament" for "weep" and "threne" for "bemoan" no word for "sore."

11th verse "Seleem" instead of "Shallum."

12th verse "the place where I have [redacted] instead of "the place whither they have led him captive."

The 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th and 17th verses do not even convey an approximate thought of the text. Read and compare. Instead of a commendation of Achaz as a father or progenitor of Seleem he, Seleem, is condemned "in him" first and then for himself and his own sins.

Read the history of Achaz in the book of kings and his condemnation then and there also. Heredity cuts a figure in this prophecy.

In the 18th verse the R. V. omits "and this man" following "Iehoiakim" or "Jooakeim" in the text. There is no "Oh sister" in the text or "Ah his glory."

In the 19th verse "drawn" should be "scraped together."

In the 20th verse it should read "and call for help unto the limit of the sea" instead of "and cry from Abarim" and "crushed" instead of "are destroyed."

In the 21st verse "in thy prosperity" should read "in thy slipping-way of error."

In the 22d "surely" should be "because" and "confounded for all thy wickedness" should be "dishonored by all thy friends"—a good reason for being "ashamed."

In the 23d verse there is no "how greatly to be pitied" in the text, but instead "thou wilt be full of sighing," etc.

In the 24th verse "Coniah the son Jehoiakim" should be "Jekonias son of Jooakeim." Who would know that this was the same person called by another name elsewhere—for instance in 1 Chron. iii. 16 "an impress of a seal (or signet) instead of "the signet," etc., and "thence" does not refer to "right hand" as in C. V. but to "the throne of David."

In the 25th verse there is no "Nebuchadrezzar king of Babuloon" in the text.

26th verse well enough.

27th verse "their soul longeth to return" should be "for which they vow by their souls."

In the 28th verse "Jekonias" again instead of "Coniah" and no text for "broken and despised" nor "wherein there is no pleasure." Read and compare—and no text for "and his seed."

In the 29th verse the address is to "the land" not "the earth."

In the 30th verse—no text for "childless" nor for "shall not prosper in his days" and "there shall not grow from his seed to sit," etc. instead of "no man of his seed shall prosper sitting," and what has become of "heralded out" that is in the text?

CHAS. GARDNER.

Report of Meeting.

On the evening of Jan. 17. Brother L. E. Conner commenced a series of meetings at Clarksville, Iowa, in the Christian Church, and continued to the end of the month. He gave us 15 discourses. We had good weather nearly all the time. He was greeted with a good audience at nearly every meeting. The interest was intensely good from the start, and although the house was full many times yet the order was so good that you could have heard a pin drop on the floor, so anxious were the people to catch each word that fell from the speaker's lips. Many people that seldom attend any church, were there nearly every evening, and seemed to be very much interested.

Many expressed their regrets when the meetings closed, and they are asking nearly every day when he is coming back. A good many church members are asking what is the reason we never saw it that way before. Their ministers are starving them to death for the bread of life. The common people would gladly listen to the great Bible truths if they only had a chance. Brother Conner has awakened a great interest, and we think if he would come back in the near future that much good could be done, as quite a number are investigating to see if these things are so. He did partially promise to come back some time in March, and we hope he will.

The M. E. people were holding meetings when we began ours, but they soon closed for the lack of an audience as a great many of their members attended our meeting. Intelligent people of different sects said if they only had a man that could preach like that there would be satisfaction in going to church.

How thankful we ought to be to our God that we were permitted to hear and believe the great truths which are able to make us wise unto salvation, and may we ever strive to so live that when the Master comes we may hear the welcome applaudit Well done thou good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord, is the prayer of

Seventy-five More.

I receive enquiries as to when Pine Woods Bible Class Book will be printed?

In answer, I will say, when I receive seventy-five more subscriptions, the book can be printed, and sent forth on its mission, to teach the glad tidings. If all who really want it had said so, it could now be out sowing seed. When God's professed servants make his cause a secondary matter, and put it off to a "convenient time," his cause suffers. Now all who really want the book please sit down and write me, as soon as you have read this, and then things will move at once. Don't wait until a more convenient time. God's business demands prompt attention.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Our Refuge.

"God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble."—Psa. xlvi. 1.

"There is a point of rest
At the great center of the cyclone's roar,
A silence at the secret source of sound,
A little child might slumber undisturbed,
Without the ruffle of one fairy curl,
In that strange central calm amid the mighty whirl.

So, in the center of the roar of life,
Cyclone of power, consuming, fiery, fierce—
As we fall overwhelmed
Upon our faces, and are lifted higher
By his great goodness, and carried nigher
Than man, or seraph, or angels, full we stand
Even in the hollow of his hand
Nay, more! we lean upon his breast—
There, there we find a point of perfect rest
And glorious unity. There we see
His thought—to us toward, thought of peace
That stoops in boundless love."

PSALM CXLIX.

Praise ye the Lord. Let the saints be joyful in glory, let them sing aloud upon their beds. Let the high praises of God be in their mouth, and a two-edged sword in their hand; to execute judgment upon the heathen. Who are these saints that are to judge the nations? Paul speaking to the church at Rome says, I commend unto you our sister, which is a servant of the church, that ye receive her in the Lord as becometh saints, and he sends greetings to all the saints at that church. And again the church at Macedonia sent contributions to all the poor saints Rom. i. 7, To all that be in Rome, beloved of God called to be saints, to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be saints. These references prove who the saints are—they are God's children, heirs with Christ, sanctified or set apart for a work, and what is this work? Let the high praises of God be in their mouths, and a two-edged sword in their hands, to execute vengeance upon the heathen, and punishments upon the people, to bind their kings with chains and their nobles with fetters of iron, to execute upon them the judgments written, for when Jesus comes with all his saints, the kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together against his Anointed, saying, let us break their bands asunder. But God has said, I will set my King upon my holy hill of Zion, and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession. The subduing of the kingdoms of the earth, is the work of the saints, to execute upon them the judgments written. This honor have all his saints. 1 Cor. vi. 1. Dare any of you having a matter against another go to law before the unjust, and not before saints? Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world, and if the world shall be judged by you, are ye unworthy to judge in the smallest matters? Know ye not that we shall judge angels? This honor have all the saints. Praise ye the Lord. The apostles were promised that they should have twelve thrones, and judge the twelve tribes of Israel—the nation of Israel. This honor was given them for obedience to the gospel. The gospel makes wise unto salvation, and the judging of Israel will be for glory and salvation. O let the saints be joyful in glory, for the work of restoration will be a glorious work, the work of putting down all evil and filling the whole earth with the glory of God. For when the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints to execute judgment upon all the ungodly, then will the saints take the kingdom and rule in righteousness. Dan. vii. 22, Until the ancient of days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High, and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom, and the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him, for when his judgments are in the earth, then will the inhabitants of the world learn righteousness. Lord, thou wilt ordain peace for us, and the work of the righteous shall be peace and assurance forever, all thy works shall praise thee and thy saints shall bless thee, they shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power to make known unto the sons of men his mighty acts, and the glorious majesty of his kingdom. Read Rev. xxi. and xxii., for a description of the glorious majesty of God's kingdom, which Christ and the overcomers will inherit, for he that overcometh shall inherit all things. O the glories of God's kingdom, and how plainly they are revealed. When we read the wonderful story in God's Word, we like David, the sweet singer of Israel, are filled with awe and reverence, and with him exclaim, Praise ye the Lord. Let the saints be joyful, let the high praises of God be in their mouth. Let every thing that hath breath praise the Lord. Amen.

THE RESURRECTION.

At our last Bible study, taking as a lesson help, Lesson 4 of the eight page double column tract by Bro. Wiley Jones, the part of 1 Thes. iv. was read, the part that assures us, who have believed and been baptized, Mark xvi. 16, that if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, so should we also believe that those who sleep in Jesus, he will bring with him. To this end, he, the Lord himself, shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God. And the dead in Christ shall rise, and those who are alive—in Christ—shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air. This part of Scripture was somewhat largely commented upon by all present, by both believers and enquirers, and all finally agreed that Jesus the Christ, the seed of Abraham has not yet received the things God promised him through Abraham. Gen. xxii. 17-18; and through David Psa. lxxxix. 34-36, and his mother Luke i. 31-33.

A portion of the 15th chapter of Paul's first epistle to the Church of God at Corinth was read, wherein he declares emphatically that Christ is risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept. Considerable attention was given to the latter part of the chapter treating of the change, at the resurrection, from corruptible to incorruption, and from mortal to immortal, showing conclusively—to the faithful—that, not only was Jesus Christ raised from the dead, but so also will all those who have fallen—or will fall—asleep in Jesus, and will be able to say—with those who have been changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye—"O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" This story of the resurrection was well discussed by all, many thoughts expressed, ending in all being agreed that this was the truth concerning a resurrection from the dead, and not the exclamation of the liberated soul at death of the body, as generally taught.

There were some questions—as usual on such occasions—as to what was thought or believed concerning all being raised—everybody—several thoughts were freely expressed, after which the writer gave a little of his experience on the subject of resurrection as follows. Finding myself in a meeting house, a good while ago, those in charge had been informed that their preaching elder would not be present that day, on account of sickness in his family. I was asked what my views were, or, What are your views on the resurrection? I replied, If you put that question in other words, perhaps I can give you an answer. I was then asked, Do you believe that all the dead will be raised? Answer, no. My questioner was disturbed. I said, permit me to ask a question—granted. I then asked. If we—you and me for instance—do not have a part in the first resurrection, so clearly and kindly taught in Rev. xx. of what interest or value will there be in any other resurrection for us? He asked me to wait while he consulted. He did so, and coming said, I guess you are all right, will you preach for us? I said, I will preach the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. He replied, preach what you like. I did, and was invited to come again.

In our study we then turned to Acts i. Much pleasant interest was shown in the statement that Jesus showed himself alive, after his passion—resurrection, by many infallible proofs, and further, that, while he was answering the question of his then—at that time—restoring the kingdom to Israel, he was taken up, but to assure, and reassure those he left as witnesses, God sent two men in white apparel to say that this same Jesus would come again, in like manner as they saw him go. Dear readers, when he comes, may we hear him say, Well done.

P. NEILL.

Notes by the Way.

I have just concluded a series of meetings near Quinlan, Oklahoma, which, as far as results are concerned, were very satisfactory.

The meetings consisted in a series of eleven discourses, most of which were illustrated by charts, made to enforce and illustrate the several topics introduced to the attention of the audience. This method I find in my experience, carries home the truth preached, with double power, through both the ear and the eye. I also find from experience, that this method both entertains, and also instructs the hearers. It works like a charm with the young people and also with children.

One mother came to me and said, "Why Mr. Wilson, it is wonderful what power you have over children, they like to hear you talk." She said, "My little boy eight years old insists on coming to meeting every night, and he will have a hard crying spell if we refuse him. He says 'I don't understand what the other preachers say, but I do understand Mr. Wilson.'" This volunteer testimony encouraged me. I thought, well, if I can make the Word of truth plain enough for children eight years old to comprehend, surely adults ought to perceive it. It soon became manifest to me that they did understand it. My audiences were often as large again as their own ministers draw in this neighborhood. Their interest was manifested by the very close attention which they gave to the Word spoken. One lady said to me, Mr. Wilson, I could listen all night to such preaching, and not get tired. She told me that something, which I had said, she had been looking up at home, and found that they were just as I said.

I should say that there must be at least, some eight persons in the audience, in whose hearts the good seed of the kingdom has found an abiding place. Of course there were no baptisms. I did not expect it, the seed must have some time for development. I feel as sure as I live though that by holding more meetings there after awhile in this neighborhood I could plant a small church in this community. This is a new locality, we have only one isolated sister living here, which is our highly respected Sister Gates, she is an excellent worker in a private way, she talks to her neighbors, and distributes printed literature.

I had a number of questions asked me privately for information. On Sunday afternoon two of these visited at the home of Sister Gates, and husband, and they still further asked questions, and expressed their thankfulness and appreciation.

Even the sick, who could not walk, was brought to hear the good news of the coming kingdom proclaimed. This certainly did touch my heart. God bless the afflicted ones. There will be no affliction when the King comes, and removes the curse. Let us work, pray and strive earnestly to spread this glad news.

When the meetings closed, these interested people flocked about me, and with a hearty hand shake bid me God speed and blessing, with thanks, for the light given. I did not hear of a single one who took offense, although I fearlessly preached the truth with the greatest plainness of speech that I could command. I refrained, however, from any criticism of denominations who differ from us, the hearers see and draw the conclusions themselves. We need to do that.

I recently had a similar experience in two other places in Missouri, where isolated ones live. I need not relate them over as they are so similar.

I was helped by some of the Household of faith scattered abroad with the expense to go to Quinlan, otherwise I could not have gone. I have no salary from any Conference, hence, all I do receive must come from contributions. Now, dear ones in Christ, did not your contribution pay a good interest on your investment in Quinlan, and other places which I might name, which means sent me to tell the good news to the perishing? You will never loose your reward. I never yet asked any one for a cent for the Lord's work. I think it is enough to give my time, and what talent I have to the work, and then leave the rest to the will prompting of you[illegible] do the rest. I can go where there are congregations, and they are able to carry the expense, but these isolated ones, in new fields, cannot do this. New fields, however, are the most profitable. There will not be for some time as many baptisms in new fields, until the seed sown has had sufficient time in which to germinate. On Feb. 27th I go to another new field, which is Boise, Oklahoma. At this place also we have only one sister in the faith, who is poor in worldly goods, but rich in faith. It's my purpose to sow the good seed of the kingdom at that place also, and I am expecting God to add his approval and blessing to it.

I next go to Texas, I have several isolated calls there, in one of which is an isolated sister, who says she has not heard a gospel sermon in thirty years. I will go to these places also, if I can have finances enough to do so. If I do not receive it, then I cannot go. I am just going to do my own part, and leave you to do yours. You certainly ought to have as much interest in this seed sowing as I have. I despise begging. If I have to beg in order to stay in the field, I will quit it, and take up secular work. I am a printer by trade, trained to it by my Uncle Benjamin Wilson, who now is asleep in Jesus.

After I shall get through in Texas, I expect to go to Louisiana, and finally end up by a visit with my Pine Woods Bible Class at Hammond. I then expect to go home for a brief rest, and see to the printing of my Pine Woods Bible Class book providing I find that I shall have by that time enough subscriptions on hand to barely pay the expenses of getting it out.

Oh, how I do love the precious work of the Lord, I want to see it move right along. I have an intense desire for the great consummation to come, when this present evil condition of things shall give place to the happy and glorious condition of things so clearly pictured to the mind in the Blessed Hope.

We now want earnest men and women who are thoroughly educated as to how to rightly divide the Word of truth, who have the natural ability as public speakers, to herald the glad tidings to a perishing world. As to worldly education, a good common school education is sufficient to make a creditable presentation of the same. It is a useless waste of good time and money to send young men to colleges and universities, to receive a worldly polishing before they can become heralds of salvation to sinners. I don't believe God will add his divine blessing to such a worldly project. God's business requires haste, earnestness and vigor. We don't need a worldly polished priesthood, who can fraternize with ministers (as "Christian brothers.") who preach and sustain the Satanic delusion taught in Eden's fair bowers.

Dearly beloved, sinners are perishing for the light of life, which we profess to have, and I think it would be actually sinful, to waste four years time to give some young man a worldly polishing before he can be sent with the message of life. Then the seven hundred and fifty dollars spent for the polishing of one young man, might be made the means of saving one hundred sinners, if it were given to capable heralds that we now have, who are actually idle for want of means to sustain them. Then put aside all worldly pride, and let us come down to sensible, practical, earnest work in the vineyard of the Lord.

It makes me feel so keenly that I can hardly express myself in a temperate manner, when I realize the sad fact, that we have had earnest and capable evangelists, who have spent the vigor of manhood in preaching the glad tidings to sinners, who were not supported, and who in old age came to poverty, and still were neglected, and then in anguish of mind, have finally been driven into insanity. With the coming of the blessed King of Peace near at hand, and sinners hungry for the Word of life as I know they are from my wide experience as a general Evangelist, then don't let us divert the money into other channels which is so much needed now for the support of Evangelists now in the field, and others not actively at work.

We have also the printing press, a mighty agency for publishing the glad news, which should be used. We have also our paper, THE RESTITUTION, which is our means of intercommunication, one with another. The cause would suffer fearfully without it. It must be sustained. These present necessary essentials must be cared for first, above anything else. Then it will be best to lay aside any fanciful project, which may come up, until such a time as we shall have a surplus of money on hand. I never expect to live long enough to see that day.

I live, however, in joyful anticipation that our warfare is now nearly over. Oh, how I do long to see that glad day. How I do long to take by the hand dear loved ones who now sleep in Jesus, then clad in the beauteous garment of immortality, with the curse also lifted from God's fair creation.

Dear ones in Christ, above all things, let us live pure and holy lives, and become living sacrifices for the blessed Christ.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.
W. H. WILSON.

Editor Restitution:

I will write a few lines to let you know that I have not forgotten that the dear, old RESTITUTION is published in Plymouth, Ind., and as my time has expired I think it high time that I was giving an account of myself. I cannot think of doing without the paper. I enjoy its weekly visits so much, in fact I would feel lost without it. I love the name, "RESTITUTION" because there will be "a restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Acts iii. 21.

By reading the paper I have been able to see and understand many blessed truths. I thank God that he has removed the veil from my heart and caused me to see the truth, for the truth alone can make us free, also that we have so many able writers.

I used to read the Bible because I felt it my duty, being a church member, but since I have come to understand God's plan of salvation, there is nothing that gives me so much pleasure as to read my Bible and to search out God's mind towards us. Jesus said, Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life and they are they which testify of me. It seems to me that there are very few who search, for if they would search carefully and prayerfully they would be able to see better. How can any one see the truth when, if they read the Bible at all, they read with their eyes blinded with prejudice. Now I think we must get everything of a sinful nature out of our hearts before we can be acceptable in the sight of God. He knows our hearts better than we do, besides, we must overcome everything that is worldly. Jesus says, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne." Rev. iii. 21.

Few people think it necessary to give up worldly things when they go into the church. We can see no difference in them so far as their daily walk is concerned, they still mingle and mix in all kinds of worldly amusements, and if anything is said in regard to the way they are living, they make the reply, "I think my chance for heaven is about as good as anybodies," just as if our thoughts on the subject amounted to anything. Our thoughts are no guide in matters of religion. Jesus himself said, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." Matt. vi. 24. Paul says, "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption, but he that sows to the Spirit shall reap life everlasting." Gal. vi. 7, 8. And again, "Walk in the Spirit and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh. Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these, adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulation, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murder, drunkenness, revelings, and such like, of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom. But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, against such there is no law. And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts. If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit. Let us not be desirous of vain glory, provoking one another, envying one another."

Now, I must ask our kind Editor to pardon my delay, and hope I have not worried your patience with this long letter, I often feel just like talking to some one about these things. "They that feared the Lord spake often one to another and the Lord hearkened and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels." Mal. iii. 16, 17.

I am as ever in search of the truth.
MRS. A. J. MARTIN.

WHEN you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MARCH 7, 1906. NUMBER 9.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Plymouth, Indiana, March 7, 1906.

A letter from Brother Joblin of Cleveland, O. says that "our light afflictions have been much heavier of late, but there is a rift in the cloud now." Brother Joblin would enjoy answering all inquiries by letter were he able to do so, but his strength will not permit of its being done, hence his friends will take no offense at this method of informing many of his condition. Brother Joblin has sent us another one of his addresses, which we take pleasure in presenting to our readers.

Some few months ago Brother Geo. Moyer wrote an article for The Restitution, and promised to write further on the same line. He now writes us on March 5, from Waterloo, Iowa. During the Holidays he made a trip to his old home in Indiana, intending while in the State to make us a personal visit, which event we had anticipated with great pleasure. However it was not to be, for Brother Moyer was taken sick, and endeavored to return to his home in Clarksville, but only reached Waterloo, where he has been lying near to death's door from the effects of pneumonia. He fell into good hands, and is slowly recovering. We hope that by the kind providence of God he may fully recover, and be able to write some more articles, and perhaps visit us at our home. The latch-string is always out for you Brother Moyer, not only at our home but at many others in Plymouth.

Russia is now using her utmost endeavor to prevent a rupture between France and Germany over Morocco. France claims the right to "police" Morocco, and control her finance, basing her claims upon the preponderance of her interests, owing to her adjoining territory. England has recognized this, and been willing to have matters so arranged. Of course Russia has always practiced this principle, gradually "absorbing" all that was next to her. Germany has denied these "rights," and demands a union of forces controlling such cases. It looked as if the conference would be adjourned without agreement, but in steps Russia on the side of France, in an effort to force Germany to see as others see. This is not friendliness for France that Russia feels, but a purely selfish move. She must borrow a vast sum of money. That can only be arranged through German and French bankers. A rupture between these two powers will render making such a loan impossible at present. Hence Russia's anxiety for peace. Should this principle be forced on Germany, her future attitude toward Holland and the Netherlands can easily be guessed—and who shall say her Nay? The outlook for universal peace is not very bright. The student of prophecy only sees in it all the hastening of the day when the King of Righteousness shall come and untangle the snarl into which the nations are tied, and Himself bring in the long looked-for Reign of Peace. Our prayer is, Lord hasten the day.

Sunday Morning Address.

Dear brothers and sisters,—We are one week nearer home than when we last gathered around the Lord's table; and, as voyagers on the ocean of time, I thought it would be profitable to take soundings to see that we are not liable, without a moment's notice, to be cast upon some rock-bound coast and be dashed to pieces, or to take our latitude and longitude to make sure we are heading for the port we set sail for. In plain English,—what progress have we made in the narrow way of life? To begin at the very bottom round of the ladder,—are we sure we have not given the enemies of the Lord occasion to blaspheme? A fearful thing to do, but, misconduct on our part will do it. 2 Sam. xii. 14 Secondly, If correction is grievous to us when we do wrong, for that is proof that we have forsaken the way of the Lord. Prov. xv. 10. Thirdly, have we been partakers of other's sins, by sympathizing with them in wrong doing. This is positively forbidden. 1 Tim. v. 22. Fourth, Have we walked worthy of the God who called us? 1 Thes. ii. 12; Col. i. 10; Eph. iv. 1; Jas. ii. 7. Fifth, All who are baptized into Christ undertake to do the work of the Lord. Is this fact ever present with us, that he who does the work of the Lord negligently (margin) is cursed? It is even so; Jer. xlviii. 10 says so; as also 1 Sam. xv. 3-9, 22, 23. Sixth, As the flesh wars against the Spirit,—it becomes us to see how the battle has gone since the year commenced. Have we made any headway against the flesh? Can we labor for God heartily while suffering reproach for it? A personal matter with every one of us. 1 Tim. iv. 10. Seventh, Being reviled, do we as Paul did, bless,—and as our blessed Lord did, commit himself to him who

JUDGETH RIGHTEOUSLY?

Being persecuted, do we suffer it? Being defamed, do we entreat the defamers? Have we begun and are we advancing in the practice of these divine principles? If not, we are in a sad plight? 1 Cor. iv. 12, 13. Eighth, Have we arrived at the point where we can entirely trust God to avenge wrongs,—or, do we sometimes take matters into our own hand and thus dare to assume his prerogative? Rom. xii. 17; I Thes. v. 15; 1 Peter iii. 9. Ninth, Do we heed the divine injunction to keep our heart,—that is, our affection,—with all diligence because out of it are the issues of life? A vital question this. Prov. iv. 23. Tenth, Do we heed the advice of our Lord and Master by watching and praying,—or do we neglect it, and find ourselves speaking and acting unadvisedly in consequence of this? Let us look carefully into these things lest the Lord coming suddenly he find us unprepared.

This is by way of a prelude. Now, with the hope of further profit to the household I invite attention to Phil. i. 8, 9: "For God is my record, how greatly I long after you all in the bowels of Jesus Christ; and this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and in all judgment, or sense, as in the margin—or in all perception as rendered in the Diaglott. In eastern idiom the bowels or viscera were used much as we use the word heart for affection and tender feelings. This is in beautiful harmony with the apostle John in writing to the well beloved Gaius, to whom he says, "For I rejoiced greatly, when the brethren came and testified of the truth that is in thee, even as thou walkest in the truth. I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth." In some humble measure I know how to sympathize with the apostles, in this respect. I trust I have been by God's favor of some assistance to many of you, if not all,—in pointing you to the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world; and God is my record too, how I long after you all in the tender sympathies of Jesus Christ,—and nothing distresses me more than to see those who to all appearances enlisted under the Banner of the Cross with determination to fight the good fight of faith, and at last lay hold on eternal life,—no; nothing distresses me more than to see such grow so cold and half-hearted that their seat in the family circle is often empty for weeks together; and besides this recklessness regarding their own everlasting interests,—they strangely seem unconscious of their duties to God and his cause, which they took upon themselves when they took upon them the sin-covering name of his Son. Oh, it is painful in the extreme to see them act as if utterly oblivious of the fact that they professed to have been bought with the precious blood of Christ,—and so delivered themselves over to the purchaser with all they have and are,—that time, talents, everything are to be used for the glory of God. Oh, when I think that the closing scenes of the age are close upon us and the command may go forth at any time,—gather my saints unto me,—those who have made a covenant with me by sacrifice,—it is awful to contemplate the terror, the horror, the consternation of those who discover when too late, that they have been dead while having a name to live,—dead while legally having a name that should assure them of all the honor and power and glory it is God's purpose to bestow upon those who are faithful unto death. But alas, their lamps have gone out. The oil of the Spirit of the truth has been exhausted; at midnight the cry comes, —and only those who are ready go in, —they cry in vain for admittance.

Happily we have those whose walking in the truth gives us joy. Because, although not perfect, it is evident that their hearts are right,—their faces are set Zionward and their aims and objects are upward and onward in the life divine; and are ever ready for every good word and work.

Coming to the 9th verse we find the Apostle saying to the Philippians, "And this I pray, that your love may abound more and more in knowledge and judgment, or discernment, or discrimination, that ye may approve things that are excellent,—that ye may be sincere and without offense till the day of Christ. Being filled with the fruits of righteousness, which are by Christ Jesus unto the glory and praise of God." This was the prayer of Paul for those at Philippi for whom he so greatly longed in the tender sympathy of Jesus Christ. There are two points in the 9th verse that I will confine my remarks to. The first is:—

Our love to God can only abound through knowledge of him. We can only love a person as we know him to be possessed of amiable or praiseworthy traits of character, or at least believe or think him possessed of them. "I pray," says the apostle, "that your love may abound more and more in knowledge and in all judgment." You will see from this that the same principle holds true of our relations with God, "Acquaint now thyself with him and be at peace;" is the way it reads; and from this we know that enmity to the Lord largely comes of ignorance of him is a great measure—alienated from the life of God through ignorance is another Scripture in point. Ignorance is apt to breed both suspicion and superstition. It allows one to see just enough of God to be perplexed, and estranged,—not enough to have perplexities relieved. It encounters his stern attributes of justice, as displayed in his dealings with men, and the self-revelation of him in his Word, —but it does not allow one to see his gracious attributes. It is this half-acquaintance with God which makes ignorance so fatal. To come a little closer to one another, while the eye will be open, the affection may be cloyed,—these are the conditions of the most disastrous estrangement. I apprehend that the honest confession of many who have traversed the whole field of action from utter ignorance to the largest knowledge, would be something like this:—"When I knew little or nothing of God, in the nature of things I was indifferent to him; when I knew just a little of God I often mistrusted him and complained of him. When I came to know more of God, I trusted him more and loved him more. How suggestive at this point are the words of Jesus in his last prayer, "O righteous Father, the world hath not known thee." This is his plaintive lament; as if to say, O that the world knew thee as thou art! This is the secret of much of the hatred of the Father of which he so often speaks. But what a striking change is observable when he speaks of his disciples, "And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it, that the love wherewith thou hast loved me may be in them and I in them." This teaches us that knowledge opens the doors of the heart, which ignorance has barred against the Father,—and that affection flows out toward God through the avenues by which light has come in. Such is the effect of divine knowledge upon good and honest hearts. What did Jesus say? He said, "O righteous Father, the world hath not known thee." Now, if we go about among men with our eyes open our experience will have taught us why this is the case,—why the world does not know the Father. We will know what attributes of the Divine character the men of the world mostly encounter. Men of the world know most of sin and disobedience in their experience, and therefore they collide with the justice and judgment of God. It is a fearful thing to have only such acquaintance as this with the Maker of heaven and earth and all things. The phrase "the universal fatherhood of God" is getting quite common of late,—and truly he is the universal source of life and consciousness, and in that sense father of all; but this fatherhood is not in any respect similar to the relation existing between the righteous Father and those to whom Jesus had revealed his name. A word of explanation may be needed here, respecting the Father's name. The name revealed to the disciples cannot be spelled without the letters Yahweh nor Jehovah, nor any other combination of letters. It is not a name in the sense of a designation, or title of a man, such as Lincoln, Grant or McKinley, but all his attributes combined, as for instance, his holiness, his love, his faithfulness, his goodness, his wisdom, his truthfulness, his justice and mercy," etc., etc. The dreariest destiny to which one could be assigned awaits those who only know God by his corrections, and never by his caresses; and only reminded of him by a scourging conscience, and never by a loving heart. This is about all the contact with God that millions upon millions have in this so-called Christian land. And the language of Jesus teaches that to be further acquainted with the fact that the Judge of all the earth will do right, does not win the affections of the people; for he declares, "If I had not come and spoken unto them, they had not had sin.....If I had not done among them the works which none other man did, they had not had sin; but now, they have both seen and hated both me and my Father." As it was not enough that men should see God's hand put forth in miracles, and his holiness shining forth in a pure example in the person of his Son, it was necessary to lay his whole heart open to them before they would love him; and hence it is that in the Anointed One crucified men obtain a knowledge of God that could be obtained no where else. Here God commends his love to us in a way calculated to melt all hearts that are not as hard as stones, for it was while we were yet sinners that Christ died in our behalf. O, with what blind desire and helpless longing had the poor hearts of some of the sons of men been feeling after God; but like the vine stretching up its tendril fingers and finding no support, they had to fall back and creep along the earth out of which they sprung. Blessed by God the Anointed One crucified, dead and buried, but raised again through the blood of the everlasting covenant furnishes a trellis for our heart's affections to climb upon. It is this by which we learn to know and realize something of the love of God, and the love of Christ, although it surpasses all knowledge we are now capable of. But beloved, the renewed mind and transferred affections can climb higher and higher upon it, and beneath it can strike its roots deeper and deeper, and upon its arms it can reach further and further, evermore increasing in love by increasing in knowledge as it seeks to comprehend with all saints what is the length, and breadth, and height, and depth, and to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge. The study of God's character as revealed in the amazing scheme of redemption is bound to deepen and strengthen our love for God as nothing else can. Barren knowledge is common in other fields of research I know, but is impossible here, unless the at-one-ment which is in the Anointed Jesus is robbed of deep significance. The believer cannot unfold the doctrine of the Anointed crucified without unfolding at every turn new delights of joy and affection in his own heart. His heart burns within him as he paces the courts of the temple, studying its brazen altar, and gazing on its mercy-seat when once a ray from the cross has fallen there. With faith as the eye through which he looks, the dullest fact of Biblical lore kindles a glow before him as he ponders them. Knowledge shows us God, and brings us into a perpetual study of his character. And since divine knowledge is the abiding of the mind in the subject of its study, to know God is to dwell in God, and hence to dwell in love; for he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God.

But how full church life is of testimony to the contrary! All along the ages this has been the sad history. Yes; the sifting process has been going on all the time. The gospel net always gathered good fish and bad. Nearly 2700 years ago God said, "My people is destroyed for lack of knowledge, because thou hast rejected knowledge. Because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will reject thee, that thou shalt be no priest to me, seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God; I will also forget thy children." Hosea iv. 6. We must remember this is an immutable principle of the Divine economy. He who uttered these words is unchangeable. What was true of his people then is true now. But I am persuaded that the words, "My people is destroyed for lack of knowledge," is the divine epitaph written over the graves of tens of thousands of those who professed to know him but did not. Remembering the picture of the last days which Jesus painted we can come to no other conclusion. Neglecting the study of the Scriptures, faith and hope and love, have no nutriment, and starve out,—die out! They seem dissatisfied and sigh after their first love,—strangely forgetting that God's love is the first love, not theirs. They forget that they never would have loved God had he not first loved them. They do not seem to realize that spiritually affections can only be ardent and glowing by daily discovering from the Book of God how immeasurably and persistently God loves us. "Herein is love, —not that we love God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be a propitiation for our sins." And the devout and earnest student of the Word, sees that love written everywhere in the Scriptures. He sees it in the blood of the Paschal Lamb sprinkled on the door-posts; he sees it in the solemn ordinance of the scape-goat; in the holy rites of the great day of At-one-ment,—in the vessels of the tabernacle, in its altar and laver and ark of the covenant overlaid round about with gold. He sees it in the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean; in the predictions of the prophets and the psalms,—and in the story of the evangelists,—in the teachings, and in the lofty strains of the Apocalypse,—in all the myriad types and voices the same story of the Lamb of God is repeated, —so that he can hardly fail to perceive the love of God in preparing a Body that should lay its life down for us. Those who do not search into these things have practically a very small Bible. As a mere history of facts and incidents these things are of little value; but as shadows of things to come, the substance of which is Christ, it is indeed a feast of fat things. Those who do not search do not know what hidden treasure they miss. Neglect of study means decay in the spiritual life. In my judgment where gross temptation turns one out of the way of life, listlessness and its resultant ignorance slays scores. You see it starves the believer by cutting off his supplies. It puts him into darkness by shutting off the oil that should feed his lamp—it nurses him into unbelief and hopelessness by giving him nothing to believe and hope for. Beloved, I have been connected with the cause of God and truth 47 years, and let me say to you, that sad as a rebellious wayward one is, in the household of faith, there are a source of grief; barren hearts,—hearts that yield nothing of self-sacrifice or fruit, or testimony year after year, because too indifferent to draw from the Father's inexhaustible storehouse the meat that would grow up into their living head; these I say, are also a bitter trial to those who have the care of God's flock, because no matter how plentiful the food, or how rich and varied the bill of fare, or how seasonable it may be, they do not thrive; there is no growth,—and this is proof positive that the food taken is not digested and therefore not assimilated, and nothing remains but to eke out a dead-alive religious existence, if I may so express myself. My dear brethren and sisters, as we value the life beyond, and know our accountability to the Lord who bought us, we must remember that unfruitful branches will be gathered and burned; and that we must grow in God's favor, or we will grow out of his favor. We must also remember that we can only grow in grace or favor as we grow in knowledge; and we cannot grow in divine knowledge without searching the Scriptures.

Secondly, I would remark that knowledge of God brings us into communion with him. As God is love, the more we come into fellowship with him, the more we shall come into the exercise and experience of his love. But it is only through knowledge we can come into fellowship with him. This is "eternal life, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." You see from this that the religion of feeling, of excitement and ignorance has no place in the Word of God. You see that while it is heart religion we must have,—it must blend with the intellect—it must go hand in hand with the intellect. While it is with the heart or affection man believes unto righteousness; the affection is not a knowing faculty,—it does not know what to believe, apart from the intellect. He must first learn what to believe before he can believe. And all who think to close the understanding and conduct all intercourse with God through their feelings or affections, will surely come to grief. I have shown you that the law of growth must be complied with or there will be no growth. Both mind and heart must be called into exercise or the love of God will not abound in us. Paul knew what he was praying for when he prayed that love may abound more and more in knowledge. And brethren and sisters,—the Word of God has the attribute of ministering to every element of our nature; it gives nutriment to the mind while it gives incitement to the affections; affords food for thought, and delight to the emotions. Like the juice of the grape which minister nourishment and sweetness in proper proportion, so the Word of the Lord which is Spirit and life contains all that can delight the affections and at the same time build us up in our most holy faith. You are aware that the curse of intoxication comes when man compresses and ferments these juices of the grape, and by violating nature's proportions produces the hot stimulant which "sets on fire the whole course of nature." Just so comes the evils of religious fanaticism when the divine proportion, and all the juices of thought are distilled into the intoxicants of emotion and transport on one hand, or all the sweet and nourishing sap of inspiration and love is turned into mere intellectual excitement on the other. As Christ on earth rounded out the largest intellectual sphere, he at the same time filled that sphere to its utmost limits with moral life and love,—and so Christ in us, if we receive him in his fulness, will quicken our highest intelligence, and sound our deepest love. And he will so blend and harmonize reason and affection that all our love of God will be but knowledge of God kindled into a flame of adoration, and our knowledge of God will be but the love of God, as it were, clarified and transfigured in his perfect light. Beloved, we cannot lay too much stress on this! Let of joint co-operation of all our moral and spiritual faculties in order to thorough consecration, and according to our text our love abound more and more. In truth it is only saying in other words what the Lord himself said about worship in Spirit and truth. Though our capacity be small we must seek to take in the whole Christ, and to be filled with the knowledge of his will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding, as well as to be filled with his love which passeth knowledge. I may not be able to hold so much as others, and the same applies to each of you, but don't forget it, we are all expected to be filled with the knowledge and love of God. If we are filled full, we will surely come out right, irrespective of our capacities. Oh to be filled with all the fulness of God—be this our aim. I may never travel this road or subject again, so I want you to realize that some ekes out a narrow apprehension of his love, by a greater admiration of his wisdom; some try to cover up a criminal ignorance of his will by fond phrases and endearments of his person; some let nearly all the channels of Biblical knowledge run dry, and seek to irrigate the parched and thirsty heart by endlessly repeating their happy religious experiences. But such make-shifts soon exhaust themselves. Our text makes it plain that there is no way in which the current of love can be strengthened except by deepening the channels of knowledge. We have accepted Christ and he should become to us a life-long study and contemplation. This will give our love the proper stimulus: and if we ask the dear Lord how we can continue in his love,—his answer is always ready and always the same, "If ye continue in my Word, then are ye my disciples indeed!" It is not more incitements and stimulants to love we need, but deeper realization and insight into it. Contact of Christian heart with Christian heart is blessed. The communion of spirit with spirit is vastly helpful, the pondering, the looking into the grasping, the exulting in the wonderful redemptive story passes all else for opening the deepest fountains of affection. Said the disciples, "Did not our hearts burn within us while he talked to us by the way, and opened to us the Scriptures?" The key which opens the Word to us opens our hearts also, by revealing Christ, the Alpha and Omega of the redemptive scheme. The same principle applies to love of brethren. It is not a mere sentimental thing. Two burnished reflectors can radiate the brightness from one to the other if there be a light between them. But if each only reflects from the other, there can be no illumination because neither furnishes any light. So two brethren or sisters reciprocating each other's affections will make but a poor exhibit of love unless they have Christ between them as the source of their love. So, brethren, if we get any cheer or brightness from looking into each others faces and communing in the services of God's house it will be because Christ is in us, and if we do not it is because Christ is not in us, does not look out of our eyes, and speak with our voices—the object of all meditation, and the fountain of all our joys. We have great need, and ought to come to the place of prayer and praise, but unless we have been contemplating and pondering over God's Word during the week,—unless we have been facing and fronting the Lord Jesus as he stands revealed in

The Dying Christian to His Mother.

Smile now, and tell us, mother dear,
What should there be to fear
In death? In pain?
Must not day wane
Ere the to-morrow bright?
But draw the curtain tight
And then put out the light;
But this mortal dying good night!
Dear mother, grieve not—a little pain
More pudding on the breath;
Shadow and awe of death
And tears for thee.
But in that new earth
What gladness! When
You and I again clasp hands,
Dear Mother, good night!

Unity.

David says in the 133rd Psalm: How good and pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity. It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon Aaron's beard, that went down to the skirts of his garment. As the dew of Hermon and as the dew that descended upon the mountains of Zion; for there the Lord commanded the blessing, even life evermore. From the above quotation we would infer that David placed great value on unity, and the writers in both the Old and New Testaments, placed great stress upon harmony of thought and unity of action. We frequently hear people condemning the Christian religion on account of the constant strifes, disputings, railings and evil surmisings in the different churches; they do not understand that although these disputants are members of a church, they are destitute of a knowledge of the truth, therefore devoid of the religion taught in the gospel, and drive men farther and farther away from the truth that is mighty and able to save. More men have been driven into infidelity by divisions and inconsistencies in the churches, than by all the skeptics that ever lived and wrote against the true Christian religion. When the various kinds of infidels come to know what the true and actual teachings of Christ and the apostles are, as some of them have, they have expressed surprise at the facts, and admitted that the beauties as set forth in the Covenants of Promise and the whole plan of salvation was not only reasonable and consistent, but was worth striving for, and they had no war to make against a true religion, but a fake.

Paul places great stress upon unity in all his writings, oneness of mind, of action, of faith, of hope, of calling, and there is one great object, even life evermore. How would it be possible to please God, without unity of thought and purpose? And if all are not of the same mind, some must be wrong, for there is only one faith. That there should be harmony in the church, is not only an exhortation, but a command. "Be ye all of one (or the same) mind." Romans xii. 16. "Speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you." 1 Cor. i. 10.

There must have been wonderful harmony when the Ark of the Covenant was placed in the temple under the wings of the cherubims, when there were 120 priests sounding on cymbals with many other players on psalteries and harps, and a multitude of singers, for when the players and singers were as one, God manifested his approval, for his glory filled the house as a cloud, so that the priests could not see to minister at the altar.

The divisions, railings, jealousies, etc., that occur among the sect churches today, are not because of various views on Bible topics, for they are not encouraged as a general thing by their ministers to read and study for themselves, but it relates more to choir service, church fairs, entertainments and money affairs.

The people constituting the Church of God, or that good old name we were once known by, The One Faith or Abrahamic Faith, are almost a unit on what may be called the first principles of the gospel. Forty and fifty years ago, when those grand old soldiers of the cross Reed, Stephenson, Craton, Chase, and many others were on the platform, there was no such thing as divisions in the Church, and when they had given us the sincere milk of the Word, we were able and ready to receive strong meat, and grew harmoniously in grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior. But now we may be classed with the Corinthian brethren; for Paul says, "I have fed you with milk and not with meat, for hitherto ye were not able to bear it; neither yet now are ye able, for there is among you, envying, strife and divisions." Some were of Paul, some of Apollos, therefore carnal. Paul planted, Apollos watered, but God gave the increase. Now he that planteth, and he that watereth are one. Paul laid the foundation, another built thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth, for other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. iii. 1-11. Here is a warning that we cannot be too careful to observe; for as a man buildeth, so shall his reward be. There is but one foundation to build upon, the Rock Christ Jesus.

There may not be envyings and malice among us, but there certainly are divisions to that extent that fellowship is refused by certain ones. While we should stand rooted and grounded in the faith, and no compromise should be made on the positive statements as revealed in the great plan of salvation, can we not through some means become a unit on the more obscure passages that are expressed in language that the meaning is not perfectly clear to the general understanding. It seems that there is a necessity for this, for Christ is not divided. He is a unit, and his body in order to be accepted by him must necessarily be the same. Why are these divisions among us? Evidently because the Spirit of Christ does not dwell within us in sufficient measure to hold us together in all things. But Paul says, there should be no schism or divisions in the body, but that the members should have the same care one for another. For if one member suffer all suffer; is one honored, all rejoice together." 1 Cor. xii. 25, 26, "Let us all speak the truth in love, that we may grow up into him in all things, which is the head even Christ. From whom the whole body fitly framed together, and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love." Eph. iv. 15, 16.

In the investigation of all minor Bible questions, the instructions given by the apostles should be followed both in letter and spirit. Why should I withdraw fellowship from a brother who does not quite agree with me on the different classes and numbers that shall see resurrection life, or who regards a Sabbath law, or limited probation in a future age, etc., when probably both are ignorant of the key that will unlock every Bible theme and make it clear to our mutual understanding? Therefore, "Let us study to show ourselves approved unto God, a workman that need not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth," we certainly can come to a knowledge that will secure for us that peace that surpasseth all understanding. God is not mocked and he will hold every one responsible, who obey not the promptings of the Spirit through his Word. If we have not the Spirit of Christ, we are none of his, while if we are led by the Spirit, and forbear to make unkind remarks toward one who may, perhaps, hold to some view that we may think is without reason, we may by friendly comparing of ideas come to a unity of understanding. In these last days there are a great many theories by certain people, who would have us to believe they were learned commentators on Biblical lore, who would have us to regard them as great lights in the way of opening up our darkened understanding, and it is with regret that we witness these speculative theories being sent broadcast over the land, for they are written by men skilful in the use of the English language, and are well calculated to lead those new in the faith, into confusion, and from confusion to doubt, and from doubt into skepticism, deceiving and being deceived. If this great flood of tracts and various publications could be eliminated from circulation, and the same time spent in reading them was devoted to the study of the Scriptures, there would be a better prospect of perfect unity in the church, and greater progress made in converting men and women to a knowledge of the gospel in its purity. Tracts are a means to reach people, who cannot be taught in any other way; but they should be in perfect harmony with the Word or they will be sure to cause irreparable harm.

Finally brethren, let us covet the best gifts; be charitable toward all men; not condemning the man but the method, knowing that in these last days some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils. But let us who desire to make our calling and election sure, seek that ounces of faith that shall be pleasing to him who has redeemed us by his own blood to whom be glory and honor forever. May God help us to "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, for there is one body and one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling." Let us be faithful to the trust that is reposed in us, earnestly watching, patiently waiting for the "chief Shepherd to appear, when we shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

Evangelizing Trip.

Although it has been spring like almost every day through January and February, this is really the first day of spring, according to the calendar of months, and the alfalfa and grain are almost knee-high, and the cottonwood trees are almost in full leaf. Surely this world, with the curse left out, would be beautiful enough to spend eternity in.

My success in getting a hearing in Arizona is not as good as I had longed for; but I have kept at work where opportunity could be gained. Our late meetings near Phoenix had to be closed, as the result of the sudden and severe sickness of Brother Frank Asher. But there is not to be a long period of idleness, as meetings have been arranged to begin in the city of Tempe, on the coming Saturday night. This may close my work in this territory. Whether it ends at Tempe or some other place there is much to do in California and Oregon by way of return to Portland, before I can meet my dear ones. The most disagreeable part of evangelizing is the absence from home and family. It is cheering to know that our Master made some grand promises to those who forsake home and family for his and the kingdom of heaven's sake. The way the world measures and weighs values, and time, this seems a long time to wait, but if "like unto the days of Noah" is an infallible sign, we may not have to wait very long.

We have formed the acquaintance of twenty brethren in this Territory that seem to have an abiding interest in the promises of God, and a clinging faith and anchored confidence, but they are scattered over so large a country, that there is little hope of forming them into an organization at present. It would give them greater combined strength if they could do so and meet together at least once a month.

Since I have been here, I have met Brother R. E. Perry and Sister Perry, and their daughter Sister Deming. This carries my mind back a number of years in my work on this coast when I was called north to an island in Puget Sound, to visit the family of Brother W. F. Perry. On that occasion I immersed Sister W. F. Perry and daughter. I was at that time at the most northern point I have ever been; in fact not far from the British possessions, and here I am about as far or a little farther, from Mexico, meeting with those of the same family and the same faith. You may imagine something of the pleasure it would give the Perrys of the south country to hear of the Perrys of the northern home on a small island in Puget Sound. Many years have passed since they parted, "but they are of the same mind, and speak the same things." Nothing but the gospel could make this true.

During my stay in Arizona the home toward which I turn for headquarters and a hospitable home when not engaged in proclaiming the Word, is with Brother J. M. Fike in Phoenix. It is only too bad if an interest cannot be awakened that would call out and unite a people that are now only engrossed in the things of the world, and the traditions of their fathers. How we long for the time when "the face of the covering cast over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations" shall be destroyed. It would be grand to be among those that shall direct the people into the King's Highway of Holiness, under such circumstances, and to live when "he shall swallow up death in victory, and the Lord will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall be taken away from off all the earth; for the Lord hath spoken it."

WE wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

At Last.

Death always comes as a shock to us, under whatever conditions it comes, and last Monday evening when I reached home from Millbrook, and picked up a letter from Coleman, I said "This is from Sister Beardsley." The writing was not just like hers I thought, and when I opened and read "Dear Madam, I write to inform you of the death and burial of Miss Beardsley," my hands dropped, and O, how tenderly my heart went out to that poor, sick woman, living alone, at past 80 years of age. I wondered, wondered: did she die alone? for the writer gave me no particulars but O, how glad I was to know she had wood, provisions and money enough to make her comfortable, through the Christian love and thoughtfulness of the Sisters of the "Evangelical Aid Society," and other Sisters who had so generously contributed to all her needs.

Money and provisions have been sent her this winter, so if some one was sent her she was comfortable. She told me in a letter that a near neighbor was very kind to her.

That the household of faith may know what Sister Beardsley's hope was I give extracts from two letters. Jan. 6th she said: Dear Sister Woodward, I have just received your letter containing $2 50, and giving items of provisions contained in a box which I have not yet received, sent by the sisters who so kindly and with such true Christian love, are supplying my need. I some times begin to fear for the future, when directly God sends me by his dear ones, substantial aid, and evidence of his watch care over me. Today my fears began to tell me I had scarcely enough to give a hearty person a meal, and to, see how the dear Lord has heard my cry to him. Praise, praise his dear name. On Jan. 16th she says, Dear Sister [illegible] one of my neighbors [illegible] tonight. Thank you [illegible] can express. O, how good [illegible] enly Father is to me, through his own children. I am glad there is a time coming when there will be no needy ones to help. No, when we march into the city of our God, there will be no poor and needy, no one to pity, for all will be clothed and fed. Happy, happy day. Dear Sister, I shall surely not have to take thought for bread soon. There is flour enough to supply my needs for many weeks. Every article in the box is needed and useful and some luxuries which I have not indulged in for a great while. I am truly thankful and grateful. Your Sister in Christ. Rosa Beardsley.

I write this that all may see how very grateful she was, and how she never forgot that all good comes from the good Father. The supervisor's wife wrote me that she had a very decent Christian burial.

O, brothers and sisters, let us always be ready to help the needy ones. We had none of us ever seen Sister Beardsley, but expect to meet her in the kingdom, when the great gathering comes.

Committee Meeting.

The Committee appointed at the Indiana Conference in November, 1905, to investigate in relation to the proposed "Bible Schools," or "Memorial Homes," to be established in University towns, met in Chicago, Feb'y 17-18, 1906. Present Sister Harriet E Boice, Bros. G. M. Alexander and J. H. Willey.

A full report will be made to the Indiana Conference at their June session. To the Committee the greatest need of the churches seemed to that of leaders. As a means to remedy this need, the Committee recommend, and most earnestly request, that weekly meetings be held by each band of believers in their respective localities, and that Bible topics be given out each week in advance, and some one of their number be appointed to lead the meeting, and to bring out all the Bible truths they may be able to find on such topics.

That if any one of their number seem to be more apt than another, that person be encouraged in his or her ability by being frequently appointed as such leader; and that such person be further encouraged by his or her church by being paid what is just and right to such person, for the time required from their other work in their preparation. If the church such person belongs to is not able to give such financial aid as they may require, that they report the names of such worthy ones either to the Indiana Conference or this Committee, that investigation and help may be obtained.

BY ORDER OF THE COMMITTEE.

A Warning to the Present Generation.

I here reiterate the warnings I have been constrained for seven years to convey to this generation. It has gone astray from the foundations—it is a blind age following blind leaders, and upon every line of policy it is going only from bad to worse, and boasting of its broken records. Yea, they are breaking year by year in religion, government (in politics shall we add?) jurisprudence, finance, social science, commerce, the relations of labor to capital, of man to man, and finally but not least wise of man to woman, the whole age is a spectacle to the very powers of evil that are thus consummating their powers upon it.

Cato what then, but a chaos even worse confounded is it tending? How indeed shall it escape the damnation of gehenna, which is written against it? Why, if I, personally, for instance, believed in what the nominal church teaches as to the non-literal resurrection of Jesus Christ, the purely human origin of the Hebrew Bible, the impossibility of miracles, and all the other brood of heresies that today most readily pass for Christianity and its foundations in the sensational pulpits of recognized and popular authority, if I had no other resort than to accept, sight unseen and proof unproduced, the dictum of Rome, whose history I know, then by mine honor, for I could then swear by naught higher, I should at least have worldly wisdom enough left to follow St. Paul's advice, and "eat, drink and be merry" against to-morrow's night of logically certain, and of course practically hopeless death!

And I warn this age, that such iconoclastic teaching as is now current in pulpit, press, and periodical of every stripe, is responsible for all the iniquity of this age—an age that has lost its sound "standards" and is all at sea by this very begging of the question of agnosticism, now so much in vogue. It is an agnosticism that will not endure any sort of sound doctrine upon any single topic, even an antagonistic age, that is already reaping the whirlwind along every cycle that has an eccentric to bear down upon it.

There is no final authority left, no criterion; nothing that man trusts as the Word of an Eternal God, therefore men are learning not to fear the laws of mere mortals. Anarchy is cropping out of every crevice of modern civilization. Not only is the whole world but even we of this one are dancing upon the thin crust of an inevitable catastrophe.

As one of the rudest and most startling results of "the falling away" which the French denominate the "fin de siecle" degeneracy that has marked this very generation, look for instance at the terrible increase of murder and homicide in free America.

We literally break the record of the whole round world. Ten thousand separate murders annually and the ratio is in geometrical increase! Why if there be a God, the God of Abel upon the circle of the heavens, and if he is not asleep, he will soon have to visit the earth in person, to preserve his integrity, and to confound a people that have as utterly forgotten him as had those upon whom he swept the superfirmamental ring of water that once surrounded the earth and by its fall produced the flood. * *

Obituary.

One by one the older members of the congregation at Rensselaer are fast passing from the living to those sleeping in Christ.

Brother Francis M. Grant was born in Kentucky, Aug. 23, 1826. Came with his parents, Daniel and Rebecca Grant, to Jasper Co., Ind. in 1850. Settled near Rensselaer where he continued to reside until his death, (a period of 56 years) Feb. 21, 1906, at the age of 79 years, 6 months and 1 day.

He was happily united in marriage with Phebe Morehan in 1866, to which union were born six children, two sons and four daughters, one son and three daughters, surviving—Nellie, Edmond H., Grace and Lelia Grant.

He united with the Church of God at the organization of the congregation in Rensselaer in 1861, continued in the faith, and with energy working for the Master until infirmity from injury received several years ago, resulting in rapid failing health for the last few years, deprived him of his former strength for activity and former regular attendance at church service; but his hope and trust in Christ remained steadfast unto the end.

The characteristics of his life were marked by honesty of purpose—integrity of character, with a kind, sympathetic, genial and jovial disposition, through which his large circle of acquaintance, were all his friends.

Whatever may have been his faults, of which none of us are exempt, the memory of his life will be treasured up as a legacy—by his bereaved companion, children, many relatives and the church. Shared in also by a host of sincere friends.

The funeral was very largely attended, who listened attentively to the discourse, "Through Whom and How to Obtain the Victory over Death."

May we with him, by being steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, then experience the "change" from mortal to immortality, which alone will enable us to shout victory over death and the grave. "Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory, through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Sunday Morning Address.

(Concluded from Page 2.)

that Word, what can we impart to each other?

It is to God's grand old Book Paul sends us for knowledge of God. He is the Lord's mouthpiece; he wants us to be obedient children, and profitable servants, and true witnesses, and we can only be this by studying it patiently and persistently, and if we do this we will make discoveries of truth which will thrill us like a startling piece of news.

Indeed it is news from a far country. Should we be possessed and fired by this divine intelligence and come into our assemblies and pour it out, what a kindling there would be among the embers of our heartstone! O, let us light our fires anew at God's Word. Let us not lean so much on one another, but more upon the Lord, in whom are hid all the riches of wisdom and knowledge; the most efficient Helper in all the universe!

Time is on the wing. The Lord is at hand to come. It stands us in hand to be ready. We have but little time to do it. It will soon be said he that is filthy, let him be filthy still. Let us be ready to meet him with joy.

If there be one present who is saying O, that I knew where I could find him, our heart goes out toward such, and we esteem it as the happiest privilege of this life to point fellow mortals to the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world. He is saying to such this morning, Come unto me. O, while mercy lingers come and find peace and rest. Amen.

"The highest achievement comes by surrender. This is an exalted and difficult truth, but one which has been proved in the experience of every choice soul. When we give up self and earthly pleasure and our own lower desires and rights, we enter into the lofty heritage of those who are great enough to deny and master self."

Evangelizing Notice.

I expect to make an evangelizing trip to Arizona in December and return late in the winter or early spring. Any brethren that may be reached on or near the Southern Pacific R. R. between Portland, Oregon and Phoenix, Arizona, may secure my service by corresponding with me at Scholls, Ore., or Phoenix, Ari. I have cut loose from my farm and desire to devote my whole time to the work. Help to the cause will be gratefully accepted.

Hieronimus (or "Jeremiah").

CHAPTER 23.

1. O ye shepherds, ye who are losing and scattering the sheep of their pasture;

2. Because of this, thus saith the Lord unto those who are shepherding my laity; ye have scattered my sheep and ye have thrust them away, and ye have not taken an oversight of them; lo, I am bringing a requital upon you according to your wicked devices;

3. And I am going to receive unto myself the rest of my laity upon all the earth, there where I have thrust them out, and I am going to restore them to their pasture and they will have been increased and multiplied;

4. And I am going to stand up for them who will shepherd them, and they will not have been made to fear any more, nor will they have been awe-struck, saith the Lord.

5. Lo, days are coming saith the Lord, and I shall cause to arise for David a righteous shoot from the root, and he will rule as king, and he will understand, and he will execute judgment and righteousness upon the earth.

6. In his days also Jondas will have been saved and Israel will tabernacle down in faith; and this is his name which the Lord will call him a Joosedek among the prophets.

No 7th verse in the text.

No 8th verse in the text.

9th (the prophet speaks of himself) My heart within me was broken; all my bones have been shaken; I have become like a man who hath been crushed and like a man constrained with wine before the face of the Lord, and from before the face of the appropriate beauty of his glory;

10. Because from before the face of these, the earth hath sorrowed, the pastures of the wilderness have dried up; and their course hath become bad and their strength even so. (The Lord speaks again).

11. Because priest and prophet have become polluted and in my house I have seen their wicked acts.

12. Therefore, let their way become for them a way into destruction in thick gloom; and in it they will have been tripped up and they will fall; for I shall lead upon them calamities in a year of their visitation.

13. And in the prophets of Samaria I have seen acts of transgression; they have prophesied through Baal and led my laity Israel astray;

14. And in the prophets of Hierousaleem, I have seen frightful things, seen them committing adultery and going their way in the use of lies, and intervening with many hands to prevent their turning each one away from his wicked way. They have all become to me like Sodoma, and those who inhabit it like Gomorra.

15. Therefore thus saith the Lord; I am going to morsel out to them woe and I am going to give them to drink bitter water, because from the prophets of Hierousaleem hath gone out pollution to all the earth.

16. In this wise saith the All-controlling Lord, Do not hearken to the words of the prophets, because they make futile vision for themselves; from their heart do they talk and not from the mouth of the Lord;

17. They say to those who are thrusting away the Word of the Lord, There will be peace for you, and for all those who are going their way in their desires and to every one who is going his way in the misleading of his heart they have said, Calamities will not come upon thee.

18. Because who hath stood in God's hyposteema (being or state) and known his word? Who hath marked it well and heard it?

19. Lo, a shaking from the Lord and wrath is going its way out into commotion, a wrath that whirleth will come upon the irreverent.

20. And no longer will the anger of the Lord turn away until it shall do this and establish it from his heart's undertaking; upon a last of the days will they apprehend it.

21. I did not send the prophets and they ran, nor did I talk unto them, and they prophesied.

22. And if they had stood in my hypostasis (my way of being) and if they had heard my words they would also have turned my laity away from their wicked devices.

23. I am a God who draweth nigh, saith the Lord, and not afar off.

24. Will any one hide in hiding-places and I see not him? Do I not fill the heavens and the earth, saith the Lord?

25. I have heard what the prophets are talking, the things which they are prophesying in my name, speaking lies, saying I have dreamed a dream-vision.

26. How long will it be in the hearts of the prophets who are prophesying lies, in their prophesying the desires of their heart,

27. While they reason to ignore my law with their dream-visions, which they have been discoursing each one to his neighbor, even as my fathers ignored my name in Baal?

28. The prophet in whom the dream-vision is let him discourse his dream-vision and the one in whom my word unto him is, let him discourse my word in truth. What is the chaff to the wheat?

29. Even so are my words saith the Lord. Lo, are not my words even as fire, saith the Lord, and like a hammer that smiteth a rock?

30. Lo, I for this reason am against the prophets, saith the Lord God, the prophets who are stealing my words, each one of them away from his neighbor.

31. Lo, I am against the prophets who are putting out prophecies of tongue and snoring their snore.

32. Lo, for this reason am I against the prophets who are prophesying lying dream-visions, and have not described them in detail and who have led my laity astray with their lies and with their misleading statements; and I have not sent them and I have not commanded them, and they will not profit this laity.

33. And if this laity or priest or prophet shall ask, What is the burden of the Lord? (that is, what is the gist of the prophecy). Thou shalt also say unto them, Ye are the burden, and I am going to cast you off, saith the Lord.

34 The prophet and the priest and the laity who shall have said burden of the Lord, I shall even requite that man and his house.

35. In this wise shall ye say each one to his brother, What did the Lord answer, and what did the Lord say?

36. And burden of the Lord ye shall not name it any more, because the mere man's burden will be his word.

37. And for what reason hath the Lord our God said it? For this reason saith the Lord our God in this wise; It is because ye have said this word of the Lord was a burden (in the sense of burdensome, the word having both meanings, the last being a derived meaning from its use to signify the revenue resulting from taxation which is too often burdensome) and I have sent unto you saying, Ye shall not say burden of the Lord.

39. Because of this, lo, I am taking and casting you off and this city which I gave unto you and your fathers;

40. And I shall give to be upon you age-lasting reproach and age-lasting dishonor which will not have been ignored.

The following two verses are from the F. A. text, omitted in the first part of this chapter.

7. Therefore, lo, days are coming, saith the Lord, and they will not say any more, As the Lord liveth who led the house of Israel out of Aiguptos;

8. But as the Lord liveth who gathered all the seed of Israel from the north and from all the countries there where he had thrust them out and restored them to their land.

COMMENT.

This chapter is too long for a critical analysis such as I have been giving on the last few chapters; but I consider it one of the most important in the whole range of the old covenant prophets. If the whole of the Bible were irretrievably lost except this chapter of Hieremias and the 32nd of Deuteronomia, the plan and purpose of God in creation and redemption could be clearly discerned and inferred. In the transposition of verses 7 and 8 in this chapter we have a hint of what is coming thicker and faster, as I promised in my preliminary comment to show—in the remaining portions of this book.

Compare the 5th and 6th verses carefully with the C. V. and other versions of the same. For they have been tampered with not a little and are important proof-texts. "A shoot from the root" instead of "Branch" and "a Joosedek among the prophets" instead of "the Lord our righteousness" C. V. or "the Lord is our righteousness" R. V. Then look up "Joosedek" as one of the leaders of the return from the captivity of Babuloon. "Jesus" or (Jeesous) you will find was his son and "chief priest" at this time as well as "prophet" and also went by the name of his renowned father Joosedek which means when translated "one who heals thee acceptably."

In the 18th verse the substitution of "counsel" for "hypostasis" (meaning "being" or "state") and in the 22nd verse the same word "council" for "hypostasis" (meaning "way of being") has utterly obscured the teaching nowhere else so clearly given in regard to "vision" or "dream-vision"—what it was and how God could thus communicate directly with a mere mortal man.

The play on the word "burden" is also obscured in the versions—especially in the last 2 clauses of the 33d verse R. V.

None of the lexicographers seem to have been able to apprehend the Scriptural use of the two words of not infrequent occurrence therein, especially in the Old Covenant record, namely "hypostasis" and "hyposteema" (Greek "hupostasis" and "hupostesema") but invariably give them a theological twist or as in this chapter substitute another entirely different word "council" for them.

One, the first, is a verbal noun of the process spoken of, and the other expresses the result of the process like "judging" and "judgment" and the true primitive meaning which is generally the Scriptural use is as I have given it "being," "state" or "existence" and not "substance" or as in the Latin transcript of it "person." This is a very important error. For instance in the 1st chapter of Hebrews instead of "express image of his person" it should read and does read in the Greek "character expression of his being" meaning that the Christ as a Son of the heavenly Father is a characteristic expression of his being, as my or your son is a characteristic expression of my or your being—human being—namely.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

Seventy-five More.

I receive enquiries as to when Pine Woods Bible Class Book will be printed?

In answer, I will say, when I receive seventy-five more subscriptions, the book can be printed, and sent forth on its mission, to teach the glad tidings. If all who really want it had said so, it could now be out sowing seed. When God's professed servants make his cause a secondary matter, and put it off to a "convenient time," his cause suffers. Now all who really want the book please sit down and write me, as soon as you have read this, and then things will move at once. Don't wait until a more convenient time. God's business demands prompt attention.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's benificent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MARCH 14, 1906. NUMBER 10.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel; repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Almost Home.

We're almost home, we're almost home, hark! hear the trumpets cry;
The weary pilgrim lifts his head and hails redemption nigh;
O glorious, soul-reviving sound, we soon shall see our King!
Haste, swiftly fly, ye tardy hours, that welcome moment bring.

We're long too long wandering here below, ran sorrow for Jesus' sake.
And through the dark night we have watched and longed for a break;
And now the cry "Behold! he comes; your journey's end to meet."
Sounds sweet to every child of "home" within the traveler's ear.

Oh! weary pilgrim, dry thy tears, look up, rejoice, and sing,
What though the world despise thy name? Thy Father is a King.
And soon upon his dazzling throne thou shalt with him sit down,
And walk the streets of Paradise, and wear a glittering crown.

Art thou a mourner? dost thou weep that much-loved ones are borne
To rest beneath the valley shade? Christian no longer mourn:
A few more days and you shall meet, no more to say "farewell."
But in the everlasting home in sweet Immanuel dwell.

Oh! hope on, O sailor, courage take, what though the clouds be dark,
And angry billows dost unroll to sink our little bark:
What though the tempest fiercer grows, with joyful hope we stand,
For well we know we're near the coast; our ship almost to land.

O watcher, thou hast waited long: turn not away thine eyes,
For, lo, the Day Star bright is come, the Sun will soon arise;
With joyful hearts we'll watch and look, and pray, "Lord Jesus, come,"
And take the watch back away to her eternal home.

What is Left.

The Bible is still subjected to the sifting and winnowing process of the Higher Critics. The ink is barely dry on the pages of one book, the product of "advanced thought," before another is ready for the press. The latest issue is a book from the hand and brain of Professor George Burman Foster of the University of Chicago. The work bears an imposing title: "The Finality of the Christian Religion." He complains of the treatment he and his book have received at the hands of Bishop Fallows. He declared that he was being convicted without trial, and that it was unfair for any one to criticise his book without having read it in its entirety." I do not think it necessary to read his book through in order to understand in what light he regards the miracles of the Bible. His view of these he stated very plainly in his reply to Bishop Fallows, in the Chicago Evening American of Feb. 8, 1906. The Professor's interviewer calls what he has to say here, "Thon tuck on Miracles." At the time of the interview the reporter wrote what Mr. Foster said in the following language in reference to the history of Christ walking on the water, and quelling the storm at his will: "This is a story which grew up as the primitive community sought to set forth their sense of the worth of Jesus to their lives. As such it beautifully symbolizes the peace-making spirit of Christ." "Miracles as fact and faith." "Thus viewed it is of much value to faith, but treated as a fact that actually occurred it simply becomes an item of knowledge to be accepted on the basis of adequate evidence carefully tested. As such a fact it would be a mere matter for scientific investigation, and of no value to religious faith whatever." "The simple result would be that science, while it would not deny, it could not affirm the actual occurrence of the event. "The other miracles of the Bible are in the same class, and there is no reason to believe in them. It is useless to discuss them in detail; they all have practically the same attributes. I do not believe, for example, that the whale swallowed Jonah, or that Aaron's rod was turned into a snake, or that Christ turned the water into wine." This quotation as taken down by the reporter shows that Mr. Foster has no faith in miracles as actual occurrences, and that they must all be treated alike. So he makes a clean sweep of the supernatural, and this he assures us in order to leave us the true, with the false stript away. How kind he is to disencumber the Bible of what the infidel all along has been calling "big fish stories." The infidel will thank him for his services rendered in his behalf. Mr. Foster is not an infidel, professedly such. Oh no, but a Christian scholar (?) with a message. Now if I should read his book through from Alpha to Omega I would find nothing that would modify the meaning of the statement above as written by the reporter. He has no faith whatever in any miracle on the pages of the old Book. He does not believe that crowning miracle of the New Covenant, the resurrection of Jesus, the Christ, from the dead, by which life and immortality were brought to light. To reject the miracles of the Bible as what we might expect in this Higher Critic. This is essential in order to rank in the category of advanced thinkers. Think of our Bible script of all miracles, and imagine what kind of a book we would have left! It would be very difficult to bring the fragments together so as to make sense. I suppose the Higher Critics will do this for us. At best would we have any thing more than a system of morals? The story that Jesus walked on the water, and quelled the storm by word, Mr. Foster says is false; that "it grew up as the primitive community sought to set forth their sense of the worth of Jesus to their lives." But how does the gentleman know this? None of the writers of the four gospels say this was their object in getting up the story. Mr. Foster is wise above what is written. It is a mere guess of his. The witnesses say that Jesus walked on the water and that he rebuked the winds and the sea, causing a great calm. Mr. Foster who was not present presumes to say at this distant day that Jesus did no such thing. Whom shall we believe, this modern Professor or the competent witnesses who saw the events? Judge ye. Is it at all likely that these artless minded disciples imagined this story of their Master? They never wrote a novel, they were comparatively illiterate, but they could tell what they heard and saw. These four Evangelists did what Strauss, Renan, Kuenen and Foster, writing independently of each other, could not do, describe a perfect character. This story of quelling the storm "grew up," Mr. Foster says. He would make it a kind of afterthought of the disciples, an invention for the benefit of the Higher Critics and "of much value to their faith," that is "viewed as a fictitious event." It is too bad that simple minded folks for eighteen hundred and odd years have believed this and other stories to be real and not fictitious; and thus viewing them derived no benefit from them according to Mr. Foster; for he says that "treated as a fact that actually occurred it simply becomes an item of knowledge to be accepted on the basis of adequate evidence carefully tested. As such a fact it would be a mere matter for scientific investigation, and of no value to religious faith whatever."

It is a great pity that these critics did not live much earlier! Many generations of Bible readers could only hold these marvelous events as items of knowledge and under the disadvantage of having no competent scientific men at hand to investigate them! "The story grew up." It does not so appear on the face of the record. It is an artless recital of what actually took place on the sea of Galilee. "And there arose a great storm of wind and the waves beat into the ship, so that it was now full. And he was in the hinder part of the ship, asleep on a pillow; and they awake him, and say unto him, Master, carest thou not that we perish? And he arose and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still. And the wind ceased and there was a great calm." This sudden calming of the storm caused the disciples to exclaim, "What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him?" All this has an air of reality. Just such occurrences as this were of great value to the disciples without which they could have had no faith in the supernatural character and mission of the Son of God, and consequently no hope of future life. On what ground do these rejectors of miracles hold their faith of life beyond the present fleeting existence? None whatever. We must take the record as it has been given to us by the witnesses who were present when Jesus wrought these marvelous works, and on the strength of them demanded faith on the part of his disciples, in the fact that the Father had sent him (John v. 36) and rebuking the Jews for their unbelief, appealing to the works done in his Father's name as sufficient proof that he was the Christ (John x. 25), that with these works performed in their presence and before their eyes there remained no ground of doubt. The standing challenge to all was, "Believe me for the very work's sake." John xiv. 11. He did not refer to fictitious events when he said, "If I had not done among them the works which none other man did, they had not had sin." John xv. 24. Did Jesus, Mr. Foster's moral hero, and Mr. Ingersol's "inimitable man" lie; or did the Evangelists put into his mouth words he never used? How is this ye Higher Critics who are so exceeding wise!

I think under the circumstances it was absolutely necessary that actual and real miracles should be wrought on the ground where, and at the time when Jesus was proclaiming, in unmistakable language, to his countrymen that he was sent of God, the Messiah of the prophets, the prophet like unto Moses, the Son of God, the one to whom the Father had committed all judgment, the Savior of men, the light of the world, the resurrection and life, that he had life in himself from the Father, with the ability to impart it to others on conditions of faith and obedience; predicting his own death, and resurrection on the third day thereafter; his ascent to the right hand of the Father; his coming in the clouds of heaven; the establishment of a universal kingdom on the earth, and the subjugation of all enemies; and that his faithful followers should share with him the dominion of the world. All these marvellous and far reaching claims he put before his disciples and fellow countrymen.

In the nature of things such claims ought to be backed by proof adequate to establish them. Nothing short of events with the will and power of God as the only antecedents could attest these claims, and produce faith. Were there men in Judea and Galilee who had faith in Jesus to the extent of all his claims? They had it on the ground of the mighty works he actually performed. This proposition is contradictory to Mr. Foster's assertion, that if they actually occurred "they were of no value to religious faith." The miracles are of such value to religious faith that all who have believed in the divine origin of the Christian religion have done so on the ground of these supernatural events. How does this Higher Critic hold on the question of the origin of Christianity? Perhaps it grew up like the story of stilling the storm grew up according to his view of the matter—a human invention to meet man's needs.

Let us hear John the beloved disciple on the purpose of signs or supernatural works: "Many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book; but these are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name." How different from Mr. Foster's view, "of no value to religious faith whatever." Paul too is against him. These are his words: "My speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power; that your faith should not stand (be) in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God." 1 Cor. ii. 4, 5. Something supernatural was done by the apostle in proof of his mission and message. In his second letter 12th chapter and 12th verse he says, "Truly the signs of an apostle were wrought among you in all patience, by signs and wonders and mighty deeds." Paul says he did these things among them. If he were alive now and they would [illegible] such things. Impostors and dazzling teachers had been at Corinth in his absence and disputed his apostolic authority, and this is why he appeals to the miracles he wrought, in proof of his claim. Every apostle was empowered by their Master who commissioned him to show signs of his apostolic office. These were his credentials. Says Jesus, "These signs shall follow them that believe: In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." In fulfillment of this it is recorded, "And they went forth and preached every where, the Lord working with them and confirming the Word with signs following." Mark xvi. 17, 18, 20.

JOHN L. WIXOM.

Hieremias (or "Jeremiah").

CHAPTER 24.

1. The Lord showed me two baskets of figs lying before the face of the inner-sanctuary of the Lord, after Nabouchodonosor, king of Babulom, had transported Jechonias, son of Joacheim, king of Jouda, and the rulers and the artisans and the captives-in-chains and the rich-men from out Hierousalem, and had led them into Babuloon.

2. One basket was of the very best figs, as the early figs ripe; and the other basket was of the very bad figs, which will not have been eaten because of their badness.

3. And the Lord said unto me, What dost thou see Hieremias? And I said figs, the best figs, very best, and the bad, very bad, which will not have been eaten because of their badness.

4. And a word of the Lord occurred unto me, saying,

5. Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, As these best figs even so shall I recognize the Joudaians who have been transported, whom I have sent out of this place into a land of Chaldaioi for good things;

6. And I shall fix mine eyes upon them for good things, and I shall restore (not restitute) them into this land for good things; and I shall build them up and not take them down, and plant them down and I will not pluck them up.

7. And I shall give to them a heart to know me, that I am the Lord, and they will be unto me for a laity and I shall be unto them for a God, because they will turn unto me with all their heart;

8. And as the bad figs which will not have been eaten by reason of their badness, thus saith the Lord, even so I shall give up Sedekias, king of Jouda and his great ones and the rest of Hieroqualem, those who have been left behind in this land and those who dwell in Aiguptos.

9. And I shall give them unto dispersion into all the kingdoms of the earth, and they will be for reproach and for a parable and for hatred and for a curse in every place there where I have thrust them out.

10. And I shall send unto them the famine and the death and the sword, until they shall have left off from the land which I gave them.

COMMENT.

1st verse no "behold" nor "set" and "temple" should be "inner-sanctuary" (or "holy of holies") and "Nebuchadnezzar" should be "Nachouchodonos" if the name were given but is not in the text, and "princes" should be "rulers," "smiths" should be "captives-in-chains" and "rich men" in the text is omitted entirely.

2nd verse well enough.

3rd verse well enough and the 4th.

5th verse "regard" should be "recognize" and no word for "captives" in the text.

6th verse "will" for "shall" and "shall" for "will" should be.

7th verse should be "laity" instead of "people" and "for they shall return" should be "because they will return" giving a reason for the preceding statement instead of a consequence.

8th verse "great ones" instead of "princes" and "left behind" instead of "remain."

9th verse "give unto dispersion" instead of "to be tossed to and fro" and "hatred" instead of "a taunt" and "every place" instead of "all places," "have thrust them out" instead of "shall drive them."

10th verse "shall" instead of "will" and "the famine and the death and the sword" instead of "the sword, the famine and the pestilence" and "unto them" instead of "among them" and "left off" instead of "be consumed from off."

Obituary.

George Greenwell, one of the pioneer settlers of Brown County, Illinois, died at his home six miles east of Mt. Sterling, Feb. 25, 1906. He was born in Nelson Co., Ky. Nov. 4, 1816, and was therefore 89 years, 3 months and 21 days old at the time of his death. In 1848 he was married to Amanda F. Adams, and in 1845 moved to this County.

In 1882 his wife died, and he was then married to Mary Johnson, who died in 1888. He afterwards married Rachel Ward, who with five children, seventeen grand children, and nineteen great grand children, survive him.

He was a faithful member of the Advent Church at Ripley. Funeral services were conducted by Mr. Torton, who spoke from Gen. l. 13: "For his sons carried him into the land of Canaan and buried him in a cave." This type was carried out by his grand sons carrying him and laid him to rest in his grave on his farm, which he bought many years ago.

Brother Greenwell was a man loved by every one, and always had a good word to speak of every one. Often when hearing of any one doing wrong he would say "I hope it is not so."

Death hold no terror for him. He died with the firm hope of honor, glory immortality, eternal life, which he had been seeking for many years. He looked for and loved the thought of the coming of the blessed Master. It can be said of him "He has fought a good fight, he has finished his course, he has kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness."

To his loved ones he leaves the priceless heritage of a life well spent, a spotless record, and an unsullied name; and to the world the blessing of a beautiful Christian life.

Gal. iii. 17.

The covenant which was confirmed beforehand by God, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after cannot disannul so as to make the promise of none effect."

No reference here to the sojourning of the children of Israel, of Ex. xli. 40, 41. Because it was the 3rd month after leaving Egypt when they camped in the wilderness before Mount Sinai, Ex. xix. 1. And besides the law was not given till long after this. And 430 years after the typical confirmation of the Abrahamic covenant, forty years after the exodus. Consult Deut. xxix. 1, 12, 15 and chapter xxxi. 9, 10, 11. All completed verses 24, 26: Law code, or "Book of the law placed in the Ark for future use, to be read to the people every seventh year in the year of release. Compare Gal. iii. 15. We should look for this confirmation some forty years after the commencement of the sojourning in Canaan. Compare Gen. xxii. 10, 13 with Heb. xi. 19.

"By faith Abraham when put to the proof offered up Isaac; and he that had received the promises, offered up his only begotten Son." Not that Isaac was the only son that Abraham had. But that Isaac was the only begotten according to the promise. Hence it is added, verse 18, "In Isaac shall thy seed be called." "The children of the flesh—these are not the children of God. But the children of the promise are counted for the seed." Rom. ix. 8; compare Gal. iv. 28, 31. Isaac had a royal princess for his mother—and the upper (in rank) Jerusalem is our mother. Isaac was born 25 years after Abraham entered the Land of Canaan and was offered up at the age of 15, which added to the 25 makes 40. Therefore the law as complete was in the 40th year after the exodus and just before the death of Moses. Deut. xxxi. 24, 26. Compare Gen. xxii. 16, 17, 18; with Heb. vi. 13, 16, 17. Usher's Chronology makes Isaac 25 when offered, that would run 10 years beyond Moses' death—which is inadmissable.

Lo! It is Nigh to Thee.

The surprise of life always comes in finding how we have missed the things that have lain nearest to us; how we have gone far away to seek that which was close by our side all the time. Men who live best and longest are apt to come, as the result of all their living, to the conviction that life is not only richer, but simpler than it seemed to them at first. Men go to vast labor seeking after peace and happiness. It seems to them as if it were far away from them, as if they must go through vast and strange regions to get it. They must pile up wealth, they must see every possible danger of mishap guarded against before they can have peace. Upon how many old men has it come with a strange surprise that peace could come to rich or poor only with contentment, and that they might as well have been content at the very beginning as at the very end of life! They have made a long journey for their treasure, and when at last they stoop to pick it up, lo! it is shining close beside the footprint which they left when they set out to travel in a circle.—Phillips Brooks.

WHEN you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

AN explosion of gas in a coal mine in France, followed by fire, has resulted in the death of some twelve hundred miners.

Miss Susan B. Anthony, the noted woman suffragist, died at her home in Rochester, N. Y. on March 13. She was over 80 years of age, and had been prominently before the public for half a century.

WE wish to thank our correspondents for the good articles sent of late. We ask a continuance of your labors. We cannot repay you, but we are sure the Father will mark full credit for every thing done in his Name.

THE affairs of Zion City are not in a very flourishing condition just now. Dowie is sick, and is away in the Bahamas seeking his health. Reports picture him as quite feeble, though his wife and son are both in Zion City, and it is reasonable to suppose from this that he is not likely to die soon. The new "Overseer," Mr. Voliva, has been busy making changes that are directly opposed to Dowie's former methods. He has separated "church and state," and while Dowie is still the spiritual leader, he is no longer in control of finance and state affairs. Report has it that he has been notified to curtail his expenses, even as Zion City must here. Mrs. Dowie has also given up the former palatial quarters and moved into quite modest apartments. The company of singers and the attendance at the services are notably less from week to week, all of which indicates that the gas is slowly oozing out of the bag, so that soon there will not be enough left to make much of an explosion.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. The religious world has been agitated considerably of late, because a professor of Divinity in the Chicago University has recently issued a book in which he takes the position that the Bible is not God's Word. He denies its divine inspiration. Surely what can be the effect upon young men studying for the ministry under the direction of professors of that kind? I have selected for our lesson tonight the following question:

HAVE WE GOOD AND SUFFICIENT EVIDENCE TO BELIEVE THE BIBLE TO BE GOD'S WORD?

To introduce the lesson, I will ask the class to give the relation existing between cause and effect? First, what is the Bible? Who will answer?

Albert. It is the effect of some cause?

Q. Does the effect of a cause ever differ from its cause?

A. Why no, the effect will be just like its cause. If the cause is imperfect, perfection will never result as an effect from such a cause.

Q. Now, the Bible is the effect of some cause. This professor considers this effect imperfect, therefore its cause must be imperfect. What does the Bible claim to be its cause?

A. "Holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit."

Q. When these holy men of God spake and wrote were the words they spoke and wrote, simply the thinking of their own brains?

A. No. They "spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit."

Q. Then they must simply be the channel used by the Holy Spirit to convey its dictation?

A. They were no more responsible for what they spake, than a telegraph operator is, who receives, writes, and transmits messages dictated by others. Oftentimes they do not understand the import of the messages they received.

Q. Was such the case with Bible writers who were used by the Spirit to convey its messages?

A. Even so. Daniel says: "I heard, but I understood not." He greatly desired to understand the import of the message he received and delivered. An angel was sent, and said: "I am come to make thee understand," etc.

Q. Did other Bible writers claim to be the authors of their messages?

A. No. They frequently preface their messages with these phrases: "The Word of the Lord came unto me again saying, "Thus saith the Lord God," "Hear ye the Word of the Lord," "I certify you brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me, is not after man."

Q. Well then, was that which is assigned as the cause of the effect which we call the Bible, human or divine?

A. It claims its cause was solely divine.

Q. Well then, as this divinity professor claims imperfection for the Bible, and its cause being the Lord God through the Holy Spirit is it not a charge upon the Lord God, and the Holy Spirit of imperfection?

A. That is just what it amounts to.

Teacher. Some claim that the book is a fraud, being the work of wicked designing men. How does that idea strike the class?

Carrie. That does not look reasonable to me.

Q. Why not?

A. Why simply this, if it really was a fraud, it would internally bear the impress of that which it really is.

Q. Well, what is the predominant impress of the Bible?

A. Why the entire book denounces wicked practices and fraud, in the severest terms; and it imposes the severest restraint, and punishment, upon those who would practice iniquity, and every evil way. And it also encourages the practices of piety, virtue, goodness, righteousness, purity and every good and holy way. A dirty, slimy trail smears and stains everything that originates with the vile, filthy practices of the impure, it impresses everything with disgusting impurity; it may be called their official seal, which is impressed, or stamped upon every thing they originate. Their seal is not found upon the pages of holy Scripture, and hence wicked men cannot be the cause which produced the effect called the Bible.

Teacher. What other evidence have you to show that wicked men were not the cause of the effect called the Bible?

George. It is seen in the matter of personal sacrifice. They (the wicked) would not lay themselves under such severe moral restraint as the Bible enjoins, and encourages us to endure by the promise of reward, which rewards would be a deception and a wicked farce, if the Bible emenated from the brains of lying impostors.

Teacher. I want to ask, did good men originate the Bible?

A. Why no, they only claimed to be the channels which the Holy Spirit used to convey the messages found in the Bible. They say: "the Word of the Lord came unto me," "Thussaith the Lord God," "Hear ye the Word of the Lord," etc. Hence they claim the messages did not originate with them, but come from God, hence, it is called "the Word of God," and not the word of men, either good or bad.

Q. Did those who received the messages believe them to be the Word of God?

A. They did.

Q. How do you know?

A. The way they acted and suffered on its account, shows this.

Q. Well, tell us how they acted.

A. They sacrificed all the pleasures of a fleshly life, they sacrificed property, and every worldly interest, and lived in poverty. If they did not have the best of assurances that the Bible was really the Word of God, they would not suffer persecution on its account, neither would they wander in deserts, make their homes in dens and caves of the earth, wear sheep and goat skins for clothing. Not only did they suffer the loss of the comforts of life, but endured the keenest kind of physical suffering, by whipping, scourging, restraint of liberty, by being bound in chains, mocked in derision, imprisoned, suffer loss of life, by being stoned, slain by the sword, etc. Bad men would not thus suffer for that which they believed was all a fraud.

Q. Well, how about the story that a company of men got together, and by collusion, and previous understanding, produced the book called the Bible.

A. That could not possibly be.

Q. Why not, because historical facts are against such a silly story.

Q. How many men did the Holy Spirit use to convey the messages of God?

A. Some forty.

Q. How long a time did the Holy Spirit use in transmitting all the messages now contained in the Bible?

A. About fifteen hundred years.

Q. Do men often live more than a hundred years?

A. They do not.

Q. Well then, many of these forty men never saw each other, did they?

A. Why, no.

Q. Why not?

A. Because they were born many of them, at different periods, stretching over fifteen hundred years.

Q. Would not [illegible] cut off the idea of previous collusion?

A. Yes. Anyone with the exercise of a little common sense can see that.

Q. Well then, is it not strange that they all harmonized, and told the same story, as straight and connectedly, as though there had been a previous compact?

A. No, it is not strange at all.

Q. Why not?

A. "Because holy men spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." One mind controlled their thoughts and pens, and this accounts for all these forty writers telling one and the same story.

Q. Please name one thing on which they all speak the same thing?

A. Well, take the covenants of promise made unto Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. The same begins in Genesis, and goes through both the Old and New Testaments, and all speak the same thing.

P. Please name something else.

A. I would name the official titles of of the Son of God, in which all more or less relate to those covenants of promise.

Q. Please quote some.

A. The Seed of the woman, the Seed of Abraham, the Seed of David, the Branch, the King of kings, the Man of sorrows, the Prince of Peace, the Bread of life, the Corner Stone, the Door, Emanual, Faithful Witness, High Priest, Good Shepherd, King of Israel, King of the Jews, Lamb of God, Law Giver, the Light, Lion of the Tribe of Judah, Lord of Glory, Morning Star, Nazarene, Our Passover, Mediator, Prince of Life, Redeemer, Root of David, Savior, Shiloh, Word of God.

Teacher. Lad, can you take the first three chapters of Genesis, and the last three of the Book of Revelation, and show a correspondence between them, as there certainly could be no collusion between them, being fifteen hundred years apart?

Lad. Yes, my attention was called to this some time ago, in reading an article from the pen of Mr. Hastings. In Genesis we read: In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." In the last of Revelation we read: "I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heavens, and the first earth were passed away." At the beginning we find Satan entering to deceive and destroy; at the end we find Satan cast out, "that he should deceive the nations no more." At the beginning sin, and pain, and sorrow, and sighing, and death find entrance into the world; at the end, there shall be no more pain, nor sighing, and no more death.

At the beginning the earth for man's transgression is cursed; at the end, there shall be no more curse; at the beginning we find the tree of life in paradise, from which the sinner is shut away by a flaming sword, lest he eat and live forever; at the end, we find the tree of life in paradise, and the blessed have a right to the tree of life, and enter in through the gates into the city. In the beginning man was brought under the dominion of death, at the end there shall be no more death.

At the beginning Adam lost his dominion. At the end the second Adam gains his dominion, and one throned as King and Lord of all shall reign in triumph and glory forever.

Teacher. I see it is now time to adjourn. As we have merely opened our subject, we will continue the same topic at our next meeting, just where we leave off to-night.

The results and evidence of our study for some twenty-five years back, will be preserved in our book, 500 pages of copy are now ready for the printer, and will be printed as soon as enough pledges are received to meet the bare expense. We desire that they may be received soon, so that its mission of sowing the light of life may begin.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

For He Remembered.

"For he remembered his holy promise and Abraham his servant."

David, in the one hundred and fifth Psalm, in strains that ought to make even an archangel shout, says: "O give thanks unto the Lord; call upon his name; make known his deeds among the people. Sing unto him; sing psalms unto him, talk ye of all his wondrous works. Glory ye in his holy name; let the heart of them rejoice that seek the Lord. Seek the Lord and his strength, seek his face evermore. Remember his marvelous works that he hath done; his wonders and the judgments of his mouth. O ye seed of Abraham his servant, ye children of Jacob, his chosen. But why does David call upon the children of Jacob to sing? Why does he go back to the time when Israel was but few in number, very few, and strangers in the land of Canaan, going from one nation to another, and from one kingdom to another people? When no man was suffered to do them harm and kings were reproved for their sake? Why does he recount the story of Joseph's captivity and unloosing? The story of the famine? Of Israel's bondage under Pharaoh? Of Moses and Aaron? Of the signs and wonders in the land of Ham? the darkness? the frogs? the flies? the lice? the hail? the fire? the broken trees and vines? the locusts and caterpillars? the destroyed herbage? the water turned into blood? The dead first-born? the bringing of them forth out of Egypt, with a cloud for a covering and fire to give light in the night? Why tell the story of the rock from whence gushed the waters, and the giving to Israel of the lands of the heathen, that they might observe his statutes and keep his laws? Because David saw that the doing of all these things, was proof that the Lord remembered his holy promise, and Abraham his servant and that he would never forget, but that he would "remember his covenant forever, the Word which he commanded to a thousand generations, which covenant he made with Abraham and his oath unto Isaac. And confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law and to Israel for an everlasting covenant."

"For he hath remembered?" What assurance to us, who are in the fight of these last days, battling for his truth, while sceptics, infidels, Higher Critics, upholders of the new thought religion, and the whole ilk of spiritualists and incoming swarm of heathen and Romanist evangels are striving to overthrow it, "let them try! let them try!" They cannot pull down the house! it is built on a rock.

Faith has too many things to rest on to be overthrown by the puny arm of a man. God has kept watch of his people ever since he gave promise to Abraham, and he is watching over that same people still. The multitudinous seed are in existence, each tribe kept intact, and he will no more forget them, nor cause them to cease from being a nation before him forever, than he will cause the ordinances of the sun and moon to fail.

"God hath remembered." Judah or the Jews have ceased from being a nation, but not so the people of the northern kingdom—the tribes under the standard of Ephraim, and the separatist tribe of Manasseh. These have been brought from the land of their captivity to the Isles, in accordance with the 41st chapter of Isaiah, who represents the Lord as saying to this people on the islands, "But thou Israel, art my servant Jacob, whom I have chosen; the seed of Abraham, my friend, thou whom I have taken from the ends of the earth, and called thee from the chief men thereof, and said unto thee, Thou art my servant; I have chosen thee and not cast thee away. Fear thou not for I am with thee; be not dismayed; for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness. "Behold all they that were incensed against thee shall be ashamed and confounded; they shall be as nothing; and they that strive with thee shall perish * * * "Behold I will make thee a new sharp threshing instrument having teeth (or mouths, see margin); thou shalt thresh the mountains, (the great kingdoms) and beat them small, and shall make the hills, (the little kingdoms) as chaff. "Thou shalt fan them, and the wind shall carry them away, and the whirlwind shall scatter them; and thou shalt rejoice in the Lord and glory in the holy one Israel."

"For he hath remembered." Israel is represented here, as doing to these kingdoms just what Daniel says will be done with the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver and the gold of Nebuchadnezzar's image, and just what Ezekiel says Israel will do with the hosts of Gog and Magog. Therefore Israel, of the ten-tribed kingdom must be in existence at the present time, for they have been re-married to God—as Isaiah says in the 54th chapter, and are no longer cast away.

Judgment.

Paul says, "I speak to your shame, is there not a man among you? No, not one that shall be able to judge between his brethren."

The above has reference to the judgment of personal wrongs pertaining to this life, as the reading shows. 1 Cor. vi.

It appears that some were inclined to abuse their privilege of judgment of personal wrongs between brethren, and wanted to reach out and condemn or find fault with the zeal of their brethren whom they thought to be over pious because they were not quite so well informed as they themselves were.

Paul says, "Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? to his own Master he standeth or falleth; yea, he shall be holden up; for God is able to make him stand." Therefore, we have no right to judge our brother's zeal or service toward God. "For whether we live we live unto the Lord, and whether we die we die unto the Lord. Whether we live therefore or die we are the Lord's." The little sentence, "We are the Lord's" shows that Paul has no reference to the forbidden and abominable sins of the world, because we are told "Now if any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of his."

"Know ye not that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey his servants ye are to whom ye obey whether of sin unto death or of obedience unto righteousness." Again, Paul says, "But why dost thou judge thy brother or why dost thou set at naught thy brother?" Neither can this refer to the corruptible sins of the world which defile the temple of God, because Christ says, "He that doeth the will of my Father is my brother."

The Savior says "He that rejecteth me and receiveth not my words hath one that judgeth him. The word that I have spoken the same shall judge him in the last day." In the Word he tells us "Ye cannot serve two masters." He also says "A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Wherefore, by their fruits ye shall know them. Not every one that sayeth unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."

There is one Judge over all, who gives instructions, but the church is inexcusably placed upon the jury. 1 Cor. v. 9 to last verse, and their duty neglected the world before whom their light is to shine, looks on the lowered and bedraggled standard with disgust. Judge not. By their fruits ye shall know them.

Obituary.

Died, at his home in Ogle Co., Ill., Feb. 26, 1906, Charles E Dugdale, aged 83 years, 11 months and 11 days.

Bro. Dugdale was born at Yorkshire, England, March 15, 1822, and came to Illinois when 18 years of age, during the many years of his life thereafter resided in the immediate vicinity of his late residence, where he died, as above stated.

July 12, 1848 he was united in marriage with Helen M. Conkly, to which union six children were born, four of whom, with their mother, survive and mourn the loss of a devoted husband and father and wise counselor during these many years.

Brother Dugdale and his wife became obedient believers of the gospel many years ago, since which time they have stood firm in the faith. He was a man of sturdy character, industrious and successful in life, never wavering in his onward march to the kingdom of God, and without great pretensions or outward show maintained his integrity to the end, and died at a ripe old age, respected by his neighbors and those who knew him well, and devotedly loved by his family.

He was a very active man during all of his long life, until some weeks before his death when he fell on the frozen ground and sustained injuries from which he could not recover. He fell asleep in full assurance of faith, looking with bright hope for the coming of the Redeemer to wipe all tears away.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Brother S. J. Lindsay.

Dear Brethern and sisters:

I write a few lines to let you know that my hope and faith in the gospel of the kingdom is more firm than it ever was since I first believed and obeyed the truth of God's Word, it shines more and more unto the perfect day. O my brethren, my soul is full when I read and meditate on the things of the kingdom, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes and obeys it. When I read an article in THE RESTITUTION like that of Bro. Wilson's, it does me much good to see that the gospel has not lost its power on the people. He has, I think, the right idea about it, and preaches it accordingly, so that any child can understand it, that is the way it was preached in the days of Christ and the apostles; for see on the day of Pentecost when Peter preached to the people, it was not with great eloquence of words, and what was the result? Hear! "Men and brethren, what shall we do," and Peter was not slow to tell them what to do; and the effect was, there was added unto them about three thousand souls. Now we do not expect to see such a mighty display of the Holy Spirit, for we have the Word for our guide, therefore we must believe and obey that and all will be well. O brethren, what a blessed privilege it is to have the Word of God for our guide, it shows us the way we must go, and what God requires of us. My prayer is that God will give us light and wisdom to understand it, and live it in our daily walk and conversation, so that when the Lord our King will sit upon his throne, and before him shall be brought all nations, and he will separate them as a shepherd divides the sheep from the goats; which represents the righteous and wicked; and will set the sheep on his right hand but the goats on his left. Now comes the critical moment; now the King will say to them on his right hand, Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world; then he goes to tell how they prepared themselves, thus the King says to them, Depart ye cursed into everlasting fire, representing a final destruction with no reprieve. Matt. xxv. Thus closes up this sinful world of mankind. Now Bro. W. H. Wilson, I read in THE RESTITUTION a notice of your travels in the west with pleasure. I think that good can be done in preaching the gospel of the kingdom to a dying world by taking a proper course, and preach the Word plainly, attended by the spirit of the Master. I would love to have a talk with you on the things of the kingdom.

Evangelizing Notice.

I expect to make an evangelizing trip to Arizona in December and return late in the winter or early spring. Any brethren that may be reached on or near the Southern Pacific R. R. between Portland, Oregon and Phoenix, Arizona, may secure my service by corresponding with me at Scholls, Ore., or Phoenix, Ari. I have cut loose from my farm and desire to devote my whole time to the work. Help to the cause will be gratefully accepted.

Industries Wanted.

The Chicago & North-Western Railway is receiving information from desirable points on its lines that industries of various kinds are desired. The opening up of the Spring season, with good prospects for a continuance of the large business of the past year, is causing many communities to make strong efforts to locate new industries. Among the establishments desired are iron and woodworking concerns, cereal mills, canning works, cold storage plants and mills of various kinds, as well as mercantile establishments. Requests for particulars addressed to the Industrial Department of the C. & N. W. Ry., Chicago, will be promptly attended to.

Poetry.

Sinner the Lord Wants You!

O come, ye souls by sin oppressed,
Come and Christ will give you rest;
Jesus, who is sinners surety made;
He who has your ransom paid.

In temptation's trying hour,
Christ will be your shield and tower;
He's the feeder of his flock—
He's the shelter and their rock!

Christ is the shepherd of his sheep,
He will guard, protect and keep;
All the foes that seek their harm,
Cannot snatch them from Christ's arm.

He will guide you in the way,
Which will lead to endless day;
And when he comes from above
We'll praise in wonder and in love.

Selections.

Africans Plan to Kill all Whites.

Sir Arthur Lawley, who has just been appointed governor of Madras after devoting several years to the administration of the Transvaal, gave frank utterance the other day before his departure from South Africa for India, to his conviction that ere long a great rising of the blacks against the whites will take place, extending all over the British colonies from the cape to the Zambesi. Sir Arthur, who is recognized as an authority on all problems connected with the native races, besides being a singularly level headed man, spoke with profound earnestness, when he exclaimed in the course of his farewell address: "See to this question. For it is the greatest problem you have to face." And the solemn character of his valedictory warning was rendered additionally impressive in the knowledge that it was based upon information beyond all question.

These views are not those of an irresponsible alarmist and sensation monger, but of a colonial administrator of extensive experience, and invested with one of the most important offices in the gift of the British crown. Moreover, such men as Lord Milner, Frederick Courtenay Selous, the famous lion hunter and writer upon questions pertaining to the Zulus, the Kaffirs, and other South African nationalities, and Dr. Peters, the German explorer of the dark continent, make no secret of the fact that they share the fears of Sir Arthur Lawley. Indeed, the apprehension has become so general that it is today the one absorbing subject of thought and discussion among all those in South Africa who are interested in its future.

Under the circumstances the peril of a rising of the blacks against the whites, not only in British South Africa, but also in the adjacent colonies of Germany and Portugal, cannot be regarded as imaginary, and demands something more than mere passing attention.

There are several reasons why Americans should devote consideration to the question. In the first place, Sir Arthur Lawley, Lord Milner, Archibald Colquhoun, and all those who have studied pan-Africanism, are unanimous in ascribing an Afro-American origin to the so-called Ethiopian movement, and then, too, the United States, like England in South Africa, has upon her hands the difficulty arising from the presence of a negro population within her borders. Whereas in this country the whites are nearly ten times as numerous as the blacks, the latter in Great Britain's South African dependencies outnumber the whites by six to one. In other European colonies of Africa the numerical preponderance of the blacks is even yet much more pronounced, and when it is borne in mind that of the near 200,000,000 souls that go to make up the total population of the dark continent, less than 2,000,000 are whites, and that Moslem races of northern and central Africa, the fetich worshipers of the west, the Christian blacks of Abyssinia and South Africa, are all united by a common sentiment of bitter animosity against the whites, and by an overwhelming desire to drive them out of Africa, it will be realized that the so-called black peril in America is infinitesimal compared with that to which the whites are exposed in the dark continent.

Japan has, within the last four decades, awakened from the sleep of centuries with such startling results that Europe and America are still rubbing their eyes in amazement over the terrible drubbing which the little island empire inflicted upon huge, unwieldy Russia last year. China is emerging from her long lethargy, with the consequence that America is rushing troops to the far orient, and the kaiser is considering the policy of restoring Kiaochou to Emperor Kwangsu. And now black Africa has begun to stretch herself, aroused by our injudicious efforts to "civilize" her.

Opinions differ as to the extent of the responsibility of the African Methodist Episcopal church of America for the Pan-African agitation. Some declare that, while the movement was promoted in its inception by the colored Methodist church of America, it has now got beyond the control of its transatlantic foster mother and has broken away from her influence. Others again, insist that the negro Methodists in the United States continue to incite the animosity of the blacks against the whites in South Africa, and call attention to the fact that in a recent number of the "Voice of Missions," the official organ of the African Methodist church of America, published at Athnta, Ga., the hope was expressed that "the blacks would drive the English out of South Africa in the same way that the French had been pitched out of Hayti."

Under the circumstances it is not altogether surprising that the British authorities should have placed obstacles in the way of the colored Bishop Coppin of the African Methodist Episcopal church of America during his recent stay in South Africa, and should have refused him permission to travel about in the Transvaal, the Orange River and other colonies.

The history of the Ethiopian movement, as it has been most skillfully christened by its initiators dates back to 1892, when a native minister named Mukone seceded from the Wesleyan church at Pretoria and founded an independent church of his own, which he called the Church of Ethiopia. He was afterwards joined by another seceder, named Dwane, and then they managed to obtain affiliation with the African Methodist Episcopal church of America, Dwane coming to this country for the purpose.

In 1898 the American negro bishop, Turner, was sent from here on an Episcopal visitation to South Africa and spent several months traveling about ordaining ministers. Finding, however, that their affiliation with the African Methodist church in America gave them no locus standi in South Africa, Dwane, Mukone, and the other leaders of the Ethiopian movement managed, by promising spiritual allegiance to the Anglican archbishop at Cape Town and primate of South Africa, to obtain from him a charter creating them the "Order of Ethiopia," with rights to hold and control property for religious and educational purposes and to administer its own affairs. This gave the Ethiopian church in South Africa a corporate existence and enabled it to acquire the considerable wealth which it now holds.

That these pledges of spiritual allegiance to the Anglican church have not been kept, and, indeed, were only given to secure the right to hold property, is abundantly shown by the reports of the great missionary conference held in July, 1904, at Pretoria, where it was decided that the Ethiopians were "unworthy to be received by other Christian bodies in communion." It has likewise been demonstrated that the affiliation between the Afro-Methodist church in America and the order of Ethiopia in South Africa still subsists, while the utterances of the official organs of the negro Methodist church in this country, one of which I have quoted above, demonstrate abundantly its sympathy with the anti-white aspirations of the blacks in Africa. There is no reason to believe, however, that the Afro-American Methodist church is directing the movements of the order of Ethiopia in Africa. The latter has become too rich, too powerful, and too conscious of its strength to submit to any dictation from its friends on this side of the Atlantic.

While it is probably true that the fundamental idea of the Ethiopian church in its origin was to shake off the shackles of white control in spiritual matters, the primary object of its adherents today is emancipation from the superiority of the whites in temporal affairs. The doctrine of democratic equality, which every American negro has on the tip of his tongue, is being preached from Ethiopian pulpit and platform. The blacks are being urged "not to work for the white man, but for themselves," the imro and other organs of the native press connected with the movement devoting all their energies to the envenoming of racial animosities. In a word, the Ethiopian church of 1892 has grown today into a great pan-African movement, embracing non Christian as well as Christian blacks, for the conversion of Africa into a sort of huge Hayti, "where black rules white."

Of course the fact that the natives possess electoral franchise in most of the South African colonies adds to the difficulties of the situation. Under the guidance of the Ethiopian order the black vote is becoming every day a more powerful factor in South African politics, and its ambitions are being constantly developed and fed by whites anxious for selfish party or financial interests to secure its temporary support. Some years ago the black might have been disenfranchised and reduced to the same political status as the highly cultured natives of India. But today it is too late, and any move by the British government in that direction would merely precipitate the great conflict between blacks and whites in South Africa which all regard as inevitable.

In urging all the whites in South Africa to stand together, irrespective of their being Dutch or English, Portuguese or German, Sir Arthur Lawley, Lord Milner, and other British administrators have been prompted not by any specious desire to reconcile the Boers to King Edward's rule but by a knowledge of the grave problem constituted by the "black peril," a danger so real that it behooves all white men in the dark continent to stand together. While both the English and the Boers deserve great credit for having declined all offers of assistance from the blacks during their war five years ago, and for having excluded the Afro element from the arena of the conflict, the reverses sustained by both belligerents in turn went far to impair the military prestige of the whites among the natives. Germany's reverses at the hands of Herreros have still further contributed to destroy the former negroid belief in the white man's superiority in war, and now we hear of the Ethiopian dispatch of dusky emissaries from South Africa to the West African colonies, to the Soudan, and even to Abyssinia, with the object, it is said, of furthering the cause of pan-Africanism.

How to arrest this pan-Africanism it is difficult to say. Formerly we used to allow the blacks to slaughter one another without further interference, and this prevented them from combining their forces or from becoming too powerful. With our insistence upon civilizing them and converting them to Christianity we have put a stop to this, interfered, in a word, with the wise provisions of nature. Perhaps, after all, King Leopold, in spite of all the abuse which he has received, understands the question best. For according to the evidence of the Congo committee he alone has taken effective means to prevent the undue growth of the native population in his great African dependency by depopulating it.

Missions and Humanitarianism.

What an endless romance is that of missions! That a small army of picked men and women of cultivation and pure life, filled with tender concern for their fellows, should break the ties of country and home, should put aside all hope of preferment and the wider paths to earthly honors, and thrust out into the poverty, the mental sluggishness, the moral depravity of the pagan world, there to live and there to train their little children, this is the high adventure of Christendom. For what do these men and women seek? What activities engage and engross them? In every land, in various ways, they are seeking the uplift of the people. They open schools and patiently teach the children, often amid the lethargic indifference or positive oppositions of unawakened peoples; they minister to the sick in hospitals and dispensaries; they open institutions of mercy for the blind and the leper; they stimulate the dormant intellect of China, and develop the moral sense of India; they are picking rude African peoples off their hands and feet and bidding them stand up in the image of man; they are creating a thirst for liberty and a capacity for freedom; they call peoples into the presence of God and give currency to great spiritual ideas of Prayer and Providence and Christ and Duty, whereby nations are lifted to the heights of modern civilization. It is no wonder that the Church is stirred, and our hearts burn upon every thought of all that gallant endeavor for the betterment of humanity which is included in the term "missions."—Selected by M. A. Woodward.

The Little Horn of Dan. viii.

[An outline, with a request that the many good students of the Bible who read THE RESTITUTION will help develop the subject more fully.]

So far as I know, expositors without exception have regarded the little horn of the 8th chapter of Daniel and that of the 7th as one and the same power. And they generally assume that Antiochus Epiphanes, one of the kings of Syria, was that power. But

1. Though Antiochus Epiphanes was a vile wretch, he could not have been meant by the little horn in either chapter because he died in 164 B. C., while the little horn of the 7th chapter certainly came up after the ten horns of the Roman beast were developed in the third and fourth centuries, A. D.; for it subdued three of those horns, and took their place in the 6th century, 700 years after the death of Antiochus Epiphanes.

2. The little horn of the 8th chapter seems to have come up about the same time as that of the 7th chapter, but it is distinctly different in several respects: (1) It came out of and was part of the third of the four great Gentile powers, while the little horn of the 7th chapter came out of and was part of the fourth. Hence (2) one was Roman, the other Grecian. (3) One was Christian (perverted), the other anti-christian. (4) one western, the other eastern, (5) one simulated Christianity, the other fought it fiercely, and tried to exterminate it—"Stamped upon it," and "magnified himself against Christ (margin) and assumed his place. (6) The Latin little horn, 7th chapter, persecuted Christians to build up the church of Christ; the Greek little horn, of the 8th chapter, fought Christians in defense of the false christ—Mahommed. (7) The Mahommedan slogan is—"There is one God, his name is Allah, and Mahommed is his prophet!"

This is leveled at the divine nature of Christ and against his entire mission—usurps his place as the "Prophet" which Moses said God would send. (8) The Koran is the boldest fraud ever put into human language—"Stealing the livery of heaven to serve the devil in." A pretended record of Mahommed's visions, it is a shabby abstract of the Bible sensualized from beginning to end; claiming to be original with Mahommed—a clumsy and religious plagiarism, perpetrated by Mahommed and his successors to deceive ignorant zealots.

(9) From Adam to Abraham Mahommedans and Christians have a common stem. Thence the latter follow through Isaac, Jacob, David and the covenants of promise to Palestine, Jerusalem, and Jesus; while Mahommedans come through Ishmael and Esau to Arabia and Mahommed, whose religio-political system has some good things, as respect for woman, the care of children, personal cleanliness and frequent bathing; but on the whole is infinitely inferior to the New Testament.

The power in the 7th chapter of Daniel called "a little horn," was not called a horn till it became a civil government. So, in the 8th chapter, the little horn is a civil government—not necessarily Rome, as Bishop Newton argues. It could not be Rome, because it sprang out of one of the four horns of the Grecian goat.

Mahommedanism seems to fill every particular of the little horn of Daniel viii. Rising in Arabia in the 6th century A. D. it spread rapidly in all directions, and has been one of the dominant powers among nations for more than 1200 years. With half a dozen significant names, it has always been and still is one solid power and holds all other nations in fear. Its first period, that of development and discipline, was from the middle of the sixth century to near the close of the tenth century—from Mahommed fasting and praying and having visions in the cave at Mecca and studying to unite the three religions in Arabia—the Jewish, the Christian and the common religion of the east into one, and how to use that one religion to unite all civil governments into one under himself, till his successors ruled the Mediterranean and its eastern and southern shores, leading all nations in literature, science and art.

Its second period was the war of the seven crusades, from 1096 to 1281, Christians of Europe trying to gain possession of Palestine, Jerusalem, and the places sacred in Christian history. The Mahommedans won, and have held that brilliant prize ever since.

The third period—for the conquest of Christian Europe. They gained most of southeastern Europe, and were pushing for western Europe, but were defeated under the walls of Vienna; and then turned and captured Constantinople, May 29, 1453, which has ever since been the capital of the Turkish empire. They had become sufficiently refined to appreciate the royal splendors gathered by the emperors of eastern Rome during a thousand years, and adapted them for the seat of Islam. Here the supreme Sultan has ruled the Mahommedan world (and the rest of it) 450 years; because Mahommedans are united and Christians are divided.

A few months ago "the Christian powers" anchored their fleets near the mouth of the Dardanelles and tried to persuade the Sultan to let them manage the finances of Macedonia to get their pay for money loaned. He was in no hurry, "found plenty of excuses for delay," and hinted that he might deem it advisable to call a "holy war," (which would bring the millions of Islam to his aid in double quick). The fleets slipped away home.

Since that the representatives of the Christian power, including the United States, have been in session about two months at Algeciras, in Spain, trying to help France and Germany settle a trifling dispute with Morocco, and the case may go to the Hague, to prevent a general war with Turkey.

Really the little horn of Dan. viii. has "waxed exceeding great." We shall probably hear more from it in the near future. Missionaries find the Mahommedans the hardest heathen to convert. They will doubtless be the chief objectors to the true Prophet of God taking the throne of his father David to reign over the house of Israel and the whole world forever.

Restitution.

Restitution—what does it mean?

Webster says, The act of restoring, and if we go to the Word of God we find it means the same there. We find the word "restitution" mentioned several times, once especially in Acts iii. 21, "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you; whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." This shows us then that there is something to be restored, then of course there must have been something lost. What was it?

We find in Gen. iii. 24, that God drove our first parents out of the garden of Eden, lest they should partake of the tree of life and live forever. So we see what they lost and by them losing eternal life shows that we do not have it; for we could not inherit from our parents something which they never had. They could have had life eternal but they yielded to temptation and lost. So we see eternal life was one of the things lost, and one which is to be restored in the restitution age. In this age our life is short at best. Death walks abroad at noonday and gathers his victims by the countless thousands; he plucks the lovely flowers of infancy; he snatches the youth of our land in all their prime, and he gathers the ripened grain, the fathers and mothers of our homes and leave us to mourn with crushed and bleeding hearts; but his time is short; for we are told in Luke xx. 36, "Neither can they die any more," and in 1 Cor. xv. 55, "O death where is thy sting! O grave where is thy victory!" And in Rev. xxi. 4, "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away." That is a part of the restitution which God has promised to them that love him. Yes, life will be restored but in a complete sense; for it will be everlasting life.

In 1 John vi. 51, Jesus says, "I am the living Bread which came down from heaven; if any man eat of this bread he shall live forever; and the bread that I will give is my flesh which I will give for the life of the world."

Another thing our first parents lost was their beautiful Eden home, Gen. xi. 9. "And out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food; the tree of life also in the midst of the garden. Here they had everything that was nice to look at and that was good for food. What more did they need? Theirs was a life of pleasure, no curse, no death; but satan, busy then as he is now, tempted Eve and thus was life lost. And here I want to say that satan there in the garden of Eden preached the first sermon on the immortality of the soul, and many of the so-called Divines, are still preaching the same untruth. Gen. iii. 23, tells us that, "Therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the garden of Eden to till the ground from whence he was taken." So banished from Paradise they were compelled to toil amid the curse.

But was there no promise of restitution, no hope for future rest? Yes, Gen. xxii. 7, 8. "And I will establish my covenant between me and thee, and thy seed after thee, in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee. And I will give unto thee and to thy seed after thee the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God." Please read Jer. xxii. from first to ninth verses. Also Isaiah lx. 7.

So we see that Eden home will be restored also in the restitution age. Please read Rev. xxi. 10, to end of chapter. See how beautiful will be the home of the redeemed. Jesus says, In my Father's house are many mansions, and he has invited us all to share in its glory, and promised he would come again and receive us unto himself. What a comfort. I know some think this all refers to somewhere beyond space, but I may say I know it refers to the new earth spoken of in Rev. xxi. 1. This age is getting old, and too wicked, and like a garment will soon be folded up and changed. The nations are angry and in their mad rush for power they are rushing headlong into the final struggle. Wars, pestilence, famine and all these deeds of darkness show us the night is far spent, the day is at hand. God tells us in Rev. iii. 21, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne."

God help us to overcome and in the final restitution have a right to the tree of life, and may we enter in through the gates into the city.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo-etch writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

Seventy-five More.

I receive enquiries as to when Pine Woods Bible Class Book will be printed?

In answer, I will say, when I receive seventy-five more subscriptions, the book can be printed, and sent forth on its mission, to teach the glad tidings. If all who really want it had said so, it could now be out sowing seed. When God's professed servants make his cause a secondary matter, and put it off to a "convenient time," his cause suffers. Now all who really want the book please sit down and write me, as soon as you have read this, and then things will move at once. Don't wait until a more convenient time. God's business demands prompt attention.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

W. H. WILSON.

We need what is due us on subscriptions and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor,

"Render Unto God the Things that are God's."

LORD AM I INDEBTED TO THEE, IF SO, HOW MUCH, AND WHEN MUST I PAY IT?

Daily we talk about the second advent of our Savior, wonder how soon he will come, and discuss the question, Are we ready to have him come? We have had all the land, all the rain, all the sunshine, and all the moonlight and star light we could use, have we paid the rent to him who has so kindly furnished us with all these blessings? The first question we are met with is this, How much does our heavenly Father charge for supplying all these blessed things to us? There are some things that the Lord has put on the free list. Some of these are, the songs of the birds, (take time and think out all the beautiful and lovely things, which our good Father gives to us, without money and without price, and write them all in this place.) Now let us go to the divine record and see if we can find a standard by which we can figure out how much we are indebted to the Lord. We will first examine Paul, he says, "We wrought with labor and travail night and day, that we might not be chargeable to any of you; not because we have not power; but to make ourselves an ensample unto you. This we commanded you, if any would not work, neither should he eat." 2 Thes. iii. 8. What is the meaning of this Scripture. Paul is the sample. What is the sample for? That we might do as Paul did, is it not? All will admit that that is the meaning of the language. What did Paul do? He worked day and night. I suppose he worked from twelve to sixteen hours each day for the Lord, and spent the remainder of the twenty-four hours in working for food and clothing, and for money with which to pay the rent for his "hired house." How many are imitating him? It is generally supposed that the giving spoken of in 1 Cor. xvi. 1, and in 2 Cor. ix. 1, 2; has reference to giving for the support of the gospel, and that therefore there is now no rule by which to determine the amount each Christian should give for the support of the church, it being claimed that God has left it to the generosity or stinginess of each person, to give whatever he pleases. Is that true? No, far from it. The giving spoken of above refers to collections for the assistance of the poor saints.

Let me call attention to a few texts. "Now concerning the collection for the saints, (not for the Church) as I have given order to the churches of Galatia." 1 Cor. xvi. 1. "For it has pleased them of Macedonia and Achaia to make certain contribution for the poor saints which are at Jerusalem." Rom. xv. 26. (Nothing yet for the Church.) "Then the disciples every man according to his ability, determined to send relief unto the brethren which dwelt in Judea." Acts ii. 29. "Only they would that we should remember the poor, the same which I always was forward to do." Gal. ii. 10.
